1. Plead their own ſteady adherence to God's pure word and worſhip, amidſt all the evils they endured for the ſake of them; and for this they appealed to the heart-ſearching God: they neither could be compelled to worſhip the gods of the heathen, nor the ſtrange idol images of antichriſtian invention; no, not though fire and rack were the inſtruments of their torture, and dark priſons, inquiſitorial dungeons, and every helliſh device, had been uſed to ſhake their conſtancy: they loved not their lives unto death, and rather choſe to be butchered all the day long, than comply with theſe abominations; their heart cleaved to Jeſus and his truth, and therefore faithfully endured his croſs, and continued ſteadfaſt in his covenant. Note, (1.) Though we are not called to the ſufferings of martyrs, we ſhall have that croſs which nothing but Almighty grace can enable us to endure. (2.) They who, to ſhun troubles, comply with ſin, only exchange the ſufferings of time for the torments of eternity. (3.) When we have to deal with a heart-ſearching God, we may well tremble at the thought of inſincerity.

2. They preſent their ſupplications for help and deliverance; and with moving repreſentations, and expoſtulations, urge their ſuit. Awake; not that God ſleeps; but, like one regardleſs of them, he ſeemed to have forſaken them; but they plead, let it not be for ever: why hideſt thou thy face? as though diſregarding their affliction, when their ſouls were ſunk with deſpondence, and their bodies made as the dung of the earth under the feet of their inſulting foes. Ariſe; they repeat the cry, their diſtreſs made them importunate; redeem us for thy mercies ſake; not becauſe we have any deſert to plead, but becauſe of thy rich mercy in Chriſt Jeſus, wherein thou haſt cauſed us to put our truſt. Note, (1.) If God ſeems to diſregard our danger, as Jeſus in the ſtorm ſlept, it is only to awaken our importunity, and to magnify the more his mercy in our deliverance. (2.) The greateſt ſaints of God have the loweſt opinion of themſelves: they, who could appeal to God for their ſimplicity, go forth with no other plea than his mercy.

PSALM XLV.

This pſalm is an illuſtrious propheſy of Meſſiah the prince; of him ſpeaketh the prophet this, and of no other man; and to him it is expreſly applied, Heb. i. 8. The preface ſpeaks the excellency of the ſong, ver. 1. The pſalm deſcribes, 1. The royal bridegroom, who is Chriſt. (1.) The tranſcendent excellency of his perſon, ver. 2. (2.) The glory of his victories, ver. 3—5. (3.) The righteouſneſs of his government, ver. 6, 7. (4.) The ſplendor of his court, ver. 8, 9. 2. The royal bride, which is the church. (1.) Her conſent gained, ver. 10, 11. (2.) The nuptials ſolemnized, ver. 12—15. (3.) The iſſue of this marriage, ver. 16, 17.

a Pſ. lxix. & lxxx. tit. † Or, concerning the lilies Cant. ii. 1. b Pſ. xxxii. & xlii. tit. ‡ Or, of the beloved virgins. § Heb. boils or bubbles up.

¶ To the chief muſician [a] † upon Shoſhannim, for the ſons of Korah, [b] Maſchil, A ſong ‡ of loves.

1. MY heart § is inditing a good matter: I ſpeak of the things which I have made touching the king: my tongue is the pen of a ready writer.

v. 1. The word Shoſhannim, which we meet with in the title, is variouſly interpreted; ſome underſtand it of the muſical inſtrument, for which the ſong was ſet; but others, more probably, refer it to the ſubject of the pſalm, concerning the lilies; concerning him who is the lily of the valley, and thoſe faithful ones, that by a marriage union with him, partake of his beauty and fragrance. This is the epithalamium compoſed on this royal nuptial; A ſong of loves; the mutual love of Chriſt and his church; or, of the beloved virgins; ſung by them in honour of their auguſt bridegroom, whoſe praiſe ſhall never ceaſe from their lips, when in glory they ſhall follow the Lamb whereſoever he goeth.

The author prefaces his bridal ode with a preface concerning the perſon. My heart is inditing a good matter; yea, the beſt ſubject that ever employed poet's thought, the grace and glory of our Immanuel: is inditing, or bubbling as a fountain; his heart was big with the ſacred theme, and ready to burſt, like the fountain from its overflowing reſervoir: deeply in thought he firſt digeſted and arranged the matter, then uttered his ſong. I ſpeak of the things I have made touching the king; Jeſus is the grand object in his view, his perſon, grace, and government: I ſpeak not under the influence of meer poetic genius, but inſpired by that eternal Spirit of truth and holineſs, who dictates as I utter: my tongue is the pen of a ready writer; delight in the glorious ſubject gives freedom to the tongue, and fluency to the pen; and deeply may the ſong be engraved on every heart, and kindle ſtill the ſacred flame of love as it deſcends to lateſt ages. Note, They who know the excellence of Jeſus, delight to think of him, ſpeak of him, write of him; a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt is in all their words and works, and this ſubject will never be exhauſted to eternity.

2. [c] Thou art fairer than the children of men: grace is [d] poured into thy lips: therefore God hath bleſſed thee for ever. 3. Gird [e] thy ſword upon thy thigh, [f] O moſt mighty: with thy glory and thy majeſty. 4. And [g] in thy majeſty † ride proſperouſly, becauſe of truth, and meekneſs, and righteouſneſs: and thy right hand ſhall teach thee terrible things. 5. Thine arrows are ſharp in the heart of [h] the king's enemies; whereby the people fall under thee.

c Cant. v. 16. d Ibid. v. 13. Luke iv. 22. e Heb. iv. 12. Rev. i. 16. & xix. 15. f Iſa. ix. 6. g Rev. vi. 2. † Heb. proſper thou, ride thou. h Luke xix. 27.

v. 2—5. We have a glorious deſcription of the divine and adored Redeemer, appearing in the fleſh for the ſalvation of his people, and the ruin of his enemies.

1. His beauty is deſcribed. Thou art fairer than the children of men: not conſidered in his uncreated beauty, nor, I apprehend, reſpecting his human form and countenance as man, but with regard to the tranſcendent excellencies he poſſeſſes as Redeemer, which render him the chief of ten thouſand, and altogether lovely. Thus every faithful ſoul regards him as the grand object of his warmeſt affections; and though he hath neither form nor comelineſs to others, he can ſay, whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is nothing upon earth I deſire in compariſon of thee.

2. His words are as ſweet and kind as his perſon, as Mediator, is amiable. Grace is poured into thy lips; the goſpel of grace, which was delivered unto him, and which he declared unto men, containing thoſe rich and ineſtimable promiſes of pardon, grace, conſolation, and glory; the report of which make his feet beautiful upon the mountains.

3. The bleſſing of God is upon him for ever. It pleaſed the Father, that in him ſhould all fulneſs dwell, that out of the plenitude he had received, he might for ever diſpenſe to his people according to their neceſſities, be their fountain of bleſſing, their eternal excellence, and joy of many generations. Bleſſed and happy are they who out of his fulneſs receive grace for grace.

4. Victory attends his chariot wheels: he comes to conquer his peoples enemies, to reſcue the prey from the mighty, and to deliver the captives of ſin and Satan; firſt bringing his church from ſlavery, then making her partner of his throne. The Pſalmiſt addreſſes him therefore, as ready to go forth to battle againſt the powers of darkneſs: Gird thy ſword upon thy thigh, O moſt mighty; that ſword of the Spirit, even the word of God; by the preaching and power of which, at laſt the kingdoms of the world ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord and his Chriſt: and in this warfare he appears with glory and majeſty; not to the eye of ſenſe, in that he was deſpicable; but they who regarded him as the only-begotten of the Father, beheld his glory; nor did his excellent majeſty ever appear more diſtinguiſhed than when covered with clotted gore, and ſtreaming down with blood: he ſpoiled on the croſs principalities and powers, making a ſhew of them openly. And in thy majeſty ride proſperouſly: this is the churches prayer, that he would go forth conquering and to conquer, and triumph in the heart of every believer, as he hath overcome for them; and this becauſe of truth, of meekneſs, and righteouſneſs; by means of theſe, by his word of truth, the promiſe which ſupported him in his ſufferings; or the goſpel, through which the ſaints overcome, Rev. xii. 11. becauſe of meekneſs, either his own, which enabled him patiently to endure our puniſhment, or that which he works in his people under all their trials; becauſe of righteouſneſs, that which he hath completely wrought out in his own perſon, and is now for ever imputed to them as their title to glory; or that internal holineſs of heart he works in them, whereby they are ſtrengthened againſt all the temptations of ſin and Satan: thus entering the liſts, thy right hand ſhall teach thee terrible things; thy omnipotent arm ſhall prevail over all the combined powers of earth and hell. Thine arrows are ſharp in the heart of the king's enemies, whereby the people fall under thee; either thoſe who, though once enemies, ſubdued by mighty grace, and pierced with deep conviction, fall down at the Redeemer's feet as humble ſupplicants for mercy; or thoſe who, obſtinately impenitent, and ſtanding out againſt the warnings of his word, and the calls of his goſpel, are broken under the rod of his judgments, and pierced with the arrows of his eternal wrath, find it in vain to ſtruggle with Omnipotence. Note, (1.) The ſharpeſt convictions of ſin are gracious wounds, deſigned not to deſtroy, but to recover us. (2.) When by Divine grace the majeſtic Saviour takes poſſeſſion of the heart, corruption muſt fall before his mighty ſword. (3.) Wo to the ſinner's ſoul againſt whom the arrows of vengeance are ready on the ſtring.

6. [i] Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: the ſceptre of thy kingdom is a right ſceptre. 7. [k] Thou loveſt righteouſneſs and hateſt wickedneſs: therefore † God, [l] thy God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladneſs [m] above thy fellows. 8. [n] All thy garments ſmell of myrrh, and aloes, and caſſia; out of the ivory palaces, whereby they have made thee glad. 9. [o] Kings daughters were among thy honourable women: upon thy right hand did ſtand [p] the queen in gold of Ophir.

[i] Pſ. xciii. 2. Heb. i. 8.
[k] Pſ. xxxiii. 5.
† Or, O God.
[l] Iſa. lxi. 1.
[m] Joh. iii. 34.
[n] Cant. i. 3.
[o] Ibid. vi. 8.
[p] Rev. xxi. 9.

v. 6—9. The Pſalmiſt having ſet forth the king Meſſiah victorious over his foes, here deſcribes him on his exalted throne, in robes of majeſty, and graced with moſt magnificent attendants.

1. His throne and righteous adminiſtration are remarked. Thy throne, O God; no leſs a perſonage than the eternal Jehovah; not a creature of the higheſt rank, but the ſelf-exiſtent Creator, whom angels adore, Heb. i. 8, 9. and whoſe kingdom ruleth over all; and eternal as univerſal, for ever and ever: equitable in all his adminiſtration, the ſceptre of thy kingdom is a right ſceptre; none ſhall have cauſe to complain: even thoſe that receive the ſentence of eternal death ſhall be ſpeechleſs, and own their condemnation juſt. Thou loveſt righteouſneſs, or righteous perſons; thoſe who under the influence of faith and love, walk after his own bleſſed pattern and precepts, and hateſt wickedneſs of all ſorts, and thoſe who practice it; and will, in condign puniſhment, make his hatred of it appear to all eternity. Note, We are all under this government; and whether we will or no, muſt ſtand or fall by his deciſions. How highly than doth it import us to conſider, whether we are dutiful ſubjects whom he loves, or wilful rebels whom he hates?

2. The appointment of Chriſt to his mediatorial kingdom is obſerved, v. 7. Therefore God, even thy God, John xx. 17. who appointed him for the work of redemption, and was the head of Chriſt and his God, as incarnate, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladneſs; all ſpiritual gifts and graces, without meaſure, were beſtowed upon the man Jeſus, that he might be every way qualified for the undertaking whereunto he was appointed; and have in all things the pre-eminence in the ſurpaſſing excellence of his human nature, as well as in the tranſcendent dignity to which he was advanced above his fellows.

3. His royal apparel is mentioned. All thy garments ſmell of myrrh, aloes, and caſſia; alluding to the ingredients of the holy oil, Exod. xxx. 23. out of the ivory palaces; heaven, from whence he came forth thus glorioſly arrayed, and to which he is now returned; whereby they have made thee glad; either the Mediator himſelf, who delighted in theſe glorious garments; or it may be read, for which, and refer to believers, who are cloathed with his robes of righteouſneſs, and his garments of ſalvation; and thus adorned, the Saviour takes pleaſure in their beauty.

4. His court appears magnificently ſplendid. Kings daughters were among thy honourable women; the children of God are ſons and daughters of the eternal king, and their higheſt honour is to be attendants on his exalted Son; ſeeing by him they obtain this glorious relation, becoming children of God by faith in Jeſus Chriſt. And as particular believers, virgin ſouls of royal extraction appear his attendants, his church ſits as a queen at his right hand in gold of Ophir; adorned with gifts and graces more pure and precious than the fineſt gold; or rather beautiful in his bright robes of ſpotleſs righteouſneſs, which as he commands, Rev. iii. 18. ſhe hath bought. We may ſay of him, with greater propriety than the queen of Sheba did of Solomon's ſervants, 1 Kings x. 8. Happy are they that ſtand continually before thee; for a greater than Solomon is here.

10. Hearken, O daughter, and conſider, and incline thine ear; [q] forget alſo thine own people, and thy father's houſe. 11. So ſhall the king greatly deſire [r] thy beauty: for [s] he is thy Lord, [t] and worſhip thou him. 12. And the daughter of Tyre ſhall be there [u] with a gift, [x] even the rich among the people ſhall intreat thy favour. 13. [y] The king's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. 14. [z] She ſhall be brought unto the king in raiment of needle-work: [a] the virgins her companions that follow her ſhall be brought unto thee. 15. With gladneſs and rejoicing ſhall they be brought: they ſhall enter into [b] the king's palace. 16. Inſtead of thy fathers ſhall be [c] thy children, whom thou mayſt make [d] princes in all the earth. 17. [e] I will make thy name to be remembered in all generations: therefore ſhall the people praiſe thee for ever and ever.

[q] See Deut. xxi. 13.
[r] Cant. i. 15.
[s] John xx. 28.
[t] Ibid. v. 23.
[u] Pſ. lxviii. 29. & lxxii. 10.
[x] Iſa. xlix. 23. & lx. 3.
[y] Rev. xix. 7, 8.
[z] Cant. i. 4.
[a] Rev. xiv. 4.
[b] John xiv. 2.
[c] Gal. iv. 26.
[d] Rev. i. 6. & v. 10. & xx. 6.
[e] Mal. i. 11.

v. 10—17. As the former part related to the king, this reſpects the queen, the Lamb's wife; and ſhe is called daughter, either referring to her relation to God's dear Son, or as a term of tender and affectionate regard.

1. A ſolemn injunction is given her. Hearken, conſider, incline thine ear: thou art no longer thine own, thy huſband's will muſt be thy law; hearken to it with attention, conſider it with delight, and incline to it with cheatfulneſs; forget alſo thine own people, and thy father's houſe; let no attachment beſide engage thy heart, the whole belongs to him. They who would be Chriſt's ſpouſe, muſt be ſeparated for him from whatever here below would enſnare and draw away their affections; compared with our love to him, we muſt hate father and brother; yea, our own lives alſo. So ſhall the king have pleaſure in thy beauty: this is an argument for her faithful adherence to him alone; the delight he would take in her, and the happineſs thence reſulting. Another is drawn from his right and authority over her: He is thy Lord; thy maſter, to whom obedience is ſo highly due; and therefore worſhip thou him, as thy maker, as well as thy huſband and thy Redeemer, who is moſt high in the glory of God the Father; equal as touching his Godhead, and therefore to be adored with equal honour; John v. 23. Note, (1.) We cannot entertain too high thoughts of the glory of our divine Lord: the humiliation of the man muſt never leſſen in our eye the eſſential and ſelf-exiſtent deity of the Son. (2.) None can call Chriſt their bridegroom, whoſe fidelity and love doth not evidence the truth of their relation. (3.) The Lord's delight is thoſe who love and ſerve him; no beauty in his eye like the beauty of holineſs.

2. The converſion of the Gentiles unto her is foretold. The daughter of Tyre, the neareſt bordering heathen nation, ſhall be there with a gift, offering up herſelf and her goods for the ſupport of the goſpel; even the rich among the people; not only the lower ranks in life, but even kings ſhall intreat thy favour; deſire to be admitted into the communion and fellowſhip of the goſpel, which in a meaſure hath been, and ſhall yet be, more eminently fulfilled in its ſeaſon.

3. Her beautiful apparel and admiſſion into her huſband's palace is obſerved. The king's daughter is all glorious within; her ſoul is adorned with every divine and gracious diſpoſition; her clothing is of wrought gold; a ſhining profeſſion, and exemplary conduct, mark all her ſteps. She ſhall be brought unto the king, conducted by the hand of grace, and prepared for her high eſtate, in raiment of needle-work; the pure and precious robe of her Redeemer's righteouſneſs; or thoſe bright garments of immortality, which in the reſurrection-day ſhe ſhall put on: the virgins her companions; the ſouls preſerved in purity, unſpotted from the world, that follow her in all holy ordinances and godly converſation, ſhall be brought unto thee, to the eternal enjoyment of thy preſence and love. With gladneſs and rejoicing ſhall they be brought, amidſt congratulating angels, themſelves loſt in wonder, love, and praiſe; and no marvel! when they ſhall enter into the king's palace; the heaven of heavens, the place where his throne of glory ſtands; and where, next his own, thrones are prepared for them, that they may reign with him eternally. May my poor ſoul be numbered among theſe virgin fellows.

4. The Progeny of the Redeemer is promiſed to be many and illuſtrious. Inſtead of thy fathers, the Jewiſh ſtock from whence he ſprung, ſhall be thy children, of the Gentile world, admitted into the church inſtead of the Jews, who were rejected; whom thou mayſt make princes in all lands, for his dominion ſhall be from ſea to ſea; the very iſles of the Gentiles ſhall come in unto him, and their kings reign by his appointment and for his glory: and alſo, from all theſe nations ſhall there be a choſen generation, to reign with him as kings and prieſts for ever, Rev. i. 6. In conſequence of this ſpread of the goſpel, the Father engages to make his memorial everlaſting. I will make thy name to be remembered in all generations, by maintaining a perpetual ſucceſſion of faithful men: therefore ſhall the people praiſe thee for ever and ever; whilſt ſun and moon endureth, there ſhall be a generation to praiſe him; and when theſe bright luminaries are extinguiſhed, the praiſes of our Jeſus ſhall continue the burden of the never-ceaſing ſong of eternity. Amen, and Amen.

PSALM XLVI.

This pſalm encourages us to hope in God in the worſt of times; to praiſe him for the paſt, and truſt him for future mercies. We are here taught, 1. To take comfort in God when things look very black and threatning, ver. 1—5. 2. To mention to his praiſe the great things he has wrought for his church againſt its enemies, ver. 6—9. 3. To aſſure ourſelves that God, who hath glorified his own name, will glorify it yet again, and to comfort ourſelves with that, ver. 10, 11. And thus, though our ſpiritual enemies are mighty, or our outward foes threatning, we have a faithful God to truſt, and this pleaſant ſong to ſing.

¶ To the chief muſician for the ſons of Korah. A ſong upon [a] Alamoth.

1. GOD is our refuge and ſtrength, [b] a very preſent help in trouble. 2. Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the † midſt of the ſea. 3. [c] Though the waters thereof rore, and be troubled, though the mountains ſhake with the ſwelling thereof. Selah. 4. There is a river, the ſtreams whereof ſhall make glad the city of God: the holy place of the tabernacles of the moſt High. 5. [d] God is in the midſt of her; ſhe ſhall not be moved: God ſhall help her, and that ‡ right early.

[a] 1 Chron. xv. 20.
[b] Deut. iv. 7. Pſ. cxlv. 18.
† Heb. Heart of the ſeas.
[c] Pſal. xciii. 3, 4. Jer. v. 22. Mat. vii. 25.
[d] Rev. ii. 1.
‡ Heb. When the morning appears. See Ex. xiv. 24, 27. Pſ. xxx. 5.

v. 1—5. Amidſt the furious attacks of enraged foes, the name of our God is a ſtrong tower, into which the righteous runneth and is ſafe. We have here David profeſſing his own and the church's confidence in God, amidſt the moſt threatning appearances, and giving his reaſons for ſuch his hope.

1. They are ſafe amidſt all the tumults of this diſordered world. God is our refuge, who ſhall pluck us thence? our ſtrength, who ſhall be able to ſtand before us thus ſupported? a very preſent help in trouble, to extricate from every difficulty, and ever near to ſuccour and ſave us. Therefore will we not fear; there is no ſhadow of ground for it, ſeeing he who is for us, is moſt High, ſo infinitely ſurpaſſing in power all that are againſt us. And in the midſt of her, his church, taking up his reſidence, and manifeſting his preſence in the believer's heart. In vain, therefore, the earth trembles and is diſſolved, the mountains leap from their baſes, the ſtormy billows roar and laſh the rocky ſhores; in vain are all the attacks; in vain the threatnings of earth or hell; the church, and every faithful ſoul, is founded on a rock; not only ſafe from ruin, but ſecure from every terrifying fear; ſhe ſhall not be moved: God ſhall help her, and make her adverſaries lick the duſt, and that right early; quickly, or when the morning appears; the night of trouble ſhall be ſhort, and the welcome morning of deliverance and joy ariſe. Note, (1.) When danger is moſt alarming, faith ſhould be moſt in exerciſe. (2.) The changes and revolutions of this ſublunary globe, can little affect thoſe whoſe ſouls are fixed on things above. (3.) They need not fear, and ſhall not fall, who make God their refuge and ſtrength.

2. They are comforted as well as ſecure. There is a river, the ſtreams whereof ſhall make glad the city of our God: a river of never-ceaſing conſolations, that ſprings from the fountain of God's eternal love, whoſe ſtreams no foe can interrupt; theſe, like the waters of Siloam, ſweetly flow into the faithful ſoul in the midſt of every trial, and fill him with joy as well as peace in believing: he is the city where God delights to dwell, and the holy place of the tabernacles of the moſt High, being made the habitation of God through the ſpirit. Note, If we enjoy divine communications of grace and comfort, we are amply repaid for all the ſtorms and tempeſts raiſed by a world that lieth in wickedneſs.

6. [e] The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, the earth melted. 7. [f] The LORD of hoſt is with us, the God of Jacob is † our refuge. Selah. 8. [g] Come, behold the works of the LORD, what deſolations he hath made in the earth. 9. [h] He maketh wars to ceaſe unto the end of the earth, [i] he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the ſpear in ſunder, [k] he burneth the chariot in the fire. 10. Be ſtill, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth. 11. [l] The LORD of hoſts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

[e] Pſ. ii. 1. Rev. xi. 18.
[f] Ver. 11.
† Heb. An high place for us.
[g] Pſal. lxvi. 5.
[h] Iſa. ii. 4.
[i] Pſal. lxxvi. 3.
[k] Ezek. xxxix. 3.
[l] Ver. 7.

v. 6—11. Who can ſtand when God appeareth?

1. His foes are routed and deſtroyed. The heathen raged againſt his church and people; of old, Rome pagan, and at preſent Rome papal, and all the antichriſtian enemies of his Redeemed; and the kingdoms are moved, ſtirred up to war againſt the ſaints of the moſt High: but he uttered his voice, and at the breath of his lips the earth melted; all theſe collected forces diſſolved as the ſnow before the ſun. Thus, under the wings of Jacob's God, the God of hoſts, we are not only protected, but by his power triumphant. Come and behold the works of the Lord, with wonder ſee his glorious interpoſition, what deſolations he hath wrought in the earth upon all his furious adverſaries: the deſolations of Judea, the downfal of the Roman monarchy; mark his avenging rod: and from theſe we may be aſſured the preſent powers of Antichriſt, whether popiſh or mahometan, ſhall alike with their carcaſes ſtrew the ground; nor will he ceaſe till all his enemies are made his footſtool; when, their power utterly broken, and all their armour, wherein they truſted, ſpoiled and conſumed, the war ſhall ceaſe, and his people enjoy for ever the fruits of that glorious and eternal peace he hath obtained for them. For,

2. They are bid only to be ſtill, to wait upon the Lord without diſtraction, and know that I am God; believe my power and love, and ye ſhall aſſuredly ſee my great ſalvation; and that diſplayed not more for their comfort and ſafety, than for his own glory: I will be exalted among the heathen, who oppoſe his kingdom and intereſts, by their deſtruction; I will be exalted on the earth, by ſubduing the nations of the world to the obedience of the faith, and ſetting up the throne of the Redeemer from pole to pole. Such promiſes may therefore well ſilence all our fears, and confirm our confidence. The Lord of hoſts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge.

PSALM XLVII.

Many ſuppoſe that this pſalm was penned upon occaſion of the bringing up of the ark to mount Sion; but it looks further, to the aſcenſion of Chriſt into the heavenly Sion, after he had finiſhed his undertaking on earth, and to the ſetting up of his kingdom in the world, to which the heathen ſhould become willing ſubjects. We are directed to praiſe God, ver. 1. 1. For his glory and deſigns of grace, ver. 2—5. 2. For the aſcenſion of the Redeemer, ver. 5, 6. 3. For his univerſal dominion, ver. 7—9.

¶ To the chief muſician, A pſalm † for the ſons of Korah.

† Or, of.

1. O [a] Clap your hands, all ye people, ſhout unto God with the voice of triumph: 2. For the LORD moſt High [b] is terrible; [c] he is a great King over all the earth. 3. [d] He ſhall ſubdue the people under us, and the nations under our feet. 4. He ſhall chooſe our inheritance for us, the excellency of Jacob whom he loved. Selah.

[a] Iſa. lv. 12.
[b] Pſal. lxxvi. 12.
[c] Mal. i. 14.
[d] Pſal. xviii. 47.

v. 1—4. The Pſalmiſt opens with an addreſs to all people to expreſs their utmoſt exultation in the God of their ſalvation.

O clap your hands, all ye people, not only of the Jewiſh nation, but thoſe who are redeemed by Jeſus out of all lands: ſhout unto God with a voice of triumph, not merely for Iſrael's enemies ſubdued by David's ſword, but for the more glorious victories the Son of David hath obtained over all the powers of ſin, death, and hell: for the Lord moſt High, the incarnate Saviour, whoſe name is above every name in heaven or earth; he is terrible in his judgments, when, turning upon his affrighted foes, confuſion covers them, and ruin overtakes them: he is King over all the earth, his dominion ſovereign and univerſal; his people therefore may well be joyful in their king. He ſhall ſubdue the people under us, and the nations under our feet; by the powerful influences of his word and ſpirit, either effectually converting the Gentiles to himſelf, and bringing them to the obedience of the faith, or caſting down with his mighty arm the refractory and impenitent. He ſhall chuſe an inheritance for us, not Canaan's fertile land, but a better and more enduring portion eternal in the heavens, which his blood hath bought, his promiſe hath ſecured, and himſelf is gone up to prepare for us; the excellency of Jacob, the ſpiritual Iſrael of God, and Jacob's moſt honourable deſcendants, whom he loved; either Jacob, on whom God's election of grace fixed, or his people, the objects of his everlaſting love. Note, (1.) They who believe the promiſes, cannot but rejoice in hope. (2.) Jeſus is a terrible enemy, but a moſt deſirable friend: happy they, who fleeing from the wrath to come, find favour and reconciliation with him. (3.) Heaven is our inheritance, entailed upon the adopted children of grace, and ſure to all the ſeed; where then ſhould our affections be?

5. [e] God is gone up with a ſhout, the LORD with the ſound of a trumpet. 6. Sing praiſes to God, ſing praiſes: ſing praiſes unto our King, ſing praiſes. 7. For [f] God is the King of all the earth, [g] ſing ye praiſes † with underſtanding. 8. God reigneth over the heathen: God ſitteth upon the throne of his holineſs. 9. ‡ The princes of the people are gathered together, § even [h] the people of the God of Abraham: for the ſhields of the earth belong unto God: he is greatly exalted.

[e] Pſal. lxviii. 18. Eph. iv. 8.
[f] Zech. xiv. 9.
[g] 1 Cor. xiv. 15.
† Or, every one that hath underſtanding.
‡ Or, the voluntary of the people.
§ Or, unto the people.
[h] Rom. iv. 11.

v. 5—9. If this moment we begin the ſong, and ceaſeleſs continue it through the days of eternity, we cannot ſhew forth all the Redeemer's praiſe; yet the attempt is gratitude, and the ſervice our bounden duty. We have here ſeveral ſubjects of praiſe pointed out.

1. For the aſcenſion of Jeſus to the right hand of God. It might be matter of national joy when the ark, reſtored from obſcurity, was carried in grand proceſſion to the tabernacle of David; but this is a univerſal burſt of praiſe; earth rings with the glory of the aſcending Saviour, whilſt angels catch the mighty joy, and opening their ſhining ranks, receive with a ſhout of triumph the returning conqueror, who leads captivity captive, v. 5, 6.

2. For his univerſal ſovereignty. High on his exalted throne the Redeemer ſits, as God over all, bleſſed for ever; as king, ruling by his providence in all the earth, protecting his people, reſtraining the heathen, and making his holineſs appear in all his adminiſtration; and therefore demanding praiſe, with underſtanding, ſuch as becomes him, or from every intelligent being, who are all bound to ſet forth his glory.

3. For the converſion of the Gentiles. The princes of the people are gathered together, to tender their ſubmiſſion at the feet of Jeſus, even the people of the God of Abraham, for ſuch by faith they become; followers of the patriarch, and ſharers in his bleſſing; or to the people, &c. intimating their union in one body, under Jeſus their exalted head: for the ſhields of the earth, the rulers of the nations, belong unto the Lord, are appointed by him, their hearts are in his hand, and he can make them willing to give up themſelves to him by choice, as they are his by bounden duty. He is greatly exalted; all power is given him in heaven and in earth, and his dominion eternal as univerſal: therefore ſing praiſes unto our God, ſing praiſes: ſing praiſes to our King, ſing praiſes!

PSALM XLVIII.

This pſalm, as the two former, is a triumphant ſong, penned upon occaſion of ſome eminent victory obtained, or more probably prophetical of the Redeemer's triumphs, and the glories of the goſpel church, of which Jeruſalem was a type. Jeruſalem is here praiſed, 1. For its relation to God, ver. 1, 2. 2. For God's care of it, ver. 3. 3. For the terror it ſtrikes upon its enemies, ver. 4—7. 4. For the pleaſure it gives to its friends, who delight to think, (1.) Of what God has done, doth, and will do for it, ver. 8. (2.) Of the gracious diſcoveries he makes of himſelf, in and for that holy city, ver. 9, 10. (3.) Of the effectual proviſion which is made for its ſafety, ver. 11—13. (4.) Of the aſſurance we have of the perpetuity of God's covenant with the children of Sion, ver. 14.

¶ A ſong and pſalm † for the ſons of Korah.

† Or, of.

1. GREAT is the LORD, and greatly to be praiſed in [a] the city of our God, in the mountain of his holineſs. 2. [b] Beautiful for ſituation, [c] the joy of the whole earth is mount Zion, [d] on the ſides of the north, [e] the city of the great King. 3. God is known in her palaces for a refuge. 4. For lo, [f] the kings were aſſembled, they ‡ paſſed by together. 5. They ſaw it, and ſo they marvelled, they were troubled, and haſted away. 6. Fear took hold upon them there, [g] and pain as of a woman in travail. 7. [h] Thou breakeſt the ſhips of Tarſhiſh with an eaſt-wind.

[a] Pſ. lxxxvii. 3.
[b] Ibid. l. 2. Lam. ii. 15. Dan. viii. 9. & xi. 16.
[c] Ezek. xx. 6.
[d] Iſa. xiv. 35.
[e] Mat. v. 13.
[f] Pſ. xlvi. 6. Rev. xix. 19.
‡ Or, paſſed away preſently.
[g] Iſa. xiii. 8.
[h] Ezek. xxvii. 26.

v. 1—7. The work of heaven will be everlaſting praiſe; it is good to antedate the joy, and begin the ſervice of eternity.

1. Great is the Lord, who is in his mediatorial glory ſo high exalted, and greatly to be praiſed for all his wondrous works of power, grace, and love, manifeſted in all ages to his choſen people; and this his glory is to be ſet forth,

2. In the city of our God, in Jeruſalem, the mountain of his holineſs in Zion, where in his temple, his ſacred preſence dwelt between the cherubims. Beautiful for ſituation, eminent to view, and the country around it like the garden of Eden: the joy of the whole earth is mount Zion, being the favoured reſidence of the God of the whole earth, on the ſides of the north, turned from the ſultry beam of day, the city of the great King, where moſt eminently he fixes his throne, and manifeſts his glory. God is well known in her palaces for a refuge, having protected it from every foe, and all who come to worſhip there, find ſafety under his wings. Thus glorious was the earthly Jeruſalem, but how much in glory doth the ſpiritual Zion exceed her. In his church the great Redeemer is pleaſed to dwell now, bright in holineſs ſhe ſhines, firm as a mountain, and filled with inhabitants as a city. In beauty excellent, watered with the ſtreams of grace, that flow from the fountain of bleſſedneſs, adorned with living palaces, the reſidence of the eternal Spirit: here a ſure refuge is found in the arms of Jeſus from guilt and ſin, known by the word of his goſpel, and proved by the experience of every faithful ſoul.

3. All attempts of foes to hurt are fruitleſs, where God is thus known and praiſed. This Jeruſalem had experienced, 2 Sam. v. 17. The aſſembled kings paſſed by, they ſaw Almighty Power engaged to protect her, and with aſtoniſhment fled; a panic fear ſeized them, they were daſhed in pieces by the ſtormy wind: and ſuch will be the iſſue of the war againſt the church of God, carried on by the antichriſtian foes, Rev. xix. 19—21. They will fall before the power of Jeſus, be overthrown with perpetual deſolations, and ſink as a ſtone in the mighty waters of God's wrath, and never riſe up again.

8. As [i] we have heard, ſo have we ſeen in [k] the city of the LORD of hoſts, in the city of our God, [l] God will eſtabliſh it for ever. Selah. 9. We have † thought of thy loving kindneſs, O God, in the midſt of thy temple. 10. According to thy name, O God, ſo is thy praiſe unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is [m] full of righteouſneſs. 11. Let mount Zion rejoice, let the daughters of Judah be glad, becauſe of thy judgments. 12. [n] Walk about Zion, and go round about her: tell the towers thereof. 13. ‡ Mark ye well her bulwarks, § conſider her palaces; that ye may tell it to the generation following. 14. For this God is our God for ever and ever; he will be our guide even unto death.

[i] Pſ. xliv. 1.
[k] Ver. 1, 2.
[l] Mat. xvi. 18.
† Or, waited for.
[m] Pſ. xlv, 4, 7.
[n] Neh. xii. 31.
‡ Heb. Set up your heart to her bulwarks.
§ Or, raiſe up.

v. 8—14. We have here the church of God declaring by experience the truth of what the pſalmiſt had aſſerted. As we have heard, either in former ages, when God vouchſafed ſuch mighty aid, or in the word of promiſe, ſo have we ſeen the accompliſhment of the promiſe, and the like protection, in the city of the Lord of hoſts, in the city of our God; Jeruſalem bore teſtimony to God's faithfulneſs and care then, and in like manner may the people of God in every age increaſe the number of witneſſes. God will eſtabliſh it for ever; the church, and every particular member of it; the gates of hell ſhall never prevail, but finally we ſhall triumph over all our enemies. We have thought of thy loving kindneſs, O Lord, from whence all his rich mercy ſprings, or waited for it, when dangers ſeemed to threaten, in the midſt of thy temple, thy church, where in prayer we called upon thee, and with praiſes celebrated thy faithfulneſs. According to thy name, thy boundleſs perfections, ſo is thy praiſe unto the ends of the earth, whither the glorious goſpel hath carried the diſcovery of that bleſſed name, the Lord our Redeemer and Saviour. Thy right hand is full of righteouſneſs, every deciſion of his is equitable, and eſpecially what ſeems here intended, the doom reſerved for the oppoſers of God's truth and kingdom is altogether righteous. And herein let mount Zion rejoice, and the daughters of Judah be glad; all who are faithful, becauſe of thy judgments, which ſhall be executed on the powers of Antichriſt, in the great day of retribution. And in the mean time, walk about Zion, and go round about her: tell the towers thereof. Jeruſalem was regarded as an impregnable fortreſs, Lam. iv. 12. but ſtronger towers of angelic guards keep ſafe the ſpiritual Zion. Mark well her bulwarks, built on Chriſt, the rock of ages, defended by the arm of Omnipotence; conſider her palaces, ſuch as are the prophets, apoſtles, confeſſors, and faithful in every age, that ye may tell it to the generation following, for the ſupport of their faith and hope in every exigence. For this God is our God for ever and ever, the ſame powerful protector, the ſame gracious and loving Saviour to all who truſt in him, that never changes, never forſakes them. He will be our guide even unto death, ſafely to preſerve us from all the dangers of life; in death, to keep us from all fear or failing; and after death, to bring us to the eternal enjoyment of his bleſſed ſelf. May we prove him ſuch by happy experience.

PSALM XLIX.

This pſalm is a leſſon of admonition, to teach us the folly of ſetting our hearts on this world's goods, and to comfort us under the want of them. 1. David demands audience and attention, ver. 1—4. 2. Profeſſes his confidence in God, ver. 5. 3. Seeks to convince thoſe who truſt in riches, of the vanity of their confidence here and hereafter, ver. 6—14. 4. Comforts himſelf in the proſpect of death, 5. Cautions us not to fear the proſperity of the wicked, ver. 16—20.

¶ To the chief muſician,

A pſalm † for the ſons of Korah.

† Or, of.

1. HEAR this, all ye people, [a] give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world: 2. Both low and high, rich and poor together. 3. My mouth ſhall ſpeak of wiſdom: and the meditation of my heart ſhall be of underſtanding. 4. [b] I will incline mine ear to a parable; I will open my dark ſaying upon the harp.

[a] Pſ. xxxiv. 11. Jam. i. 19.
[b] Pſ. lxxviii. 2. Mat. xiii. 35.

v. 1—4. The Pſalmiſt, with ſolemnity, introduces his important diſcourſe, and calls upon all, both high and low, to attend the leſſons of inſtruction he was about to deliver. The one, that they might know the vanity of their poſſeſſions; the other, that they might be content in the want of them, nor envy thoſe who enjoyed them. His ſubject was concerning the trueſt wiſdom, v. 3. and he ſpoke after deep meditation: his diſcourſe might indeed appear to the world parabolical and dark, but he deſired ſo to incline his own hear to divine teaching, that he might be enabled to make the matter clear to others, and with his harp engage, by pleaſing harmony, the ears of others to liſten to his ſong. Note, (1.) The poor need as much be warned againſt envy and diſcontent, as the rich againſt pride and worldly confidence. (2.) Divine ſubjects ſhould be ſpoken of with great thought and ſeriouſneſs. (3.) What we inculcate on others, we muſt recommend by our own practice. (4.) Muſick anſwers its original deſign, when employed to convey, or imprint, the ſentiments of Divine wiſdom.

5. Wherefore ſhould I fear in [c] the days of evil, when the iniquity of my heels ſhall compaſs me about? 6. They [d] that truſt in their wealth, and boaſt themſelves in the multitude of their riches: 7. None of them can by any means redeem his brother, [e] nor give to God a ranſom for him: 8. (For [f] the redemption of their ſoul is precious, and it ceaſeth for ever) 9. That he ſhould ſtill live for ever, [g] and not to ſee corruption. 10. For he ſeeth that [h] wiſe men die, likewiſe the fool and the brutiſh perſon periſh, and [i] leave their wealth to others. 11. Their inward thought is, that their houſes ſhall continue for ever, and their dwelling-places to all generations; they call their lands after their own names. 12. Nevertheleſs [k] man being in honour abideth not; he is like the beaſts that periſh. 13. This their way is their folly; yet their poſterity † approve their ſayings. Selah. 14. [l] Like ſheep they are laid in the grave, death ſhall feed on them; and [m] the upright ſhall have dominion over them in the morning, and [n] their ‡ beauty ſhall conſume in the graves from their dwelling.

c Eph. v. 16.
d Job xxxi. 24. Pſ. lii. 7. & lxii. 10. Mark x. 24. 1 Tim. vi. 17.
e Mat. xvi. 26.
f Job xxxvi. 18, 19.
g Pſ. lxxxix. 48.
h Eccleſ. ii. 16.
i Prov. xi. 4.
k Ver. 20. Pſ. lxxxii. 7.
† Heb. Delight in their mouth.
l Jer. xii. 3.
m Dan. vii. 22. Luke xxii. 30. 1 Cor. vi. 2. Rev. ii. 26.
n Job iv. 21. Pſ. xxxix. 11.
‡ Or, ſtrength.

v. 5—14. Having engaged attention, he begins to open his parable.

1. He deſcribes the ſecurity of a gracious ſoul, and intimates how unſpeakably ſuperior that is to all worldly wealth. In the days of affliction they are delivered from all diſtreſſing fear, with which worldly men are overwhelmed; and even in death and judgment, when iniquity compaſſeth about the ſinner, and riches profit not in this day of wrath, David, and every faithful ſoul, amidſt all the accuſations of numberleſs tranſgreſſions, would be confident in the pardoning love of a reconciled God. Note, True happineſs can only be known at death, that is the grand touchſtone; and a ſenſe of God's love, and the near proſpect of glory, are then infinitely more precious than thouſands of gold and ſilver.

2. He points out the vain confidence of the worldly-minded, and the inſufficiency of all their boaſted acquiſitions, to make them happy in time or eternity.

[1.] Their character is ſtrongly marked, v. 6, 9. (1.) They truſt in their wealth; it is not having wealth is any man's ſin, for all the creatures of God are good, and when improved for God's glory, riches are a bleſſing, though uſually to our earthly minds they prove a dangerous ſnare. The men of the world make them their confidence, as if they could protect them from evil, and furniſh them with every good, truſting on theſe uncertain poſſeſſions, more than the living God, 1 Tim. vi. 17. (2.) They boaſt themſelves in the multitude of their riches; it is what they value themſelves upon, and look down on their poorer neighbours with a ſupercilious diſregard, as if every man's excellency and ſuperiority were meaſured by the number of acres he poſſeſſed. (3.) Their inward thought is, that their houſes ſhall continue for ever, &c. conceiting they ſhall be able to build ſo firmly, and leave ſuch wealth to their ſucceſſors, that their palaces ſhall never moulder, and their deſcendants continue from age to age in grandeur and magnificence. (4.) They call the lands after their own names, vainly ſeeking thereby to keep up an immortal remembrance upon earth, and affecting the honour of being the founders of ſuch a noble family.

[2.] The folly, ſin, and danger of ſuch worldly pride is great. This indeed is the common way, and riſing generations copy after their ungodly fathers; but the multitude of followers diminiſhes nothing from the fooliſhneſs or evil of the practice. The folly of truſting in worldly goods, is evident, if we conſider,

(1.) Their inſufficiency to ranſom a brother from the hand of death, or diſeaſe, or to ſave his ſoul from hell. No gifts can bribe or ſecure from the arreſt of God's meſſengers; no riches profit in the day of wrath, to ſuſpend the ſentence, or prevent its execution. The ſoul is too precious to be purchaſed by corruptible things, ſuch as ſilver and gold: if the blood of Jeſus, and the redemption which is in him, be neglected, all other price is fruitleſs, and the ſinner periſhes for ever.

(2.) As vain are riches to ſecure the life of their poſſeſſors, or the honours which they hope for. Though they ſeek to perpetuate their names, man being in honour, abideth not; all things are ſubject to change, riches often make themſelves wings, and flee away, before the owner returns to the duſt; ſcarce his head is cold, before his extravagant heir diſſipates his ſubſtance, and his land changes its name as well as occupant: his palaces moulder into duſt, and the ſame age which wondered at the magnificent ſtructure, beholds the tottering wall, and deſolate abode. But could the honour abide, what comfort would it bring to the departed maſter? as the beaſts that periſh, the nobleſt muſt rot in the duſt; however great their wiſdom, in getting worldly wealth, they cannot elude the ſtroke of death. They die as the fool, for there is no diſcharge in this war, and leave their riches to others, who probably are glad of their departure, and will waſte in profuſion what they have collected by their parſimony.

(3.) More miſerable ſtill is their ſtate beyond the grave: tho' they who have made earth their confidence, die as beaſts, and perhaps like them, ſtupid and inſenſible; yet infinitely preferable is the lot of the beaſts that periſh. Like ſheep fatted for the ſlaughter, death feeds upon them; the ſecond death, the worm that never dies. In hell they lie down together, and inſtead of all their pomp and affluence, there, loathſome and defiled as a dead corpſe, they are an abhorring to all around them, a terror to themſelves, and want a drop of water to cool their tongues tormented in thoſe flames. There all their beauty ſhall be burning, and their pride everlaſtingly humbled, but the upright ſhall have dominion over them in the morning; though here they were oppreſſed by them, or neglected, as Lazarus at their gate, the day is coming, the bright reſurrection morn, when the tables will be changed; the poor ſervants of Jeſus, whom they deſpiſed, ſhall then awake triumphant from the duſt, be caught up to an eternal throne of glory; and underneath their feet, behold the proud oppreſſors laid low, and all their worldly confidence ſunk in eternal confuſion and deſpair. Note, (1.) This is true wiſdom, to judge not by preſent appearances, but to weigh time againſt eternity. (2.) They who have this world's wealth, need tremble for themſelves. Though their ſalvation is not impoſſible, yet it is highly difficult, Mark x. 24. (3.) It is not poverty, but piety, to which the promiſe is made; the diſcontented indigent lie down in hell, as well as the proudly affluent.

15. But [o] God will redeem my ſoul from the † power of the ‡ grave; for he ſhall receive me. Selah. 16. Be not thou afraid when one is made rich, when the glory of his houſe is increaſed. 17. For when he dieth, [p] he ſhall carry nothing away: his glory ſhall not deſcend after him. 18. Though whiles he lived, [q] he bleſſed his ſoul: and men will praiſe thee, when thou doſt well to thyſelf. 19. ‖ He ſhall go to the generation of his fathers, they ſhall never ſee light. 20. [r] Man that is in honour and underſtandeth not, [s] is like the beaſts that periſh.

o Hoſ. xiii. 14.
† Heb. Hand.
‡ Or, hell.
p 1 Tim. vi. 7.
q Deut. xxix. 19. Luke xii. 19.
‖ Heb. The ſoul ſhall go.
r Ver. 12.
s Eccleſ. iii. 19.

v. 15—20. Two reaſons are here further urged, why the faithful ſhould here endure want in patient hope, and neither fear nor envy the proſperity of the proud.

1. Becauſe in death the ſoul of the righteous hath hope. The Lord will redeem him from the power of the grave, and receive him into his everlaſting arms of love. The ſame Jeſus that hath paid the price of redemption for his people, will aſſuredly raiſe them up at the laſt day. Therefore, whatever outward diſtinctions may now ſubſiſt, they are trivial; one mite of grace that promiſes an intereſt in the eternal glory, is better than all the great riches of the ungodly.

2. Becauſe the end of the proud and ungodly man is terrible. In the preſent diſpenſation of God's providence, indeed, they are ſeen to flouriſh; their riches flow in like a river; their families increaſe; their names are reſpected; they bleſs themſelves, as if they had heaven's favour, and ſay, Soul, take thine eaſe; whilſt others fooliſhly follow their example, and encourage the deceit; praiſing their worldly wiſdom, and admiring them as the truly happy men. Such general approbation, and apparent proſperity, might be apt to awaken the envy, or excite the fears of the faithful. But there is no cauſe for either: this big-ſwoln worm is duſt of the earth, and returning quickly to the grave: thither, neither his riches, honour, nor fame can deſcend: among his fathers his ſepulchre will be found; and, when once he hath left the light of this ſun, the outer and eternal darkneſs muſt receive him, without one glimpſe of hope or joy for ever. Such is the miſerable end of the proud man, that neglects the concerns of eternity, for the vanities of time; and, ſtupid as the beaſts which periſh, underſtandeth not the things that make for his everlaſting peace. Note, (1.) We may not take our eſtimation of men from their own vaunts, or the world's admiration, but from the word of God. Many a joyous ſinner, many a great character in the earth, whom man bleſſes, is a wretch in proſpect, and under the preſent and eternal curſe of God. (2.) It is not what we have in this world, but what we carry with us into the next, that conſtitutes the true riches. How infinitely more magnificent cent are they adorned, who deſcend into the grave cloathed in the Redeemer's righteouſneſs, than they who wear purple and fine linen every day. How unſpeakably richer the poor ſoul that goes to treaſure incorruptible in heaven, than he who leaves behind him of earth's droſs thouſands and millions. (3.) They are only wiſe who conſider their latter end; and they the moſt errant fools, who forget it. (4.) The ſtate of the moſt loathſome animal is infinitely preferable to the brutiſh ſinner: the one dies, and is no more; the other, after a life of ſinful madneſs, enters upon an eternity of miſery.

PSALM L.

As worldly proſperity is no defence, ſo neither is the form of godlineſs, without the power of it, at all able to protect us in the day of judgment. Here is, 1. The glorious appearance of the prince that gives law and judgment, ver. 1—6. 2. Inſtruction given to his worſhippers to turn their ſacrifices into prayers, ver. 7—15. 3. A rebuke to thoſe who pretend to worſhip God, but live in diſobedience to his commands, ver. 16—20. Their doom read, ver. 21, 22. and warning given to all, to look to their converſation as well as to their devotions, ver. 23. This may well refer to the times of Chriſt, when the whole ceremonial ſervice was to be aboliſhed, and in every place men were to lift up pure hands in prayer, without wrath and doubting.

¶ A pſalm † of [a] Aſaph.

1. THE mighty God, even the LORD hath ſpoken, and called the earth from the riſing of the ſun, unto the going down thereof. 2. Out of Zion [b] the perfection of beauty [c] God hath ſhined. 3. Our God ſhall come, and ſhall not keep ſilence: [d] a fire ſhall devour before him, and it ſhall be very tempeſtuous round about him. 4. [e] He ſhall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. 5. [f] Gather my ſaints together unto me: thoſe [g] that have made a covenant with me by ſacrifice. 6. And [h] the heavens ſhall declare his righteouſneſs: for [i] God is judge himſelf. Selah.

† Or, for.
[a] 1 Chron. xv. 17. & xxv. 2. 2 Chron. xxix. 30.
[b] Pſ. xlviii. 2.
[c] Deut. xxxiii. 2. Pſ. lxxx. 1.
[d] Pſ. xcvii. 3. Dan. vii. 10. 2 Theſ. i. 8. Rev. xviii. 8.
[e] Deut. iv. 26. Iſa. i. 2.
[f] Mat. xiii. 30. & xxiv. 31.
[g] Exod. xxiv. 8.
[h] Pſ. xcvii. 6.
[i] Pſ. lxxv. 7. 2 Tim. iv. 1.

v. 1—6. Aſaph, whoſe name is prefixed to this pſalm, was either the compoſer of it, 2 Chron, xxix. 30. or the chief muſician that led the band. The matter is ſolemn and weighty.

1. The pſalmiſt begins with an addreſs, awakening the attention of heaven and earth from that great God, who, in the glory of uncreated majeſty, aſcends his radiant throne. The earth, from the riſing to the ſetting ſun, is commanded to hearken, whilſt out of Zion, the church of God on earth, or from the heavenly hill of glory, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the El, Elohim, Jehovah, the almighty ſelf-exiſtent God, ſhines forth in his goſpel to enlighten the earth; or from his judgment-ſeat ſends out his light and truth, that he may weigh the actions of men in his balances, and execute righteous judgment. Terrible ſhall be the day of his coming, as when of old in thick clouds and darkneſs he deſcended on Sinai's hoary top, and more awful his voice than thoſe mighty thunderings and words of terror, at which Moſes ſo exceedingly trembled. In ſuch tremendous majeſty he appeared, when, after his ſlighted goſpel, ſwift vengeance ſeized on the Jewiſh people; and we wait for the laſt moſt awful manifeſtation of his glory, when the aſſembled world of men and angels ſhall ſtand before his dread tribunal.

2. He commands his ſaints to be ſelected and ſeparated for himſelf, either by the miniſters of the churches, whoſe preaching is made effectual to the vocation of Chriſt's redeemed people; or by his angels in the reſurrection-day, who ſhall gather the righteous from among the wicked: and theſe choſen ones are deſcribed as having made a covenant with him by ſacrifice, or on ſacrifice; that is to ſay, have laid hold on the everlaſting covenant of grace eſtabliſhed in the Redeemer, and feeding on the memorials of his ſacrifice, have ſolemnly given up themſelves to him, as bought with his blood. Note, (1.) Chriſt's people, who are joined to him by ſolemn ſurrender, and have partaken of his ſacramental inſtitutions upon earth, will be aſſuredly gathered to him in heaven. (2.) All our hopes in eternity depend on the great ſacrifice our Redeemer offered in our behalf.

3. His righteouſneſs ſhall be applauded; the heavens and all their hoſts will proclaim it, and praiſe him for it; for God is judge himſelf, and therefore all his deciſions muſt be guided by unerring juſtice. His ſaints ſhall be acquitted with honour; for who can lay any thing to their charge whom God juſtifieth, Rom. viii. 33. and the ſinner with righteous judgment ſhall be condemned and ſpeechleſs.

7. [k] Hear, O my people, and I will ſpeak; O Iſrael, and I will teſtify againſt thee: [l] I am God, even thy God. 8. [m] I will not reprove thee for thy ſacrifices, or thy burnt-offerings to have been continually before me. 9. [n] I will take no bullock out of thy houſe, nor he-goats out of thy folds. 10. For every beaſt of the foreſt is mine, and the cattle upon a thouſand hills. 11. I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beaſts of the field are † mine. 12. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee, for [o] the world is mine, and the fulneſs thereof. 13. [p] Will I eat the fleſh of bulls, or drink the blood of goats? 14. [q] Offer unto God thankſgiving, and [r] pay thy vows unto the moſt High. 15. And [s] call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and [t] thou ſhalt glorify me.

[k] Pſ. lxxxi. 8.
[l] Exod. xx. 2.
[m] Iſa. i. 11. Jer. vii. 22. Hoſ. vi. 6.
† Or, with me.
[o] Exod. xix. 5. Deut. x. 14. Job xli. 11. Pſ. xxiv. 1. 1 Cor. x. 26.
[p] Iſa. lxvi. 3.
[q] Hoſ. xiv. 2. Heb. xiii. 15.
[r] Deut. xxiii. 21. Pſal. lxxvi. 11. Eccleſ. v. 4.
[s] Job xxii. 27. Pſ. xci. 15. & cvii. 6, 13. Jam. v. 13.
[t] Ver. 23.

v. 7—15. Theſe words are an addreſs to the Jewiſh people, once his choſen, and towards whom God of old ſtood in a peculiar relation, as their God, but now about to be rejected for their diſobedience and formality, and an abolition made of all the ceremonial worſhip, to give way for a more general and purer ſervice of prayer and praiſe through Jeſus Chriſt.

1. God aboliſhes the ceremonial inſtitutions; not that their neglect of theſe was their capital fault; their ſin was the hypocriſy, and unbelieving heart, wherewith they offered them, and their continued violations of the moral law, in compariſon with which, theſe were ſuperficial obſervances. Though they were of divine inſtitution, they were not of any intrinſic value, or brought any glory to God, farther than as they led to Chriſt, whoſe blood alone could give them any efficacy, or reſtore the honour of a broken law, v. 8. and it was abſurd to imagine, that God could be any more profited than pleaſed by the fleſh of bulls, or the blood of goats, when, as the univerſal Creator and poſſeſſor of all things, he could never want ſuch oblations, v. 9, 10. Now therefore another diſpenſation, different from the Sinai covenant, is iſſued forth; and when Jeſus, the end of all the ceremonies, appears, this ſhadowy ſervice muſt ceaſe of courſe, and a new and ſpiritual worſhip be eſtabliſhed. Therefore,

2. He directs what this ſhould be: Offer unto God thankſgiving, or confeſſion; confeſſion of daily ſin, and thankſgiving for daily mercies, and pay thy vows unto the Moſt High; be ſincere in univerſal devotedneſs to the ſervice of the bleſſed Jeſus, and in his holy ſacrament give up thyſelf to him; and call upon me in the day of trouble, when thy conſcience is diſturbed with ſin, or affliction of any kind overtakes thee, and I will deliver thee from the fears of guilt by my pardoning grace, which all the legal ſacrifices could not do; from every trouble, by my almighty power and love; and thou ſhalt glorify me, by aſcribing to me the praiſe of all, as the author and finiſher of the ſinner's ſalvation. Note, Jeſus, who works all for us and in us, juſtly deſerves to have the glory of all aſcribed to him by us.

16. But [u] unto the wicked God ſaith, What haſt thou to do to declare my ſtatutes, or that thou ſhouldſt take my covenant in thy mouth? 17. [x] Seeing thou hateſt inſtruction, and caſteſt my words behind thee. 18. When thou ſaweſt a thief, then thou conſentedſt with him, and † haſt been partaker with adulterers. 19. Thou giveſt thy mouth to evil, and [y] thy tongue frameth deceit. 20. Thou ſitteſt and ſpeakeſt againſt thy brother; thou ſlandereſt thine own mother's ſon. 21. Theſe things haſt thou done, [z] and I kept ſilence: [a] thou thoughteſt that I was altogether ſuch a one as thyſelf: but [b] I will reprove thee, and ſet them in order before thine eyes. 22. Now conſider this, ye that forget God, leſt I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver. 23. [c] Whoſo offereth praiſe, glorifieth me: and to him that ordereth his converſation aright, [d] will I ſhew the ſalvation of God.

[u] Iſa. i. 11, &c.
[x] Rom. ii. 21, 22.
† Heb. Thy portion was with, &c.
[y] Pſ. lii. 2.
[z] Iſa. lvii. 11.
[a] Rom. ii. 4.
[b] Pſ. xc. 8.
[c] Pſ. lxix. 30, 31. Rom. xii. 1.
[d] Pſ. xci. 16.

v. 16—23. We have here the character and doom of the hypocrite and the ungodly, the Phariſees and Sadducees of our Saviour's day, and all their ſucceſſors in every age, who ſay, and do not.

1. The ſins charged upon them. They were, [1.] Hypocrites, v. 16, 17. They pretended to teach others, yet themſelves lived in contradiction to their own precepts. The Phariſees ſat in Moſes's ſeat, yet moſt oppoſed him, of whom Moſes and the prophets wrote. They affected ſanctity, but were in fact abominable, and, to every good work, reprobate. Note, Among the moſt guilty and criminal in the day of God, will thoſe be found, who pretend to be teachers of the goſpel, yet both adulterate the doctrines, and contradict it in their practice. [2.] Thieves, v. 18. Unjuſt themſelves, and conniving at the knavery of others; eating the wages they never earned, and, figuratively, robbing God of his glory, by ſetting up human ſufficiency againſt his grace, and the miſerable works of fallen man as the cauſe of his juſtification, inſtead of the righteouſneſs of the Redeemer. [3.] Adulterers, v. 18. either preaching continence, as monks and friars, and practiſing lewdneſs; or, for the ſake of advantage, conniving at men's ſins, and not daring to rebuke them; or, ſpiritually adulterers, lovers of pleaſure more than lovers of God, and courting the friendſhip and favour of ſinners, preferably to the honour that cometh from God only. [4.] Slanderers, v. 19, 20. framing lies, and uttering them even againſt thoſe who are under the neareſt relation to them, as is common with the falſe and faithleſs miniſters, who cannot bear their own mother's children, their brethren even in the ſame church, whoſe faithful teſtimony for Chriſt, and holy lives, they are ever ſeeking to malign, in order to cover their own ſloth, ignorance, and falſhood.

2. God's patience in bearing long with them. He kept ſilence, though the evidence of their guilt was clear; and this, inſtead of leading them to repentance, hardened them in their iniquities. Thus the Phariſees perſiſted in their rejection of Jeſus, becauſe immediate judgments did not overtake them; and ſinners in general think God doth not care for, or overlooks, their evil deeds, as if he connived at ſin, and really were ſuch as themſelves. But they are grievouſly deceived; the day of ſolemn recompenſe is coming, when all the iniquities and hypocriſy of the ſinner, like an army marſhalled in battle array, ſhall be ſet in order before him; and God, though long ſilent, will ſpeak, bring forth his book of judgment, where every thought and word is regiſtered; will cover with conſcious guilt the miſerable ſoul, and appoint him his portion with hypocrites and ſelf-deceivers in eternal darkneſs, where is weeping, and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth.

3. The Pſalmiſt urges them to conſider theſe awful truths, that they might prevent the impending judgments. Conſider this, ye that forget God. This is at the bottom of all evil: If God's omniſcience, his holineſs, and the warnings of his word, were not forgotten and neglected, it were impoſſible for a moment to be at peace in ſin; but our forgetfulneſs of him will not make him forget us. His wrath is revealed from heaven againſt all ungodlineſs and unrighteouſneſs of men, eſpecially ſuch as hold the truth in unrighteouſneſs; and high time it is they ſhould awake out of ſleep, leſt I tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you: for, though he long delays, God is not ſlack; vengeance, terrible as ſure, will overtake the ſinner; and if once his wrath ſeizes the ſoul, there is no more hope or help, his wrath will be for ever, wrath to come.

4. The way to eſcape the rod of God's judgment, is to bow before the ſceptre of his grace. Whoſo offereth praiſe, in return for the riches of that mercy revealed in the Redeemer, glorifieth me; for therein God's glory is moſt tranſcendently diſplayed: and to him who ordereth his converſation aright, in conſequence of ſuch grace extended to him, inclining him to that willing obedience which in Chriſt Jeſus is acceptable, will I ſhew the ſalvation of God, the completion of it, in the day of the appearing of the great God and Saviour, when his humble, patient, ſuffering ſervants upon earth ſhall be tranſlated to the triumphant ſaints in heaven.

PSALM LI.

In this pſalm, 1. He confeſſeth his ſin, ver. 3—6, 2. He prays earneſtly for the pardon of it, ver. 1, 2, 7, 8. 3. For peace of conſcience, ver. 8—12. 4. For grace to go and ſin no more, ver. 10, 11, 14. 5. For liberty of acceſs to God, ver. 15. 6. He promiſeth to do what he could for the good of the ſouls of others, ver. 13. and for the glory of God, ver. 16, 17, 19. And laſtly, concludes with a prayer for Sion and Jeruſalem, ver. 18. Let thoſe whoſe conſciences by ſin are accuſed, yea, though they have been guilty of adultery and murder, or the like enormous crimes, apply to Jeſus in the ſentiments of this pſalm, and they will find that the Lord's hand is not ſhortened that it cannot ſave, nor his ear heavy that it cannot hear.

¶ To the chief muſician, A pſalm of David, [a] when Nathan the prophet came unto him, after [b] he had gone in to Bathſheba.

[a] 2 Sam. xii. 1.
[b] 2 Sam. xi. 4.

1. HAVE mercy upon me, O God, according to thy loving kindneſs: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies, [c] blot out my tranſgreſſions. 2. [d] Waſh me throughly from mine iniquity, and cleanſe me from my ſin. 3. For I acknowledge my tranſgreſſions: and my ſin is ever before me. 4. [e] Againſt thee, thee only have I ſinned, and done this evil [f] in thy ſight: [g] that thou mighteſt be juſtified when thou ſpeakeſt, and be clear when thou judgeſt. 5. Behold, [h] I was ſhapen in iniquity: and in ſin did my mother † conceive me. 6. Behold, [i] thou deſireſt truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden part thou ſhalt make me to know wiſdom.

[c] Ver. 9. Iſa. xliii. 25. & xliv. 22. Col. ii. 14.
[d] Heb. ix. 14. 1 John i. 7. Rev. i. 5.
[e] Gen. xx. 6. & xxxix. 9.
[f] Luke xv. 21.
[g] Rom. iii. 4.
[h] Job xiv. 4. Pſ. lviii. 3. John iii. 6. Rom. v. 12. Eph. ii. 3.
† Heb. Warm me.
[i] Job xxxviii. 36.

v. 1—6. Mournful was the occaſion of this penitential pſalm. The matter of Uriah was the great blemiſh in the character of the man after God's own heart; and ſcarce a more complicated ſcene of guilt can be conceived; adultery and murder, aggravated with every circumſtance of ingratitude, baſeneſs, hypocriſy, injuſtice, treachery; and this to one whoſe fidelity deſerved the moſt honourable and diſtinguiſhed regard: and all this rendered more deſperately wicked, ſcandalous, and offenſive to God and man, when we conſider the perſon, his ſtation, character, religious profeſſion, and the unſpeakable mercies, temporal and ſpiritual, he had received at the hands of God. Yet what cannot ſovereign grace effect! Behold this miſerable ſinner ſought by divine mercy, when inſenſible and hardened; awakened, convinced, humbled, pardoned. The effuſions of his broken heart on this occaſion are here recorded: [1.] For our admonition, that we way know how bitter and evil a thing ſin is, however pleaſing in the enjoyment. [2.] To awaken our jealouſy and fear, leſt we alſo being tempted, fall from our ſtedfaſtneſs. [3.] To declare the ſtupendous patience and ineſtimable rich grace of God towards his people, who, in their moſt deſperate eſtate, never leaves or forſakes them. [4.] To engage us, after our moſt unhappy falls, not to be driven from God in deſpair, but to return to him with a broken heart, and truſt on the blood that cleanſeth from all ſin. [5.] To ſet us an example of the duty of penitents, to take public ſhame, where they have given public offence, and count no abaſement too great, to teſtify their remorſe and anguiſh for the diſhonour done to God, as well as for the injury done to men.

1. He cries for mercy to a pardoning God. As a periſhing ſinner he makes but one plea, Mercy, dear Lord, mercy I crave. All he had done and ſuffered for God and his cauſe comes not into his mouth or mind: were it not for the loving-kindneſs of God, his pure, free, unmerited, ſovereign mercy, his ſtate was deſperate; but he ſaw in God not only tender mercies, but a multitude of tender mercies, great and extenſive as his numberleſs iniquities; therefore he ardently prays, Blot out my tranſgreſſions; and, as one ſin peculiarly heavy lay upon his conſcience, from this eſpecially he begs to be cleanſed. Note, (1.) If our ſins be not blotted out by the blood of a Redeemer, and our debt paid by our Surety's ſufferings, nothing can reſcue us from the arreſt of judgment, or deliver us from being caſt into the priſon of hell. (2.) They who feel the burden of ſin cannot but cry importunately for mercy at God's hands. (3.) The hope and promiſe of pardon is the great inducement for ſinners always to pray, and not faint.

2. He deeply acknowledges his tranſgreſſions manifold and great, and his ſin, his peculiarly provoking ſin, was ever before him. It haunted his imagination like a terrible ſpectre; every thing around him ſerved to awaken ſome circumſtances of his guilt; and, riſing up, and lying down, his conſcience, wounded with the bitter remembrance, groaned being burdened. Againſt thee, thee only have I ſinned: he had ſinned againſt others, againſt Uriah, his wife, againſt his own ſoul, and all God's people; but that which was the deepeſt ſting of guilt, was the offence againſt God: and done this evil in thy ſight; daringly, as if defying his power to puniſh; and openly, for though hid from men, what darkneſs, or ſhadow of death, could exclude his piercing eye? Juſt therefore were all the threatnings of God, 2 Sam. xii. 10. againſt him; yea, leſs than his iniquity deſerved; for not in this inſtance only he ſtood convicted: ſin, traced to its fountain-head, laid open a ſcene of deep and deſperate apoſtacy within, that added aggravation to all his crimes. Behold, I was ſhapen in iniquity, and in ſin did my mother conceive me: no outward fruit had been produced, but what was the genuine produce of a nature altogether corrupt, and utterly defiled within. Note, (1.) A heart truly broken under a ſenſe of ſin, never ſeeks exculpation, but deſires to take all ſhame and confuſion to itſelf. (2.) The exceeding ſinfulneſs of ſin lies in its oppoſition to God's nature and law. (3.) True penitents ever juſtify God in his judgments, however heavy upon them. (4.) No perſon was ever really humbled for any ſin, till they were brought acquainted with their fallen nature, and ſaw there the eſſence of all iniquity.

3. What God required, David deſired to offer, truth in the inward parts; for from deep heart-felt ſorrow for ſin he poured out his humbling confeſſion, and, vile as his paſt conduct had been, now he in ſimplicity deſired to pleaſe God, and he truſted God would teach and guide him. In the hidden part thou ſhalt make me to know wiſdom, the wiſdom that maketh wiſe unto ſalvation, the knowledge of ſin, and of God's pardoning love in Jeſus Chriſt, producing all holy converſation and godlineſs. Note, (1.) It is not the outward form, but the inward affection, God requires. (2.) He who commands, Give me thy heart, can alone work in us the will or ability in ſimplicity to ſurrender up ourſelves to him.

7. [k] Purge me with hyſſop, and I ſhall be clean: waſh me, and I ſhall be [l] whiter than ſnow. 8. Make me to hear joy and gladneſs: that the bones which thou haſt broken, [m] may rejoice. 9. Hide thy face from my ſins, and [n] blot out all mine iniquities. 10. [o] Create in me a clean heart, O God: and renew a † right ſpirit within me. 11. Caſt me not away from thy [k] Lev. xiv. 4, 6. Num. xix. 18. Heb. ix. 19.

[l] Iſa. i. 18.
[m] Mat. v. 4.
[n] Ver. 1.
[o] Eph. ii. 10.
† Or, Firm, or conſtant.

p Gen. vi. 3. thy preſence ; and [p] take not thy holy Spirit from me.
12. Reſtore unto me the joy of thy ſalvation : and up-q Luke xxii. 32. hold me with thy free Spirit. 13. [q] Then will I teach tranſgreſſors thy ways, and ſinners ſhall be converted unto thee.

v. 7—13. In hope of mercy from the father of mercies, the pſalmiſt continues his prayer,

1. For the pardon of his ſins, v, 7—9. Purge me with hyſſop, and I ſhall be clean, waſh me, and I ſhall be whiter than ſnow ; alluding to the purifying the leper, and the unclean perſon under the law, Lev. xiv. 4—8. Numb. xix. 6—19. The blood which was ſprinkled with the bunch of hyſſop, repreſented the blood of Jeſus ; and the water, that fountain which was opened in his ſide for ſin and for uncleanneſs. If our conſciences are ſprinkled with this cleanſing blood, and our ſouls waſhed in theſe healing ſtreams, every ſtain of guilt will be done away, and we ſhall be whiter than ſnow. All our ſins will then be blotted out, as the cloud before the riſing ſun, Iſa. xliv. 22. and God's pure eyes behold no ſpot nor blemiſh in us.

2. For the reſtoration of his joys. Sin had ſpread a deadly gloom over all his comforts, and the wounds of his ſoul occaſioned bitterer anguiſh, than the grating of broken bones. But if his iniquity, the cauſe of his grief, were removed, then he hoped God would again lift up the light of his countenance, put gladneſs into his heart, and reſtore him again to the joys of his ſalvation, v. 12. Note, (1.) They who have felt a broken heart, have known an anguiſh that the pains of broken bones can but imperfectly repreſent. (2.) A backſliding ſoul, who hath fled to God in Jeſus Chriſt, may humbly hope, not only that he ſhall not periſh, but be reſtored again to his former joys. (3.) He who gives the pardon, muſt give the comfort of it alſo.

3. For a new heart, v. 10. A ſoul ſenſible of the evil of ſin, deſires as much to be delivered from the power as the puniſhment of it. Create in me a clean heart ; clean from the allowed indulgence of ſin ; create, becauſe the new creation in Chriſt Jeſus is the work of almighty power and grace alone ; and renew a right ſpirit within me ; prepared, or firm, as the word may ſignify : right, as recovered from its grievous backſliding ; prepared for all God's work and ſervice ; firm, never again thus to depart from God.

4. For the continual ſenſe of God's gracious preſence, and the ſupport of his Spirit. Caſt me not away, as one abominable and reprobate, from thy preſence, as if abhorring the ſight of me ; but look upon me with thy wonted favour and regard, and take not thy holy Spirit from me ; though grieved by my perverſeneſs, yet take it not utterly away, but, as a ſpirit of holineſs, let me find his bleſſed agency upon my ſoul, and uphold me amidſt all the dangers that ſurround me, that I may never fall ; and this with thy free Spirit, whoſe operations are all gracious and free, and the effects of them, liberty, and readineſs to ſerve the bleſſed God. Note, They who are renewed in true holineſs, count God's ſervice perfect freedom.

5. In return for ſuch ineſtimable mercies, he will declare the riches of the grace he hath taſted, and by experience teach tranſgreſſors God's ways ; how he may be found in humble prayer, and how ready he is to receive the miſerable ſoul that flies to him, even after its deepeſt falls : and thus ſinners ſhall be converted unto thee ; reſcued from deſpair, and encouraged to return, becauſe God will yet have mercy, yea, he will abundantly pardon. Note, (1.) If we have found mercy and plenteous redemption, we cannot but declare what great things God hath done for us, and invite others to come and taſte that the Lord is gracious. (2.) They who have themſelves known the pangs of a broken heart, are the fitteſt comforters for others in the like afflicted caſe. (3.) It is a great encouragement to the ſinner ready to deſpair, when he hears, not only that there are promiſes of pardon, but that others, as guilty as himſelf, have actually obtained mercy.

r 2 Sam. xi. 17. 14. Deliver me from [r] blood-guiltineſs, O God, thou God of my ſalvation ; and my tongue ſhall ſing aloud of thy righteouſneſs. 15. O LORD, open thou my lips, and my mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy praiſe. 16.
s Pſ. xl. 6. & l. 8. Iſa. i. 11. Jer. vii. 22. Hoſ. vi. 6. For [s] thou deſireſt not ſacrifice, elſe would I give it :
thou delighteſt not in burnt-offering. 17. [t] The ſacrifices of God are a broken ſpirit : a broken and a cont Pſ. xxxiv. 18. Iſa. lvii. 15. & lxvi. 2. trite heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe. 18. Do good in thy good pleaſure unto Zion : build thou the walls of Jeruſalem. 19. Then ſhalt thou be pleaſed with u Pſ. iv. 5. Mal. iii. 3. [u] the ſacrifices of righteouſneſs, with burnt-offering and whole burnt-offering : then ſhall they offer bullocks upon thine altar.

v. 14—19. Particular ſins lying heavy upon the conſcience, will ſtir up particular mention of them.

1. David prays to be delivered from blood-guiltineſs, and a heavy load is this. The blood of Uriah, and thoſe who fell with him, 2 Sam. xi. 15—17. witneſſed againſt him. He owns and trembles under the guilty and grievous charge ; yet, O God, thou art able to ſave, however deep the ſtain of my ſin : thou God of my ſalvation, in whom I am encouraged to truſt, that thou wilt ſave, and then my grateful heart and tongue ſhall ſing aloud of thy righteouſneſs : for in every pardon granted to the ſinner, it is not his miſery or penitence which God regards, nor doth his ſalvation come from God's mercy abſolutely conſidered, but regard is therein ever had to the ſufferings of Jeſus, the ſinner's ſurety ; whence it becomes an act of God's righteouſneſs to pardon, foraſmuch as the Redeemer hath born our ſins ; and when we plead his vicarious obedience and ſufferings, then God is juſt in juſtifying the ungodly.

2. He begs that his lips might be opened, v. 15. which guilt had ſealed up ; for how could he pray to, or praiſe God, whilſt lying under ſuch abominations ? Yea, though he had begun to mourn in his prayer, yet, till the joys of God's ſalvation were reſtored, he could not rejoice with a ſong.

3. He offers up that beſt ſacrifice, a broken heart. Thou deſireſt not ſacrifice, no ſacrifice being appointed under the law for murder, adultery, or any wilful tranſgreſſion : had it been, tho' never ſo expenſive, I would have given it. Thou delighteſt not in burnt-offering : even in the ſacrifices of divine appointment, God delighted not in the beaſts that were offered, but deſigned in theſe to point them to the one great ſacrifice of Jeſus, in whom alone he could be well-pleaſed. In him having found acceptance, and on him, the altar, preſenting the ſacrifices of a broken ſpirit and contrite heart, God doth not deſpiſe the offering ; it is accepted in the beloved, and regarded as a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour.

4. Having found grace for himſelf, he becomes an advocate for Zion. Do good in thy good pleaſure unto Zion : build thou the walls of Jeruſalem. For his own kingdom and people he prays, that his ſins might not bring judgments upon them ; but that they might experience God's goodneſs, and be ſtrengthened by his might : or more generally for the ſpiritual Zion, that increaſing converts might be added, and, in numbers and ſtrength, the goſpel church be eſtabliſhed.

5. Peace being made between God and them, then ſhalt thou be pleaſed with the ſacrifices of righteouſneſs, with burnt-offering, and whole burnt-offering. Their perſons being accepted, their ſervices would be pleaſing ; and gratitude for their mercies would make their ſacrifices liberal and chearful ; then ſhall they offer bullocks upon thine altar. Note, Since the ſhadows are fled in the offering of the body of Jeſus once for all, it remains now that through him we offer up ourſelves to God, our bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits, to be a living ſacrifice, holy and acceptable, which is our reaſonable ſervice ; and this ſhall pleaſe the Lord better than a bullock that hath horns and hoofs, Pſal. lxix. 31.

PSALM LII.

In this pſalm, 1. David accuſes and upbraids the wicked Doeg, ver. 1—4. 2. He paſſeth ſentence upon him, ver. 5. 3. He foretels the triumphs of the righteous in the execution of the ſentence, ver. 6, 7. 4. He comforts himſelf in the mercy of God, and the aſſurance he had that he ſhould yet praiſe him, ver. 8, 9.

¶ To the chief muſician, Maſchil, A pſalm of David,
[a] when Doeg the Edomite came and told Saul, and a 1 Sam. xxii. 9.
ſaid unto him, David is come to the houſe of Ahimelech.

1. WHY boaſteſt thou thyſelf in miſchief, O [b] mighty man ? the goodneſs of God endureth b 1 Sam. xxi. 7.
continually. 2. [c] Thy tongue deviſeth miſchiefs : [d] like c Pſ. l. 19.
a ſharp razor, working deceitfully. 3. Thou loveſt evil d Pſ. lvii. 4. & lix. 7. & lxiv. 3.
more than good : and [e] lying rather than to ſpeak righteouſneſs. Selah. 4. Thou loveſt all devouring words, e Jer. ix. 3, 5.
† O thou deceitful tongue. 5. God ſhall likewiſe de- † Or, and the deceitful tongue.
ſtroy thee for ever, he ſhall take thee away, and pluck thee out of ‡ thy dwelling-place, and root thee out of ‡ Or, the tabernacle.
the land of the living. Selah.

v. 1—5. The title of this pſalm informs us of the occaſion on which it was compoſed, and an afflictive one it was : wherein, whilſt Doeg's malicious and cruel wickedneſs ſtood the object of juſt abhorrence, David's diſſimulation, tho' undeſigned, which gave a handle for all the miſchief, no doubt grieved him much, See 1 Sam. xxii. 22. So great a matter a little fire kindles ; how careful then ſhould we be of all our words !

1. David expoſtulates with Doeg : Why boaſteſt thou thyſelf in miſchief, O mighty man ? It was mean as wicked to fall on thoſe who were unarmed, and whoſe profeſſion ſhould have been their protection from inſult ; but he not only executed the bloody command, but gloried in his wickedneſs. Note, Glorying in ſin is the ſummit of iniquity.

2. He profeſſes his own confidence in God : The goodneſs of God endureth continually. Doeg would as gladly have ſhed David's vid's blood as Ahimelech's; but a good God was his protector, and he defied the impotent malice of ſuch a foe.

3. He lays ſundry and heavy accuſations againſt Doeg. Thy tongue deviſeth miſchiefs; in deſign, crafty; in expreſſion, artful; like a ſharp razor, working deceitfully, that cuts the throat, inſtead of ſhaving the beard. Thou loveſt evil more than good; thy wicked conduct ſhews the principle from whence it flowed, a heart apoſtate from good, and rooted in evil; and lying rather than to ſpeak righteouſneſs; miſrepreſenting Ahimelech, and by a lying report procuring his death. Thou loveſt all devouring words, delighting in the wickedneſs he committed, O thou deceitful tongue. Note, (1.) A lying and deceitful tongue is God's abhorrence. (2.) A crafty wicked man is the ſtrongeſt image of the devil.

4. His mightineſs ſhould be no preſervative from ruin. God ſhall deſtroy thee for ever, whoſe arm can reach the moſt daring and exalted ſinner, and whoſe judgments extend to eternity. He ſhall take thee away, by ſome ſudden ſtroke, and pluck thee out of thy dwelling-place, or the tabernacle; either his own houſe, or, more probably, God's tabernacle, where he hypocritically paid his devotions; and root thee out of the land of the living; cut off not only from communion with the church of God on earth, but conſigned to that death which is the wages of ſin, the eternal death of body and ſoul in hell. Note, This is the end of a lying tongue.

6. [f] The righteous alſo ſhall ſee, and [g] fear, and [h] ſhall laugh at him. 7. Lo, this is the man that made not God his ſtrength: but [i] truſted in the abundance of his riches, and ſtrengthned himſelf in his † wickedneſs. 8. But I ‡ am [k] like a green olive-tree in the houſe of God: I truſt in the mercy of God for ever and ever. 9. I will praiſe thee for ever, becauſe thou haſt done it: and I will wait on thy name, for [l] it is good before thy ſaints.

f Pſ. xl. 3. & lxiv. 9.
g Rev. xv. 4.
h Pſ. lviii. 10.
i Pſ. xlix. 6.
† Or, ſubſtance.
‡ Or, ſhall be.
k Hoſ. xiv. 6.
l Pſ. liv. 6.

v. 6—9. Short is the triumphing of the wicked, and his fall is the joy of God's ſaints.

1. They are here deſcribed mocking at his calamity. The righteous ſhall ſee it, for it ſhall quickly be accompliſhed, and fear, with filial and reverential awe before the judgments of a holy God, and be themſelves thereby deterred from offending; and ſhall laugh at him; not that they take pleaſure in his miſery, but that God is glorified, and his miſchievous deſigns diſappointed. Lo, this is the man that made not God his ſtrength, but truſted in the abundance of his riches, which is to change a rock for a reed. How great the folly! but, worſe, he ſtrengthned himſelf in his wickedneſs; as if daring impiety would be his protection from puniſhment. Note, They who make gold their confidence, and harden themſelves in their wicked ways, will find a lie in their right hand, and their end eternal deſolations.

2. David expreſſes his own confidence in God. I am, or rather, I ſhall be, like a green olive-tree in the houſe of God. Tho' then an exile, he doubted not his return, and fixed abode in the ſanctuary; rooted as an olive-tree, ever green and flouriſhing, and bearing the precious fruits of peace and joy. I truſt in the mercy of God for ever and ever: his mercy is unchangeable, therefore they who truſt in it ſhall never be moved. I will praiſe thee for ever, becauſe thou haſt done it; avenged the innocent blood Doeg ſhed, and reſtored him from his preſent baniſhment; neither of which indeed were yet performed; but what faith comprehends, is as if already done, and calls for the grateful thankſgiving: and I will wait on thy name, in patient hope of what is promiſed; or in thy houſe and ordinances, when brought again to the courts of the ſanctuary; for it is good before thy ſaints: the name of God is good and grateful to them; his ſervice and ordinances pleaſing; and patient hope approved by long and happy experience to be the ſure way to everlaſting bliſs.

PSALM LIII.

God ſpeaketh once, yea twice, and it were well if man would even then perceive it. This pſalm is the ſame almoſt verbatim with the fourteenth: the ſcope of it is to convince us of our ſins; and abundant need there is that this eſſential point ſhould be repeatedly touched upon. God, by the pſalmiſt here, 1. Shews us how bad we are, ver. 1. 2. Proves it upon us by his own certain knowledge, ver. 2, 3. 3. He ſpeaks terror to perſecutors, the worſt of ſinners, ver. 4, 5. 4. He ſpeaks encouragement to God's perſecuted people, ver. 6.

¶ To the chief muſician † upon Mahalath, [a] Maſchil, A pſalm of David.

1. [b] THE fool hath ſaid in his heart, There is no God; corrupt are they, and have done abominable iniquity: [c] there is none that doth good. 2. God looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to ſee if there were any that did underſtand, that did ſeek God. 3. Every one of them is gone back, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doth good, no not one. 4. Have the workers of iniquity no knowledge? who eat up my people, as they eat bread: they have not called upon God. 5. [d] There ‡ were they in great fear, where no fear was: for God hath ſcattered the bones of him that encampeth againſt thee, thou haſt put them to ſhame, becauſe God hath deſpiſed them. 6. § O that the ſalvation of Iſrael were come out of Zion! when God bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob ſhall rejoice, and Iſrael ſhall be glad.

† Or, concerning infirmity.
a Pſ. xxxii. & xlii. tit.
b Pſ. xiv. 1, &c.
c Rom. iii. 10.
d Lev. xxvi. 17, 36. Prov. xxviii. 1.
‡ Heb. They feared a fear.
§ Or, Who will give ſalvations.

v. 1—6. Mahalath, in the title of this pſalm, is by ſome ſuppoſed to be a muſical inſtrument, but by others referred to the ſubject of the pſalm, concerning infirmity, that is, the deplorable diſeaſe of ſin, under which the fallen nature labours; a truth of deep moment, and needs to be again and again inculcated, as it is the ground of all true humiliation, and, in a ſort, a key to all the doctrines of the goſpel.

1. The practical atheiſm of the natural heart is obſerved, v. 1. We firſt leave God far above out of our ſight, and then dare ſin ſecurely.

2. The univerſal guilt of mankind is aſſerted, v. 2. Not ſome, or a few in one age or nation, but all in every age, in every nation, have come ſhort of the glory of God. There is none that doth good, according to the perfect rule of God's law, no not one.

3. The greatneſs of this guilt is noticed, as flowing from that deep and deſperate corruption in the nature, which produces abominable iniquity in the practice; particularly, v. 4. ſelfiſhneſs, covetouſneſs, oppreſſion, and habitual neglect of prayer. Note, Sin is the abominable thing God hates: the leaſt ſpot of it, uncleanſed, muſt eternally exclude us from his preſence.

4. The folly, as well as the wickedneſs, of ſinners is great: they live without conſideration; they have no knowledge of themſelves, or of God; of their guilt here, or their ruin hereafter; the god of this world hath blinded their eyes.

5. Their ſecurity will be ſhortly at an end, and terrors overtake the finally impenitent, v. 5. They ſhall be in great fear, where before they laughed at danger; ruin unavoidable ſhall deſtroy them, everlaſting confuſion cover them, and God ſhall deſpiſe their impotent reſiſtance.

6. The pſalmiſt concludes with an earneſt wiſh, that God would haſten the ſalvation of his people, reſcue them from amidſt the world that lieth in wickedneſs, and cauſe them to rejoice in Jeſus, their glorious Redeemer and Saviour. Note, (1.) Though we are all by nature formed from the ſame maſs of corruption, they who are redeemed by the blood of Jeſus, are ſaved from the pollutions that are in the world. (2.) All ſinners, of whatever rank and degree, and eſpecially thoſe who in the ſpirit of Antichriſt oppoſe the power of true religion, and perſecute its profeſſors, will periſh together, in the day when the triumphs of God's ſaints ſhall be compleated. (3.) We ſhall aſſuredly join the pſalmiſt's prayer, if our hearts poſſeſs his hopes, and cry, Come, Lord Jeſus, come quickly.

PSALM LIV.

The Ziphites twice attempted to betray David, 1 Sam. xxiii. 19. xxvi. 1. On which of theſe occaſions this pſalm was compoſed is not certain. Here, 1. He complains to God of the malice of his enemies, and prays for help againſt them, ver. 1—3. 2. He comforts himſelf with an aſſurance of the divine favour and protection, and that in due time his enemies ſhould be confounded, and he delivered, ver. 4—7. What time we are in diſtreſs, we may comfortably ſing this pſalm.

¶ To the chief muſician [a] on Neginoth, [b] Maſchil, A pſalm of David, [c] when the Ziphims came and ſaid to Saul, Doth not David hide himſelf with us?

1. SAVE me, O God, [d] by thy name, and judge me by thy ſtrength. 2. Hear my prayer, O God; give ear to the words of my mouth. 3. For [e] ſtrangers are riſen up againſt me, and oppreſſors ſeek after my ſoul; [f] they have not ſet God before them. Selah.

a Pſ. iv. tit.
b Pſ. xxxii. & xlii. tit.
c 1 Sam. xxiii. 19. & xxvi. 1.
d Pſ. cvi. 8.
e Pſ. lxxxvi. 14.
f Pſ. x. 4.

v. 1—3. It is a comfort to a child of God, that whatever he meets with from man, he hath a friend to fly to, who will never leave nor forſake him. We have here,

1. David's prayer for help and ſtrength. Save me, O God, by thy name; by thy power and wiſdom, which can fruſtrate the devices of my perfidious foes; or, for thy name's ſake, to manifeſt thy glory in protecting the poor deſtitute that flies to thee for ſuccour; and judge me by thy ſtrength: ſtrongly interpoſe in my behalf; and, as my cauſe is juſt, be thou my judge, O Lord, and avenge me of mine enemies. Note, (1.) Prayer is a ſovereign medicine for every diſtreſs. (2.) Salvation cometh from God, and he never faileth thoſe who ſeek him.

2. He complains of his perſecutors. Strangers are riſen up againſt me: though they were of his own tribe, and profeſſors of the ſame religion, yet they acted worſe than Philiſtines; and oppreſſors, or the mighty men, Saul, Doeg, and the Ziphites, ſeek after my ſoul: nothing but his life would gratify their blood-thirſty malice: they have not ſet God before them; pay no regard to his appointment, forget his all-ſeeing eye, and diſregard the threatnings of his word. Note, (1.) The bittereſt enemies of a child of God are often his neareſt neighbours and relations. (2.) When men leave God out of their ſight, there is no wickedneſs too great for them. (3.) Though our ſpiritual foes ſeek with more inveterate malice after our ſouls, than theſe Ziphites after David, God will not leave us in their hands.

4. Behold, God is mine helper: [g] the LORD is with them that uphold my ſoul. 5. He ſhall reward evil unto † mine enemies; cut them off in thy truth. 6. I will freely ſacrifice unto thee; I will praiſe thy name, O LORD, [h] for it is good. 7. For he hath delivered me out of all trouble: and [i] mine eye hath ſeen his deſire upon mine enemies.

[g] Pſ. cxviii. 7.
† Heb. Thoſe that obſerve me.
[h] Pſ. lii. 9.
[i] Pſ. lix. 10. & xcii. 11.

v. 4—7. Having commended his caſe in prayer to God, we have here,

1. The lively profeſſion of his confidence in God. Behold, take notice of it, ye children of God, for your encouragement; be admoniſhed, ye ſons of wickedneſs, before it be too late; God is my helper againſt every foe, therefore will I not faint or fear: the Lord is with them that uphold my ſoul; he is my upholder, and the friend of my friends, approving and ſupporting them in their adherence to me. Note, (1.) They who are faithful to God, ſhall find he will raiſe them up friends in the worſt of times. (2.) They who eſpouſe the cauſe of injured innocence, ſhall be ſupported by the God of truth.

2. He expects ſurely and ſhortly the ruin of his oppoſers, v. 5. and, as they ſtruck at God's glory, as well as his life, he prays, Cut them off in thy truth, according to the threatnings denounced againſt the ungodly. It is not the wiſh of malice, but the hope of faith.

3. God's gracious help he promiſes thankfully to remember. I will freely ſacrifice unto thee, not only the free-will offerings of bullocks, but the more pleaſing oblation of the calves of the lips. I will praiſe thy name, for it is good; gracious, and worthy to be praiſed; and moſt becoming him would it be, who had experienced God's goodneſs, to ſhew it forth continually.

4. He looks upon his petitions as already accompliſhed, ſince faith is in exerciſe. He hath delivered me out of all my trouble; hath done it in his purpoſe, and I regard it as ſure as if the promiſe was fulfilled; and mine eye hath ſeen his deſire upon mine enemies; humbled, and diſabled from hurting him. Note, (1.) The ſoul is ſafe, that hath the ſecurity of everlaſting promiſes. (2.) Paſt experience is the earneſt of continual ſupport.

PSALM LV.

It is the general opinion of expoſitors, that David penned this pſalm on Abſalom's rebellion: certain it is, he was in great diſtreſs. 1. He prays, that God would manifeſt his favour to him, and pleads his own ſorrow and fear, ver. 1—8. 2. He prays, that God would manifeſt his diſpleaſure againſt his enemies, and pleads their great wickedneſs and treachery, ver. 9—15. and again, ver. 20, 21. 3. He aſſures himſelf, that God would in due time appear for him, and encourageth others to truſt in God, ver. 16—19. and again, ver. 22, 23.

¶ To the chief muſician [a] on Neginoth, [b] Maſchil,
A pſalm of David.

[a] Pſ. iv. tit.
[b] Pſ. xxxii. & xlii. tit.

1. GIVE ear to my prayer, O God: and hide not thyſelf from my ſupplication. 2. Attend unto me, and hear me: [c] I mourn in my complaint, and make a noiſe. 3. Becauſe of the voice of the enemy, becauſe of the oppreſſion of the wicked: for [d] they caſt iniquity upon me, and in wrath they hate me. 4. My heart is ſore pained within me: and [e] the terrors of death are fallen upon me. 5. Fearfulneſs and trembling are come upon me, and horror hath † overwhelmed me. 6. And I ſaid, O that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at reſt. 7. Lo then would I wander far off, [f] and remain in the wilderneſs. Selah. 8. I would haſten my eſcape from the windy ſtorm and tempeſt.

[c] Iſa. xxxviii. 14.
[d] 2 Sam. xv. 3.
[e] Pſ. cxvi. 3.
† Or, covered me.
[f] Jer. ix. 2.

v. 1—8. Swift as Job's meſſengers of evil, David's troubles return; and as ſwift are his applications to him who was able to ſave him.

1. He begs God's attention to his mournful caſe, and that he would not, as one unconcerned about his grief, hide himſelf from his ſupplications. Urgent was his importunity, becauſe of the voice of the enemy, loud and threatning; becauſe of the oppreſſion of the wicked, whoſe conſpiracy was ſo ſtrong, that he was forced to fly for his life: for they caſt iniquity upon me; not content with robbing him of his crown, they ſought to blacken his character; and in wrath they hate me, a bitter hatred, ſharpened with fierce wrath. So beſet was the Son of David, when he poured out ſtrong crying and tears: the wicked oppreſſing him, with loud voices demanding his death; laying to his charge things that he knew not of, and blackening his character as a drunkard, a magician, a blaſphemer; with implacable hatred purſuing him, and furious to ſhed his blood. Note, (1.) The beſt of men are moſt expoſed to the world's enmity. (2.) We need not ſtartle at the groſſeſt calumnies caſt upon us; it is the croſs we muſt bear after our Maſter.

2. He paints the deep anguiſh of his heart in ſtrong and ſtriking colours. Inward pangs, and terrors of death ſeized him; fearfulneſs, trembling, and horror overwhelmed him. He had faced death often before without dread; but complicated miſery, not only his own, but his kingdom's, now lay upon him; whilſt, no doubt, he alſo remembered his ſins, the bitter cauſe of theſe heavy viſitations; and this was a corroſive to his bleeding wounds. When viſited alſo for iniquities, though not his own, that king, Meſſiah, whom David prefigured, bore our puniſhment in the garden, his ſoul was more deeply pained, his horrors darker, and trembling before the wrath our ſins had provoked, he ſunk to the earth, as unable to bear the inſupportable load. Note, (1.) Good men may, like David, in very great trials, find their fears ſtrong, and their faith ſhaken. (2.) Though it is the general privilege of every believer to be delivered from the terrors of death, yet we muſt not conclude, that every one who is not fearleſs in a dying hour, is therefore faithleſs.

3. He is eager to fly from the purſuing ſword. His danger was imminent, the ſtorm high, and he needed wings, yea, the ſwift wings of the dove, to eſcape far away, and in the ſolitary wilderneſs ſeek reſt from thoſe enemies that, like rapacious vultures, threatned to ſeize him in their talons. Note, (1.) Thus longs the awakened ſinner, when purſued by the curſes of a broken law, to fly to the boſom of Jeſus, the only ſafe hiding-place. (2.) A child of God in this diſordered world often ſighs after his bleſſed reſt above, and wiſhes for the day when he ſhall reach that peaceful manſion in the ſkies, where ſtorms and tempeſts are no more.

9. † Deſtroy, O LORD, and divide their tongues: for I have ſeen [g] violence and ſtrife in the city. 10. Day and night they go about it upon the walls thereof; miſchief alſo and ſorrow are in the midſt of it. 11. Wickedneſs is in the midſt thereof: deceit and guile depart not from her ſtreets. 12. For [h] it was not an enemy that reproached me, then I could have born it; neither was it he that hated me, that did magnify himſelf againſt me, then I would have hid myſelf from him. 13. But [i] it was thou, a man, ‡ mine equal, [k] my guide, and mine acquaintance. 14. § We took ſweet counſel together, and walked unto the houſe of God in company. 15. Let death ſeize upon them, and let them go down quick into ‖ hell: for wickedneſs is in their dwellings, and among them.

† Heb. Swallow them up. Num. xvi. 30, 33.
[g] Jer. vi. 7.
[h] Pſ. xli. 9.
[i] 2 Sam. xv. 31.
‡ Heb. According to my rank.
[k] 2 Sam. xvi. 23. Pſ. xli. 9.
§ Heb. Who ſweetened counſel.
‖ Or, the grave.

v. 9—15. Though we may not render evil for evil, we may ſafely pray, that God would diſappoint the devices of the wicked, and glorify his own name in their righteous puniſhment, as David here doth.

1. He prefers his juſt complaint againſt them. Jeruſalem, which now was in the hands of the conſpirators, was full of violent and contentious men: day and night theſe compaſſed the walls, and wickedneſs, deceit, and miſchief being in the midſt of her, ſorrow was the neceſſary conſequence; for bad men are a mutual plague. One above the reſt, ſuppoſed to be Ahitophel, he eſpecially complains of; a man in whom he had repoſed the greateſt confidence; ſhewn him the greateſt kindneſs; treated him as his equal, his friend, his companion; joined with him in the courts of the ſanctuary; and therefore juſtly expected from him far different returns; and to be thus diſappointed was in every view exceeding grievous. Had he ever ſhewn any ſign of his hatred before, he would have been more reſerved and cautious; but now his confidence is betrayed, his friend falſe, and from his moſt obliged ſervant he meets the blackeſt ingratitude. Note, (1.) The beſt of men, as leaſt ſuſpicious, are often moſt eaſily impoſed upon. (2.) Hypocriſy hath ever been a deep-rooted evil among profeſſors of religion: we may not marvel, if thoſe we thought high in grace, prove, at laſt, baſe apoſtates. (3.) Chriſt himſelf was betrayed by a boſom friend: out of but twelve diſciples there was one Judas.

2. He prays for their confuſion and ruin, and in the ſpirit of prophecy foreſees it approaching. Deſtroy them, or, ſwallow them up in thy judgments, as Dathan and Abiram: divide their tongues; put confuſion into their counſels: let death ſeize upon them, ſudden and terrible; and let them go down quick into hell, into the grave; cut off by an earthquake, as Korah and his adherents; or into the place of torment, where ſinners eternally receive the juſt recompenſe of their deeds. And this he prays, not as moved by revenge, but as a prophet predicting the wages of ſin, and as zealous for the vindication of God's honour, deſiring that wickedneſs, which is in their dwellings and among them, might receive its juſt recompenſe and reward. Note, They who live in wickedneſs muſt infallibly lie down quickly in the flames of hell.

16. As for me, I will call upon God: and the LORD ſhall ſave me. 17. [l] Evening and morning, and at noon will I pray, and cry aloud: and he ſhall hear my voice. 18. He hath delivered my ſoul in peace from the battle that was againſt me: for there were many with me. 19. God ſhall hear and afflict them, even [m] he that abideth of old, Selah: becauſe [n] they have no changes, therefore they fear not God. 20. He hath put forth his hands againſt ſuch as be at peace with him: he hath † broken his covenant. 21. The words of his mouth were ſmoother than butter, but war was in his heart: his words were ſofter than oil, [o] yet were they drawn ſwords. 22. [p] Caſt thy burden upon the LORD, and he ſhall ſuſtain thee: [q] he ſhall never ſuffer the righteous to be moved. 23. But thou, O God, ſhalt bring them down into the pit of deſtruction: [r] bloody and deceitful men ſhall not [s] live out half their days, but I will truſt in thee.

[l] Dan. vi. 10. Acts x. 3, 9, 30.
[m] Deut. xxxiii. 27.
[n] Jer. xlviii. 11.
† Heb. Prophaned.
[o] Pſ. xxviii. 3. & lvii. 4. & lxii. 4. & lxiv. 3. Prov. v. 3, 4.
[p] Pſ. xxxvii. v. Mat. vi. 25. 1 Pet. v. 7.
[q] Pſ. xxxvii. 24.
[r] Pſ. v. 6.
[s] Job xv. 32. Prov. x. 27. Eccleſ. vii. 17.

v. 16—23. The prayer of faith is the heart's eaſe.

1. David determines unceaſingly to wait upon God, in confidence of being heard and anſwered. No morning ſhould riſe, no evening cloſe, no ſun mount to his meridian height, but with as regular order he would be found bowing his knees to the Father of mercies; and that with fervency, that ſpoke aloud the longings of his heart. Note, (1.) Thrice a day, at leaſt, our ſtated ſeaſons of prayer ſhould return, and as much oftener as opportunity or circumſtances require; and if our time be ſhort, let it be the more earneſtly improved. (2.) Strong crying will often be the effect of warm deſire.

2. He already foreſees and triumphs in his compleat ſalvation. He ſhall ſave me, v. 1. nay, he hath delivered my ſoul in peace: it is done, ſince he hath ſpoken, and I have believed. He felt the peace of his deliverance already in his ſoul, from the battle that was againſt him: paſt victories enſured the preſent: ſuch as his other foes had been, ſuch ſhould his preſent rebellious ſubjects be, carcaſſes on the plain: for there were many with me, even the chariots of God, and the horſemen thereof, and more faithful and loyal ſubjects than at firſt ſeemed to ſide with him. Note, They who have God and his hoſts on their ſide, have nothing to fear from the numbers of their adverſaries; for more, as well as greater, are thoſe who are for us, than they who are againſt us.

3. He foretels the fall of his enemies, in conſequence of his prayer. He that abideth of old, the eternal God, ſhall afflict them, with vexation, anguiſh, and diſappointment here, and ſhall bring them down into the pit of deſtruction, into the everlaſting perdition of ungodly men, cutting them off in the midſt of their days by vengeance juſt as terrible. For they have no changes, continue uniformly impenitent, unmoved by warnings, hardened under judgments, inſenſible of mercies; Therefore they fear not God, nor regard man, v. 20. Their moſt ſolemn engagements are violated, and treacherouſly they lift up their hands againſt thoſe who, as at peace with them, were prepared to make no reſiſtance. Their words, v. 21. were falſe and hypocritical; then meditating the fatal blow, when moſt fawning, and deepeſt in profeſſion of kindneſs and ſervice; and withal, bloody as deceitful, v. 23. well therefore doth God, to give unto ſuch blood to drink, Rev. xvi. 6. Note, (1.) Impenitence and perdition are linked inſeparably. (2.) Falſhood and perfidy will find an avenging God.

4. He encourages others by his own example to truſt in God. I will truſt in thee, v. 23. at all times, under all difficulties; therefore learn of me; caſt thy burden on the Lord, of whatever kind it be, affliction, temptation, corruption, or perſecution; and he ſhall ſuſtain thee, enable thee to bear up under every trial; for he ſhall never ſuffer the righteous to be moved, either from his love and care, or from their ſure intereſt in that eternal kingdom, of which all the powers of earth, hell, and ſin, ſhall never be able to deprive them. O for ſuch a heart, to truſt him evermore.

PSALM LVI.

David was in imminent peril when he penned this pſalm, at leaſt when he meditated it; yet even then his meditation of God was ſweet. 1. He complains of the malice of his enemies, and begs mercy for himſelf and juſtice againſt them, ver. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7. 2. Expreſſes his confidence in God, ver. 3, 4, 8—13.

¶ To the chief muſician, † upon Jonath-elem-rechokim, [a] Michtam of David, when [b] the Philiſtines took him in Gath.

1. [c] BE merciful unto me, O God, for man would ſwallow me up: he fighting daily oppreſſeth me. 2. Mine ‡ enemies would daily ſwallow me up: for they be many that fight againſt me, O thou moſt High. 3. What time I am afraid, I will truſt in thee. 4. [d] In God I will praiſe his word, in God I have put my truſt, [e] I will not fear what fleſh can do unto me. 5. Every day they wreſt my words: all their thoughts are againſt me for evil. 6. [f] They gather themſelves together, they hide themſelves, they mark my ſteps [g] when they wait for my ſoul. 7. Shall they eſcape by iniquity? in thine anger caſt down the people, O God.

† Or, concerning the ſilent dove afar off.
[a] Pſ. xvi. Tit.
[b] 1 Sam. xxi. 10. or xxvii. 2.
[c] Pſ. lvii. 1.
‡ Heb. Obſervers.
[d] Ver. 10, 11.
[e] Pſ. cxviii. 6. Iſa. xxxi. 3. Heb. xiii. 6.
[f] Pſ. lix. 3. & cxl. 2.
[g] Pſ. lxxi. 10.

v. 1—7. The words Jonath-elem-rechokim in the title, are generally ſuppoſed to refer to his preſent ſituation, and are rendered concerning the mute dove in far places, as was the caſe with David at this time, driven for ſafety into the land of the Philiſtines. Though harmleſs as a dove, an exile from his country, and mute under all his reproaches; or in his madneſs, which he feigned before Achiſh to preſerve himſelf from ruin. Such was the bleſſed Jeſus, innocent and harmleſs, ſilent before his perſecutors, and ſuffering without the camp. May we imitate his patience, and be content to ſuffer with him!

The arms of Divine mercy are ever open to the miſerable, hither therefore David flees.

1. He complains of his enemies. They deſigned nothing leſs than his utter ruin, v. 1. Their attacks were reſtleſs and inceſſant; too numerous, as well as mighty, for him to contend with, v. 2. Malicious, they perverted his words to ſome ill meaning; miſchievous, they were ever plotting againſt him ſome evil, v. 4. Unanimous, they conſulted and aſſembled to deſtroy him, and every art of fraud, as well as force, was employed to enſnare and undo him, v. 6. Note, (1.) A child of God muſt ever expect to meet the enmity of a world that lieth in wickedneſs. (2.) Every eye is upon the ſteps of the godly, with eagerneſs waiting for their halting, every ear ready to catch their words, and artful to miſrepreſent them to their prejudice: let them take the greater heed to their ways. (3.) The tempter and accuſer of the brethren is ceaſeleſs in his ſnares, and the more abundantly need we watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation. (4.) However divided wicked men are among themſelves, they can ever cordially unite to oppoſe and oppreſs the faithful followers of Jeſus.

2. In his trouble, David directs his prayer to God. Be merciful unto me; could he obtain that, the malice of his foes ſhould not be able to prevail. Note, We have no demand on God for ought; our only plea is for mercy through the Redeemer, and that includes all we can wiſh or need.

3. He encourages his heart in God. Fearful he ſometimes was, but he hath a never-failing reſource, even the Moſt High. His word would comfort, his power protect him: on this rock therefore his confidence fixes, and thence defies the impotent enmity of man, v. 3, 4. Yea, he not only truſts ſecurely, but praiſes joyfully, aſſured that God's promiſes were as good as performances, and that his thanks might antedate his deliverance. Note, (1.) Fear will ſometimes beſet the ſtrongeſt believers. (2.) Faith is then moſt needful, when the ſtorm of temptation is higheſt. (3.) Trials drive us nearer to God, as the tree ſhaken by the wind, takes firmer and deeper root. (4.) God's promiſes demand our praiſes; and both praiſe as well as promiſe is in God, his gift, and from his grace alone.

4. He expreſſes his confidence of the approaching ruin of the wicked. Shall they eſcape by iniquity? no: though they promiſe themſelves impunity, and think they are ſo great and above controul, yet God will not ſuffer them to go unpuniſhed. In thine anger caſt down the people, O God, that their devices might be diſappointed, and their deſtruction come upon them. Note, None are too great for God to humble; none ſo ſecure, or daring, but he will make them feel his arm.

8. Thou telleſt [h] my wandrings, put thou my tears into thy bottle: [i] are they not in thy book? 9. When I cry

[h] 1 Cor. iv. 11.
[i] Mal. iii. 16.

cry unto thee, then ſhall mine enemies turn back: this I know, for God is for me. 10. [k] In God will I praiſe his word: in the LORD will I praiſe his word. 11. In God have I put my truſt: [l] I will not be afraid what man can do unto me. 12. Thy vows are upon me, O God: I will render praiſes unto thee. 13. For [m] thou haſt delivered my ſoul from death: wilt not thou deliver my feet from falling, that I may [n] walk before God in [o] the light of the living?

[k] Ver. 4.
[l] Pſ. xxvii. 1. Ver. 4.
[m] Pſ. cxvi. 8. 2 Cor. i. 10.
[n] Gen. xvii. 1.
[o] Job xxxiii. 30.

v. 8—13. Though the world frowns, if God ſmiles, we may well be comforted. Thus was the Pſalmiſt in the midſt of his trials.

1. He had confidence of God's notice and kind compaſſions towards him in his diſtreſs: not a weary wandering ſtep he took, but the Lord watched over it, and noted it down; not a tear he dropped, but, as precious, it was preſerved in God's bottle, and a regiſter exact kept of both, to be produced hereafter for his comfort, and his adverſaries confuſion. Note, (1.) The tears of God's people here below have often cauſe to flow; ſhortly they ſhall be for ever wiped away from their eyes. (2.) Not a tear drops from the eye of his afflicted ones, but the Father of mercies regards and remembers it, for their everlaſting conſolation. (3.) They who cauſed the griefs of God's ſuffering ſaints, will ſhortly find every tear they have drawn, productive of a deluge of wrath upon their own heads.

2. He was aſſured God would hear his cry, and help him, v. 9. However mighty or numerous his foes, God was for him, and therefore the victory ſecure. Note, Whatever enemies without beſet, or within war againſt us, the prayer of faith is all-prevailing, and every believer knows it by experience.

3. He repeats with exultation the profeſſion made, v. 4. No fear ſhall diſtreſs him, faith ſhall ſtrengthen him, not only to pray, but praiſe, v. 10, 11. Note, They who have God for them, may well contemn the impotent threats of man that is a worm.

4. He had vowed, and he would pay the bounden ſacrifices of praiſe, v. 12. Paſt mercies demanded that grateful tribute, and future ones which he expected, would ſtill increaſe his obligation, v. 13. In deaths oft, he had been hitherto preſerved, and ſhall not the ſame power and grace protect him? yes; he is fully perſuaded he ſhall not be ſuffered to fall into ſin, to wound his conſcience, or into the ſnares of his enemies, though thick ſet around him. God will keep him, and enable him to walk in the light of the living; neither cut off by death, nor ſeduced into the darkneſs of error, but in ſafety of his perſon, and in the uprightneſs of his heart, to enjoy the light of God's countenance here, as the earneſt of that eternal light and life he expected among the ſaints in glory. Note, (1.) Every chriſtian hath vows upon him; baptiſmal, ſacramental: let them be often and ſolemnly remembered, to quicken us to our bounden duty of praiſe and holineſs. (2.) Our ſouls by ſin are now ſpiritually dead, and liable to eternal death; it is a deliverance indeed deſerving our everlaſting acknowledgment, if by his Son God hath redeemed, by his Spirit hath quickned us, then we may well rejoice in hope of partaking his eternal glory, among the ſaints in light. (3.) We walk in a ſlippery path, our tottering footſteps weak, and we often thruſt at that we ſhould fall; if amidſt ſuch danger we are preſerved, not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name be the praiſe.

PSALM LVII.

This pſalm is very like the preceding. 1. He begins with prayer and complaint; yet not without ſome aſſurance of ſpeeding in his requeſt, ver. 1—6. 2. He concludes with joy and praiſe, ver. 7—11.

¶ To the chief muſician, † Al-taſchith, [a] Michtam of David, [b] when he fled from Saul in the cave.

1. [c] BE merciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me, for my ſoul truſteth in thee: yea, [d] in the ſhadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, until theſe calamities be overpaſt. 2. I will cry unto God moſt high: unto God [e] that performeth all things for me. 3. [f] He ſhall ſend from heaven, and ſave me ‡ from the reproach of him that would ſwallow me up; Selah. God [g] ſhall ſend forth his mercy and his truth. 4. My ſoul is among lions, and I lie even among them that are ſet on fire, even the ſons of men, [h] whoſe teeth are ſpears and arrows, and [i] their tongue a ſharp ſword. 5. [k] Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth. 6. They have prepared a net for my ſteps, my ſoul is bowed down: [l] they have digged a pit before me, into the midſt whereof they are fallen themſelves. Selah.

† i. e. Deſtroy not.
[a] Pſ. xvi. Tit.
[b] 1 Sam. xxiv. 3.
[c] Pſ. lvi. 1.
[d] Ibid. xvii. 8. & lxiii. 7. Iſa. xxvi. 20.
[e] Pſal. cxxxviii. 8. Phil. i. 6.
[f] Pſ. xviii. 16. & cxliv. 7.
‡ Or he reproacheth him that, &c.
[g] Pſ. xl. 11. & xliii. 3. & lxi. 7.
[h] Prov. xxx. 14.
[i] Pſ. lv. 21. & lxiv. 3.
[k] Ver. 11. Pſ. cviii. 5.
[l] Ibid. vii. 15, 16. & ix. 15.

v. 1—6. We ſhould have thought, when hunted as a partridge in the mountain, that David would have little time for prayer and praiſe, and that his harp would be hung on the willows; but when forced to fly to a cave for ſhelter, his ſoul more ardently fled to God for help and hope. Al-taſchith in the title, ſignifies deſtroy not, perhaps an ejaculation he had often in his mouth, and expreſſive of the ſubject of this pſalm.

1. He deſcribes his enemies as lions, ſuch were Saul and his forces, furious and raging to ſwallow him up. Men ſet on fire of hell with malice, gnaſhing upon him as if they would devour him; with the blackeſt lies, ſharpening their tongues as a ſword, to ruin his character, whilſt they thirſted for his blood, and with craft and fraud they ſought to entrap him, in order to deſtroy him, v. 4, 6. Note, (1.) The tongue of ſecret ſlander is more hurtful than the ſword of an open enemy. (2.) They who now in raging luſts and paſſions are ſet on fire of hell, muſt ſhortly burn there. (3.) The bleſſed Jeſus was thus beſet when ſeized by his bloody perſecutors; and his people ſtill, in many circumſtances of oppoſition and temptation, can often with feeling propriety adopt theſe words, My ſoul is among lions.

2. His recourſe is ever to God under his wants, and to him he never ſeeks in vain: he was bowed down, v. 6. his calamities great, v. 1. therefore he pleads that God would ſhew him mercy, v. and manifeſt his own glory, v. 5. in his protection and the diſappointment of his enemies; and as he reſolved to perſevere in his ſupplications, v. 2. he expected continually an anſwer of peace. Note, (1.) Whilſt we are praying for the mercies we need, it becomes us to have an eye ever to God's glory, as what ſhould be dearer to us than our own ſafety. (2.) Ceaſeleſs prayer on earth is our duty; in heaven it will be exchanged for everlaſting praiſe.

3. He chearfully in faith commits his body and ſoul to God's ſure keeping. The ſhadow of his wings was his refuge, under them he ſhould be hid, till every ſtorm was overpaſt, v. 1. The Moſt High was able to preſerve him, he had committed himſelf to his care, and expected the performance of his promiſes, v. 2. From heaven his help came, and his ſalvation thence was ſure, through the mercy and faithfulneſs of God, v. 3. whilſt his enemies, expoſed to deſerved wrath, would fall into the pit they have digged, v. 6. and God would be magnified in the juſt judgments executed upon them, v. 5. Note, (1.) A covenant of promiſe is a ſurer defence than a ſhield of adamant. (2.) They who have a heart to truſt God, will ever find he is faithful that hath promiſed. (3.) Every believer's ſalvation is from heaven alone, from the power, grace, and love of God. (4.) Whatever reproach lights on us upon earth, if we have God's favour, we need not fear the revilings of men. (5.) The wicked, through God's juſt judgment, often periſh in the ſnare they laid for others.

7. [m] My heart is † fixed, O God, my heart is fixed: I will ſing and give praiſe. 8. Awake up [n] my glory, awake pſaltery and harp: I myſelf will awake early. 9. [o] I will praiſe thee, O LORD, among the people: [p] I will ſing unto thee among the nations. 10. For [q] thy mercy is great unto the heavens, and thy truth unto the clouds. 11. [r] Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth.

[m] Pſ. cviii. 1, &c.
† Or prepared.
[n] Pſ. xvi. 9. & xxx. 12.
[o] Pſ. cviii. 3.
[p] Rom. xv. 9.
[q] Pſ. xxxvi. 5. & ciii. 11. & cviii. 4.
[r] Ver. 5.

v. 7—11. Riſing as it were from his knees, after the former verſes, his believing heart enraptured burſts into a ſong of praiſe. My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed, or prepared, fixed in confident dependance, prepared for every danger; my troubles vaniſh, and ſongs of gratitude and love flow from my heart. I will ſing and give praiſe, awake up my glory, ariſe my ſoul, ſhake off dull ſloth, and leave thy ſorrows far behind; awake pſaltery and harp, no longer mute, your ſwelling notes ſhall join my joyful ſong. I myſelf will awake early, prevent the dawn of day, eager to proclaim the praiſes of my God. I will praiſe thee, O Lord, among the people, among the firſt of thy congregation my grateful voice ſhall be heard; I will ſing unto thee among the nations, though driven to heathen lands, will never be ſilent or aſhamed to tell the glories of Jehovah; for thy mercy which I have experienced, is great unto the heavens, beyond expreſſion or conception, and thy truth unto the clouds, thy faithfulneſs inviolable in every promiſe, and not only extending to time but to eternity. Be thou exalted, therefore, O God, above the heavens: let thy glory be above all the earth; let the manifeſtations of it appear to the admiration of men and angels, and all the hoſts above join to adore thy great name, exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe. Note, (1.) In God's worſhip our whole ſoul ſhould be engaged, fixed attention ſhould keep out wandring thoughts, enlivened devotion drive away all ſtupor and heavineſs, and heart and voice unite in the bleſſed ſervice. (2.) They who rejoice in God themſelves, deſire to diffuſe their joys around, and induce others to come and taſte their mercies, and join their ſongs. (3.) How feeble now are our warmeſt efforts, and how little a while can our affections fix intenſely on the divine ſubject! Bleſſed be God, we have a hope above the heavens, where our ſouls will be ſeraphic as the ſong, and never faulter or be weary in the work of everlaſting praiſe.

PSALM LVIII.

In order to give a pretext for his perſecution, it is ſuggeſted by ſome that David, by Saul's influence over the judges, was condemned as a traitor, and proclaimed an outlaw; and that he here arraigns as a prophet his unrighteous judges. 1. He deſcribes their ſin, and aggravates that, ver. 1—5. 2. He imprecates and foretels their ruin, ver. 6—9. Which would redound, (1.) To the comfort of the ſaints, ver. 10. (2.) To the glory of God, ver. 11. Sin appears here both exceeding ſinful and exceeding dangerous, and God a juſt avenger of wrong.

a Pſ. lvii. Tit.
b Ibid. xvi.

¶ To the chief muſician, [a] Al-taſchith, [b] Michtam of David.

c Iſa. lix. 9, 14.
d Pſ. xciv. 20. Iſa. x. 1.
e Pſal. li. 5. Iſa. xlviii. 8.
† Heb. From the belly.
f Pſ. cxl. 3. Eccleſ. x. 11. Rom. iii. 13.
‡ Or, aſp.
g Acts vii. 57.
|| Or, be the charmer never ſo cunning.

1. DO ye indeed ſpeak righteouſneſs, O ye congregation? [c] do ye judge uprightly, O ye ſons of men? 2. Yea, in heart you work wickedneſs, [d] you weigh the violence of your hands in the earth. 3. [e] The wicked are eſtranged from the womb, they go aſtray † as ſoon as they be born, ſpeaking lies. 4. [f] Their poiſon is like the poiſon of a ſerpent; they are like the deaf ‡ adder, [g] that ſtoppeth her ear: 5. Which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, || charming never ſo wiſely.

v. 1—5. This pſalm bears the ſame title as the former, Altaſchith, for he hoped God would not ſuffer him to be deſtroyed by the ſentence of unrighteous judges; and in confidence thereof, he, at God's bar, turns accuſer againſt them.

1. He charges them with deliberate and wilful injuſtice. Do ye indeed ſpeak righteouſneſs, O ye congregation? The mighty of the land, the judges aſſembled to decide the cauſe of David, but corrupted probably by Saul's bribes and influence, 1 Sam. xxii. 7, and therefore either dumb in his vindication, or active in his condemnation. Do ye judge uprightly, O ye ſons of men? no: the very contrary; perverting juſtice to the baſeſt purpoſes, and though as gods ſitting on the ſeat of magiſtracy, yet, as ſons of men, corrupt, and thoughtleſs how they muſt appear before the eternal judge. Yea, in heart you work wickedneſs, contrive and plot how to execute it, and ye weigh the violence of your hands in the earth, pretend to weigh the cauſe, as if they would act with equity, but make the oppreſſion more infamous to the ſufferer, and more intolerable under the cloak of juſtice. Note, (1.) Oppreſſion by law is the moſt grievous tyranny. (2.) Good men have often ſuffered by the partiality of unjuſt judges. (3.) The heart gives malignity to the ſin: falls through ſudden temptation are ſinful, deliberate wickedneſs exceeding ſinful.

2. The evil of their conduct proceeded from the corruption of their nature, which is the ſame in all the ſons of men, till Divine grace produces a change. The wicked are eſtranged from the womb, they bring with them into the world a nature alienated from God, and enmity againſt him; they go aſtray as ſoon as they be born, original ſin being as much a departure from God, as actual, and conſtantly producing it with the firſt dawnings of reaſon; or even before, in the frowardneſs and diſingenuouſneſs that in the earlieſt infancy appears, ſpeaking lies, as ſoon as they have the uſe of ſpeech, yea, whilſt liſping, prevaricating and falſe. Their poiſon, or wrath, is like the poiſon of a ſerpent, innate, and deadly. The ſerpent that firſt beguiled, left his poiſon in the wound ſin made in the ſoul, and ever ſince it hath infected the whole human race. They are like the deaf adder that ſtoppeth her ear, whom no muſic can lull, obſtinately bent on miſchief, and froward from the womb. Arguments and remonſtrances from the wiſeſt and beſt are fruitleſs; the perverſe heart refuſes to hearken to the voice of the charmer charming never ſo wiſely. Note, (1.) A clear view of the corruption of our nature, is the muſt humbling of all conſiderations. (2.) Neither the rod of correction, nor the beſt advice; neither the terrors of God's wrath, nor the hopes of the goſpel, can produce any effectual change on the heart, as the moſt prudent parents and the wiſeſt miniſters prove by ſad experience, unleſs the Spirit of God open the ear to inſtruction.

h Job iv. 10.
i Joſh. vii 5.
k Job iii. 16. Eccleſ. vi. 3.
l Prov. x. 25.
† Heb. As living as wrath.
m Pſ lii. 6. & lxiv. 10. Prov. xi. 10. Rev. xix. 1, 2. n Pſ. lxviii. 23.
o Ibid. xcii. 15.
‡ Heb. Fruit.

6. [h] Break their teeth, O God, in their mouth: break out the great teeth of the young lions, O LORD.
7. [i] Let them melt away as waters, which run continually: when he bendeth his bow to ſhoot his arrows, let them be as cut in pieces. 8. As a ſnail which melteth, let every one of them paſs away: [k] like the untimely birth of a woman, that they may not ſee the ſun. 9. Before your pots can feel the thorns, he ſhall take them away [l] as with a whirlwind, † both living, and in his wrath. 10.
[m] The righteous ſhall rejoice when he ſeeth the vengeance: [n] he ſhall waſh his feet in the blood of the wicked. 11. [o] So that a man ſhall ſay, Verily, there is ‡ a reward for the righteous: verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth.

v. 6—11. The ruin of the ungodly is ſure.

1. David imprecates vengeance upon them, not as actuated by a ſpirit of revenge, but as a prophet from God, predicting their ruin, and approving the righteouſneſs of the judgment. He prays that their teeth of oppreſſion might be broken, v. 6. that as waters ſpilt on the ground their purpoſes might be abortive; or, weak as water, they may be unable to accompliſh their wicked devices, v. 7. When higheſt in confidence of ſucceſs, he begs their arrows on the ſtring may then be broken, v. 8. That every ſtep they took in miſchief, like the ſnail's motion, might be to their own waſte and loſs; and that as the untimely fruit of a woman, they might be either by death carried to the grave, or that ſecret diſappointment might blaſt their enterprizes, ſo as never to be ripe for execution. Note, It is well for God's people his care is over them; did he not reſtrain the wickedneſs, or defeat the deſigns of the crafty, ſuch is the inbred enmity of the natural heart againſt them, it would ſoon be literally true, that not one godly man was left, that the faithful were periſhed from the children of men.

2. He foreſees their unexpected and terrible deſtruction. Before your pots can feel the thorns, quick as they kindle, and ſtrong as they blaze, more ſuddenly He, the avenging God, ſhall take them away as with a whirlwind, whoſe fury is reſiſtleſs, and this both living, when they are in the midſt of life, health, and proſperity, and in his wrath, in ſuch a manner, that they who behold the judgment, ſhall confeſs it is the finger of God. Note, When God riſes up in diſpleaſure, the moſt proſperous ſinner in the midſt of health, youth, and affluence, is hurried to the grave, as the leaf before the tempeſt.

3. The bleſſed effects this would produce. The righteous ſhall rejoice to ſee God thus glorified, and waſh his feet in the blood of the wicked, as approving the Divine proceedure, Rev. xiv. 20. experimentally confirmed by ſuch interpoſition of God's care over his people; whilſt every attentive beholder would be led to reverence and fear before this holy God, acknowledging that there is a God, or, as in the original, that Gods judge in the earth, the Elohim, the ſacred Three. Note, (1.) Though a good man now grieves over every ſinner, and pities him, he will approve God's juſtice in his puniſhment, and in the day of judgment praiſe God when the ſmoke of his torment aſcendeth. (2.) None ever ſerved God faithfully, but owned the unſpeakable comfort and ſatisfaction which is to be found in the way of righteouſneſs. (3.) There is a God that judgeth the earth: let the ſinner tremble, his damnation ſlumbreth not; let the righteous rejoice, his ſalvation draweth nigh.

PSALM LIX.

This pſalm is of the ſame nature with the foregoing. 1. David prays to God to defend and deliver him from his enemies, repreſenting them as very ill men, barbarous, malicious, and atheiſtical, ver. 1—7. 2. He foreſees and foretells the deſtruction of his enemies, which he would give to God the glory of, ver. 8—17.

a Pſ. lvii.
b Ibid. 16.
c 1 Sam. xix. 11.

¶ To the chief muſician, [a] Al-taſchith, [b] Michtam of David: [c] when Saul ſent, and they watched the houſe to kill him.

d Pſ. xviii. 48.
† Heb. Set me on high.
e 1 Sam. xix. 11.
f Pſ. lvi. 6.
g 1 Sam. xxiv. 11, 17. Pſ. vii. 4.
h Ibid. xxxv. 23. & xliv. 23.
‡ Heb. To meet me.
i Ver. 14.
k Pſ. lvii. 4. Prov. xii. 18.
l Pſ. x. 11, 13. & lxxiii. 11. & xciv. 7.

1. [d] DELIVER me from mine enemies, O my God:
† defend me from them that riſe up againſt me. 2. Deliver me from the workers of iniquity, and ſave me from bloody men. 3. For lo, [e] they lie in wait for my ſoul; [f] the mighty are gathered againſt me; [g] not for my tranſgreſſion, nor for my ſin, O LORD.
4. They run and prepare themſelves without my fault:
[h] awake ‡ to help me and behold. 5. Thou therefore,
O LORD God of hoſts, the God of Iſrael, awake to viſit all the heathen: be not merciful to any wicked tranſgreſſors. Selah. 6. [i] They return at evening: they make a noiſe like a dog, and go round about the city.
7. Behold, they belch out with their mouth: [k] ſwords are in their lips; for [l] who (ſay they) doth hear?

v. 1—7. This pſalm was compoſed, as appears by the title, on his deliverance, when Saul ſent to ſlay him in his own houſe, 1 Sam. xix. 11. and is Michtam, one of the golden mercies he hath to record, and Altaſchith, an inſtance of God's preſerving him from deſtruction.

We have here,

1. The very bad character of his enemies, men who were as impious againſt God, as cruel and unjuſt to him. They made iniquity their practice, and nothing but blood would ſatisfy them, v. 2. Treacherous, they lay in wait; and mighty, employed violence, as well as cunning, to compaſs their deſigns; uniting againſt him, unable to reſiſt, v 3. eager in their purſuit, they ran to ſeize him, v. 4. At evening they compaſſed his houſe, and, diſappointed of their prey, like a hungry dog howled for vexation, and greedily went about the city, in hopes of diſcovering or overtaking him, v. 6. breathing out threatnings, and belching forth blaſphemies, as if God could not, or would not hear them, v. 7. Note, They who lift up their tongues in ſlander and blaſphemy, may ſay, Tuſh, God careth not for it, but will find to their confuſion, that there is not a word in their tongue but is heard, recorded, and will be produced againſt them in the day of judgment.

2. He prays importunately for help, and with confidence that he ſhall be heard. Deliver me from mine enemies, O my God: my God, and therefore thou wilt never leave nor forſake me. Defend me, for I am weak; awake for me, for the ſtorm is high; unleſs thou ſave, I periſh. Behold my innocence, v. 3, 4. I have given them no provocation: their wickedneſs, v. 5. though Iſraelites, become worſe than the heathen, and ſuch wilful and obſtinate tranſgreſſors, that judgment without mercy was their juſt deſert. Note, (1.) A gracious confidence of an intereſt in God enables the ſoul in prayer to approach with boldneſs a throne of grace. (2.) None can deſtroy thoſe whom God defends. (3.) Though no innocence will protect us from the malignity of the wicked, it will be a comfortable ſupport to us under their aſperſions. (4.) Before God we cannot plead we are faultleſs, yet when unjuſtly oppreſſed of men, we may carry our righteous cauſe to him, and appeal for redreſs. (5.) Sinners will be viſited of God; and if not before, in a judgment-day at leaſt the juſt will be vindicated, and the guilty periſh without mercy or hope.

8. But [m] thou, O LORD, ſhalt laugh at them; thou ſhalt have all the heathen in deriſion. 9. [n] Becauſe of his ſtrength will I wait upon thee: for [o] God is my † defence. 10. [p] The God of my mercy [q] ſhall prevent me: God ſhall let me [r] ſee my deſire upon mine ‡ enemies. 11. [s] Slay them not, leſt my people forget: ſcatter them by thy power; and bring them down, O LORD our ſhield. 12. [t] For the ſin of their mouth, and the words of their lips, let them even be taken in their pride: and [u] for curſing and lying which they ſpeak. 13. [x] Conſume them in wrath, conſume them, [y] that they may not be: and let them know that God ruleth in Jacob, unto the ends of the earth. Selah. 14. And [z] at evening let them return, and let them make a noiſe like a dog, and go round about the city. 15. Let them [a] wander up and down for meat, and ‖ grudge if they be not ſatisfied. 16. But I will ſing of thy power; yea, [b] I will ſing aloud of thy mercy in the morning: for thou haſt been my defence and refuge in the day of my trouble. 17. Unto thee, O my ſtrength, will I ſing: for [c] God is my defence, and the God of my mercy.

[m] 1 Sam. xix. 16. Pſ. ii. 4.
[n] 2 Chron. xx. 12.
[o] Ver. 17.
† Heb. High place.
[p] 2 Cor. i. 3.
[q] Pſ. xxi. 3.
[r] Ibid. liv. 7. & xcii. 11.
‡ Heb. Obſervers.
[s] Gen. iv. 12, 15.
[t] Prov. xii. 13. & xviii. 7.
[u] Pſ. cix. 17, 18.
[x] Ibid. vii. 9.
[y] Ibid. lxxxiii. 18.
[z] Ver. 6.
[a] Job xv. 23. Pſ. cix. 10.
‖ Or, if they be not ſatisfied, then they will ſtay all night.
[b] Iſa. lxv. 14.
[c] Ver. 9, 10.

v. 8—17. David having committed his caſe to God in prayer, here waits in hope.

1. He is confident God will diſappoint his enemies, will mock at their impotent devices, v. 8. and protect him from their malice. Becauſe of his ſtrength, either of his enemy, who was againſt him, or of God, who was for him, will I wait upon thee; and then when God's mercy prevented him, and his defence covered him, he muſt be ſafe, and expect to ſee the vengeance due to his cruel foes, v. 9, 10. Note, (1.) God not only preſerves his people when they cry, but prevents them with his mercy from dangers they cannot foreſee. (2.) When we can ſay in prayer, My merciful God, and my defence, we may well take courage, all is ſafe, if God is our friend.

2. He prays they may be puniſhed; not utterly deſtroyed, but left as ſtanding monuments of God's care over his people, and diſpleaſure againſt their perſecutors. Slay them not utterly, leaſt my people forget, as they would be apt to do, if no memorial remained of the viſitation, but ſcatter them by thy power, and bring them down, O Lord, our ſhield, reduce them from their abuſed heighth of power, and make them little and contemptible, that they may live ſtanding evidences of the Divine viſitation. Moſt juſtly had their malice, ſlander, pride, curſing, and lying provoked their puniſhment, v. 12. therefore he wiſhed to ſee God glorified in their ruin, that they may not be, not continue in honour and proſperity as before, but be reduced to the moſt abject want and wretchedneſs, that as they had, v. 7. thirſted for his blood, they might, as hungry dogs, pine for want of bread, v. 14, 15. and feel by their ſufferings, that though they forgot or deſpiſed him, there was a ruler in Jacob, a univerſal king, whoſe righteous government never ſuffered iniquity with impunity, v. 13. If this pſalm be applied to the Meſſiah, as it well may, the preſent ſtate of the Jewiſh people will appear ſtrongly marked in theſe verſes, a people deſpicable, rapacious, ſcattered on the face of the earth, and every where appearing as the monuments of Divine wrath, for their rejection of the ſon of David. Note, (1.) They are in a ſtate of terrible danger, againſt whom the prayers of God's ſuffering people aſcend. (2.) The tongue defiled with ſlander, curſing, and lyes, will burn ſhortly with fire unquenchable. (3.) God will make the ſinner know he rules, by the ſufferings he inflicts, and often cauſe his puniſhment to bear the marks of his provocation.

3. Songs of praiſe ſhall be the tribute of his mercies. God's power and grace, ſo opportunely diſplayed in the day of his trouble, he will for ever exalt: early will he riſe for the delightful taſk, and loud ſhall his voice be heard, proclaiming the ſwelling gratitude of his heart, v. 16. The God of his ſtrength, his mercy, and defence, ſhall be the ſubject of his never-ending praiſe. Note, (1.) A grateful heart delights in proclaiming his obligations. (2.) Every thankſgiving we offer, beſpeaks new mercies. (3.) The ſaints of God who find preſent help, may comfortably conclude it ſhall be the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever.

PSALM LX.

This pſalm was penned when David was in the zenith of his proſperity, and the affairs of his kingdom ſeem to have been in a better poſture than ever they were either before or after. See 2 Sam. viii. 3, 13. 1 Chron. xviii. 3, 12. David in proſperity was as devout as David in adverſity. 1. He reflects upon the ill ſtate of the public intereſts for many years, in which God had been contending with them, ver. 1—3. 2. He takes notice of the happy turn lately given to their affairs, ver. 4. 3. He prays for the deliverance of God's Iſrael from their enemies, ver. 5. 4. He triumphs in hope of their victories over their enemies, and begs of God to carry them on, and complete them, ver. 6—12.

¶ To the chief muſician, [a] upon Shuſhan-eduth, [b] Michtam of David, to teach [c] when he ſtrove with Aram-naharaim, and with Aram-zobah, when Joab returned, and ſmote of Edom in the valley of ſalt twelve thouſand.

[a] Pſ. lxxx. Tit.
[b] Ibid. xvi. Tit.
[c] 2 Sam. viii. 3, 13 1 Chron. xviii. 3, 12.

1. O GOD [d] thou haſt caſt us off, thou haſt † ſcattered us, thou haſt been diſpleaſed; O turn thyſelf to us again. 2. Thou haſt made the earth to tremble; thou haſt broken it: heal the breaches thereof, for it ſhaketh. 3. [e] Thou haſt ſhewed thy people hard things: [f] thou haſt made us to drink the wine of aſtoniſhment. 4. [g] Thou haſt given a banner to them that fear thee: that it may be diſplayed becauſe of the truth. Selah. 5. [h] That thy beloved may be delivered; ſave with thy right hand, and hear me.

[d] Pſ. xliv. 9.
† Heb. Broken.
[e] Pſ. lxxi.
[f] Iſa. li. 17, 22. Jer. xxv. 15.
[g] Pſ. xx. 5. Iſa. xi. 12. & xlix. 22.
[h] Pſ. cviii. 6, &c.

v. 1—5. The occaſion of this pſalm was Joab's victory over the Edomites, and the war againſt the Syrians of Meſopotamia and Zobah, who were alſo ſubdued; and typically it teaches us, that all enemies of Chriſt, his church, and people, muſt finally fall, however long or obſtinate the ſtruggle. It is directed to the chief muſician upon Shuſhan-eduth, probably the muſical inſtrument for which it was ſet.

1. The deplorable ſtate of the Jewiſh affairs is deſcribed, during the ill adminiſtration of Saul, and the ſtruggles of Iſhboſheth, v. 1—3. God's diſpleaſure gave their enemies advantage, they were ſcattered, wide breaches opened, the land trembling under God's correction; and they, as men, deſperate and overwhelmed with aſtoniſhment, ready to give up all for loſt. Probably this deſcription looked forward alſo, as prophetical of that ſtate, when, for their rejection of God's anointed, his wrath ſhould be kindled, more terrible convulſions deſtroy their whole polity and government, and, ſcattered into all lands, they ſhould bear the marks of God's heavy hand; an aſtoniſhment to others, a terror to themſelves.

2. In the midſt of their diſtreſſes, a banner is diſplayed, for the faithful Iſraelites in David, promiſed to be their king and captain, and now exalted to the throne, under whom enliſted, union within prepared them for victory without: animated by his preſence, and bold under ſuch a leader, they lifted up their hoſtile banners, defied and vanquiſhed their foes, v. 4. Chriſt, the captain of our ſalvation, may alſo be here deſigned; his banner of love ſpread abroad, invites poor ſinners to his ſtandard, under him inliſted, ſpiritual ſtrength and courage animate their ſouls, and they go forth conquering and to conquer: and to him ſhall the diſperſed of Iſrael be gathered at laſt, and turning to the Lord, ſee a period of their miſeries. Note, (1.) The deeper our diſtreſſes, the more is the power and grace of our God magnified in our deliverance. (2.) We ſhould ever remember the ſtate in which Jeſus found us, and the miſery from which he drew us, as an engagement to be faithful, and fight manfully under his banners.

3. He prays earneſtly for God's help and healing. O turn thyſelf to us again, ceaſe from thy diſpleaſure, and viſit us with thy ſalvation; heal the breaches, for thou alone canſt heal them, and as the danger is imminent, it ſhaketh, let thy mercy be ſpeedy to the land, that thy beloved, thy choſen people, may be delivered from the hands of all their enemies; for having no power of themſelves, they look to thee, ſave with thy right hand, and hear me, their advocate. Note, (1.) Sin hath made a deadly breach in our ſouls, which nothing but the ſovereign grace of God can repair. (2.) They who turn to God in prayer, may expect his return to them in mercy. (3.) They who fear God, are beloved by him, and his right hand will ſave them. (4.) Though our deliverance may be delayed, yet covenant mercies, confirmed by the truth of God, are ſure mercies. Wait therefore, in patience of hope.

6. God hath ſpoken in his holineſs, I will rejoice: I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth. 7. Gilead is mine, and Manaſſeh is mine, [i] Ephraim alſo is the ſtrength of mine head; [k] Judah is my law-giver. 8. Moab is my waſhpot, [l] over Edom will I caſt out my ſhoe: Philiſtia, triumph thou † becauſe of me. 9. Who will bring me into [m] the ſtrong city? who will lead me into Edom: 10. Wilt not thou, O God, [n] which hadſt caſt us off? and thou, O God, which didſt not go out with our armies? 11. Give us help from trouble; for [o] vain is the ‡ help of man. 12. Through God [p] we ſhall do valiantly: for he it is that ſhall tread down our enemies.

[i] See Deut. xxxiii. 17.
[k] Gen. xlix. 10.
[l] Pſ. xci. 13.
† Or, over me (by an irony) Pſ. cviii. 9.
[m] 2 Sam. xii. 26.
[n] Pſ. xliv. 9. & cviii. 11.
[o] Pſ. cxlvi. 3.
‡ Heb. Salvation.
[p] Num. xxiv. 18. 1 Chron. xix. 13.

v. 6—12. David here appears triumphing in the Divine promiſes; God hath ſworn, he believes, and in conſequence rejoices.

1. All foes within and without ſhall yield to him. Iſrael in their ſeveral tribes that had joined Iſhboſheth, ſhall return to him. Shechem and Succoth, places of Ephraim, the chief tribe ſhall own his ſway, and the land of Gilead, the country beyond Jordan, obey him. The levies of Ephraim ſhould ſtrengthen his army, and Judah afford him wiſe and able magiſtrates, v. 6, 7. Conqueſt without would follow union within, Moab be enſlaved, Edom reduced to the meaneſt offices, and thoroughly ſubdued and poſſeſſed, Ruth iv. 7. and let Philiſtia triumph if ſhe dares; or under his mild government ſhe would be happy even in her captive ſtate, v. 8. Note, (1.) When a believer can ſay, Chriſt is mine, then all other bleſſings of grace and glory neceſſarily follow. (2.) When God pleaſes, he can make our bittereſt foes our warmeſt friends. (3.) National union is a great bleſſing from God. (4.) They who change the lawleſs ſtate of ſin, for the eaſy yoke of Chriſt, will have occaſion for ever to bleſs the day when that happy change was effected.

2. He anſwers a difficulty which might be ſuggeſted from the ſtrength of the enemy's fortreſſes. Who will bring me into the ſtrong city? either Rabbah, or more probably the capital of Idumea; who will lead me into Edom? God is the ſtrength of his confidence. Wilt not thou, O God, which hadſt caſt us off? yes, aſſuredly: now thou art returned in mercy, we ſhall be victorious; and thou, O God, which didſt not go out with our armies before, ſhalt make us now more than conquerors. Therefore give us help in trouble, in anſwer to our fervent prayers; for vain is the help of man, we acknowledge it; and renouncing every human confidence, deſire alone to repoſe ourſelves on thee. And thus we are always confident, that through God we ſhall do valiantly, and put all our enemies under our feet, for he it is who ſhall tread down our enemies, on whom we depend, and to whom we will aſcribe the praiſe of all our ſucceſs. Note, (1.) Difficulties will often ſtand in the believer's way, but faith will overcome them all. (2.) When to ſenſe we ſeem as caſt off, we muſt not quit our hold of the promiſe, but truſt, and wait to ſee the ſalvation of God. (3.) When our dangers are greateſt, our prayers and cries ſhould be moſt earneſt. (4.) The leſs we expect to receive from the creature, the ſurer we are to avoid diſappointment. (5.) If we are enabled to do valiantly againſt our ſpiritual enemies, let us remember from whom cometh our ſtrength, and lay at his feet the crown, which his own grace has obtained for us.

PSALM LXI.

David in this pſalm, as in many others, begins with prayer, and ends with praiſe. It ſeems penned during his troubles under Abſalom, when he fled to the fartheſt part of the land to ſave his life, and in it, ver. 6. eſpecial regard ſeems to be had to that Meſſiah, whom in his ſufferings he repreſented. He reſolves, 1. To call upon God, becauſe God had protected him, ver. 1—3. 2. Becauſe God had provided well for him, ver. 4, 5. 3. To praiſe God, becauſe he had an aſſurance of the continuance of God's favour to him, ver. 6, 7, 8.

¶ To the chief muſician upon Neginah,
A pſalm of David.

1. HEAR my cry, O God, attend unto my prayer. 2. From [a] the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to the rock that is higher than I. 3. For [b] thou haſt been a ſhelter for me, and a ſtrong tower from the enemy. 4. [c] I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever: [d] I will † truſt in the covert of thy wings. Selah.

[a] 1 Tim. ii. 8.
[b] 1 Sam. xvii. 37.
[c] Pſ. xxvii. 4.
[d] Ibid. xvii. 8. & lvii. 1. & xci 4.
† Or, make my refuge.

v. 1—4. The word Neginah in the title, ſeems to be the muſical inſtrument to which the pſalm was ſet. In it,

1. David looks up to God in his troubles; Hear my cry, O God, attend unto my prayer. From the end of the earth, the fartheſt part of Judea, whither he had fled for ſafety, will I cry unto thee, earneſtly, aloud, importunately, when my heart is overwhelmed with trouble and anguiſh of whatever kind; all my complaints will I pour out, into thy compaſſionate boſom; lead me to the rock that is higher than I, to a place of preſent ſafety, but eſpecially to the rock of ages, the promiſed Meſſiah, the hope of his afflicted people. Note, (1.) Wherever we are, a throne of grace is open, and the more we are removed from other means, the more diligent ought we to be in ſecret prayer. (2.) The ſouls of the faithful are ſometimes overwhelmed with the ſenſe of ſin, with afflictive providences, with ſore temptations, and ready to ſink under their burden, but when moſt diſtreſſed, they fly to God, and find him a very preſent help in trouble. (3.) There is, bleſſed be God, a rock higher than we, on which, if placed, we need not fear what earth or hell can do againſt us. (4.) Every day we need cry to God, to fix us more ſecurely on this ſure foundation, Jeſus Chriſt.

2. From paſt experience, he is encouraged to expect preſent help. Thou haſt been a ſhelter, or a covert for me, and a ſtrong tower from the enemy; therefore in humble hope of the ſame needful protection, I will abide in thy tabernacle for ever; now taking refuge under thy protection, hoping ſhortly to return to the tabernacle in Sion, and by and by to go to that heavenly hill, where God's glory is ever viſible to his ſaints; and I will truſt in the covert of thy wings, confident of ſafety there, when every proſpect around me is moſt dark and threatning. Note, (1.) We ſhould often remember what God hath done for us, as an argument to encourage our hearts to hope for greater mercies. (2.) They are ſafe, whom God's almighty power gathers under his wing. (3.) If we abide faithful and conſtant in his worſhip and ſervice below, we may comfortably look forward to an eternal manſion, in his better tabernacle above.

5. For thou, O God, haſt heard my vows: thou haſt given me the heritage of thoſe that fear thy name. 6. [e] Thou wilt † prolong the king's life: and his years as many generations. 7. [f] He ſhall abide before God for ever: O prepare [g] mercy and truth which may preſerve him. 8. So will I ſing praiſe unto thy name for ever, that I may daily perform my vows.

[e] Pſ. xxi. 4.
† Heb. Add days to the days of the king.
[f] Luke i. 33.
[g] Pſ. xl. 11. Prov. xx. 28.

v. 5—8. David having truſted himſelf with God,

1. Regards his prayer as already heard and anſwered, and his vows of praiſe already due, becauſe of the certainty of the promiſed mercy. Thou haſt given me the heritage of thoſe that fear thy name, either the inheritance of Iſrael, or his portion in a better country, that is, an heavenly; and this he regards as already beſtowed, foraſmuch as the covenant of promiſe is ſure to all the ſeed, and he had comfortable certainty of being of that bleſſed number, who feared God, and truſted in his ſalvation. Note, They who are under the influence of holy fear, will never fail, nor come ſhort of the heritage laid up for them in glory.

2. He expreſſes his confidence of preſent ſalvation. His life, v. 6. though ſo thirſted after, ſhall be preſerved amidſt every danger, and prolonged for God's glory, and the people's good: or probably he looks farther, to the King Meſſiah, the proſpect of whoſe glorious kingdom and approaching day, was his delight and joy. His life ſhould be long, and his years as many generations, even coeval with the days of eternity; for he ſhall abide before God for ever. Note, Since Jeſus ever lives and reigns, his people may confidently expect to live and reign with him in glory everlaſting.

3. He offers up his prayers, and engages for continual praiſe. O prepare mercy and truth, which may preſerve him, king David, on his throne, according to the mercy and faithfulneſs of God in his promiſes, or the Son of David, whoſe kingdom is eſtabliſhed and preſerved, according to the mercy and truth of God, in the everlaſting covenant. So will I ſing praiſe unto thy name for ever, make it my daily happy ſervice here below, and my eternal employment ſhortly above, that I may daily perform my vows, in thoſe continual grateful acknowledgments for mercies ſo unſpeakably great and gracious. Note, (1.) If we are intereſted in God's covenant of promiſes, he will take care of our ſtability. (2.) They who expect to ſpend eternity in God's unceaſing praiſe, will daily here below begin to exerciſe themſelves in this delightful employment.

PSALM LXII.

This pſalm ſeems compoſed under ſome of his perſecutions; wherein, 1. David profeſſeth his confidence in God and dependence upon him, and encourageth himſelf to continue waiting on him, ver. 1—7. 2. With a great deal of earneſtneſs he excites and encourageth others to truſt in God likewiſe, and not in any creature, ver. 8—12.

¶ To the chief muſician, to [a] Jeduthun,
A pſalm of David.

1. † TRULY [b] my ſoul ‡ waiteth upon God:
from him cometh my ſalvation. 2. [c] He only is my rock and my ſalvation: he is my § defence; [d] I ſhall not be greatly moved. 3. How long will ye imagine miſchief againſt a man? ye ſhall be ſlain all of you:
[e] as a bowing wall ſhall ye be, and as a tottering fence.
4. They only conſult to caſt him down from his excellency, they delight in lies: [f] they bleſs with their mouth, but they curſe ‖ inwardly. Selah. 5. [g] My ſoul, wait thou only upon God: for my expectation is from him.
6. He only is [h] my rock and my ſalvation; he is my defence;
I ſhall not be moved. 7. In God is my ſalvation and my glory: the rock of my ſtrength, and my refuge is in God.

a 1 Chron. xxv. 2, 3.
† Or, only.
b Pſ. xxxiii. 20.
‡ Heb. Is ſilent, ſo Pſ. lxv. 1.
c Ver. 6.
§ Heb. High place. d Pſ. xxxvii. 24.
e Iſa. xxx. 13.
f Pſ. xxviii. 3. & lv. 21.
‖ Heb. In their inward parts.
g Ver. 1, 2.
h Pſal. xviii. 2.

v. 1—7. David here,

1. Profeſſes his confidence in God for protection and ſafety: as he made him alone his rock and defence, he waited, or was ſilent, as it may be rendered; without impatience or diſtruſt expected to ſee the ſalvation of God. Numerous and miſchievous as his foes were, he knew he ſhould not be greatly moved; tempted he might be, in difficulties and dangers, but ſtill ſafe under the defence of the Almighty. Note, (1.) Patient and ſubmiſſive reſignation of our ſouls to God, is the certain way to a happy iſſue out of all our afflictions. (2.) God is the alone author and finiſher of our ſalvation; as in his eternal counſels he contrived the wondrous ſcheme; by his ſovereign and effectual grace he compleats his purpoſe, and prepares us for the kingdom he hath prepared for us. (3.) Though we may be moved, through temptation and corruption, we ſhall not be ſuffered to fall finally and eternally.

2. He foreſees the ruin of his enemies, whoſe character he deſcribes, v. 3, 4. They were miſchievous; plotted how to deprive him of his crown and dignity, delighted to propagate lies to injure him; and with perfidious treachery, whilſt they profeſſed outward kindneſs, their hearts within rankled with malice. But vain were their deſigns to thruſt him down whom God would exalt: deſtined to the ſword, they ſhould fall; and, as a bowing wall and tottering fence, ſo weak would be their wicked attempts, and as eaſily overturned. Note, (1.) A lying tongue will be the curſe of its owner. (2.) Traitors will find an avenging God. (3.) They who truſt in God may defy all their enemies to hurt them.

3. He encourages his ſoul to wait only upon God, and ſtrengthens his faith in him by a variety of epithets. My rock, who can move me? my ſalvation, who can deſtroy me? my defence, who can hurt me? my glory, therefore it cannot fade; my ſtrength, to make me more than conqueror; my refuge, under whoſe wings I ſhall be eternally ſafe. Note, (1.) They are truly bleſſed and happy who can ſay, This God is my God. (2.) The expectation of the faithful cometh only from God, he is to them all and in all. (3.) The believer's rejoicing is never in himſelf, but in his exalted head, he will ever ſay, My God is my glory.

8. Truſt in him at all times; ye people, [i] pour out your heart before him: God is a refuge for us. Selah.
9. [k] Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be laid in the balance, they are † altogether lighter than vanity. 10. [l] Truſt not in oppreſſion, and become not vain in robbery: [m] if riches increaſe, ſet not your hearts upon them. 11. God hath ſpoken once; twice have I heard this, that ‡ power belongeth unto God. 12. Alſo unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for [n] thou rendreſt to every man according to his work.

i 1 Sam. i. 15. Lam. 2. 19.
k Pſ. xxxix. 5. Iſa. xl. 17.
† Or, alike.
l Jer. xvii. 11.
m Luke xii. 15. 1 Tim. vi. 17.
‡ Or, ſtrength.
n Job xxxiv. 11. Prov. xxiv. 12. Jer. xxxii. 19. Ezek. xxxiii. 20. Mat. xvi. 27. Rom. ii. 6. 1 Cor. iii. 8. 2 Cor. v. 10. 1 Pet. i. 17. Rev. xxii. 12.

v. 8—12. His own experience of the bleſſedneſs of dependance upon God, urges him to invite all to come and taſte the ſame felicity. Truſt in him at all times; ye people, ye people of Iſrael, and all the Iſrael of God, wherever diſperſed, or however diſtreſſed, at all times make God your truſt, to guide, protect, preſerve, and ſtrengthen you; pour out your heart before him, in earneſt and importunate prayer, and tell him of all your troubles with freedom: for God is a refuge for us; for me, and for you, and all that fly to him as their rock and hope alone, renouncing every other ground of confidence, which would be utterly inſufficient to ſupport their ſouls. He cautions them therefore,

1. Not to truſt in men, neither of high or low degree, whoſe multitude, or greatneſs, or wiſdom, can afford us no ſafety; they are deceitful helps, and in the day of trial will prove lighter than vanity. Note, The more we ceaſe from man, and entirely cleave to God, the more ſecure ſhall we be from diſappointment.

2. Not to truſt in riches, however obtained, whether by oppreſſion or extortion, by open violence or robbery; or by the moſt lawful means, honeſt labour or inheritance, v. 10. Note, Gain is often a great foe to godlineſs, and gold too often made the rival of God in the heart: a ſtate of proſperity is exceeding dangerous, and they who are in it, have as much need to pray in all time of their wealth as of their tribulation, Good Lord deliver us!

3. He exhorts them to truſt in God as their never-failing refuge; and this becauſe of his faithfulneſs, power, mercy, and juſtice. He hath ſpoken once, yea twice, confirming the ſouls of his people by his word and oath; two immutable things, in which it is impoſſible for us to be deceived. His omnipotence none dare encounter; his mercy is infinite, and we may therefore always hope in it; and his juſtice impartial; therefore ſhall the enemies of his name and people be deſtroyed, and thoſe who were oppreſſed with wrong be vindicated. Good reaſon then there is, that at all times he ſhould be alone exalted as our only hope and help. Note, The more we conſider God's perfections and promiſes, as manifeſted to us in a covenant of grace, the more cauſe we ſhall ſee to depend on him as our Almighty ſtrength, to truſt him as infinite in goodneſs and abundant in mercy, and to expect from him preſent protection and eternal glory.

PSALM LXIII.

As the ſweeteſt of Paul's epiſtles were thoſe that bore date out of a priſon; ſo ſome of the ſweeteſt of David's pſalms, were thoſe that were penned as this was in a wilderneſs. And here we have, 1. His deſire towards God, ver. 1, 2. 2. His eſteem of God, ver. 3, 4. 3. His ſatisfaction in God, ver. 5. 4. His ſecret communion with God, ver. 6. 5. His joyful dependence upon God, ver. 7, 8. 6. His holy triumph in God over his enemies, and in the aſſurance of his own ſafety, ver. 9, 10, 11. A devout and pious ſoul has little need of direction how to ſing this pſalm, ſo naturally doth it ſpeak its own genuine language; and an unſanctified ſoul, that is unacquainted and unaffected with divine things, is ſcarce capable of ſinging it with underſtanding.

¶ A pſalm of David, [a] when he was in the wilderneſs of Judah.

1. O GOD, thou art my God, early will I ſeek thee, [b] my ſoul thirſteth for thee, my fleſh longeth for thee, in a dry and † thirſty land, where no water is: 2. [c] To ſee [d] thy power and thy glory, ſo as I have ſeen thee in the ſanctuary.

a 1 Sam. xxii. 5. & xxiii. 14, 26. About 1062.
b Pſal. xlii. 2. & lxxxiv. 2. & cxliii. 6.
† Heb. Weary.
c Pſal. xxvii. 4.
d 1 Sam. iv. 21. Pſal. lxxviii. 61.

v. 1, 2. Wherever David was, he found his heart in tune for praiſe; a wilderneſs ſhall echo with his ſongs, ſince thither divine providence hath led him: the children of God ſhould learn of him, even though ſorrowful, to be always rejoicing, and when moſt deſolate and ſolitary, to make melody ſtill in their hearts unto God.

1. The ground of all his comfort was this, O God, thou art my God: a ſenſe of an intereſt in his love and favour, can make a priſon a palace, a wilderneſs a paradiſe.

2. He reſolves to cleave to God, and longs for his return to the ſanctuary, from which at preſent he ſuffered an irkſome baniſhment. Early will I ſeek thee; here, though deſtitute of public ordinances, in private prayer and ſecret meditation he would exerciſe himſelf, beginning with the dawn of day; my ſoul thirſteth for thee, my fleſh longeth for thee, with eager and importunate deſire, in a dry and thirſty land, where no water is; no waters of the ſanctuary to refreſh and comfort his ſoul; therefore he pants for the courts of God's tabernacle. To ſee thy power and glory, ſo as I have ſeen thee in the ſanctuary; to enjoy ſome ſweet manifeſtations of divine favour where he was, as he had formerly been favoured with when engaged in the worſhip of the ſanctuary, and thither he wiſhes to return. Note, (1.) This world is a barren land, nothing in it can ſatisfy the longings of the ſoul, God alone is the believer's all-ſufficient portion. (2.) The more we are convinced of the emptineſs of the creature, the more we ſhould fly to the fulneſs of God. (3.) They who know the bleſſings of public ordinances will feelingly regret the want of them. (4.) Whereever we are, a throne of grace is open; and if we diligently ſeek him, we may find the ſame comfortable preſence of God under a tree or in a mountain, as in the midſt of the congregation.

3. [e] Becauſe thy loving kindneſs is better than life: my lips ſhall praiſe thee. 4. Thus will I bleſs thee [f] while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name. 5. My ſoul ſhall be ſatisfied as with † marrow and fatneſs; and my mouth ſhall praiſe thee with joyful lips: 6. When [g] I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the night-watches.

e Pſal. xxx. 5.
f Ibid. civ. 33.
† Heb. Fatneſs.
g Pſal. xlii. 8. & cxix. 55. & cxlix. 5.

v. 3—6. His deſires are anſwered, and prayers ſoon exchanged for joyful praiſes.

1. Becauſe thy loving kindneſs is better than life: my lips ſhall praiſe thee; though life is a bleſſing, yet without God's love, in the midſt of life we are in death; we may then only be truly ſaid to live, when, quickned by his ſpirit, our ſouls live by him and for him: in this caſe even death becomes our privilege, and removal from earth is our tranſlation to the life of eternity.

2. He will continue his praiſe as long as his being: thus, as he had begun, he purpoſes to perſevere, and lift up his hands inceſſantly below in thankſgiving, till he ſhould join above the everlaſting ſongs of ſaints and angels, v. 4. Note, They who expect to ſpend eternity in God's praiſe, will begin the pleaſing ſervice here, and learn in every ſtate, condition, and circumſtance, to give thanks.

3. He promiſes himſelf great delight in his ſervice; this work of praiſe ſhall be his preſent reward. My ſoul ſhall be ſatisfied as with marrow and fatneſs; the moſt delicious viands to the taſte would not be ſo grateful, as to his ſoul this happy communion with God, whilſt his mouth praiſed him with joyful lips. Note, There is a complacence and inward ſatisfaction to be enjoyed in God's love and ſervice, compared with which the higheſt gratifications of ſenſe are poor and inſipid.

4. By night as well as day, on this pleaſing ſubject his thoughts continually dwelt. When I remember thee on my bed; lying down to reſt, and waking up in the morning, God was laſt and firſt in his thoughts; and meditate on thee in the night-watches; when his eyes were kept waking that he could not ſleep, he employed the hours of darkneſs in contemplation, that more than recompenſed the loſt repoſe.

7. Becauſe thou haſt been my help, therefore [h] in the ſhadow of thy wings will I rejoice. 8. My ſoul followeth hard after thee: [i] thy right hand upholdeth me. 9. But thoſe that ſeek my ſoul to deſtroy it, ſhall go into the lower parts of the earth. 10. [k] † They ſhall fall by the ſword, they ſhall be a portion for foxes. 11. But the king ſhall rejoice in God, [l] every one that ſweareth by him ſhall glory: but the mouth of them that ſpeak lies ſhall be ſtopped.

h Pſ. lxi. 4.
i Cant. ii. 6.
k Jer. xviii. 21.
† Heb. They ſhall make him run out like water, by the hands of the ſword.
l Deut. vi. 13. Iſa. xlv. 23. & lxv. 16.

v. 7—11. Reſolved to praiſe, he wanted not abundant matter for his ſong.

1. His experience of paſt ſupport, and confidence of preſent help, afforded cauſe of rejoicing. Thou haſt been my help, and wilt ſave me to the uttermoſt, therefore under the ſhadow of thy wings, where, as the chickens ſhelter themſelves from danger, and are refreſhed with the vital warmth, my ſoul is comfortably lodged, will I rejoice. My ſoul followeth hard after thee, in prayer, meditation, and every means of grace; but all my own endeavours ſecure not my ſtability: thy right hand upholdeth me, by which alone I am ſupported and ſtrengthened, to run and not be weary, and to walk and not be faint. Note, (1.) They who would cleave to God faithfully, are called upon to follow hard after him in the means of grace and the path of duty. (2.) Our ſtrength for the one or other is not in ourſelves but from him, without which our feet would quickly ſtumble, our hearts grow dead, and our lips be ſealed up in ſilence, and forget to pray or praiſe.

2. He could triumph in his enemies certain ruin, which he foreſaw; though they aimed at his life, they ruſhed on their own death; the grave was opened for them, hell enlarged its mouth to receive them, the ſword of God's judgment was unſheathed, and on the mountains of Gilboa their carcaſes ſoon fell, and, unburied, remained a portion for foxes and every beaſt of the foreſt. Note, All who are the enemies of Chriſt and his kingdom muſt expect to ſhare with theſe in their deſtruction, Rev. xix. 17, 18.

3. He exults as if already upon the throne, becauſe he knew it was ſure to him. The king ſhall rejoice in God; though an exile, an outlaw, yet in the divine deſignation a king, and joyful in God, when every worldly comfort failed: it was enough if he had his favour, this ſhould make him more than conqueror. Perhaps the king Meſſiah is intended, rejoicing in God becauſe of his people's ſalvation, and who may therefore well rejoice with him. Note, Though the child of God is now exerciſed with variety of trials, he is born for a throne, and may exult in the aſſured proſpect of it.

4. He is happy to ſee the joy of God's people on his advancement and the confuſion of his enemies. Every one that ſweareth by him, which is one religious act, put for the whole worſhip and ſervice of God, theſe godly ſouls ſhall glory in God for his mercy to them in raiſing David to the throne: but the mouth of them that ſpeak lies ſhall be ſtopped; Saul's courtiers, who had traduced him, and all who had propagated falſehood to aſperſe his character; theſe ſhall be ſilenced through fear, confounded with ſhame, or cut off by death, and their mouth ſtopped in the duſt. Note, (1.) It is the comfort of the redeemed that their Lord is exalted, and when they ſhall ſee him on the great white throne, they ſhall lift up their heads with joy. (2.) Lying lips will be ſhortly ſilenced, and all the maligners of Chriſt's church and people be aſtoniſhed when they behold them ſet down with him on his throne, and they themſelves trembling at their feet.

PSALM LXIV.

There is no reſt for David from his enemies; therefore, 1. He prays to God to preſerve him from their malicious deſigns, ver. 1, 2. 2. He gives a very ill character of them, ver. 3—6. 3. By the ſpirit of prophecy he foretels their deſtruction, which would redound to the glory of God and the encouragement of his people, ver. 7—10. Thus was the Son of David perſecuted, but his foes at laſt are made his footſtool.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. [a] HEAR my voice, O God, in my prayer; preſerve my life from fear of the enemy. 2. Hide me from the ſecret counſel of the wicked; from the inſurrection of the workers of iniquity: 3. [b] Who whet their tongue like a ſword, and [c] bend their bows to ſhoot their arrows, even bitter words: 4. That they may ſhoot in ſecret at the perfect: ſuddenly do they ſhoot at him, and fear not. 5. [d] They encourage themſelves in an evil matter: they commune † of laying ſnares privily, they ſay, [e] Who ſhall ſee them? 6. [f] They ſearch out iniquities, ‡ they accompliſh a diligent ſearch: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart is deep.

a Pſ. xxvii. 7.
b Ibid. xi. 2. & lvii. 4.
c Ibid. lviii. 7. Jer. ix. 3. d Prov. i. 11.
† Heb. To hide ſnares.
e Pſ. x. 11. & lix. 7.
f Dan. vi. 4.
‡ Or, we are conſumed by what they have thoroughly ſearched.

1—6. We have here,

1. David in fear crying unto God for protection and ſafety. Secret counſels and open inſurrections of the wicked, who ſtuck at nothing to carry their point, expoſed his life to danger great and imminent; to God therefore he applies, that he may be hid from the gathering ſtorm, v. 1, 2. Note, The faithful have their fears, and ſometimes may find their hearts tremble when death ſternly approaches them; but they have one who can deliver them from every bondage of fear.

2. He opens before God the wickedneſs of his enemies, as a plea for protection from them. With lies ſharp as a ſword, and inſinuations malignant as a poiſoned arrow, v. 3. they ſhot at him, though perfectly innocent of every charge they laid againſt him: in ſecret they watched the opportunity, or eager to embrace it ſuddenly let fly, fearleſs of confutation, and confident of ſucceſs; or impiouſly daring, caſt off all fear of God, v. 4. Strengthening each other's hands in wickedneſs, they conſulted how to deſtroy him privately, and pleaſed themſelves with the atheiſtical conceit, that even God's eye could not diſcover them, v. 5. Sollicitous to pick up ſome ſhadow of accuſation, with diligent ſearch they ſought to find ſome evil in him, or to ſuborn witneſſes againſt him; and in the depth of a heart, full of malignity and wickedneſs, contrived how to blaſt his character, or to rob him of his life. Note, (1.) The people of God have been in every age the butt of the malignant tongue, and bitter words of reproach and infamy have been liberally ſhot forth againſt them. (2.) Though no man is abſolutely perfect in himſelf, yet they who are accepted in the Redeemer, and have the truth of grace in their heart, are compleat in him, and therefore hated of the world, who cannot bear their holy and heavenly converſation. (3.) Againſt a lying tongue there is no defence. (4.) Daring ſinners harden each other; and having caſt off God's government, would fain flatter themſelves they can elude his omniſcience, and promiſe themſelves impunity in their iniquities. (5.) They who are maliciouſly bent on miſchief, ſtick at no pains to accompliſh their deſigns; how few chriſtians ſerve their Lord ſo aſſiduouſly, heart and hand, as the devil's ſervants do their maſter?

7. But [g] God ſhall ſhoot at them with an arrow, ſuddenly ſhall they be wounded. 8. So [h] they ſhall make their own tongue to fall upon themſelves: [i] all that ſee them, ſhall flee away. 9. And [k] all men ſhall fear, [l] and ſhall declare the work of God; for they ſhall wiſely conſider of his doing. 10. [m] The righteous ſhall be glad in the LORD, and ſhall truſt in him; and all the upright in heart ſhall glory.

[g] Pſ. vii. 12, 13.
[h] Prov. xii. 13.
[i] Rev. xviii. 10.
[k] Pſ. lii. 6. Rev. xi. 13.
[l] Jer. l. 28.
[m] Pſal. lviii. 10.

v. 7—10. Though the wicked ſay, God ſhall not ſee, he will awfully convince them of their folly.

1. By his judgments. God ſhall ſhoot at them with an arrow, ſuddenly ſhall they be wounded: one of his arrows ſhall do more terrible execution than all theirs; it ſhall pierce their hearts, and lay them dead at his feet, in the midſt of their falſe and fatal ſecurity, v. 7. So they ſhall make their own tongue to fall upon themſelves; the curſes they have utterred againſt the innocent ſhall return upon their own heads. Note, (1.) When God ſtrikes, he ſtrikes home, and there is no eſcape. (2.) The horrid imprecations of the paſſionate and prophane, bring upon their own ſouls that damnation they ſo impiouſly and raſhly denounce on others.

2. The effects of theſe judgments would be great; fear of their plagues ſhall make beholders flee to ſave themſelves from periſhing among them, v. 8. All that ſee it, ſtruck with conviction, ſhall conſider, and own God's righteous vengeance, and declare it as an admonition to the riſing generation, v. 9. The righteous will be glad at beholding God glorified, and ſhall rejoice in his ſalvation, thus manifeſted for them; and by preſent experience of his gracious interpoſition, be encouraged to truſt him in all future dangers. Note, (1.) It is wiſdom to profit by others harms. (2.) Many a warning is loſt by inconſideration. (3.) The perſecutors of God's people ſhould read and learn, and tremble, whilſt the door of hope is yet open. (4.) Though the miſery of an enemy, ſimply conſidered, cannot be a good man's delight; yet to be reſcued from the oppreſſor, and to ſee God's righteous judgments executed, is juſt matter of joy. (5.) They who make God their truſt, ſhall find him their glory.

PSALM LXV.

In this pſalm we are directed to give God the glory of his power and goodneſs, which appears, 1. In the kingdom of grace, ver. 1. Hearing prayer, ver. 2. Pardoning ſin, ver. 3. Satisfying the ſouls of the people, ver. 4. Protecting and ſupporting them, ver. 5. 2. In the kingdom of providence, fixing the mountains, ver. 6. Calming the ſea, ver. 7. Preſerving the regular ſucceſſion of day and night, ver. 8. And making the earth fruitful, ver. 9—13. Theſe are bleſſings we are all indebted to God for, and for which we owe the tribute of praiſe.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm and ſong of David.

1. PRAISE † waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion: and unto thee ſhall the vow be performed. 2. O thou [a] that heareſt prayer, [b] unto thee ſhall all fleſh come. 3. ‡ Iniquities prevail againſt me; as for our tranſgreſſions, thou ſhalt purge them away. 4. [c] Bleſſed is the man whom thou chooſeſt, and cauſeſt to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: [d] we ſhall be ſatisfied with the goodneſs of thy houſe, even of thy holy temple. 5. By terrible things in righteouſneſs, wilt thou anſwer us, O God of our ſalvation: who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the ſea.

† Heb. Is ſilent, Pſ. lxii. 1.
[a] Dan. ix. 20.
[b] Pſ. lxvi. 24.
‡ Heb. Words, or matters of iniquities.
[c] Pſ. xxxiii. 12. & lxxxiv. 4.
[d] Pſ. xxxvi. 8.

v. 1—5. The Pſalmiſt here, as the mouth of the congregation, addreſſes his prayer to God.

1. He aſcribes glory to him. Praiſe waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion; thy people there, expecting thy mercies, are ready to meet them with ſongs of thankſgiving: or the words may be rendered, to thee belong ſilence and praiſe; ſilent expectation under every difficulty and trial, and entire acquieſcence in thy holy will, and praiſe the tribute due for ſure deliverance: unto thee ſhall the vow be performed, which was made in their diſtreſs; and on the gracious anſwer given to their prayer, ſhould be with delight rendered unto God. Note, (1.) Patient expectation ſhall be ſucceeded with joyful praiſe. (2.) When we vow unto God, let us be ſpeedy to pay.

2. He adores him as the prayer-hearing God. O thou that heareſt prayer, ever ready to anſwer, yea, more ready to hear than we to pray, unto thee ſhall all fleſh come, engaged by the fame of thy grace, encouraged by the promiſes of thy word, and the experience of thy people.

3. He expreſſes his confidence in God's pardoning grace. Iniquities prevail againſt me; the words of iniquity, the malicious aſperſions of his enemies, or the indwelling corruptions of his own heart, that roſe up to condemn him; but as for our tranſgreſſions, thou ſhalt purge them away, how great ſoever they have been, whether his own or thoſe of God's people, he knew the atoning blood would purge their conſciences, and wipe away the guilt of all their ſins. Note, (1.) Though at times iniquities may prevail againſt us, we may not deſpair, nor be driven from God, but to him: if any man ſin, there is ſtill an advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, and he is the propitiation for our ſins. (2.) The more we ſee of our own guilt and ſinfulneſs, the more are we bound to admire and adore the tranſcendent mercy of a pardoning God.

4. He declares the bleſſedneſs of God's choſen, who were admitted into his courts, and favoured with a ſenſe of his love, v. 4. There the trueſt ſatisfaction was to be found; the goodneſs of his houſe, and the comforts of his worſhip, would abundantly refreſh their ſouls, v. 5. Note, (1.) It is not our deſert, but God's gracious choice, that brings any ſoul near to him; till he draws, we cannot run after him. (2.) Communion with God is man's greateſt happineſs. (3.) They who would enjoy God's preſence, muſt draw near to him in the ordinances of his worſhip, and be among the conſtant attendants at his temple. (4.) Though nothing on earth beſide can ſatisfy an immortal ſoul, God is the ſufficient portion of his people.

5. He expects to ſee the deſtruction of all their enemies. By terrible things in righteouſneſs, wilt thou anſwer us, O God of our ſalvation; by juſt judgments inflicted on our foes, and merciful interpoſitions manifeſted in our behalf, wherein thy hand will be ſeen as the God of our ſalvation; and this will engage the truſt of all thy people, wherever diſperſed, or however diſtreſſed: who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are far off upon the ſea; the Iſrael of God, whether on ſea or land, or driven to the moſt diſtant corner, making him their confidence, find him a ſure refuge. Note, (1.) The enemies of God's people are regarded as rebels againſt himſelf, and will be made to tremble under his terrible arm. (2.) None that truly truſted in God, or cried to him in faith, could ever complain of diſappointment.

6. Which by his ſtrength ſetteth faſt the mountains; [e] being girded with power. 7. [f] Which ſtilleth the noiſe of the ſeas, the noiſe of their waves, [g] and the tumult of the people. 8. They alſo that dwell in the uttermoſt parts are afraid at thy tokens: thou makeſt the out-goings of the morning and evening to rejoice. 9. Thou viſiteſt the earth, [h] and † watereſt it: thou greatly enricheſt it with the river of God which is full of water: thou prepareſt them corn, when thou haſt ſo provided for it. 10. Thou watereſt the ridges thereof abundantly: thou ‡ ſettleſt the furrows thereof: thou § makeſt it ſoft with ſhowers, thou bleſſeſt the ſpringing thereof. 11. Thou crowneſt the year with thy goodneſs, and thy paths drop fatneſs. 12. They drop upon the paſtures of the wilderneſs: and the little hills ‖ rejoice on every ſide. 13. The paſtures are clothed with flocks; [i] the valleys alſo are covered over with corn; they ſhout for joy, they alſo ſing.

[e] Pſal. xciii. 1.
[f] Pſ. lxxxix. 9. & cvii. 29.
[g] Ibid. lxxvi. 10. Iſa. xvii. 12, 13.
[h] Pſ. lxviii. 9. & civ. 13.
† Or, after thou haſt made it deſire rain.
‡ Or, cauſeſt rain to deſcend upon.
§ Or, diſſolveſt it.
‖ Heb. Are girded with joy.
[i] Iſa. lv. 12.

v. 6—13. It is an encouraging conſideration to the people of God to behold the works of his power and providence around them, as an engagement always to truſt him as able to ſave to the uttermoſt.

1. By his power the mountains are ſet faſt on their wide baſes; and like to them his church is fixed and immoveable: ſooner may the mountains be overturned than his promiſes to his people.

2. At his voice the ſtormy billows peacefully ſubſide, and the more tumultuous inſurrections of the wicked are ſtilled; in his hands are the hearts of all men, and therefore his faithful ones need not fear the loudeſt threatnings.

3. The tokens of God's judgments on the wicked, or the daily evidences of his wiſdom and power in the ſucceſſion of day and night, make the utmoſt parts of the earth to reverence his majeſty; whilſt the out-goings of the morning and evening rejoice to be made inſtruments of diſplaying his glory; or from eaſt to weſt God diffuſes gladneſs, by ſending forth his light and truth in the goſpel to the benighted world.

4. God's providential care appears in the rain and fruitful ſeaſons he beſtows. Thou viſiteſt the earth with kind regard, and watereſt it when parched with drought: thou greatly enricheſt it with the river of God, the clouds of heaven, which is full of water: thou prepareſt them corn, by moiſtening the ſeed ſown with ſhowers, when thou haſt, or becauſe thou haſt ſo prepared it, to drink in the rain and drops of dew. Thou watereſt the ridges thereof abundantly, on which the corn is ſcattered: thou ſettleſt the furrows thereof: thou makeſt it ſoft with ſhowers, thou bleſſeſt the ſpringing thereof, cauſing it to take root, and ſhoot upwards vigorouſly. In conſequence of which, thou crowneſt the year with thy goodneſs, cauſing a plentiful harveſt, and thy paths, the heavens, whence the rain deſcends, drop fatneſs, fertilizing the ſoil, and diffuſing plenty around. They drop upon the paſtures of the wilderneſs, to produce graſs to fatten the cattle: and the little hills rejoice on every ſide, echoing with lowing herds and bleating flocks, that feed on their ſides. The paſtures are clothed with flocks; ſo thick covered, and affording ſuch plenty of food; the valleys alſo beneath are covered over with corn; they ſhout for joy, they alſo ſing; rejoicing to ſupply the wants of man, or filled with the joyous ſongs of mowers and reapers, gathering in the welcome harveſt. Note, (1.) The heart of man, till watered with the dew of heavenly influences, is like the barren ground. (2.) Where God ſows the ſeed of eternal life, he waters it abundantly, and bleſſes the increaſe. (3.) The hardeſt heart grows tender, and ſuſceptible of the deepeſt impreſſions, when God prepares and ſoftens it. (4.) The church is a paſture filled with Chriſt's flock, and there his praiſes are echoed on every ſide. (5.) If plenty crown the year, let it awake our gratitude to him whoſe clouds drop down fatneſs. (6.) There is not a morſel of bread goes into our mouths but ſpeaks God's goodneſs and demands our praiſe.

PSALM LXVI.

This is a thankſgiving pſalm, deſigned for the Iſrael of God in all ages. They praiſe God, 1. For his greatneſs and glory, manifeſt in creation and providence, ver. 1—5. 2. For ſpecial mercies to his choſen people, ver. 6—12. And then, 3. The pſalmiſt praiſeth God for his own experiences of his goodneſs to him in particular, eſpecially in anſwering his prayers, ver. 13—20.

¶ To the chief muſician, A ſong or pſalm.

† Heb. All the earth.

1. MAKE a joyful noiſe unto God, † all ye lands.
2. Sing forth the honour of his name: make his praiſe glorious. 3. Say unto God, How terrible art thou in thy works! through the greatneſs of thy power ſhall thine enemies ‡ ſubmit themſelves unto thee. 4. [a] All the earth ſhall worſhip thee, and ſhall ſing unto thee, they ſhall ſing to thy name. Selah. 5. [b] Come and ſee the works of God: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men. 6. [c] He turned the ſea into dry land: [d] they went through the flood on foot, there did we rejoice in him. 7. He ruleth by his power for ever, [e] his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themſelves. Selah.

‡ Or, yield feigned obedience, Pſ. xviii. 44. & lxxxi. 15.
a Ibid. lxvii. 3. Dan. vii. 14.
b Pſal. xlvi. 8.
c Ex. xiv. 21.
d Joſh. iii. 14.
e Pſ. xi. 4.

v. 1—7. We have here,

1. The perſons called upon to unite in the praiſes of God. All lands, not merely the people of Iſrael, but all the ends of the earth; to whom, in the fulneſs of time, God would ſend the knowledge of his grace. Note, We have reaſon to bleſs God in this land, for being numbered among thoſe to whom the word of ſalvation hath been ſent, and with whom it abides.

2. The manner of their praiſes. They muſt make a joyful noiſe, ſing aloud their Creator and Redeemer's praiſes, proclaim his glory; and in their lives, as well as lips, ſhew forth his honour.

3. The reaſons why they ſhould thus praiſe him. [1.] Becauſe of his terrible works and the greatneſs of his power, manifeſted in the abaſement of his enemies and theirs, v. 3. Note, Every antichriſtian foe will be made ſhortly to bow at the feet of the faithful, and to know that God hath loved them. [2.] For the mercies manifeſted to his church of old; the remembrance of which ſhould be ever new; ſuch as was the deliverance of Iſrael from Egypt, when the ſea opened a way for the redeemed to paſs over; there did we rejoice in thee. Note, Our father's mercies are our own, and ſhould awaken our praiſes. [3.] Becauſe the ſame protection ſhall be for ever vouchſafed to all God's Iſrael. As God ever rules, and ever ſees the devices of their enemies, he will diſappoint them, to the confuſion of their proud and rebellious foes. Note, Since all power is given to Chriſt in heaven and on earth, his people may be aſſured no powers of darkneſs ſhall be able to hurt them, but ſhall with joy ſee them ſhortly put under his feet and theirs for ever.

† Heb. Putteth.
f Pſal. xvii. 3.
g Iſa. xlviii. 10. Zech. xiii. 9. 1 Pet. i. 7.
h Lam. i. 13.
i Iſa. li. 23.
k Ibid. xliii. 2.

8. O bleſs our God, ye people, and make the voice of his praiſe to be heard. 9. Which † holdeth our ſoul in life, and ſuffereth not our feet to be moved. 10. For [f] thou, O God, haſt proved us: [g] thou haſt tried us, as ſilver is tried. 11. [h] Thou broughteſt us into the net, thou laidſt affliction upon our loins. 12. [i] Thou haſt cauſed men to ride over our heads, [k] we went through fire and through water: but thou broughteſt us out into a ‡ wealthy place.

‡ Heb. Moiſt.

v. 8—12. They who have an intereſt in God, as their covenant God, ought to make their voices of grateful praiſe to be heard. Particularly,

1. For their lives; not only the preſervation of bodily life, but more eſpecially for the ſpiritual life Chriſt hath beſtowed and maintains, and for the eternal life to which he will ſhortly bring them, and ſuffereth not our feet to be moved; though ſore thruſt at by temptation, and hard beſet with corruption, yet, by the power of Almighty grace, our ſouls are preſerved from final and fatal apoſtacy.

2. For the bleſſed iſſue of their trials. Many an enemy had harraſſed the land, they had been taken priſoners in the net of their oppreſſors, had ſuffered a variety of afflictions, been trampled upon and inſulted by the Philiſtines and neighbouring nations; but it was to prove, not deſtroy them; and therefore they were delivered, and public tranquillity and plenty reſtored to them. Thus the church of Chriſt hath been alſo in the furnace of affliction, under the man of ſin, in Rome pagan and papal, has paſſed through variety of tortures by fire and water, terrible as theſe devouring elements, and been often reduced to the greateſt diſtreſs, in order to prove the patience of the ſaints; but God will bring them into a wealthy or large place; as at the reformation, when true religion reared its head; and as will be more eminently the caſe, when at laſt Chriſt ſhall come and reign over his ſaints gloriouſly. This alſo is the ſtate of every believer, who paſſes through temptation, painful as the action of fire, and deep as the floods; but the iſſue ſhall be peace; his graces, thus exerciſed, ſhall ſhine the brighter, and into his wealthy place, even a manſion in eternal glory, will he be brought; when he hath ſuffered a little while for Chriſt, he ſhall reign with him for ever.

13. [l] I will go into thy houſe with burnt-offerings: [m] I will pay thee my vows, 14. Which my lips have † uttered, and my mouth hath ſpoken when I was in trouble. 15. I will offer unto thee burnt-ſacrifices of ‡ fatlings, with the incenſe of rams: I will offer bullocks with goats. Selah. 16. [n] Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my ſoul. 17. I cried unto him with my mouth, and he was extolled with my tongue. 18. [o] If I regard iniquity in my heart: the Lord will not hear me. 19. But verily [p] God hath heard me: he hath attended to the voice of my prayer. 20. Bleſſed be God, which hath not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.

l Pſal. c. 4.
m Eccleſ. v. 4.
† Heb. Opened.
‡ Heb. Marrow.
n Pſ. xxxiv. 11.
o Prov. xxviii. 9. Iſa. i. 15. Joh. ix. 31. Jam. iv. 3.
p Pſ. cxvi. 1. Prov. xv. 29.

v. 13—20. The pſalmiſt here, in the perſon of the faithful, declares the effects which God's grace and protection would have upon them.

1. He and they would offer the nobleſt ſacrifices appointed under the law, the fatteſt beaſts ſhall burn on God's altar, according to the vows they had made in trouble. Note, Since Chriſt's one oblation was offered, all other ſacrifices of blood are aboliſhed; but ſacrifices of praiſe will never ceaſe aſcending from every faithful heart, and will go up with acceptance in the ſmoak which ariſes from the Saviour's ſacrifice, making all our offerings a ſweet-ſmelling ſavour to God.

2. He calls on all that fear God to come and hear what God had done; what wonders of grace in pardoning, ſanctifying, comforting, and ſaving his ſinful ſoul, v. 16. and this in anſwer to his faithful and fervent prayer, v. 17. which God, who knew the ſimplicity of his heart, v. 18. had heard and granted, v. 19. and for which he deſires ever to bleſs and praiſe him, as for all his mercies, v. 20 Note, (1.) We are bound for God's glory, and the encouragement of his people, to communicate our experience of his goodneſs; not as vain of our mercies, as if the favourites of heaven, but as thankfully teſtifying our gratitude to him from whom we have received all. (2.) There can be no comfort obtained from prayer, nor any well-grounded confidence entertained of God's acceptance of us, whilſt allowed and indulged iniquity remains in the heart. (3.) They who lift up holy hands, without wrath and doubting, may riſe from their knees continually bleſſing and praiſing God.

PSALM LXVII.

This pſalm is the church's prayer. 1. For proſperity, ver. 1. 2. For the converſion of the Gentiles, ver. 2, 3, 4, 5. 3. It deſcribes happy and glorious times when God ſhall do this, ver. 6, 7. And herein David ſpoke by the ſpirit of prophecy, foretelling the glorious eſtate of the Chriſtian church, in which Jews and Gentiles ſhould be united.

¶ To the chief muſician[a] on Neginoth, A pſalm or ſong.

1.[b] GOD be merciful unto us, and bleſs us: and [c] cauſe his face to ſhine upon us. Selah. 2.
That thy way may be known upon earth, [d] thy ſaving health among all nations. 3. [e] Let the people praiſe thee, O God; let all the people praiſe thee. 4. O let the nations be glad, and ſing for joy: for [f] thou ſhalt judge the people righteouſly, and † govern the nations upon earth. Selah. 5. Let the people praiſe thee, O God; let all the people praiſe thee. 6. [g] Then ſhall the earth yield her increaſe; and God, even our own God ſhall bleſs us. 7. God ſhall bleſs us, and all the ends of the earth ſhall fear him.

[a] Pſ. iv. tit.
[b] Numb. vi. 25.
[c] Pſ. iv. 6.
[d] Luke ii. 31.
[e] Pſ. lxvi. 4.
[f] Ibid. xcvi. 13.
† Heb. Lead.
[g] Pſ. lxxxv. 12.

v. 1—7. David, as a lively member of the church of the redeemed, pours forth his prayers to God for their proſperity, and that deſirable event, the converſion of the Gentile world.

1. He prays in particular for the faithful. God be merciful unto us, and forgive and pardon us, as ſinners ever need to pray, and bleſs us; which comprehends all that we can aſk or think, and God ſees uſeful for us: and lift up the light of thy countenance upon us; comforting our ſouls and chearing us, cauſing the ſun of righteouſneſs to ariſe with healing in his wings: and theſe are requeſts which every believer will never ceaſe to offer for himſelf and his brethren.

2. He prays for a diffuſion of goſpel light and grace throughout the world, that all nations might know his ſaving health revealed in Jeſus Chriſt, and his way of juſtification through his blood and righteouſneſs, and of ſanctification by his ſpirit.

3. That in conſequence thereof they might be led to praiſe God, as for the light and truth diſpenſed, ſo for the protection and grace promiſed. For thou ſhalt judge righteouſly, vindicating thy redeemed from every charge laid againſt them, and ſaving them from every enemy, and govern the nations upon earth, who ſhall be happy under thy ſafe and gentle ſway. Note, (1.) The ſervice of Chriſt is the perfect freedom and happineſs of his people. (2.) We ſhall have cauſe to all eternity to bleſs the day when firſt our neck was bowed to his eaſy yoke.

4. Great he foreſees will be the increaſe of the church, under the Divine bleſſing, by the preaching of the goſpel. The earth, the various nations of it, ſhall yield a plenteous harveſt of converted ſouls; and a covenant God for ever bleſs his people, putting his fear into their hearts, and be their everlaſting confidence and joy. Note, (1.) When we can ſay, God is our God, we may confidently add, he ſhall bleſs us. (2.) They who are intereſted in his everlaſting love, have the increaſe of earth, and every creature comfort, heightened by a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt in them.

P S A L M LXVIII.

This pſalm is ſuppoſed to have been compoſed on bringing the ark to Zion from the houſe of Obed-edom; and looks forward to Chriſt's aſcenſion, his ſitting on the throne of his glory, and his calling the Gentiles into his church. 1. David begins with prayer, both againſt God's enemies, ver. 1, 2. and for his people, ver. 3. 2. He proceeds to praiſe, calling upon all to praiſe God, ver. 4, 26, 32. (1.) For his greatneſs and goodneſs, ver. 4—6. (2.) For the wonderful works he had wrought for Iſrael, ver. 7—14. (3.) For his ſpecial preſence in his church, ver. 15—17. (4.) For the aſcenſion of Chriſt, ver. 18. and the ſalvation of his people by him, ver. 19, 20. (5.) For the victories which Chriſt would obtain over his enemies, and the favours he would beſtow upon his church, ver. 21—28. (6.) For the enlargement of the church by the acceſſion of the Gentiles to it, ver. 29—31. And ſo he concludes the pſalm with an awful acknowledgment of the glory and grace of God, ver. 32—35.

¶ To the chief muſician,

A pſalm or ſong of David.

1.[a] LET God ariſe, let his enemies be ſcattered: let them alſo that hate him, flee † before him.
2. [b] As ſmoke is driven away, ſo drive them away: [c] as wax melteth before the fire, ſo let the wicked periſh at the preſence of God. 3. But [d] let the righteous be glad:
let them rejoice before God, yea, let them ‡ exceedingly rejoice. 7. [e] Sing unto God, ſing praiſes to his name:
extol him [f] that rideth upon the heavens by his name JAH, and rejoice before him. 5. [g] A father of the fatherleſs, and a judge of the widows, is God in his holy habitation. 6. [h] God ſetteth the ſolitary § in families:
[i] he bringeth out thoſe which are bound with chains, but [k] the rebellious dwell in a dry land.

[a] Numb. x. 35.
† Heb. From his face.
[b] Iſa. ix. 18. Hoſ. xiii. 3.
[c] Pſ. xcvii. 5. Mic. i. 4.
[d] Pſ. xxxii. 11. & lviii. 10.
‡ Heb. With gladneſs.
[e] Pſal. lxvi. 4.
[f] Deut. xxxiii. 26. Ver. 33.
[g] Pſal. x. 14, 18. & cxlvi. 9.
[h] 1 Sam. ii. 5. Pſ. cxiii. 9.
§ Heb. In a houſe.
[i] Pſ. cvii. 10. & cxlvi. 7. Acts xii. 7, &c.
[k] Pſal. cvii. 34, 40.

v. 1—6. We have here,

1. David's prayer for the diſperſion of the enemies of God and his people, and for the comfort and joy of his faithful ones. It may be conſidered alſo as prophetical of the Meſſiah's appearing, Let God incarnate ariſe, and let his enemies be ſcattered, the powers of earth or hell that oppoſe his kingdom in the world: Let them alſo that hate him, whether men or devils, flee before him, vanquiſhed by his Almighty arm; as ſmoke is driven away, ſo eaſily and thoroughly drive them away: as wax melteth before the fire, ſo let the wicked periſh at the preſence of God the Redeemer, when either in preſent judgments he ſhall viſit them, or in the great day of his appearing and glory, ariſe to conſume them with the brightneſs of his coming. But let the righteous, thoſe who are accepted in him, and counted righteous through him, be glad when they ſee his day: let them rejoice before God, in the preſent joy of his ſalvation, and in hope of the compleat redemption which awaits them, from ſin, death, and hell; yea, let them rejoice exceedingly, with exultation proportioned to the greatneſs of the ſalvation. Note, (1.) Though many ſtartle at the charge of haters of God, yet ſuch every diſobedient ſinner will be proved at laſt. (2.) Though we muſt rather pray for our enemy's converſion than deſtruction, yet when Chriſt's kingdom comes, which we are bound to pray for, his being glorified in their ruin will be our joy. (3.) Though ſinners are now never ſo obdurate, they will ſhortly be brought to their terrors, and their once fearleſs hearts fail as the ſmoke, and melt as the wax. (4.) However terrible it will be to the wicked world, God's people are ſure of comfort and ſafety when he ariſes to judgment.

2. He magnifies God as the king of heaven, the ſelf-exiſtent Jehovah; gracious to regard the fatherleſs and widows, to reſtore the deſolate families of his people, to looſe the priſoners bands, and make the rebellious pine with famine and miſery. Jeſus is this JAH, the ſelf-exiſtent, ſelf-ſufficient God, aſcended into the heavens, the object of the eternal praiſes of men and angels, the guardian of his afflicted church and people, raiſing up families of the faithful among the Gentiles that were ſolitary and deſolate; delivering the bondſmen of ſin and Satan from their chains, and bringing them into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God; but letting the rebellious ſinners, whether of Jews or Gentiles, or falſe profeſſors, to periſh in the dry land of ignorance, infidelity, and obſtinate impenitence.

7. O God, when [l] thou wenteſt forth before thy people;
when thou didſt march through the wilderneſs.
Selah. 8. [m] The earth ſhook, the heavens alſo dropped at the preſence of God: even Sinai itſelf was moved at the preſence of God, the God of Iſrael. 9. Thou, O God, didſt † ſend [n] a plentiful rain, whereby thou didſt confirm thine inheritance, when it was weary. 10. Thy congregation hath dwelt therein: [o] thou, O God, haſt prepared of thy goodneſs for the poor. 11. The Lord gave the word, great was the ‡ company of thoſe that publiſhed it. 12. [p] Kings of armies § did flee apace: and ſhe that tarried at home divided the ſpoil. 13. Though ye have lien [q] among the pots, [r] yet ſhall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with ſilver, and her feathers with yellow gold. 14. When the Almighty ſcattered kings ‖ in it, it was white as ſnow in Salmon.

[l] Judg. iv. 14.
[m] Exod. xix. 18. Judg. v. 4. Iſa. lxiv. 3.
† Heb. Shake out.
[n] Pſ. lxxviii. 24. 27.
[o] Ibid. lxxiv. 19.
‡ Heb. Army.
[p] Joſh. x. 16.
§ Heb. Did flee, did flee.
[q] Pſ. lxxxi. 6.
[r] Ibid. cv. 37.
‖ Or, for her, ſhe was, &c.

v. 7—14. God's wondrous works are here recorded to his glory, for his people's comfort; and they may be conſidered,

1. As a pleaſing retroſpect on paſt mercies. When from the houſe of their priſon delivered, God led their hoſts through the wilderneſs, v. 7. by the pillar and cloud brought them to Sinai's mount, where, in the moſt tremendous manner, his law was given to them, v. 8. provided for them by miracles of manna and water from the rock, when fainting in their march, and gave them at laſt an inheritance in the good land flowing with milk and honey, where his poor people found an abundant portion prepared for them of all good things, v. 9, 10. by his prophets, and divinely appointed miniſters, he taught them, encouraged them to ſerve him, and aſſured them on their fidelity they would be always victorious: and the event every way verified his promiſes; none, even the mightieſt kings, could withſtand them; and ſuch abundant ſpoil was gotten, that even the women who were at home were enriched by it, v. 11, 12. Thus, though in the brick-kilns of Egypt they had lain and ſoiled their beauty, now they ſhould ſhine in glory as the glowing feathers of the dove, v. 13. and, better than their outward riches, their victories, whilſt they awakened their thankfulneſs, brought them nearer to God, and made them white and pure as ſnow in Salmon.

2. As a glorious prophecy of the goſpel church, under their head Chriſt Jeſus, leading up his people from the bondage of ſin, and his oppreſſed church from the power of antichriſtian foes; as the captain of their ſalvation going before them, and by his word and ſpirit directing their march through this howling wilderneſs, the world that lieth in wickedneſs, v. 7.

At the promulgation of his goſpel the powers of earth were ſhaken; and before his preſence, the hearts of proud ſinners, though exalted as mountains in height, flowed down in lowlieſt abaſement, v. 8. By the plentiful effuſion of his Spirit in the miniſtration of the goſpel, the ſouls of weary and heavy-laden ſinners were refreſhed, v. 9. and, into his church admitted, dwelt with comfort there, where, with ſuch a profuſion of goodneſs, the bleſſings of pardon, grace, conſolation, glory, were prepared for every poor and periſhing ſoul, v. 10. By his apoſtles and miniſters, divinely commiſſioned, he gave the word, qualified them for their work, and accompanied their preaching with demonſtration of the Spirit; and multitudes, an army, as the word company may be rendered, readily engaged in the warfare, notwithſtanding all the dangers: even women, (the word preachers being of the feminine gender, and alluding to the women who ſung the victories of their generals) helped in the goſpel, v. 11. The powers of the heathen, though long perſecuting, were vanquiſhed by the word of truth; and their kings, converted, became nurſing fathers, whilſt the church, as a conqueror, divided the ſpoils, the ſouls of men reſcued from heatheniſm, and the power of Satan, v. 12. Long had theſe lain in the corruption and defilement of their fallen nature, as is the caſe of every ſinner, till ſaved by grace: but now were adorned with the garments of a Redeemer's righteouſneſs, bright as the ſilver wings of the dove, and beautiful in holineſs as her glowing feathers in the ſun, v. 13. And when the final day of recompence comes, and at the battle of Armageddon, Rev. xvi. 14—16. all oppoſing potentates ſhall finally be overthrown; then white as ſnow in Salmon ſhall the faithful ſhine for ever, perfect in holineſs.

15. The hill of God is as the hill of Baſhan, an high hill as the hill of Baſhan. 16. [s] Why leap ye, ye high hills? [t] this is the hill which God deſireth to dwell in, yea, the LORD will dwell in it for ever. 17. [u] The chariots of God are twenty thouſand, † even thouſands of angels: the LORD is among them as in Sinai, in the holy place. 18. [x] Thou haſt aſcended on high, [y] thou haſt led captivity captive: thou haſt received gifts ‡ for men; yea, [z] for the rebellious alſo, [a] that the LORD God might dwell among them. 19. Bleſſed be the LORD, [b] who [c] daily § loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our ſalvation. Selah. 20. He that is our God, is the God of ſalvation; and [d] unto God the LORD belong the iſſues from death. 21. But [e] God ſhall wound the head of his enemies: and the hairy ſcalp of ſuch a one as goeth on ſtill in his treſpaſſes.

[s] Pſ. cxiv. 4, 6.
[t] Pſ. ii. 6. & lxxxvii. 1. & cxxxii. 13, 14.
[u] Deut. xxxiii. 2. 2 Kings vi. 16, 17. Dan. vii. 10.
† Or, even many thouſands.
[x] Eph. iv. 8.
[y] Judg. v. 12. Iſa. xxxiii. 1.
‡ Heb. In the man.
[z] Rom v. 6. 1 Tim. i. 13, 15.
[a] Eph. iii. 17.
[b] Mal. iii. 10.
[c] Lam. iii. 23.
§ Or, beareth us up.
[d] Deut. xxxii. 39. Rev. i. 18.
[e] Pſ. cx. 6. Hab. iii. 13.

v. 15—21. We have here,

1. The ſtrength and ſtability of the church of Chriſt. High as Baſhan, fixed as the everlaſting mountains, v. 15. vain are all the efforts of the potentates of earth againſt it: though they threaten to overwhelm it, God's preſence in the midſt of her is a ſure protection, and for ever he will watch over, and preſerve her unhurt, v. 16.

2. Angelic hoſts are her conſtant guard; the thouſands of angels ſtand around their Lord in ſhining ranks, ready to obey his high commands, and miniſter to thoſe that are heirs of ſalvation.

3. The Lord Jeſus is aſcended up on high, to take the throne, and guide, govern, and preſerve his choſen; angels, principalities, and powers, being made ſubject unto him. He hath led captivity captive: like a conqueror, death, hell, and all the powers of darkneſs, bound in chains, follow his triumphant car: his people are delivered, and ſhout for victory. He hath received gifts for men, or, given gifts unto men, (See Eph. iv. 8.) whether miniſterial gifts, to qualify them for preaching his goſpel; or gifts of grace, which he beſtows on his people for ſtrength, comfort, and edification: yea, for the rebellious alſo, ſuch as all men are by nature and practice, till changed by divine grace, and made obedient to the faith; that the Lord God might dwell among them, as a reconciled God in Chriſt, maniſeſting his favour and love to thoſe who were once rebel ſinners, making them fellow-citizens with the ſaints, and of the houſhold of God. Note, (1.) We can never enough admire and adore the triumphs, grace, and glory of our aſcended Saviour. (2.) A pardoned rebel never felt ſuch gratitude to his generous prince, as the pardoned ſinner ought to feel towards his gracious Lord.

4. He is glorified in the ſalvation of his people, for which they ever bleſs and praiſe him. He loadeth us with benefits, ſpiritual and temporal; or, he will bear us up, carry us in his arms, that we may be ſafe. He is our God, ever intereſting himſelf for us; the God of our ſalvation, who hath begun, and will perfect it; and unto him belong the iſſues from death; he will preſerve his people from the deadly devices of their foes, Satan, the world, and ſin; will open a door of hope to them in the grave; and, in the reſurrection-day, give them victory over death for ever. Note, (1.) God is never weary in doing us good; why then ſhould we ever faint in his praiſe or ſervice? (2.) They who have an intereſt in a covenant God, have their ſalvation in eternity ſecured; and death to them is diſarmed of all its terrors.

5. He will deſtroy every enemy at laſt. The head of the old ſerpent ſhall be finally bruiſed, and the obſtinately impenitent, who have joined the devil and his angels in their rebellion, ſhall be thruſt down with them into the place of torment, v. 21.

22. The LORD ſaid, I will bring again from Baſhan, I will bring my people again [f] from the depths of the ſea: 23. That [g] thy foot may be † dipped in the blood of thine enemies, and [h] the tongue of thy dogs in the ſame. 24. They have ſeen thy goings, O God, even the goings of my God, my king, in the ſanctuary. 25. [i] The ſingers went before, the players on inſtruments followed after, amongſt them were the damſels playing with timbrels. 26. Bleſs ye God in the congregations, even the LORD, ‡ from [k] the fountain of Iſrael. 27. There is [l] little Benjamin with their ruler, the princes of Judah, § and their council, the princes of Zebulun, and the princes of Naphtali. 28. [m] Thy God hath commanded thy ſtrength: ſtrengthen, O God, that which thou haſt wrought for us. 29. Becauſe of thy temple at Jeruſalem, [n] ſhall kings bring preſents unto thee. 30. Rebuke || the company of ſpearmen, [o] the multitude of the bulls, with the calves of the people, till every one ſubmit himſelf with pieces of ſilver: ſcatter thou the people that delight in war. 31. [p] Princes ſhall come out of Egypt, [q] Ethiopia ſhall ſoon [r] ſtretch out her hands unto God.

[f] Exod. xiv. 22.
[g] Pſ. lviii. 10.
† Or, red.
[h] 1 Kings xxi. 19.
[i] 1 Chron. xiii. 8. & xv. 16. Pſ. xlvii. 5.
‡ Or, Ye that are of the fountain.
[k] Deut. xxxiii. 28. Iſa. xlviii. 1.
[l] 1 Sam. ix. 21.
§ Or, with their company.
[m] Pſ. xlii. 8. & xliv. 4.
[n] 1 Kings x. 10, 25. 2 Chron. xii. 23. Pſ. lxxii. 10. Iſa. lx. 16.
|| Heb. The beaſt of the reeds. Jer. li. 32, 33.
[o] Pſ. xxii. 12.
[p] Iſa. xix. 19, 21.
[q] Pſ. lxxii. 9. Iſa. xlv. 14. Zeph. iii. 10. Acts viii. 27.
[r] Pſ. xliv. 20.

v. 22—31. Such as were the former deliverances of God's people, ſuch, and more eminent, ſhall be the ſalvation and glory of Chriſt's church.

1. They ſhall be brought from Baſhan, as Iſrael from the mighty army of Og, victorious over every oppreſſing and perſecuting power, whether Pagan, Mahometan, or Papal; and ſhall come up from the depths of their diſtreſſes, under the leading of the great Captain of their ſalvation, v. 22. Such a vaſt ſlaughter ſhall be made among their foes, (See Rev. xiv. 20.) that they ſhall wade in a ſea of blood, and the dogs lap it as water; in ſuch abundance ſhall it be ſhed. Note, However oppreſſed the cauſe of Chriſt may be for a while, the triumphing of his foes is momentary, and their ruin near and terrible.

2. The people of God will celebrate this victory, as of old in the temple the Levites and ſingers magnified God on their ſucceſſes gained by the armies of Iſrael. They have ſeen thy goings, O God, how thou, my God and king, goeſt in the ſanctuary, maniſeſting his preſence in his church, and exerting his power for the ſalvation of his people, and the deſtruction of their foes. The apoſtles and preachers, as ſweet ſingers, proclaim the glad tidings of ſalvation, and all the congregations of the redeemed, without diſtinction of ſex or ſtation, male and female, princes and ſubjects, ſhall unite in the ſong of praiſe for goſpel mercies, flowing from the fountain of Iſrael, the incarnate Saviour, v. 26. Or little Benjamin may have ſome reference to Paul, the great apoſtle of the Gentiles, who was of that tribe, as Zebulun and Naphtali to the firſt apoſtles, who were chiefly of the land of Galilee, where theſe tribes lay; whilſt the princes of Judah, and their council, may ſignify the firſt goſpel churches and their miniſters, eſtabliſhed at Jeruſalem and in the neighbourhood.

3. They will depend on God for the perfecting his own work. Thy God hath commanded thy ſtrength; which may be conſidered as an apoſtrophe to the Meſſiah, ſtrengthened for the great work of redemption; or as the encouragement the pſalmiſt ſuggeſts to God's people. Since God, their God, hath commanded their ſtrength, they cannot fail, and therefore may be aſſured of an anſwer to their prayer, Strengthen, O God, that which thou haſt wrought for us; bring to a happy concluſion what is ſo glorioully begun. Note, (1.) All our ſpiritual ſtrength comes from God: whatever we enjoy, it is by his grace alone we are what we are. (2.) If we have experienced the ſupports of his arm, we muſt in faith continue to wait upon him, and may be aſſured he will ſtrengthen us unto the end.

4. They expect to ſee the ſpread of the Redeemer's kingdom univerſally, and the ſubdual of all his enemies. Becauſe of thy temple at Jeruſalem, ſhall kings bring preſents unto thee, becoming converts to the goſpel, and joining themſelves to the church of Chriſt; as when Conſtantine profeſſed Chriſtianity, and as hereafter will be ſeen, when the kingdoms of the earth ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord and his Chriſt. Princes from Egypt, the old enemy of God's people, ſhall make their ſubmiſſion; and ſuch will be the caſe, when the princes ſhall quit the communion of the church of Antichriſt, (See Rev. xi. 8. xviii. 4.) and Ethiopia, the moſt diſtant realms of the heathen, ſtretch out their hands unto God in prayer, or as laying hold on Jeſus's ſtrength to make peace with him, v. 31. and thoſe who will not bow to him, muſt periſh. The enemies of God, though ſtrongly armed, furious, and numerous as herds of bulls, and ſupported by a deluded people, kept like calves in ignorance and ſtupidity, will be rebuked, till every one ſubmit himſelf, be made to yield; or rather, as the words may ſignify, though glorying themſelves, or treading proudly, becauſe of their riches, they ſhall be brought low; and the people who delight in war, have long waged it againſt the ſaints, be finally and eternally ſcattered from the face of the earth, v. 30.

32. Sing unto God, [s] ye kingdoms of the earth: O ſing praiſes unto the LORD, Selah: 33. To him [t] that rideth upon the heaven of heavens, which were of old; lo, [u] he doth ſend out his voice, and that a mighty voice. 34. [x] Aſcribe ye ſtrength unto God: his excellency is over Iſrael, and his ſtrength is in the † clouds. 35. O God, [y] thou art terrible out of thy holy places, the God of Iſrael is he that giveth ſtrength and power unto his people: bleſſed be God.

[s] Rev. xi. 15.
[t] Pſ. xviii. 10. & civ. 3. Ver. 4.
[u] Ibid. xxix. 3, &c.
[x] Ibid. 1.
† Or, heavens.
[y] Pſ. xlv. 4.

v. 32—35. The pſalm concludes with an exhortation to the redeemed from the earth, to unite heart and voice, as in duty bound, in aſcribing glory to God their Redeemer.

1. As aſcended to his throne in the heavens, eſtabliſhed from eternity, and ruling over all, v. 33.

2. For the mighty efficacy of his goſpel, ſent forth into all lands, and working with irreſiſtible energy upon the ſouls of men.

3. For his operations of grace and providence towards his Iſrael. In him is everlaſting ſtrength; his excellency, all his glorious perfections, is over Iſrael, engaged for their comfort and ſupport; and his ſtrength is in the clouds: they are his inſtruments of vengeance; on them he went up to heaven, with them he ſhall deſcend to judgment.

4. For the awful viſitations on his enemies. O God, thou art terrible out of thy holy places; in preſent ſtrokes of vengeance, and eſpecially as ready to conſume the wicked with the brightneſs of his coming.

5. For the preſervation of his Iſrael. The God of Iſrael is he that giveth ſtrength and power unto his people; ſupports them under all difficulties, ſtrengthens them for their work, and enables them to perſevere in their fidelity. Bleſſed be God: let that Redeemer, whoſe grace alone works all for us, and in us, receive the praiſe of all.

PSALM LXIX.

David's troubles were typical of the Redeemer's ſorrows, of whoſe ſufferings, and the glory which followed, he here principally treats. 1. He complains of the great diſtreſs and trouble he was in, and earneſtly begs of God to relieve and ſuccour him, ver. 1—21. 2. He imprecates the judgments of God upon his perſecutors, ver. 22—29. 3. He concludes with the voice of joy and praiſe, in an aſſurance that God would help and ſuccour him, and would do well for the church, ver. 30—36.

¶ To the chief muſician [a] upon Shoſhannim,
A pſalm of David.

[a] Pſ. xlv. tit.

1. SAVE me, O God, for [b] the waters are come in unto my ſoul. 2. [c] I ſink in † deep mire where there is no ſtanding: I am come into deep waters, where the floods overflow me. 3. [d] I am weary of my crying, my throat is dried: [e] mine eyes fail while I wait for my God. 4. They [f] that hate me without a cauſe, are more than the hairs of mine head: they that would deſtroy me, being mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I reſtored that which I took not away. 5. O God, thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſs; and my ‡ ſins are not hid from thee. 6. Let not them that wait on thee, O LORD God of hoſts, be aſhamed for my ſake: let not thoſe that ſeek thee, be confounded for my ſake, O God of Iſrael. 7. Becauſe for thy ſake [g] I have born reproach: ſhame hath covered my face. 8. [h] I am become a ſtranger unto my brethren, and an aliant unto my mother's children. 9. For [i] the zeal of thine houſe hath eaten me up; and [k] the reproaches of them that reproached thee, are fallen upon me. 10. When [l] I wept and chaſtned my ſoul with faſting, that was to my reproach. 11. I made ſackcloth alſo my garment: and I became a proverb to them. 12. They that ſit in the gate, ſpeak againſt me; and [m] I was the ſong of the § drunkards.

[b] Ibid. xlii. 7. Ver. 2, 14, 15. Jonah ii. 5.
[c] Pſ. xl. 2.
† Heb. The mire of depth.
[d] Pſ. vi. 6.
[e] Ibid. cxix. 82, 123.
[f] John xv. 25.
‡ Heb. Guiltineſs.
[g] Pſ. xliv. 13.
[h] Ibid. xxxi. 11. Iſa. liii. 3. John vii. 5.
[i] Pſ. cxix. 139. John ii. 17.
[k] Pſ. lxxxix. 50, 51. Rom. xv. 3.
[l] Pſ. xxxv. 13, 14.
[m] Job xxx. 9. Pſ. xxxv. 15, 16.
§ Heb. The drinkers of ſtrong drink.

v. 1—12. We have here, in the ſuffering ſon of Jeſſe, a lively figure of the ſuffering Son of God, of whom theſe things are chiefly ſpoken.

1. He pours out his complaints unto God, and they are many and grievous. Troubles, deep as the ſwelling flood, compaſſed him, and he ready to ſink under them, v. 1, 2. Exhauſted with ſtrong crying and tears, and failing becauſe no help appeared, v. 3. Though inoffenſive, yet hated, perſecuted by many and mighty foes, and cruelly as wrongfully, v. 4. His deareſt friends were afraid to own him, leſt they ſhould be involved with him in ruin, v. 5. His zeal for God exaſperated his enemies, and brought upon him a load of reproaches and infamy, v. 7, 9. and when in the holy exerciſes of religion he was engaged, they ridiculed his humiliations, v. 10, 11. The great, who ſat in the gate, maligned and abuſed him; and the drunkards, in their midnight revels, made him the ſubject of their ſport and ſongs, v. 12. And herein he was,

[1.] A type of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whoſe ſoul in the garden, deluged with anguiſh, ſeemed as if weighed down with the inſupportable load, and the humanity unable to ſupport it, v. 2. With ſtrong crying and tears he then made ſupplication unto God, and on the croſs with bitterneſs lamented the divine dereliction, v. 3. Though ſinleſs and harmleſs, he paid the debt of ſin he had never contracted, and ſatisfied that juſtice he had never injured: yet did thoſe ſinners, whoſe guilt he bore, perſecute him with ceaſeleſs hatred. Fixed on his deſtruction, they ſuborned falſe witneſſes againſt him, to take away his life, v. 4. He was diſowned by every friend; betrayed by one diſciple; denied by another; forſaken of all, v. 5. Loaded with the moſt malignant reproaches; his tears over them, and his efforts to ſave them, deſpiſed and rejected; inſulted, with the moſt unrelenting cruelty, by the meaneſt as well as greateſt; by governor, prieſts, elders, ſoldiers: his miracles of grace imputed to diabolical agency; and his importunate cries upon the croſs mocked and ridiculed, v. 7, 9, 10.

[2.] Of all believers, whoſe trials are ſevere, and help often long delayed; whoſe ſouls are ready to faint; the objects of the world's malice and ſcorn; forſaken and given up by their once deareſt friends and relations; treated as mad, and derided as fooliſh; oppoſed by the great, and often literally ſtill the drunkard's ſong. But through much tribulation we muſt thus enter into the kingdom of God, through evil report and good report; and whilſt we carry our griefs to a compaſſionate Redeemer, muſt patiently expect the ſalvation of God.

2. He confeſſes his ſins, which were known unto God; the folly bound up in his heart, and the ſins of his life, which, however upright before men, he could not plead as pure before God. The Lord Jeſus had no ſin of his own to confeſs, yet was he made ſin for us; our folly and guilt were imputed to him, and he was therefore numbered with the tranſgreſſors. Note, They who know themſelves beſt, know moſt evil of themſelves. The deepeſt read in ſelf-knowledge are ever the moſt humble before a holy God.

3. He prays earneſtly for help and ſalvation, v. 1. pleads the diſcouragement it would caſt on the faithful, if he was left to fall, v. 6. and the diſhonour it would bring upon God, ſince it was purely on account of his zeal for his cauſe that he was expoſed, v. 7—9. Thus Chriſt prayed to be ſaved from the trying hour; and that his people might not be diſappointed of their expectations of redemption by him, who now in his reſurrection and triumphant aſcenſion have confidence towards God. Note, (1.) A faithful ſoul cannot but zealouſly eſpouſe the cauſe of God and truth. (2.) It is a great ſatisfaction when we ſuffer, to know that it is for righteouſneſs ſake.

13. But as for me, my prayer is unto thee, O LORD, [n] in an acceptable time: O God, in the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy ſalvation. 14. Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not ſink: [o] let me be delivered from them that hate me, and [p] out of the deep waters. 15. Let not the water-flood overflow me, neither let the deep ſwallow me up, and let not the pit ſhut her mouth upon me. 16. Hear me, O LORD, for [q] thy loving kindneſs is good: turn unto me according to the multitude of thy tender mercies. 17. And [r] hide not thy face from thy ſervant, for I am in trouble: † hear me ſpeedily. 18. Draw nigh unto my ſoul, and redeem it: deliver me [s] becauſe of mine enemies. 19. Thou haſt known [t] my reproach, and my ſhame, and my diſhonour: mine adverſaries are all before thee. 20. Reproach hath broken my heart, and I am full of heavineſs: and [u] I looked for ſome ‡ to take pity, but there was none; and for comforters, but I found none. 21. They gave me alſo gall for my meat, and in my thirſt [x] they gave me vinegar to drink.

[n] Iſa. xlix. 8. & lv. 6. 2 Cor. vi. 2.
[o] Pſ. cxliv. 7.
[p] Ver. 1, 2, 15.
[q] Pſ. lxiii. 3.
[r] Ibid. xxvii. 9. & cii. 2.
† Heb. Make haſte to hear me.
[s] Deut. xxxii. 27.
[t] Pſ. xxii. 6, 7. Iſa. liii. 3. Heb. xii. 2.
[u] Pſ. cxlii. 4. Iſa. lxiii. 5.
‡ Heb. To lament with me.
[x] Mat. xxvii. 34, 48.

v. 13—21. Whilſt we have a gracious God to fly to, we need not be concerned about the malicious reproaches of the proud.

David, oppreſſed, has recourſe to God for deliverance from his dangers, that his enemies might not prevail, nor his ſoul ſink under his troubles. And he enforces his requeſts, [1.] By the acceptableneſs of the time: never could relief come ſo welcome, as when he is reduced ſo low, v. 13. [2.] By the multitude of God's mercies, which now would be eſpecially manifeſted, v. 16. [3.] By the truth of his ſalvation, his faithfulneſs being engaged for the anſwer of humble and fervent prayer, v. 13. [4.] By the views of his great trouble, which God well knew; the ſhame, reproach, and diſhonour he endured for his ſake, v. 19, 20. which required ſpeedy help, and the comforts of his countenance, v. 17. that he might not be diſcouraged. [5.] By the deſolateneſs of his eſtate: all other friends have forſaken him, therefore the more he needs God to appear for him. [6.] By the inſolence and cruelty with which he was treated, which he knew God would not behold with unconcern, v. 21.

Such requeſts, in the days of his fleſh, the Son of David made. God knew what ſufferings he endured; what trouble and reproach he bore from foes without; what anguiſh, from the withdrawing of his ſenſible favour; how exceeding ſorrowful and very heavy his ſoul was burdened; no friend to pity or relieve; in his enemies hands, ready to be ſwallowed up; the pit of the grave opening; death, with all its horrors, the death of the croſs, approaching; and even when in his agonizing pangs extended on the tree, there inſulted with vinegar mingled with gall, to mock his raging thirſt. In his diſtreſs he prayed, and pleaded the multitude of his Father's mercies, and his truth engaged for the fulfilment of the everlaſting covenant. He begged to behold the light of his Father's countenance, which was hid from him in diſpleaſure; to be ſupported and carried through his work of redemption; that thoſe who hated him, Satan and his ſervants, might be diſappointed, and the grave unable to keep him priſoner: that he might be delivered from all his enemies, redeemed from death and hell, and finally victorious: and God abundantly anſwered his prayers in the reſurrection-day, when all his reproach and ſorrow was for ever rolled away, and his glory great as his ſufferings had been.

Such alſo muſt be our recourſe in our diſtreſſes, ſuch our pleas, and ſuch then aſſuredly will be the eternal deliverance we may expect from all our enemies.

22. [y] Let their table become a ſnare before them: and that which ſhould have been for their welfare, let it become a trap. 23. [z] Let their eyes be darkned that they ſee not: and make their loins continually to ſhake. 24. [a] Pour out thine indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them. 25. [b] Let their † habitation be deſolate, and let none dwell in their tents. 26. For [c] they perſecute him [d] whom thou haſt ſmitten, and they talk to the grief of ‡ thoſe whom thou haſt wounded. 27. [e] Add § iniquity to their iniquity: and [f] let them not come into thy righteouſneſs. 28. Let them [g] be blotted out of the book of the living, [h] and not be written with the righteous. 29. But [i] I am poor and [k] ſorrowful: let thy ſalvation, O God, ſet me up on high.

[y] Rom. xi. 9, 10.
[z] Iſa. vi. 9, 10. John xii. 39, 40. Rom. xi. 8. 2 Cor. iii, 14.
[a] 1 Theſ. ii. 16.
[b] Acts i. 20.
† Heb. Palace.
[c] Zech. i. 15.
[d] Iſa. liii. 4.
‡ Heb. Thy wounded ones.
[e] Rom. i. 24. 2 Theſ. ii. 11.
§ Or, puniſhment of their iniquity.
[f] Rom. ix. 31. & x. 3.
[g] Exod. xxxii. 32.
[h] Ezek. xiii. 5. Luke x. 20. Heb xiii. 23. Rev. xiii. 8.
[i] 2 Cor. viii. 9.
[k] Mat. xxvi. 38.

v. 22—29. Theſe words being expreſsly applied to the Jews, who rejected the true Meſſiah, Rom. xi. 9. 10. we can be at no loſs for the explanation of them. They contain a prophetical denunciation of God's righteous judgments againſt them; and we ſee them this day lying under his curſe, and, in the fulfilment of the prophecy, ſtanding evidences for the truth of the Chriſtian religion. We have here,

1. The judgments denounced. [1.] Their comforts ſhould enſnare them; or the ſacrifices, part of which belonged to the offerer, to which they ſo obſtinately adhered, in oppoſition to the true ſacrifice of the Redeemer, whom they rejected; theſe ſhould be made the means of hardening them againſt him, inſtead of leading them to him, as we ſee they were, v. 22. [2.] They ſhould be given up to judicial blindneſs, rejecting the cleareſt declarations of their own prophets, v. 23. [3.] They ſhould be in continual terrors, or bow down their backs alway, as the apoſtle renders the words, Rom. xi. 10. which was not only the caſe when the Romans came and beſieged Jeruſalem, and made ſuch a dreadful maſſacre; but to this day, they are ſervants in all lands; in many governments forced to conceal their religion; and in all have been haraſſed and plundered, and are ſtill expoſed to the ſame ſufferings; not to ſpeak of their horrors, when they ſhall ſee him whom they have pierced, coming in the clouds of heaven, v. 23. [4.] They ſhould feel the ſeverity of his wrath, which they eminently did, when their city and country was utterly deſtroyed, and the land ploughed up; ſo that for a while none dwelt there; and to this day theſe deſolations in a great meaſure continue, very few Jews being now found in the whole land of Paleſtine, and theſe miſerably oppreſſed by the Turkiſh governors, v. 24, 25. [5.] They ſhould add ſin to ſin; having crucified the Maſter, they would perſecute the diſciples, and, inſtead of being convinced by all they ſuffered, would continue hardened and inveterate as ever; ſo that they ſhould not come into God's righteouſneſs; rejecting him who is the only righteouſneſs of his people, they are ſhut up in unbelief, v. 27. And, laſtly, that their name ſhould be blotted out from the living, as was literally, in a great meaſure, fulfilled, when the Romans ſlew ſuch vaſt numbers, that they ſeemed to threaten an entire exciſion of the whole Jewiſh race; and ſpiritually is accompliſhed in their excluſion from the bleſſings of the goſpel, by which righteouſneſs and life eternal alone can be obtained, v. 28.

2. The cauſe of theſe judgments is mentioned, v. 26. Their perſecutions of Jeſus, whom they eſteemed ſtricken and ſmitten of God; and whom, according to the divine counſels and foreknowledge of God, Acts xi. 23. they with wicked hand crucified and ſlew; and, inſatiate in their rage againſt his cauſe, contrived every method to inſult God's wounded ones, as the word ſignifies, thoſe who ſuffered for their fidelity to Jeſus. Note, It is doubly cruel to grieve thoſe already weighed down with ſufferings; but diabolical malice ſports at miſery.

3. The pſalmiſt, in the perſon of the Redeemer, commends himſelf to God. But I am poor; in his humiliation for our ſakes he became poor; ſo poor, that he had not a place to lay his head; and ſorrowful: from the cradle to the grave, a man of ſorrows, and acquainted with grief: ſorrows, like unto which were no ſorrows. Let thy ſalvation, O God, ſet me up on high, or, thy ſalvation ſhall ſet me up on high. Either it is a prayer for, or his confident expectation of, the glory which ſhould follow after his ſufferings, when by death having overcome every enemy, he ſhould ariſe, aſcend, and reign on his eternal throne. Note, The poor and ſorrowful believer may be comforted. If we have been planted with Jeſus in the likeneſs of his ſufferings and death, we ſhall be alſo in the likeneſs of his reſurrection and glory.

30. I will praiſe the name of God with a ſong, and will magnify him with thankſgiving. 31. [l] This alſo ſhall pleaſe the LORD better than an ox or bullock that hath horns and hoofs. 32. [m] The † humble ſhall ſee this, and be glad: and [n] your heart ſhall live that ſeek God. 33. For the LORD heareth the poor, and deſpiſeth not his priſoners. 34. [o] Let the heaven and earth praiſe him, the ſeas and [p] every thing that ‡ moveth therein. 35. For [q] God will ſave Zion, and will build the cities of Judah: that they may dwell there, and have it in poſſeſſion. 36. [r] The ſeed alſo of his ſervants ſhall inherit it: and they that love his name ſhall dwell therein.

[l] Pſ. l. 13, 14.
[m] Pſ. xxxiv. 2.
† Or, meek.
[n] Pſ. xxii. 26.
[o] Ibid. xcvi. 11. & cxlviii. 2, &c. Iſa. xliv. 23. & xlix. 13.
[p] Iſa. lv. 12.
‡ Heb. Creepeth.
[q] Pſ. li. 18.
[r] Ibid. cii. 28.

v. 30—36. David, in the proſpect of this ſalvation of the Redeemer and his people, triumphs, and calls on heaven and earth to join his praiſes.

1. He declares his own purpoſe to exalt and magnify God's holy name, and is aſſured theſe grateful ſongs will pleaſe him beyond the moſt expenſive ſacrifices. Theſe are all now aboliſhed by the offering of the body of Jeſus once for all; but the ſacrifices of praiſe, with which God is well-pleaſed, will never ceaſe being offered in earth and heaven for redeeming love. So cheap yet ſo acceptable a ſacrifice then who will grudge?

2. The people of God ſhall rejoice in beholding his ſalvation, manifeſt in the reſurrection of Jeſus. They will be encouraged now to ſeek God, becauſe ſince he lives, they ſhall live alſo. Though poor in this world, and priſoners for Chriſt; or tied and bound with the chain of ſins, under which they groan, and long to be looſed; God will not deſpiſe their prayer; he will hear their cry, and will help them. Note, As long as we have a heart to pray, we ſhall always have cauſe to rejoice.

3. He calls upon all men and angels, yea, every creature that moveth through the paths of the water, to praiſe God with him for his glorious ſalvation. His Zion ſhall be ſaved; his church, and the cities of Judah, the different aſſemblies of the faithful, ſhall be built up. The faithful ſeed ſhall inherit a portion in God's holy mountain, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Chriſt; and they that love his name, his perſon, his worſhip, his word, his ways, ſhall dwell therein, as at preſent the children of God's family, and ſhortly to poſſeſs the enduring manſions in the ſkies, where, with Jeſus our exalted head, we ſhall take up our glorious and eternal abode. Well do ſuch inſpiring hopes demand our warmeſt praiſe.

PSALM LXX.

This pſalm is adapted to a ſtate of affliction. It may be conſidered as an appendix to the foregoing, and is almoſt literally the ſame with Pſal. xl. v. 13—17. which relates to the Meſſiah. He prays, that God would ſend, 1. Help to himſelf, ver. 1, 5. 2. Shame to his enemies, ver. 2, 3. 3. Joy to his friends, ver. 4.

¶ To the chief muſician, A pſalm of David, [a] to bring to remembrance.

1. [b] MAKE haſte, O God, to deliver me; [c] make haſte to help me, O LORD. 2. [d] Let them be aſhamed and confounded that ſeek after my ſoul: let them be turned backward, and put to confuſion, that deſire my hurt. 3. [e] Let them be turned back for a reward of their ſhame, that ſay, Aha, Aha. 4. Let all thoſe that ſeek thee, rejoice and be glad in thee: and let ſuch as love thy ſalvation ſay continually, Let God be magnified. 5. But [f] I am poor and needy, make haſte unto me, O God: thou art my help and [g] my deliverer, O LORD, make no tarrying.

a Pſ. xxxviii. tit.
b Ibid. xl. 13, &c.
c Ibid. lxxi. 12.
d Ibid. xxxv. 4, 26. & lxxi. 13.
e Ibid. xl. 15.
f Ibid. 17. & lxix. 29.
g 2 Tim. iv. 18.

v. 1—5. The title of this pſalm is to bring to remembrance the mercies he had experienced; the former prayers he had offered, and God had anſwered; and therefore, in new trials to remember the good old way, and make his requeſts ſtill known unto God, he uſes nearly the ſame words as he had done before, Pſal. xl. for though formal prayer is folly and hypocriſy, a form of prayer may ſpeak the warm breathings of a pious heart, and be uſed repeatedly to edification.

1. He ſeeks for help in haſte, becauſe his danger was imminent, v. 1. Note, Urgent trials ſhould awaken fervent prayer.

2. He prays that his enemies may be diſappointed and confounded. They were maliciouſly bent to hurt him; ſought after his ſoul, to enſnare him with ſin, or to rob him of his life; and already triumphed, as if they had ſucceeded: but he expects to ſee them turned backward, and their wicked devices baffled, v. 2, 3.

3. He prays that God's people may rejoice, eſpecially on obſerving his gracious interpoſition in his deliverance, and magnify God for his mercy. They are deſcribed as ſeeking God, this being the conſtant delightful taſk of the faithful, to pray and not faint; as loving his ſalvation, loving Jeſus, the author of the ſalvation, and holineſs, the appointed way, v. 4.

4. He expreſſes his confidence of help, whilſt he pleads his wants. I am poor and needy; ſpiritually needy, and poor in ſpirit; but thou art my help and deliverer, and therefore my ſalvation is ſafe and ſure, v. 5.

Jeſus was thus ſought for, his precious life purſued, and his enemies confident of ſucceſs; but in his prayer he prevailed: Satan and all his emiſſaries were confounded in the day of his reſurrection, and God, his helper and deliverer, made no tarrying, nor ſuffered his Holy One to ſee corruption; therefore doth his church triumph in their exalted head, and ſay with joy, The Lord be magnified.

The faithful ſervants of God are alſo the mark of the world's enmity, and the devil's hatred; and they may expect many a ſore thruſt from both: but they know where their help lies, and make haſte to God in prayer; and though he may ſometimes ſeem to delay his coming, he is not ſlack concerning his promiſes, but exerciſes the graces of his people to confirm and ſtrengthen them, and makes no tarrying when their deliverance is neceſſary. However ſorely they may be exerciſed, the iſſue of their trials will be peace and joy; and they who love God's ſalvation, and ſeek him without ceaſing, will, in time and eternity, by delightful experience, bear teſtimony to his rich and ſovereign grace, and aſcribe to him the everlaſting praiſe.

PSALM LXXI.

This pſalm ſeems to have been penned by David in his old age, probably at the time of Abſalom's rebellion. 1. He prays that God would deliver and ſave him, ver. 2, 4. and not caſt him off, ver. 9. or be far from him, ver. 12. and that his enemies might be put to ſhame, ver. 13. He pleads his confidence in God, ver. 1, 3, 5, 7. The experience he had of help from God, ver. 6. and the malice of his enemies againſt him, ver. 10, 11. 2. He concludes the pſalm with believing praiſes, ver. 14, &c. Never was his hope more eſtabliſhed, ver. 16, 18, 20, 21. Never were his joys and thankſgivings more enlarged, ver. 15, 19, 22, 23, 24. Let old diſciples join in his prayer, his faith, his joy.

1. [a] IN thee, O LORD, do I put my truſt, let me never be put to confuſion. 2. [b] Deliver me [c] in thy righteouſneſs, and cauſe me to eſcape: incline thine ear unto me, and ſave me. 3. [d] Be thou † my ſtrong habitation, whereunto I may continually reſort: thou haſt [e] given commandment to ſave me, for thou art my rock and my fortreſs. 4. [f] Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man. 5. For thou art my hope, O LORD God: thou art my truſt from my youth. 6. [g] By thee have I been holden up from the womb: thou art he that took me out of my mother's bowels, my praiſe ſhall be continually of thee. 7. [h] I am as a wonder unto many; but thou art my ſtrong refuge. 8. Let my mouth be filled with thy praiſe and with thy honour all the day. 9. Caſt me not off in [i] the time of old age, forſake me not when my ſtrength faileth. 10. For mine enemies ſpeak againſt me: and they [k] that ‡ lay wait for my ſoul, take counſel together, 11. Saying, God hath forſaken him: [l] perſecute and take him, for there is none to deliver him. 12. [m] O God, be not far from me: O my God, make haſte for my help. 13. [n] Let them be confounded and conſumed that are adverſaries to my ſoul: let them be covered with reproach and diſhonour, that ſeek my hurt.

a Pſ. xxv. 2. & xxxi. 1.
b Ibid. xxxi. 2.
c Dan. ix. 16.
d Pſ. xxxi. 12.
† Or, a rock of habitation to me.
e Pſ. xliv. 4. & xci. 11.
f Ibid. cxl. 1, 4.
g Pſal. xxii. 9, 10. Iſa. xlvi. 3.
h Zech. iii. 8. 1 Cor. iv. 9.
i Ver. 18.
k Pſ. lvi. 6.
‡ Heb. Watch, or obſerve.
l 2 Sam. xvii. 1.
m Pſ. lxx. 1.
n Ver. 24. Pſ. xxxv. 4, 26. & xl. 14. & lxx. 2.

v. 1—13. The longer the faithful ſoul hath been found in the good ways of God, the ſtronger he grows. Inſtaurabit iter vires. Thus David here appears.

1. He profeſſes his confidence in God, amidſt the ſharp trials with which he was now exerciſed. In thee, O Lord, do I put my truſt; delighting to repeat the pleaſing ſubject, and dwelling upon the ſure foundation on which his hope was built; a rock, no tempeſt could ſhake; a fortreſs, no foe could ſcale; a ſtrong refuge, where he was ſafe from danger; a ſtrong habitation, where he reſted in comfort. Note, They who know God, his faithfulneſs and grace, will with comfort and confidence be engaged to truſt him in every time of need.

2. He remembers to God's glory, and for his own preſent encouragement, the paſt deliverances he had experienced, v. 5, 6. From the womb he had been holden up, protected amidſt the dangers of infancy, and the perils of youth; and therefore now he is ſure that God will not fail to ſave him, and reſolves never to ceaſe in praiſing him. Note, The more we reflect on what God hath done for us, it will both engage our truſt in him, and awaken our praiſes to him.

3. He makes his prayer in the preſent emergency of his affairs, and it conſiſts of various particulars, and is ſupported with the moſt urgent pleas.

[1.] He prays that he may not be put to confuſion, v. 1. but find God his ſtrong habitation in his troubles; pleading God's righteouſneſs as a reaſon why he ſhould vindicate his ſuffering cauſe, v. 2. and his promiſe, v. 3. on which his hope was grounded. Note, They who confidently plead God's faithfulneſs, ſhall never be covered with confuſion, as diſappointed of their hope.

[2.] He cries for deliverance, v. 4. from the ſurrounding dangers, when flying from his rebellious ſon, and ſupports his prayer with urging God's relation to him, O my God, as an argument for preſent help; and his enemies ill character, as a reaſon for ſaving him out of their hand. Note, My God is the moſt powerful of all arguments in our approaches to God, to obtain his grace, and encourage our patient waiting upon him.

[3.] He deſires to have new matter for his praiſes, and ſubjects for freſh ſongs all the day; and intimates how greatly God would be glorified in his preſervation. I am a wonder unto many; reduced to ſuch a ſtate of deep diſtreſs, want, and wretchedneſs; and the more forlorn, the greater the mercy would appear, and the louder and more inceſſantly God's mercy in his reſtoration would be magnified, v. 7, 8. Note, God delights in the depth of our miſery to magnify his mercy.

[4.] He begs not to be caſt off now at laſt; and, to move his gracious Maſter's pity, produces his locks grown hoary in his ſervice, and urges his weakneſs as a plea for compaſſionate relief, v. 9. Note, (1.) In old age we muſt expect infirmities, and need an increaſe of faith and patience to bear them. (2.) God's old ſervants are never caſt off: though they cannot be active in his ſervice as formerly, their hoary heads are a crown of glory, and ready to receive the crown of righteouſneſs, in that world where their youth will be renewed as the eagle's. (3.) When we are moſt ſenſible of our own weakneſs, we ſhall moſt aſſuredly experience the divine ſupport.

[5.] He intreats God to draw near, and make haſte to help him. His dangers could not bear delay; for his enemies were many, politic, plotting his ruin; encouraging themſelves in hope that God had forſaken him, and therefore they muſt prevail; and diſcouraging his friends from helping him, and his heart from depending on God. Note, (1.) They who are moſt afflicted of God, are not therefore rejected of him. (2.) The vain hope of the ſinner will prove a lie in his right hand.

[6.] He beſeeches God to turn the evil they meditated againſt him upon themſelves, and to cover them with reproach and diſhonour, who ſought his hurt; wherein he ſpeaks not in a ſpirit of revenge, but in the ſpirit of prophecy, foreſeeing and foretelling their impending ruin. Note, They who perſiſt in the ways of wickedneſs, may expect to reap the wages of wretchedneſs.

14. But I will hope continually, and will yet praiſe thee more and more. 15. My mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy righteouſneſs, and thy ſalvation all the day: for [o] I know not the numbers thereof. 16. I will go [p] in the ſtrength of the Lord GOD: I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs, even of thine only. 17. O God, thou haſt taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works. 18. [q] Now alſo † when I am old and gray-headed, O God, [r] forſake me not:
until I have ſhewed thy ‡ ſtrength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come. 19. Thy righteouſneſs alſo, O God, is very high, who haſt done great things: O God, [s] who is like unto thee? 20.
Thou [t] which haſt ſhewed me great and ſore troubles, [u] ſhalt quicken me again, and ſhalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth. 21. Thou ſhalt increaſe my greatneſs, and comfort me on every ſide. 22. I will alſo praiſe thee with § the pſaltery, even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I ſing with the harp, O thou holy one of Iſrael. 23. My lips ſhall greatly rejoice when I ſing unto thee: and my ſoul which thou haſt redeemed. 24. My tongue alſo ſhall talk of thy righteouſneſs all the day long: for [x] they are confounded, for they are brought unto ſhame, that ſeek my hurt.

[o] Pſ. xl. 5. & cxxxix. 17, 18.
[p] Phil. iv. 13.
[q] Ver. 9.
† Heb. Unto old age, and gray hairs.
[r] Phil. i. 6.
‡ Heb. Arm.
[s] Pſ. lxxxix. 6, 8.
[t] Ibid. lx. 3.
[u] Hoſ. vi. 2.
§ Heb. The inſtrument of pſaltery.
[x] Ver. 13.

v. 14—24. Filled with hope and joy, the pſalmiſt is happy in the midſt of all his ſorrows, and the greateſt of his troubles cannot ſilence his inceſſant praiſe.

1. He expreſſes his lively hope in a variety of inſtances; I will hope continually, at all times, and in all ſituations; when others deſpair of my recovery, my heart ſhall never fear nor fail, becauſe the God of my hope faileth not. [1.] God's power and promiſe are his grand ſupports; I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord God, diſclaiming all ſelf-ſufficiency, and ſtrong in the Lord, and the power of his might, for duty I ſhall be enabled, and in danger be ſecure. I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs only, either his fidelity in his word, or that perfect righteouſneſs of Jeſus, which is the believer's ſupreme hope and plea. Note, Though we have neither ſtrength nor righteouſneſs in ourſelves, there is ſuch fulneſs of both in the Redeemer, that we may be always moſt confident in him, when moſt deſpairing of ourſelves. [2.] His paſt experience encourages his preſent hopes. God had been the guide of his youth, v. 17. and he had hitherto acknowledged his wondrous preſervation; therefore in his old age he truſts God will not forſake him, but enable him to leave with the riſing generation, a teſtimony of God's faithfulneſs and care, as a grateful acknowledgment to his glory, and an engagement to them to make him their hope and truſt. Note, (1.) Early impreſſions of divine grace are a ſingular mercy, and demand ſuitable improvement. (2.) Every day's experience ſhould confirm our confidence, that God will never leave nor forſake us. (3.) The longer we live under the Divine protection and favour, the more earneſt ſhould we be in commending theſe good ways of God, in which we have walked, to the generations to come. [3.] In many great and ſore troubles he had been ſupported, therefore in the preſent he truſts he ſhall not faint; thou ſhalt quicken me again, and bring me up again from the depths of the earth, tho' he ſeemed as one dead and buried in his grave, he was aſſured his caſe was not beyond the Divine power, nor his circumſtances ſo deſperate, but God would retrieve them. Note, (1.) Great and ſore troubles are here often the portion of the righteous, but he who brings them into their difficulties, can and will ſafely extricate them out of them. (2.) Though we go down at death into the grave, and the earth cloſes upon us, we have a hope ſtill full of immortality, a reſurrection-day ſhall quicken our duſt, and bring us from theſe depths of the earth again. [4.] He not only expects deliverance from his troubles, but an increaſe of his greatneſs and conſolations, v. 21. Thus the darkneſs of our troubles, like the cloud which covers the ſun, ſerves but to heighten our joys, when at God's word the cloud vaniſhes, the ſun of divine grace ſhines with double luſtre, and the trial of our faith contributes to the increaſe of our honour and glory. [5.] His enemies that ſought his hurt, muſt with ſhame retire, and find it vain to contend with him whom God protects. Note, All our ſpiritual enemies at laſt ſhall gnaſh in deſpair, when they ſee us ſet above their malice, and receive the eternal deſert of their deeds.

2. He exults in joyful praiſes. All the day would he be ſhewing forth God's righteouſneſs and his ſalvation. His juſtice in the deſtruction of the wicked, his enemies; his faithfulneſs and mercy in his own preſervation; and, above all, the perfect righteouſneſs of Jeſus, on account of which alone ſalvation becomes ſecured to ſinners: theſe deſerved continual thanks, therefore he reſolves, I will praiſe thee more and more, or add to all thy praiſe, v. 14. Since every day afforded ſome new occaſions, called for increaſing acknowledgments, and left him far behind, unable to keep pace even in gratitude, with the mercies continually ſhowered upon him, the number of which ſurpaſſed his comprehenſion, v. 15. They were like the God who beſtowed them, very high, above all bleſſing and praiſe, and without parallel; for in heaven or earth none can compare with him, or do as he doth, v. 19. With joy therefore, ſurpaſſing great, his ſoul within, redeemed by divine grace and truth, v. 23. ſhall ſwell with gratitude too big for utterance; his voice be heard aloud in praiſe, and calling in the ſacred aid of muſic to aſſiſt the expreſſions of his enraptured Spirit, the pſaltery and harp ſhould pour forth a flood of harmony, and raiſe his ſong high as heaven's arch, and rival the angelic choir above. Note, (1.) Praiſe is the natural expreſſion of the grateful heart, the bounden duty of the favoured ſinner, and the acceptable ſacrifice to a gracious God. (2.) When we ſing with our lips, let us be careful to make melody with our hearts, and not forget the ſenſe in the ſound. They ſacrifice to their own drag, who merely love to hear their own voices; and that muſic is moſt inharmonious to God, which however exquiſite in itſelf, ſerves to draw off our attention from the divine object of our praiſes, to the manner and performance of them. (3.) It is the joyful hope of every redeemed ſoul, however feeble now his efforts, that ſhortly he ſhall be enabled to offer more worthy praiſes, when, with his golden harp before the throne, he ſhall have learnt the ſong of Moſes and the Lamb, and join thoſe heavenly hoſts, whoſe ceaſeleſs ſongs fill God's eternal temple with ſeraphic harmony.

PSALM LXXII.

This is intitled a pſalm for Solomon: it is probable David dictated it a little before he died, when, by divine direction, he ſettled the ſucceſſion, and gave orders to proclaim Solomon king, 1 Kings i. 30. But though Solomon's name is made uſe of, a greater than Solomon is here, even that Son of David, whoſe throne ſhould be higher than Solomon's, and his dominion univerſal and everlaſting. David in ſpirit, 1. Begins with a ſhort prayer for his ſucceſſor, ver. 1. 2. He paſſeth immediately into a long prediction of the glories of his reign, ver. 2—17. And 3. He concludes with praiſe to the God of Iſrael, ver. 18—20. And herein we muſt have an eye to Chriſt, praiſing him as our king, and pleaſing ourſelves with our happineſs as his ſubjects.

¶ A pſalm † [a] for Solomon.

1. GIVE the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteouſneſs unto the king's ſon. 2. [b] He ſhall judge thy people with righteouſneſs, and thy poor with judgment. 3. [c] The mountains ſhall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteouſneſs. 4. [d] He ſhall judge the poor of the people, he ſhall ſave the children of the needy, and ſhall break in pieces the op-preſſor. 5. [e] They ſhall fear thee [f] as long as the ſun and moon endure, throughout all generations. 6. [g] He ſhall come down like rain upon the mown graſs: as ſhowers that water the earth. 7. In his days ſhall the righteous flouriſh: and [h] abundance of peace ‡ ſo long as the moon endureth. 8. [i] He ſhall have dominion alſo from ſea to ſea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. 9. They that dwell in the wilderneſs ſhall bow before him: and [k] his enemies ſhall lick the duſt.
10. The kings of Tarſhiſh, and of the iſles, [l] ſhall bring preſents: the kings of Sheba, and Seba, [m] ſhall offer gifts. 11. Yea, [n] all kings ſhall fall down before him: all nations ſhall ſerve him. 12. For he ſhall deliver the needy when he crieth: the poor alſo, and him that hath no helper. 13. He ſhall ſpare the poor and needy, and ſhall ſave the ſouls of the needy. 14. He ſhall redeem their ſoul from deceit and violence: and [o] precious ſhall their blood be in his ſight. 15. And [p] he ſhall live, and to him ‖ ſhall be given of the gold of Sheba; prayer alſo ſhall be made § for him continually, and daily ſhall he be praiſed. 16. There ſhall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof ſhall ſhake like Lebanon, and they of the city ſhall flouriſh like graſs of the earth.
17. [q] His name ſhall endure for ever: † his name ſhall be continued as long as the ſun: and [r] men ſhall be bleſſed in him; all nations ſhall call him bleſſed.

† Or, of.
[a] Pſ. cxxvii. Title.
[b] Iſa. xi. 3, 4.
[c] Pſ. lxxxv. 10. Iſa. lii 7.
[d] Iſa. xi. 4.
[e] Hoſ. iii. 5.
[f] Pſ. lxxxix. 36, 37.
[g] 2 Sam. xxiii. 4. Hoſ. vi. 3.
[h] Iſa. ii. 4.
‡ Heb. Till there be no moon.
[i] 1 Kings iv. 21, 24. or Pſ. ii. 8. Zech. ix. 10. Rev. xi. 15.
[k] Iſa. xlix. 23. Mic. vii. 17.
[l] Pſ. xlv. 12. & lxviii. 29. Iſa. xlix. 7. & lx. 10.
[m] Mat. ii. 11.
[n] Iſa. xlix. 23. Rev. xxi. 24.
[o] Pſ. cxvi. 15.
[p] Rev. i. 18.
‖ Heb. Shall one give.
§ Or, through him.
[q] Pſ. lxxxix. 36.
† Heb. Shall be as a ſon to continue his father's name for ever.
[r] Gen. xii. 3. & xxii. 18. Jer. iv. 2.

v. 1—17. The pſalm opens,

1. With a ſhort prayer, which may be conſidered as David's requeſt for his ſon Solomon, that he might be qualified for the work of adminiſtring his kingdom with equity and righteouſneſs; or rather it is his prayer, in the perſon of all the faithful, for the Meſſiah, that he might appear, be exalted to his glorious throne, having all judgment in heaven and earth committed to him, and be qualified for the perfecting of the redemption of his people, by ſuch a fulneſs of gifts and graces, as might enable him to work out for them an everlaſting righteouſneſs.

2. He prophetically deſcribes the excellence and glory of his government, wherein though ſome things may be applicable to Solomon, others are only true of him whom Solomon prefigured, and therefore to him the whole may be beſt referred.

(1.) He ſhall rule with righteouſneſs, and be the protector of the poor or afflicted ones from their oppreſſors, v. 2. When ſenſible of their ſpiritual wants and wretchedneſs, they cry to him, under the ſtrivings of Satan, their great enemy, or of wicked men who perſecute them, v. 4. being in themſelves helpleſs and deſtitute, he will deliver and ſave them, redeeming their ſouls, and reſcuing them by his grace from the ſnares of the wicked one, and the deceitfulneſs of ſin. And if they are called to ſuffer unto blood, he will keep a precious memorial of it, and reward their martyrdom with a crown of glory, v. 12—14.

2. Under his government peace ſhall be diffuſed, v. 3. abundance of peace; peace with a reconciled God, peace in our guilty conſciences, peace in our diſpoſitions renewed by Divine grace, peace within preſerved, when all without is moſt threatning, and this effected by his righteouſneſs, the great meritorious cauſe of all our mercies.

3. His enemies ſhall feel his arm, and the rebels againſt his government be broken in pieces, v. 4. Whether Satan, the arch-rebel, or thoſe antichriſtian powers that long perſecute and harraſs his church, their end will be to be deſtroyed together. Note, The ſinner's damnation ſlumbereth not, though for a while it may be delayed.

4. His government ſhall be moſt deſirable and bleſſed. Like the rain on the new-mown graſs, the graces and conſolations of his ſpirit ſhall deſcend on his people, to refreſh them, v. 6. and flouriſhing under theſe heavenly influences, the ſouls of the righteous ſhall bring forth theſe fruits of holineſs abundantly, which are to the praiſe and glory of God, v. 7. Does it appear then, that we are the ſubjects of his kingdom by theſe flouriſhing fruits of peace within, and piety without?

5. His dominion will be univerſal, from ſea to ſea, from one end of the earth to the other. The inhabitants of the moſt deſolate parts of the earth ſhall ſome time or other have his goſpel preached to them, and yield obedience to the faith; and his enemies, whether Jews or gentiles, be brought to lick the duſt, laid low in deepeſt humiliation at his feet, v. 9. The richeſt kings of the earth ſhall bring their preſents, and the diſtant monarchs, in the fartheſt iſles of the ſea, offer their tribute, as a token of ſubjection, v. 10. They ſhall worſhip before him, as their God and king, and all nations ſerve him, when the kingdoms of the world at laſt ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord and his Chriſt, v. 11.

6. All his ſubjects ſhall honour and praiſe him; he ſhall live the joy of his people, and the gold of Sheba, the moſt precious offerings, even the bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits of his redeemed, infinitely more precious than gold that periſheth ſhall be preſented to him: prayer ſhall be made for him, for the proſperity and increaſe of his kingdom, or through him, as the mediator between God and man, through whom alone we can be accepted; and daily ſhall he be praiſed in his church, and by his faithful ſubjects, happy under his gracious ſway.

7. His increaſe will be wonderful and great. There ſhall be a handful of corn, which may denote Chriſt himſelf, upon the top of the mountains, on Calvary, ſown in his death as corn in the earth; or it may refer to the word of goſpel-grace, that at firſt was but as an handful, and ſeemed as unlikely to flouriſh as ſeed ſown on a mountain, but great was the effect; the fruit thereof ſhall ſhake like Lebanon, ineſtimably rich and precious ſhall be the fruits that ſpring from the death of Chriſt; or it refers to the vaſt increaſe of converts that ſhould be made to the truth, as ſoon as it was preached, and they of the city, the inhabitants of the ſpiritual Jeruſalem, ſhall flouriſh as the graſs of the earth.

8. His kingdom ſhall be everlaſting. Whilſt ſun and moon endureth, v. 5. he will have a people upon earth, his offspring, as the original word ſhall continue, v. 17. implies; and when ſun and moon ſhall fade and fail, ſtill he ſhall reign, his throne abiding as the days of eternity, bleſſing for ever his choſen people, and the ſubject of their everlaſting praiſes, v. 17.

18. [s] Bleſſed be the LORD God, the God of Iſrael, [t] who only doth wondrous things. 19. And bleſſed be his glorious name for ever, and [u] let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and amen. 20. The prayers of David the ſon of Jeſſe are ended.

[s] 1 Chron. xxix. 10.
[t] Pſ. cxxxvi. 4.
[u] Zech. xiv. 9.

v. 18—20. The pſalmiſt concludes with enlarged praiſes, excited by the glorious proſpect he had before him.

1. He bleſſes the Lord God, the Redeemer, the God of his Iſrael, whoſe wonders of creation, providence, and eſpecially of grace in his incarnation, death, and ſufferings, were ſo ſtupendous, and deſerving to be had in everlaſting remembrance.

2. He prays for the manifeſtation of his glorious kingdom upon earth, when he ſhall take to him his great power, and reign; and whilſt he breathes the longings of his heart, profeſſes his confident expectation of it in due time, Amen and amen, ſo let it be, ſo ſhall it be.

3. The prayers of David the ſon of Jeſſe are ended. This, tho' placed here, might be the laſt of his divine compoſitions, or it may ſignify that this was the ſummit of all his wiſhes, to ſee the Redeemer's kingdom come; or ſome ſuppoſe theſe are the words of the perſon who collected the pſalms together, and that the pſalm ends with the Amen in the former verſe. In ſuch a prayer, may every dying believer well deſire to employ his parting breath, and pouring forth his ſoul into the boſom of his Saviour, cry, Come quickly Lord Jeſus!

PSALM LXXIII.

This pſalm, and the ten that next follow it, carry the name of Aſaph in the titles of them; if he was the penman of them (as many think) we rightly call them pſalms of Aſaph: If he was only the chief muſician, to whom they were delivered, our marginal reading is right, which calls them pſalms for Aſaph. It is probable he penned them; for we read of the words of David, and of Aſaph the ſeer, which were uſed in praiſing God in Hezekiah's time, 2 Chron. xxix. 30. This is a pſalm of great uſe, it gives us an account of the conflict which the pſalmiſt had with a ſtrong temptation to envy the proſperity of wicked people. He begins his account with a ſacred principle, by the help of which he kept his ground, and carried his point, ver. 1. And then tells us, 1. How he got into the temptation, ver. 2—14. 2. How he got out of the temptation, and gained a victory over it, ver. 15—20. 3. How he got by the temptation, and was the better for it, ver. 21—28. The experience of others ſhould be our inſtructions.

¶ A pſalm † of [a] Aſaph.

† Or, for.
[a] Pſ. l. Tit.

1. ‡ TRULY God is good to Iſrael, even to ſuch as are of a clean heart. 2. But as for me, my feet were almoſt gone: my ſteps had well nigh ſlipt. 3. For [b] I was envious at the fooliſh, when I ſaw the proſperity of the wicked. 4. For there are no bands in their death: but their ſtrength is ‖ firm. 5. [c] They are not § in trouble as other men: neither are they plagued † like other men. 6. Therefore pride compaſſeth them about as a chain: violence covereth them as a garment. 7. [d] Their eyes ſtand out with fatneſs: they have more than heart could wiſh. 8. [e] They are corrupt, and ſpeak wickedly concerning oppreſſion: they ſpeak loftily. 9. [f] They ſet their mouth againſt the heavens; and their tongue walketh through the earth. 10. Therefore his people return hither: and [g] waters of a full cup are wrung out to them. 11. And they ſay, [h] How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the moſt High? 12. Behold, theſe are the ungodly, [i] who proſper in the world, they increaſe in riches. 13. Verily, [k] I have cleanſed my heart in vain, and [l] waſhed mine hands in innocency. 14. For all the day long have I been plagued and chaſtned every morning.

‡ Or, yet.
[b] Job xxi. 7. Pſ. xxxvii. 1. Jer. xii. 1.
‖ Heb. Fat.
[c] Job xxi. 9.
§ Heb. In the trouble of, &c.
† Heb. With.
[d] Job xv. 27. Pſ. xvii. 10. & cxix. 70.
[e] Jer. v. 28.
[f] Rev. xiii. 6.
[g] Pſ. lxxv. 8.
[h] Job xxii. 13. Pſ. x. 11. & xciv. 7.
[i] Jer. xii. 1.
[k] Job xxi. 15. & xxxv. 3. Mal. iii. 14.
[l] Pſ. xxvi. 6.

v. 1—14. The proſperity of the wicked hath been a common temptation to the ſaints of God. The pſalmiſt was ſtaggered at it, and muſing on the myſterious providence, breaks forth, Truly, or notwithſtanding God is good to Iſrael, even to them that are of a clean heart: this he is aſſured of, amidſt all his doubts and perplexities, and holding faſt this principle, rides out the ſtorm. Note, (1.) There are ſome firſt principles clear as the ſun; to them we muſt recur under all our difficulties. (2.) God's Iſrael are of a clean heart, waſhed in the blood, and renewed by the ſpirit of a Divine Redeemer. (3.) They who are thus pure in heart, will ever, by experience, own that God is good, and all his ways mercy and truth.

1. The pſalmiſt owns, how near he was being overcome by the temptation. But as for me, my feet were almoſt gone: my ſteps had well nigh ſlipt; the aſſault was ſo violent, and his faith ſo ſhaken, that it was with difficulty he kept his footing: For I was envious at the fooliſh, or the wicked, for folly and ſin are inſeparably linked together. Note, (1.) The ſtrongeſt believers are often the moſt ſorely tempted, and ſometimes ready to faint under their trials. (2.) Many a precious ſoul that enters heaven, can look back and reflect on the day and hour, when there was but a ſtep between him and hell. (3.) Though in our own apprehenſion we ſeem ſometimes well nigh gone, it is engaged in the everlaſting covenant, that God will never leave nor forſake us, and all our trials ſhall but the more magnify the riches of his grace.

2. He deſcribes the cauſe and proceſs of the temptation:

(1.) I ſaw the proſperity, or peace of the wicked. They know few

14. But I will hope continually, and will yet praiſe thee more and more. 15. My mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy righteouſneſs, and thy ſalvation all the day: for [o] I know not the numbers thereof. 16. I will go [p] in the ſtrength of the Lord GOD: I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs, even of thine only. 17. O God, thou haſt taught me from my youth: and hitherto have I declared thy wondrous works. 18. [q] Now alſo † when I am old and gray-headed, O God, [r] forſake me not: until I have ſhewed thy ‡ ſtrength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come. 19. Thy righteouſneſs alſo, O God, is very high, who haſt done great things: O God, [s] who is like unto thee? 20. Thou [t] which haſt ſhewed me great and ſore troubles, [u] ſhalt quicken me again, and ſhalt bring me up again from the depths of the earth. 21. Thou ſhalt increaſe my greatneſs, and comfort me on every ſide. 22. I will alſo praiſe thee with § the pſaltery, even thy truth, O my God: unto thee will I ſing with the harp, O thou holy one of Iſrael. 23. My lips ſhall greatly rejoice when I ſing unto thee: and my ſoul which thou haſt redeemed. 24. My tongue alſo ſhall talk of thy righteouſneſs all the day long: for [x] they are confounded, for they are brought unto ſhame, that ſeek my hurt.

o Pſ. xl. 5. & cxxxix. 17, 18.
p Phil. iv. 13.
q Ver. 9.
† Heb. Unto old age, and gray hairs.
r Phil. i. 6.
‡ Heb. Arm.
s Pſ. lxxxix. 6, 8.
t Ibid. lx. 3.
u Hoſ. vi. 2.
§ Heb. The inſtrument of pſaltery.
x Ver. 13.

v. 14—24. Filled with hope and joy, the pſalmiſt is happy in the midſt of all his ſorrows, and the greateſt of his troubles cannot ſilence his inceſſant praiſe.

1. He expreſſes his lively hope in a variety of inſtances; I will hope continually, at all times, and in all ſituations; when others deſpair of my recovery, my heart ſhall never fear nor fail, becauſe the God of my hope faileth not. [1.] God's power and promiſe are his grand ſupports; I will go in the ſtrength of the Lord God, diſclaiming all ſelf-ſufficiency, and ſtrong in the Lord, and the power of his might, for duty I ſhall be enabled, and in danger be ſecure. I will make mention of thy righteouſneſs only, either his fidelity in his word, or that perfect righteouſneſs of Jeſus, which is the believer's ſupreme hope and plea. Note, Though we have neither ſtrength nor righteouſneſs in ourſelves, there is ſuch fulneſs of both in the Redeemer, that we may be always moſt confident in him, when moſt deſpairing of ourſelves. [2.] His paſt experience encourages his preſent hopes. God had been the guide of his youth, v. 17. and he had hitherto acknowledged his wondrous preſervation; therefore in his old age he truſts God will not forſake him, but enable him to leave with the riſing generation, a teſtimony of God's faithfulneſs and care, as a grateful acknowledgment to his glory, and an engagement to them to make him their hope and truſt. Note, (1.) Early impreſſions of divine grace are a ſingular mercy, and demand ſuitable improvement. (2.) Every day's experience ſhould confirm our confidence, that God will never leave nor forſake us. (3.) The longer we live under the Divine protection and favour, the more earneſt ſhould we be in commending theſe good ways of God, in which we have walked, to the generations to come. [3.] In many great and ſore troubles he had been ſupported, therefore in the preſent he truſts he ſhall not faint; thou ſhalt quicken me again, and bring me up again from the depths of the earth, tho' he ſeemed as one dead and buried in his grave, he was aſſured his caſe was not beyond the Divine power, nor his circumſtances ſo deſperate, but God would retrieve them. Note, (1.) Great and ſore troubles are here often the portion of the righteous, but he who brings them into their difficulties, can and will ſafely extricate them out of them. (2.) Though we go down at death into the grave, and the earth cloſes upon us, we have a hope ſtill full of immortality, a reſurrection-day ſhall quicken our duſt, and bring us from theſe depths of the earth again. [4.] He not only expects deliverance from his troubles, but an increaſe of his greatneſs and conſolations, v. 21. Thus the darkneſs of our troubles, like the cloud which covers the ſun, ſerves but to heighten our joys, when at God's word the cloud vaniſhes, the ſun of divine grace ſhines with double luſtre, and the trial of our faith contributes to the increaſe of our honour and glory. [5.] His enemies that ſought his hurt, muſt with ſhame retire, and find it vain to contend with him whom God protects. Note, All our ſpiritual enemies at laſt ſhall gnaſh in deſpair, when they ſee us ſet above their malice, and receive the eternal deſert of their deeds.

2. He exults in joyful praiſes. All the day would he be ſhewing forth God's righteouſneſs and his ſalvation. His juſtice in the deſtruction of the wicked, his enemies; his faithfulneſs and mercy in his own preſervation; and, above all, the perfect righteouſneſs of Jeſus, on account of which alone ſalvation becomes ſecured to ſinners: theſe deſerved continual thanks, therefore he reſolves, I will praiſe thee more and more, or add to all thy praiſe, v. 14. Since every day afforded ſome new occaſions, called for increaſing acknowledgments, and left him far behind, unable to keep pace even in gratitude, with the mercies continually ſhowered upon him, the number of which ſurpaſſed his comprehenſion, v. 15. They were like the God who beſtowed them, very high, above all bleſſing and praiſe, and without parallel; for in heaven or earth none can compare with him, or do as he doth, v. 19. With joy therefore, ſurpaſſing great, his ſoul within, redeemed by divine grace and truth, v. 23. ſhall ſwell with gratitude too big for utterance; his voice be heard aloud in praiſe, and calling in the ſacred aid of muſic to aſſiſt the expreſſions of his enraptured Spirit, the pſaltery and harp ſhould pour forth a flood of harmony, and raiſe his ſong high as heaven's arch, and rival the angelic choir above. Note, (1.) Praiſe is the natural expreſſion of the grateful heart, the bounden duty of the favoured ſinner, and the acceptable ſacrifice to a gracious God. (2.) When we ſing with our lips, let us be careful to make melody with our hearts, and not forget the ſenſe in the ſound. They ſacrifice to their own drag, who merely love to hear their own voices; and that muſic is moſt inharmonious to God, which however exquiſite in itſelf, ſerves to draw off our attention from the divine object of our praiſes, to the manner and performance of them. (3.) It is the joyful hope of every redeemed ſoul, however feeble now his efforts, that ſhortly he ſhall be enabled to offer more worthy praiſes, when, with his golden harp before the throne, he ſhall have learnt the ſong of Moſes and the Lamb, and join thoſe heavenly hoſts, whoſe ceaſeleſs ſongs fill God's eternal temple with ſeraphic harmony.

PSALM LXXII.

This is intitled a pſalm for Solomon: it is probable David dictated it a little before he died, when, by divine direction, he ſettled the ſucceſſion, and gave orders to proclaim Solomon king, 1 Kings i. 30. But though Solomon's name is made uſe of, a greater than Solomon is here, even that Son of David, whoſe throne ſhould be higher than Solomon's, and his dominion univerſal and everlaſting. David in ſpirit, 1. Begins with a ſhort prayer for his ſucceſſor, ver. 1. 2. He paſſeth immediately into a long prediction of the glories of his reign, ver. 2—17. And 3. He concludes with praiſe to the God of Iſrael, ver. 18—20. And herein we muſt have an eye to Chriſt, praiſing him as our king, and pleaſing ourſelves with our happineſs as his ſubjects.

¶ A pſalm † [a] for Solomon.

1. GIVE the king thy judgments, O God, and thy righteouſneſs unto the king's ſon. 2. [b] He ſhall judge thy people with righteouſneſs, and thy poor with judgment. 3. [c] The mountains ſhall bring peace to the people, and the little hills, by righteouſneſs. 4. [d] He ſhall judge the poor of the people, he ſhall ſave the children of the needy, and ſhall break in pieces the oppreſſor. 5. [e] They ſhall fear thee [f] as long as the ſun and moon endure, throughout all generations. 6. [g] He ſhall come down like rain upon the mown graſs: as ſhowers that water the earth. 7. In his days ſhall the righteous flouriſh: and [h] abundance of peace ‡ ſo long as the moon endureth. 8. [i] He ſhall have dominion alſo from ſea to ſea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. 9. They that dwell in the wilderneſs ſhall bow before him: and [k] his enemies ſhall lick the duſt. 10. The kings of Tarſhiſh, and of the iſles, [l] ſhall bring preſents: the kings of Sheba, and Seba, [m] ſhall offer gifts. 11. Yea, [n] all kings ſhall fall down before him: all nations ſhall ſerve him. 12. For he ſhall deliver the needy when he crieth: the poor alſo, and him that hath no helper. 13. He ſhall ſpare the poor and needy, and ſhall ſave the ſouls of the needy. 14. He ſhall redeem their ſoul from deceit and violence: and [o] precious ſhall their blood be in his ſight. 15. And [p] he ſhall live, and to him ‖ ſhall be given of the gold of Sheba; prayer alſo ſhall be made § for him continually, and daily ſhall he be praiſed. 16. There ſhall be an handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains; the fruit thereof ſhall ſhake like Lebanon, and they of the city ſhall flouriſh like graſs of the earth. 17. [q] His name ſhall endure for ever: † his name ſhall be continued as long as the ſun: and [r] men ſhall be bleſſed in him; all nations ſhall call him bleſſed.

† Or, of.
a Pſ. cxxvii. Title.
b Iſa. xi. 3, 4.
c Pſ. lxxxv. 10. Iſa. lii 7.
d Iſa. xi. 4.
e Hoſ. iii. 5.
f Pſ. lxxxix. 36, 37.
g 2 Sam. xxiii. 4. Hoſ. vi. 3.
h Iſa. ii. 4.
‡ Heb. Till there be no moon.
i 1 Kings iv. 21, 24. or Pſ. ii. 8. Zech. ix. 10. Rev. xi. 15.
k Iſa. xlix. 23. Mic. vii. 17.
l Pſ. xlv. 12. & lxviii. 29. Iſa. xlix. 7. & lx. 10.
m Mat. ii. 11.
n Iſa. xlix. 23. Rev. xxi. 24.
o Pſ. cxvi. 15.
p Rev. i. 18.
‖ Heb Shall one give.
§ Or, through him.
q Pſ. lxxxix. 36.
† Heb. Shall be as a ſon to continue his father's name for ever.
r Gen. xii. 3. & xxii. 18. Jer. iv. 2.

v. 1—17. The pſalm opens,

1. With a ſhort prayer, which may be conſidered as David's requeſt for his ſon Solomon, that he might be qualified for the work of adminiſtring his kingdom with equity and righteouſneſs; or rather it is his prayer, in the perſon of all the faithful, for the Meſſiah, that he might appear, be exalted to his glorious throne, having all judgment in heaven and earth committed to him, and be qualified for the perfecting of the redemption of his people, by ſuch a fulneſs of gifts and graces, as might enable him to work out for them an everlaſting righteouſneſs.

2. He prophetically deſcribes the excellence and glory of his government, wherein though ſome things may be applicable to Solomon, others are only true of him whom Solomon prefigured, and therefore to him the whole may be beſt referred.

(1.) He ſhall rule with righteouſneſs, and be the protector of the poor or afflicted ones from their oppreſſors, v. 2. When ſenſible of their ſpiritual wants and wretchedneſs, they cry to him, under the ſtrivings of Satan, their great enemy, or of wicked men who perſecute them, v. 4. being in themſelves helpleſs and deſtitute, he will deliver and ſave them, redeeming their ſouls, and reſcuing them by his grace from the ſnares of the wicked one, and the deceitfulneſs of ſin. And if they are called to ſuffer unto blood, he will keep a precious memorial of it, and reward their martyrdom with a crown of glory, v. 12—14.

2. Under his government peace ſhall be diffuſed, v. 3. abundance of peace; peace with a reconciled God, peace in our guilty conſciences, peace in our diſpoſitions renewed by Divine grace, peace within preſerved, when all without is moſt threatning, and this effected by his righteouſneſs, the great meritorious cauſe of all our mercies.

3. His enemies ſhall feel his arm, and the rebels againſt his government be broken in pieces, v. 4. Whether Satan, the arch-rebel, or thoſe antichriſtian powers that long perſecute and harraſs his church, their end will be to be deſtroyed together. Note, The ſinner's damnation ſlumbereth not, though for a while it may be delayed.

4. His government ſhall be moſt deſirable and bleſſed. Like the rain on the new-mown graſs, the graces and conſolations of his ſpirit ſhall deſcend on his people, to refreſh them, v. 6. and flouriſhing under theſe heavenly influences, the ſouls of the righteous ſhall bring forth theſe fruits of holineſs abundantly, which are to the praiſe and glory of God, v. 7. Does it appear then, that we are the ſubjects of his kingdom by theſe flouriſhing fruits of peace within, and piety without?

5. His dominion will be univerſal, from ſea to ſea, from one end of the earth to the other. The inhabitants of the moſt deſolate parts of the earth ſhall ſome time or other have his goſpel preached to them, and yield obedience to the faith; and his enemies, whether Jews or gentiles, be brought to lick the duſt, laid low in deepeſt humiliation at his feet, v. 9. The richeſt kings of the earth ſhall bring their preſents, and the diſtant monarchs, in the fartheſt iſles of the ſea, offer their tribute, as a token of ſubjection, v. 10. They ſhall worſhip before him, as their God and king, and all nations ſerve him, when the kingdoms of the world at laſt ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord and his Chriſt, v. 11.

6. All his ſubjects ſhall honour and praiſe him; he ſhall live the joy of his people, and the gold of Sheba, the moſt precious offerings, even the bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits of his redeemed, infinitely more precious than gold that periſheth ſhall be preſented to him: prayer ſhall be made for him, for the proſperity and increaſe of his kingdom, or through him, as the mediator between God and man, through whom alone we can be accepted; and daily ſhall he be praiſed in his church, and by his faithful ſubjects, happy under his gracious ſway.

7. His increaſe will be wonderful and great. There ſhall be a handful of corn, which may denote Chriſt himſelf, upon the top of the mountains, on Calvary, ſown in his death as corn in the earth; or it may refer to the word of goſpel-grace, that at firſt was but as an handful, and ſeemed as unlikely to flouriſh as ſeed ſown on a mountain, but great was the effect; the fruit thereof ſhall ſhake like Lebanon, ineſtimably rich and precious ſhall be the fruits that ſpring from the death of Chriſt; or it refers to the vaſt increaſe of converts that ſhould be made to the truth, as ſoon as it was preached, and they of the city, the inhabitants of the ſpiritual Jeruſalem, ſhall flouriſh as the graſs of the earth.

8. His kingdom ſhall be everlaſting. Whilſt ſun and moon endureth, v. 5. he will have a people upon earth, his offspring, as the original word ſhall continue, v. 17. implies; and when ſun and moon ſhall fade and fail, ſtill he ſhall reign, his throne abiding as the days of eternity, bleſſing for ever his choſen people, and the ſubject of their everlaſting praiſes, v. 17.

18. [s] Bleſſed be the LORD God, the God of Iſrael, [t] who only doth wondrous things. 19. And bleſſed be his glorious name for ever, and [u] let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and amen. 20. The prayers of David the ſon of Jeſſe are ended.

[s] 1 Chron. xxix. 10.
[t] Pſ. cxxxvi. 4.
[u] Zech. xiv. 9.

v. 18—20. The pſalmiſt concludes with enlarged praiſes, excited by the glorious proſpect he had before him.

1. He bleſſes the Lord God, the Redeemer, the God of his Iſrael, whoſe wonders of creation, providence, and eſpecially of grace in his incarnation, death, and ſufferings, were ſo ſtupendous, and deſerving to be had in everlaſting remembrance.

2. He prays for the manifeſtation of his glorious kingdom upon earth, when he ſhall take to him his great power, and reign; and whilſt he breathes the longings of his heart, profeſſes his confident expectation of it in due time, Amen and amen, ſo let it be, ſo ſhall it be.

3. The prayers of David the ſon of Jeſſe are ended. This, tho' placed here, might be the laſt of his divine compoſitions, or it may ſignify that this was the ſummit of all his wiſhes, to ſee the Redeemer's kingdom come; or ſome ſuppoſe theſe are the words of the perſon who collected the pſalms together, and that the pſalm ends with the Amen in the former verſe. In ſuch a prayer, may every dying believer well deſire to employ his parting breath, and pouring forth his ſoul into the boſom of his Saviour, cry, Come quickly Lord Jeſus!

PSALM LXXIII.

This pſalm, and the ten that next follow it, carry the name of Aſaph in the titles of them; if he was the penman of them (as many think) we rightly call them pſalms of Aſaph: If he was only the chief muſician, to whom they were delivered, our marginal reading is right, which calls them pſalms for Aſaph. It is probable he penned them; for we read of the words of David, and of Aſaph the ſeer, which were uſed in praiſing God in Hezekiah's time, 2 Chron. xxix. 30. This is a pſalm of great uſe, it gives us an account of the conflict which the pſalmiſt had with a ſtrong temptation to envy the proſperity of wicked people. He begins his account with a ſacred principle, by the help of which he kept his ground, and carried his point, ver. 1. And then tells us, 1. How he got into the temptation, ver. 2—14. 2. How he got out of the temptation, and gained a victory over it, ver. 15—20. 3. How he got by the temptation, and was the better for it, ver. 21—28. The experience of others ſhould be our inſtructions.

¶ A pſalm † of [a] Aſaph.

1. ‡ TRULY God is good to Iſrael, even to ſuch as are of a clean heart. 2. But as for me, my feet were almoſt gone: my ſteps had well nigh ſlipt. 3. For [b] I was envious at the fooliſh, when I ſaw the proſperity of the wicked. 4. For there are no bands in their death: but their ſtrength is ‖ firm. 5. [c] They are not § in trouble as other men: neither are they plagued † like other men. 6. Therefore pride compaſſeth them about as a chain: violence covereth them as a garment. 7. [d] Their eyes ſtand out with fatneſs: they have more than heart could wiſh. 8. [e] They are corrupt, and ſpeak wickedly concerning oppreſſion: they ſpeak loftily. 9. [f] They ſet their mouth againſt the heavens; and their tongue walketh through the earth. 10. Therefore his people return hither: and [g] waters of a full cup are wrung out to them. 11. And they ſay, [h] How doth God know? and is there knowledge in the moſt High? 12. Behold, theſe are the ungodly, [i] who proſper in the world, they increaſe in riches. 13. Verily, [k] I have cleanſed my heart in vain, and [l] waſhed mine hands in innocency. 14. For all the day long have I been plagued and chaſtned every morning.

† Or, for.
[a] Pſ. l. Tit.
‡ Or, yet.
[b] Job xxi. 7. Pſ. xxxvii. 1. Jer. xii. 1.
‖ Heb. Fat.
[c] Job xxi. 9.
§ Heb. In the trouble of, &c.
† Heb. With.
[d] Job xv. 27. Pſ. xvii. 10. & cxix. 70.
[e] Jer. v. 28.
[f] Rev. xiii. 6.
[g] Pſ. lxxv. 8.
[h] Job xxii. 13. Pſ. x. 11. & xciv. 7.
[i] Jer. xii. 1.
[k] Job xxi. 15. & xxxv. 3. Mal. iii. 14.
[l] Pſ. xxvi. 6.

v. 1—14. The proſperity of the wicked hath been a common temptation to the ſaints of God. The pſalmiſt was ſtaggered at it, and muſing on the myſterious providence, breaks forth, Truly, or notwithſtanding God is good to Iſrael, even to them that are of a clean heart: this he is aſſured of, amidſt all his doubts and perplexities, and holding faſt this principle, rides out the ſtorm. Note, (1.) There are ſome firſt principles clear as the ſun; to them we muſt recur under all our difficulties. (2.) God's Iſrael are of a clean heart, waſhed in the blood, and renewed by the ſpirit of a Divine Redeemer. (3.) They who are thus pure in heart, will ever, by experience, own that God is good, and all his ways mercy and truth.

1. The pſalmiſt owns, how near he was being overcome by the temptation. But as for me, my feet were almoſt gone: my ſteps had well nigh ſlipt; the aſſault was ſo violent, and his faith ſo ſhaken, that it was with difficulty he kept his footing: For I was envious at the fooliſh, or the wicked, for ſolly and ſin are inſeparably linked together. Note, (1.) The ſtrongeſt believers are often the moſt ſorely tempted, and ſometimes ready to faint under their trials. (2.) Many a precious ſoul that enters heaven, can look back and reflect on the day and hour, when there was but a ſtep between him and hell. (3.) Though in our own apprehenſion we ſeem ſometimes well nigh gone, it is engaged in the everlaſting covenant, that God will never leave nor forſake us, and all our trials ſhall but the more magnify the riches of his grace.

2. He deſcribes the cauſe and proceſs of the temptation:

(1.) I ſaw the proſperity, or peace of the wicked. They know few of the troubles to which good men are expoſed, and ſeem to have a leſs ſhare of the common calamities of the human life, v. 5. Their worldly wealth increaſes, ungodly as they are, and evil as the means are which they uſe to obtain it, v. 12. They give a looſe to every appetite, and wallowing with luxury, their eyes ſtand out with fatneſs, or go out, pampered luſt continually ſeeking after forbidden gratification, v. 7. They have more than heart could wiſh, their proſperity exceeded their former moſt ſanguine hopes; or, the imaginations of their heart go on to covet more, and ſtill add to their ſtore: and as their life is proſperous, their death is peaceful; for there are no bands in their death, or until their death, nothing diſtreſſes them, they have neither pain of body, or terrors of conſcience, and die in peace, and at eaſe: but their ſtrength is firm, not weakned with ſickneſs or diſeaſe, or brought down to the grave by an untimely death. Note, (1.) It is an ill ſign when we know no trouble here below, but all things go on ſmoothly; for every ſon whom God loveth, he chaſteneth. (2.) Proſperous iniquity may continue even to the grave; yea, in death the ſinner may lie down inſenſible of danger; but he is not therefore the ſafer. Many die like lambs, who, if they ſaw whither they were going, would roar like lions.

(2.) He ſaw them not only proſperous, but abuſing that proſperity, and hardening their hearts in wickedneſs, inſtead of being thankful for the gifts of God. Pride compaſſeth them about as a chain, v. 6. they attribute to their own wiſdom all their acquiſitions, and think it an ornament to look great, and make a diſplay of their riches and magnificence. They ſpeak loftily, boaſting of their acquiſitions and mighty deeds, and with diſdain, inſolence, and arrogance, addreſſing their inferiors, Dan. iii. 15. Their power is turned into oppreſſion, they are corrupt in principle and practice; they ſpeak wickedly concerning oppreſſion, v. 8. vindicating their injuſtice, and glorying in their iniquity; violence covereth them as a garment, they deck themſelves with the ſpoils of rapine, and are not aſhamed publickly to appear in theſe garments of violence, Iſa. lix. 6. and they ſhew no more fear of God, than regard to man. They ſet their mouth againſt heaven, blaſpheming God, denying his providence, and defying his threatnings; and their tongue walketh through the earth with unbridled licentiouſneſs, neither greatneſs or goodneſs is any protection from their malevolence and ſlander. They are not afraid to ſpeak evil of dignities, and none eſcape the laſh of their calumnies; and they ſay, how doth God know? and is there knowledge in the Moſt High? atheiſtically concluding he took no concern in the affairs of mortals, and that as he neither ſaw nor regarded their iniquities, they were ſafe, and might live as they liſted. Behold, theſe indeed are the ungodly, v. 12. Note, (1.) Pride was the ſin of devils, and thereby men moſt reſemble them. (2.) They who talk proudly, talk fooliſhly, as well as wickedly, and will ſhortly change their tone. (3.) Though the oppreſſor ſucceed in his violence, theſe garments will prove his ſhame, not his glory. (4.) Wickedneſs in practice is often productive of infidelity in principle. They who fear a day of recompence, flatter themſelves there is none.

(3.) Whilſt the wicked were thus proſperous and proud, he obſerved God's faithful ones afflicted, and felt it to be his own caſe; and this eſpecially ſtaggered him. Therefore his people return hither, God's people are brought to the Pſalmiſt's perplexity by obſerving theſe things; and waters of a full cup are wrung out to them, for many and bitter are their afflictions. Though theſe words may be applied to the wicked, as connected with the foregoing and following verſes, intimating the multitudes who join them, and approve their ways, and have a full cup of worldly comforts put into their hands. The Pſalmiſt alſo himſelf had experienced many a ſore trial, All the day long have I been plagued, or ſcourged, and chaſtened every morning, v. 14. every day brought him ſome croſs and trial, whilſt they who blaſphemed God, knew no ſorrow, and this made him ready to accuſe God's ways as unequal. Note, (1.) Correction is a mark of God's paternal heart towards us, and therefore we muſt not faint when he chaſtiſeth. (2.) Though our afflictions be heavy, or long continued, the deepeſt of our diſtreſſes are far preferable to the greateſt heighth of proſperous iniquity.

3. He owns the temptation ſo far prevailed againſt him, as to lead him to this raſh concluſion, Verily I have cleanſed my heart in vain, and waſhed my hands in innocency; as if it profited a man nothing to ſerve God, and that, as the wicked ſuggeſted, God had indeed forſaken the earth; this he owns was his infirmity. Note, (1.) By nature we are all impure, till our hearts are cleanſed in the fountain of a Redeemer's blood. (2.) Every one who hath waſhed therein, walks in holineſs, as Chriſt alſo walked. (3.) They who have faith to wait the iſſue, will be convinced, whatever they ſuffer here below, that it is not in vain to ſerve God, when they perceive that great is their reward in heaven.

15. If I ſay, I will ſpeak thus: behold, I ſhould offend againſt the generation of thy children. 16. [m] When I thought to know this, it was † too painful for me.
17. Until [n] I went into the ſanctuary of God; then underſtood
I [o] their end. 18. Surely [p] thou didſt ſet them in ſlippery places: thou caſtedſt them down into deſtruction.
19. How are they brought into deſolation, as in a moment? they are utterly conſumed with terrors. 20.
[q] As a dream when one awaketh; ſo, O LORD, when thou awakeſt, thou ſhalt deſpiſe their image.

m Eccleſ. viii. 17.
† Heb. Labour in mine eyes.
n Pſ. lxxvii. 13.
o Ibid. xxxvii. 38.
p Ibid. xxxv. 6.
q Job xx. 8. Pſ. xc. 5.

v. 15—20. He was ſtrongly tempted, but as ſtrongly ſupported, and enabled at laſt to prevail.

1. He kept his thoughts to himſelf, whilſt he ruminated on the ſubject, leaſt he ſhould offend God's people; and though he ſaw the raſh ſuggeſtion of his ſpirit, he would not ſpeak unadviſedly with his lips. If I ſay, I will ſpeak thus: behold, I ſhould offend the generation of thy children; and that he was ſhocked to think of, and carefully avoided. Note, (1.) When evil thoughts ariſe, our labour muſt be to ſuppreſs them; when once uttered, their miſchief may be endleſs and irreparable. (2.) There are a people in the world dear to God as children, and who love him as their father, whom we muſt be careful never to offend, to grieve, or diſcourage. (3.) It would be the greateſt reproach on God's ſervice, and moſt effectually tend to weaken the hands of his people, to miſrepreſent his good ways, as unprofitable and vain. (4.) They who do ſo, ſhew they have never truly ſerved God, ſince the experience of every faithful ſoul proves his ſervice to be the ſupreme felicity.

2. Though by the light of reaſon he could not reconcile this difficulty, yet when he went into the ſanctuary, ſought God by prayer, and communed with his word and miniſters, then the myſtery was unfolded; he ſaw the proſperity of ſinners no longer to be envied, when they were fattening only as an ox for the ſlaughter, v. 17. Their joy had no ſtability, was precarious and momentary, their deſtruction inevitable, ſudden, and terrible, v. 18, 19. Like a dream of the night, when God awakes to judgment, their proſperity vaniſhes, and their image, their vain pomp and ſplendor, which now proves a mere ſhadow, is deſpiſed, and exchanged for everlaſting ſhame and contempt, Dan. xii. 2. Note, We muſt form our judgment of men and things not by appearances, but by the word of God; and when we there ſee the end of proſperous iniquity in everlaſting burnings, and of ſuffering piety in eternal glory, we ſhall no longer heſitate about our choice.

21. Thus [r] my heart was grieved, and I was pricked in my reins. 22. [s] So fooliſh was I, and ignorant: I was as a beaſt before thee. 23. Neverthele ſs, I am continually with thee: [t] thou haſt holden me by my right hand. 24. [u] Thou ſhalt guide me with thy counſel, and afterward receive me to glory. 25. Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I deſire beſides thee. 26. [x] My fleſh and my heart faileth:
but God is the † ſtrength of my heart, and [y] my portion for ever. 27. For lo, they that are far from thee, ſhall periſh: thou haſt deſtroyed all them [z] that go a whoring from thee. 28. But it is good for me to draw near to God: I have put my truſt in the Lord GOD, that I may declare all thy works.

r Pſ. xxxvii. 1.
s Ibid. xcii. 6. Prov. xxx. 2.
t 1 Pet. i. 5.
u Pſ. xxxii. 8.
x Ibid. lxxxiv. 2. & cxix. 81.
† Heb. Rock.
y Pſ. xvi. 5. & cxix. 5, 7.
z Exod. xxxiv. 15. Num. xv. 39.

v. 21—28. The temptations of the ſaints ſerve to brighten their graces, and their recovery from the doubts which ſtaggered them, iſſues in their greater eſtabliſhment. Such good the Pſalmiſt found,

1. His ſinful thoughts tended to his deeper abaſement. My heart was grieved, or leavened, he owns it, to his ſhame, that the proſperity of the wicked put his mind into an undue ferment, and I was pricked in my reins, his envy at them gave him acute pain; ſo fooliſh was I, and ignorant, even as a beaſt before thee: he ſcarce finds words ſufficiently expreſſive of the ſtupidity and folly of his conduct. Note, (1.) Envy and fretfulneſs make men their own tormentors. (2.) Good men, who have the deepeſt knowledge of their own hearts, have the deepeſt ſenſe of their own perverſeneſs and folly; and each knowing moſt of himſelf, thinks he can with greateſt propriety apply to himſelf the ſaying, I am more brutiſh than any man, Prov. xxx. 2.

2. He owns his deep obligations to the grace of God. Neverthele ſs, notwithſtanding his folly, I am continually with thee, the object of God's tender regard, and at bottom in heart and affection cleaving to God amidſt all his temptations; thou haſt holden me by my right hand, as a tender parent that ſupports his falling child. Note, We are weak as helpleſs infancy, and ſtand wholly indebted to the everlaſting arms that are under us, for our preſervation. And the more we are convinced of this, the more ſhall we be engaged to love God.

3. He expreſſes his confidence of God's continual guidance and ſupport. Thou ſhalt guide me with thy counſel, his revealed word, and the teachings of his holy ſpirit, and afterwards receive me to glory, when every trial paſſed, and death the laſt overcome, thou wilt bring me to the conſummation of bliſs in thy eternal kingdom. Note, (1.) God's counſel in his word infallibly conducts to his glory thoſe who follow it. (2.) From paſt experience of God's grace, we may comfortably conclude the continuance of it even to the end. (3.) If we have a ſure inheritance in eternal glory, we little need envy ſinners any thing they poſſeſs above us here below.

4. His ſoul riſes up in fervent aſpirations after God, Whom have I in heaven but thee? a covenant God is the ſole object of the believer's worſhip and confidence, from whom alone he expects his felicity, and in the enjoyment of whom his eternal happineſs conſiſts. He hopes to be happy in heaven, becauſe God is there; and there is none upon earth I deſire beſides thee, all that earth affords, health, wealth, friends, family, honour, &c. are nothing, compared with a ſenſe of God's love, and the enjoyment of communion with him. All without him cannot ſatisfy, whilſt, in the want of all, he can ſatisfy our ſouls, and be to us a better portion than ten thouſand worlds. Note, (1.) The more we ſee of God's excellence and all-ſufficiency, the leſs we ſhall regard every thing beſides. (2.) What cauſe have we to lament the coldneſs of our hearts, that ſo little correſpond with the Pſalmiſt's fervent deſires?

5. In every diſtreſs he reſts his ſoul upon this Almighty God, his everlaſting portion. My fleſh and my heart faileth, but God is the ſtrength, or rock, of my heart, to ſupport me in every diſtreſs, and my portion for ever; when the body is laid in the duſt and forgotten, God would be ſtill the ſame to him, the portion of his immortal ſoul. Note, (1.) We muſt expect the hour, when this feeble fleſh ſhall fail, and ſickneſs, or age, bring us to the grave. (2.) Death is terrible to nature, and our heart, as well as fleſh, will fail us in that trying ſeaſon, unleſs God be our ſtrength, and faith in his power and grace removes the ſting of death. (3.) They who have made God their rock in time, will find him their portion in eternity.

6. Miſerable will be the end of the ungodly. For lo, they that are far from thee, that depart from God in heart and conduct, and live eſtranged from his love, worſhip, and ſervice, ſhall periſh eternally. Thou haſt deſtroyed all them that go a whoring from thee, that follow other gods, or, idolatrouſly attached to the creature, love and ſerve it more than their Creator; all ſuch ſinners have periſhed, and all ſuch will periſh to the end of time, who thus apoſtatize from God. Note, Let no wilful ſinner hope for impunity; none ever yet hardned his heart againſt God, and proſpered.

7. He declares his fixed purpoſe of cleaving to God. But it is good for me to draw near unto God in prayer, and all thoſe means of grace, whereby communion with God is maintained, and which they, who have their ſouls truly attached to him, find moſt profitable and delightful. I have put my truſt in the Lord God, who will never diſappoint my expectations, that I may declare all thy works of providence and grace, wherein his faithfulneſs and mercy appear, and for which we owe everlaſting praiſe. Note, (1.) They who know the comfort of communion with God, can ſay by experience, it is good to draw near to him. (2.) None ever truſted on him, and were confounded. (3.) The more we are enabled to truſt him, the more ſhall we ſee cauſe to praiſe him.

PSALM LXXIV.

This pſalm ſeems to refer to the miſeries of the Jewiſh people in their captivity. If penned by Aſaph, who lived in the days of David, it is prophetical, though ſome ſuggeſt it was written by another of the ſame name, after their return from Babylon. It may alſo be conſidered as referring to the ſufferings of the church in general in the latter days. The prophet, 1. Makes known to God the miſeries that they ſuffered, ver. 1—11. 2. He encourages his and the people's hopes, from the conſideration of what God had done for them formerly, ver. 12—17. 3. He concludes with divers petitions to God for deliverance, ver. 18—23.

¶ [a] Maſchil † of [b] Aſaph. — [a] Pſ. xxxii. Title. † Or, for.

1. O GOD, why haſt thou caſt us off for ever? — [b] Pſ. l. Tit.
why doth thine anger ſmoke againſt [c] the ſheep — [c] Ibid. xcv. 7. & c. 3.
of thy paſture? 2. Remember thy congregation [d] which thou haſt purchaſed of old: [e] the ‡ rod of thine inheri- — [d] Exod. xv. 16.
tance which thou haſt redeemed, this mount Zion where- — [e] Deut. xxxii. 9.
in thou haſt dwelt. 3. Lift up thy feet unto the perpe- — Jer. x. 16.
tual deſolations: even all that the enemy hath done — ‡ Or, tribe.
wickedly in the ſanctuary. 4. [f] Thine enemies roar in the — [f] Lam. ii. 7.
midſt of thy congregations: [g] they ſet up their enſigns — [g] Dan. ix. 27.
for ſigns. 5. A man was famous according as he had lifted up axes againſt the thick trees. 6. But now they — [h] 1 Kings vi. 18, 29, 32, break down [h] the carved work thereof at once, with — 35.
axes and hammers. 7. [i] They have caſt fire into thy — [i] 2 Kings xxv. 9.
ſanctuary, they have defiled by caſting down the dwelling- — [k] Pſ. lxxxiii.
place of thy name to the ground. 8. They ſaid in — 4. their hearts, [k] Let us ‖ deſtroy them together: they have — ‖ Heb. Break.
burnt up all the ſynagogues of God in the land. 9. We — [l] 1 Sam. iii.
ſee not our ſigns, [l] there is no more any prophet, neither — & Amos viii. 11.
is there among us any that knoweth how long. 10. O God, how long ſhall the adverſary reproach? ſhall the enemy blaſpheme thy name for ever? 11. [m] Why with- — [m] Lam. ii. 3. draweſt thou thy hand, even thy right hand? pluck it out of thy boſom.

v. 1—11. A day of trouble ſhould be a day of prayer. Whence can we hope for relief, but by pouring our complaints into the boſom of our compaſſionate God? The Pſalmiſt here,

1. Humbly expoſtulates with God on their calamities. O God, why haſt thou caſt us off for ever? for ſo long their ſufferings were continued, that they began to fear they would never end. Why doth thine anger ſmoke againſt the ſheep of thy paſture? ſo fierce his wrath appeared againſt them, though the ſheep of his paſture, whom once he had fed with a ſhepherd's care; and though fooliſhly they had ſtrayed from him, yet cannot they quit their hope, that he would ſtill regard them in this endeared relation, and ſtay the furiouſneſs of his diſpleaſure. Note, (1.) The people of God are ſometimes brought to very melancholy apprehenſions about their ſtate, and to fear the rod of correction is the ſword of judgment. (2.) Though God for a time caſt down his people, he will never finally caſt them off.

2. He pleads for a gracious remembrance from God. Remember thy congregation, choſen by him to be a peculiar people, which thou haſt purchaſed of old, by the blood of the Lamb, ſlain from the foundation of the world; the rod of thine inheritance, to whom God had an eſpecial claim, which thou haſt redeemed, not only by the eternal redemption of his Son, but by many temporal deliverances wrought for them, eſpecially from Egypt, this mount Zion wherein thou haſt dwelt, and from whence he intreats God would not remove his reſidence. And this is applicable to the church in every age, redeemed by Jeſus from ſin, death, and hell, in the midſt of which God is pleaſed to dwell, and who may in every time of trouble expect a gracious remembrance from him. Note, (1.) The paſt favours we have received from God, may be made a plea for greater; for where he loves, he loves unto the end. (2.) They who are redeemed by the blood of Jeſus, ſhall never periſh under the bondage of corruption.

3. He complains of the diſtreſs to which they were reduced. Lift up thy feet unto the perpetual deſolations, to come and ſee them; either thoſe of the Chaldeans, which they feared would be perpetual, or of the Romans, of ſo much longer continuance: even all that the enemy hath done wickedly in the ſanctuary, for though they had God's commiſſion to deſtroy, the ſpirit with which they did it, rendered them utterly guilty. Thine enemies roar in the midſt of thy congregations, where once the voice of humble praiſe was heard, there riotous mirth and joy defile the ſacred courts; or where they aſſembled for worſhip, they inſulted, diſturbed, and diſperſed them: they ſet up their enſigns for ſigns, on the battlements of the temple, as proud conquerors; and this defiance of God, his people could not behold without bitter anguiſh. A man was famous, or known, according as he had lifted up, or as one that lifts up axes upon the thick trees; formerly it was eſteemed a man's honour to have contributed to raiſe the temple, but now they break down the carved work thereof at once, with axes and hammers, eager to deface and deſtroy the glorious fabric: the ſanctuary is in flames, and razed to the ground, v. 7. They ſaid in their hearts, ſuch was their malicious purpoſe, let us deſtroy them together, that not a man may be left, or a place of worſhip remain. They have burnt up all the ſynagogues of God in the Land, ſo deſirous they ſeemed to extirpate their holy religion, and put an end to their ſolemn aſſemblies. Note, Worldly minds only feel their worldly croſſes; to a child of God, the intereſts of religion are infinitely dearer to him, than any earthly concern.

4. No proſpect of relief appeared. We ſee not our ſigns, none of the wonderful interpoſitions of God, to which they had been accuſtomed; none of the inſtitutions and ordinances of God's worſhip, which were a ſign of God's preſence with them, but ceaſed on the deſtruction of the temple. There is no more any prophet, few were raiſed up in Babylon; in Malachi they ceaſed, and ſince their laſt diſperſion, they have been left utterly deſtitute: neither is there any among us that knoweth how long; they underſtood not the prophecies concerning the end of the Babyloniſh captivity, and at preſent are entirely in the dark, without the leaſt knowledge when their deſolations ſhall end.

5. He intreats an immediate exertion of God's power on their behalf. How long ſhall the adverſary reproach and blaſpheme thy name for ever? for this is the moſt grievous part of their calamity, that God is ſo diſhonoured by the inſulting foe. Why withdraweſt thou thy hand, even thy right hand? pluck it out of thy boſom, and deſtroy our enemies. Note, The enemies of God, however proſperous for a while, will be conſumed at the laſt with an utter deſtruction. — [n] Pſ. xliv. 4. [o] Exod. xiv. 21.

12. For [n] God is my king of old, working ſalvation in — [p] Iſa. li. 9, 10. Ezek.
the midſt of the earth. 13. [o] Thou didſt divide the ſea by — xxix. 3. & thy ſtrength: [p] thou brakeſt the heads of the § dragons in — xxxii. 2. § Or whales.
the

the waters. 14. Thou brakeſt the heads of leviathan in pieces, and gaveſt him to be [q] meat to the people inhabiting the wilderneſs. 15. [r] Thou didſt cleave the fountain and the flood: [s] thou driedſt up mighty rivers. 16. The day is thine, the night alſo is thine: [t] thou haſt prepared the light and the ſun. 17. Thou haſt ſet all the borders of the earth: [u] thou haſt made ſummer and winter.

[q] Num. xiv. 9.
[r] Exod. xvii. 5. Num. xx. 11. Pſ. cv. 41. Iſa. xlviii. 21.
[s] Joſh. iii. 13.
[t] Gen. i. 14, &c.
[u] Ibid. viii. 22.

v. 12—17. We have here two conſiderations ſuggeſted for the quieting the people of God under their troubles.

1. God is Iſrael's King, working wonders for their ſalvation. God is my King of old, protecting and preſerving his people from their foes, working ſalvation in the midſt of the earth; that ſpiritual and eternal ſalvation which all nations ſhould partake of through Jeſus Chriſt; or as interpoſing in a miraculous manner, in delivering the Jewiſh people, dividing the red ſea for their paſſage, and deſtroying Pharoah and his captains in the waters, v. 13. though fierce as dragons, and ſtrong as leviathan, and with their ſpoil enriched his people; and hereby alſo he fed their hopes, and ſupported their faith during their long abode in the wilderneſs, v. 14. forth from the rock, at God's command, the fountain guſhed to relieve their thirſt, and followed them their journey through; and Jordan's mighty waters were dried up, to open a way for the redeemed to paſs over, v. 15. Miracles like theſe might well raiſe their expectation of deliverance from their preſent troubles, ſeeing his hand is not ſhortened. Note, (1.) The head of the old dragon is bruiſed by our divine Lord, and we may triumph over him as a vanquiſhed foe. (2.) The ſame rock that followed Iſrael follows us, for that rock was Chriſt, and from the waters of his grace and conſolations, believers are daily comforted and ſtrengthened in their journey through this wilderneſs. (3.) If we ſee not theſe outward miracles, as great ſpiritual wonders are ſtill wrought for God's Iſrael, who, through difficulties to human apprehenſion inſurmountable, are led ſafely to their heavenly Canaan.

2. He is the God of nature. The day is thine, the night alſo is thine; he opens the eye-lids of the morning, and draws the curtains of the evening, and in regular ſucceſſion the luminaries of heaven move in their orbits: he hath prepared the moon and the ſun, that alternately give light to the world. Thou haſt ſet all the borders of the earth; ſettling the bounds of nations, and fixing the habitation of each individual: thou haſt made ſummer and winter: and ſurely, he who made all theſe hath power to ſave his people; if his covenant of nature abide, his covenant of grace with them is more unchangeable, and whilſt they ſee theſe changes in the world they may not deſpair; their night of adverſity he can diſpel with the ſunſhine of proſperity, and change their dreary winter, of ſorrows and deſolation, into the ſummer of abundance and joy.

18. [x] Remember this, that the enemy hath reproached, O LORD, and that the fooliſh people have blaſ-phemed thy name. 19. O deliver not the ſoul of [y] thy turtle-dove unto the multitude of the wicked, [z] forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever. 20.
[a] Have reſpect unto the covenant: for the dark places of the earth are full of the habitations of cruelty.
21. O let not the oppreſſed return aſhamed: let the poor and needy praiſe thy name. 22. Ariſe, O God, plead thine own cauſe: [b] remember how [c] the fooliſh man reproacheth thee daily. 23. Forget not the voice of thine enemies: the tumult of thoſe that riſe up againſt thee, † increaſeth continually.

[x] Ver. 22. Rev. xvi. 19.
[y] Cant. ii. 14.
[z] Pſ. lxviii. 10.
[a] Gen. xvii. 7. Pſ. cv. 8. Jer. xxxiii. 21.
[b] Ver. 18.
[c] Pſ. lxxxix. 51.
† Heb. Aſcendeth.

v. 18—23. Conſcious that their help cometh only from the Lord, the pſalmiſt calls upon him to ariſe and plead, not merely on their behalf, but thine own cauſe, his glory being intimately connected with their ſalvation.

1. God was reproached and blaſphemed daily by their enemies, as if he was unable to deliver them, or unfaithful to his promiſes, and diſappointed their hopes, v. 18. their ſucceſs intoxicated them, and daily they increaſed their proud boaſtings. This their fooliſhneſs and wickedneſs, David hopes God will remember, and not forget for the ſake of his own glory, ſo diſhonoured hereby, v. 22, 23. Note, (1.) Succeſs often makes ſinners more daring, and ripens them for ruin. (2.) The enemies of God's people triumph often, as if the day was their own, but the proſperity of fools deſtroys them. (3.) Ungodly ſinners think they are very wiſe when they turn things ſacred into ridicule; but, to their confuſion, they will be proved in the end as fooliſh as they are wicked. (4.) God needs no memorial, he ſees and notes the ways of men; but it is right we ſhould plead this as a teſtimony of our regard for God's glory, and of our confidence he will appear to vindicate it.

2. His people were oppreſſed and perſecuted: they are called God's turtle-dove, ſo mournful, harmleſs, pure, affectionate, conſtant; his poor, humble and lowly in ſpirit, ſuch as God promiſes to regard; therefore the pſalmiſt prays, O deliver not the ſoul of thy turtle-dove unto the multitude of the wicked, who waited but for permiſſion to deſtroy them, forget not the congregation of thy poor for ever; though for a time they had ſeemed forſaken, he hopes God will at laſt remember them in mercy. Have reſpect unto the covenant; the conditions of which being fulfilled in the Redeemer, though we are unworthy, it is ſure to all the ſeed: for the dark places of the earth, and ſuch were the manſions of their captivity, are full of the habitations of cruelty, which rendered their ſtate more wretched and pitiable, being ſo cruelly treated by their enemies. O let not the oppreſſed return aſhamed; as diſappointed of their requeſts at a throne of grace: let the poor and needy praiſe thy name; give them occaſion to do ſo, for the deſtruction of their enemies, and their own ſalvation; and give them a heart to do ſo, that whilſt the wicked blaſpheme, they may adore thee.

PSALM LXXV.

This pſalm is ſuppoſed to deſcribe David's circumſtances at his acceſſion after the death of Saul: and may alſo have reſpect to Chriſt coming in the fleſh, and at laſt to judge the world. In it, 1. David returns God thanks for bringing him to the throne, ver. 1, 9. 2. He promiſes to lay out himſelf for the public good, ver. 2, 3, 10. 3. He checks the inſolence of thoſe that oppoſed his coming to the throne, ver. 4, 5. 4. He fetches a reaſon for all this from God's ſovereign dominion in the affairs of the children of men, ver. 6, 7, 8.

¶ To the chief muſician, [a] Altaſchith,
A pſalm or ſong † of Aſaph.

[a] Pſal. lvii. tit.
† Or, for.

1. UNTO thee, O God, do we give thanks: unto thee do we give thanks: for that thy name is near, thy wondrous works declare. 2. When I ſhall ‡ receive the congregation, I will judge uprightly. 3.
The earth and all the inhabitants thereof are diſſolved:
[b] I bear up the pillars of it. Selah. 4. I ſaid unto the fools, Deal not fooliſhly; and to the wicked, [c] Lift not up the horn. 5. Lift not up your horn on high:
[d] ſpeak not with a ſtiff neck.

‡ Or, take a ſet time.
[b] Heb. i. 3.
[c] Zech. i. 21.
[d] Pſal. lxxiii. 8.

v. 1—5. The pſalm opens,

1. With repeated and fervent thankſgivings for God's great mercies received, and may be the language of David and his ſervants on his coming to the crown, after ſo many ſcenes of God's providential care; or of the church adoring God for the gift of his Son, who in his incarnation was brought near unto them, and whoſe miracles, and wondrous works of redemption, declared his power and grace. Note, (1.) Praiſe is ever our bounden duty on every review of God's mercies towards us. (2.) Every faithful ſoul experiences wondrous inſtances of God's nearneſs to help him out of dangers, from which he could not eſcape, and to bring him to the enjoyment of mercies above his expectations.

2. The pſalmiſt promiſes, when he ſhall be brought to the crown, his adminiſtration ſhall be juſt and upright. And when the great congregation of the elect ſhall be gathered unto Chriſt in the day of his appearing and glory, then ſhall righteous judgment proceed againſt the ungodly. Note, (1.) Magiſtrates are accountable to God, from whom they receive their authority, and their deciſions muſt be without partiality. (2.) They who have the honour of office, muſt remember the conſcientious diſcharge of the burden thereto annexed.

3. He undertakes to ſupport and reſtore, through the Divine bleſſing, the weak and diſtracted ſtate of Iſrael, that, through Saul's miſmanagement, and the factions in the ſtate, had been brought to the brink of ruin. Note, (1.) Diſunion and factions haſten a kingdom to deſtruction. (2.) One true patriot hath often ſaved a nation. But this more emphatically appertains to Chriſt, who, when the world and all its inhabitants by ſin were diſſolved, and ready to be ſwallowed up in miſery, bore up the pillars of it, and by his redemption renewed the face of the earth.

4. He rebukes the folly as well as wickedneſs of thoſe who oppoſed his government. Though they exerted all their power againſt him, with a ſtiff neck refuſed to bend, and proudly ſpoke againſt his adminiſtration, it was all in vain; and therefore he admoniſhes them to ſubmit, leaſt they ſhould feel the weight of his arm. Many are the enemies from earth and hell that oppoſe the kingdom of Jeſus; but it ſhall riſe ſuperior to all oppoſition, the antichriſtian horns, Rev. xviii. 7. ſhall all be broken, and the ſinners that have ſpoken hard ſpeeches againſt him, be ſilenced in eternal deſtruction, Jude, 14 15. Note, It is folly to oppoſe where reſiſtance is vain, and madneſs where ruin muſt be the conſequence; yet thus fooliſhly and madly do ſinners plunge their ſouls into eternal perdition, and will not have this Jeſus to reign over them.

6. For promotion cometh neither from the eaſt, nor from the weſt, nor from the † ſouth. 7. But [e] God is the judge: [f] he putteth down one, and ſetteth up another. 8. For in the hand of the LORD there is [g] a cup, and the wine is red: it is full of mixture, and he poureth out the ſame: but [h] the dregs thereof all the wicked of the earth ſhall wring them out, [i] and drink them. 9. But I will declare for ever; I will ſing praiſes to the God of Jacob. 10. [k] All the horns of the wicked alſo will I cut off; but [l] the horns of the righteous ſhall be exalted.

† Heb. Deſert.
e Pſ. l. 6. & lviii. 11.
f Sam. ii. 7. Dan. ii. 21.
g Pſ. xi. 6. Rev. xvi. 19.
h Pſ. lxxiii. 10.
i Job xxi. 20. Jer. xxv. 15. Rev. xiv. 10.
k Pſ. ci. 8. Jer. xlviii. 25.
l Pſ. lxxxix. 17. & cxlviii. 14.

6—10. We have here the folly of David's enemies, and the ruin which would attend thoſe, who, in oppoſing his promotion, were fighting againſt God.

1. All power is from God; he is the eternal king and judge; and according to the counſels of his own will he putteth down one, and ſetteth up another, and all human efforts to riſe, without his ſupport, are vain; for promotion cometh not from any quarter of the compaſs, but by him, and from him alone kings reign. As David the type, ſo Jeſus the antitype hath God exalted, to be a prince and a Saviour, and hath put all enemies under his feet, and made him to be head over all principalities and powers, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but in that which is to come.

2. They who reſiſt God's anointed, ſhall receive to themſelves damnation. For in the hand of the Lord there is a cup, and the wine is red, a cup of afflictions: it is full of mixture, mercy and grace temper the viſitations of ſome, and he poureth out of the ſame, according to men's provocations, lighter or heavier chaſtiſements: but the dregs thereof all the wicked of the earth ſhall wring them out, and drink them; when, without the leaſt drop of mercy, the Lord will pour out upon them in hell, fire and brimſtone, ſtorm and tempeſt; this ſhall be their eternal portion to drink, Pſalm xi. 6. Note, Whatever an impenitent ſinner feels on this ſide the grave, it is but the beginning of ſorrows, a drop, compared with that ocean of wrath in which he will to eternity be immerſed.

3. For both theſe manifeſtations of God's power, in ſetting up and caſting down, the pſalmiſt engages to render continual praiſe, v. 9. and employing the power with which God had entruſted him, All the horns of the wicked alſo will I cut off; break their oppreſſive rule, and prevent them from doing hurt; but the horns of the righteous ſhall be exalted; magiſtrates being ſet not only for the puniſhment of evil doers, but for the praiſe of them that do well. And thus ſhall the Son of David declare and praiſe the name of God upon earth, in his goſpel word, and in the church of his redeemed; and in the great day of his appearing and glory he will bruiſe the wicked with a rod of iron, and exalt his ſaints to reign with him in his eternal kingdom.

PSALM LXXVI.

This pſalm appears to have been penned on ſome ſignal victory obtained over the enemies of God's people, and may be conſidered as prophetical of the Redeemer's triumphs over the antichriſtian powers who perſecute his church. 1. The pſalmiſt congratulates the happineſs of the church in having God ſo nigh, ver. 1, 2. 2. He celebrates the glory of God's power, which this was an illuſtrious inſtance of, ver. 3—6. 3. He infers from hence what reaſon all have to fear him, ver. 7—9. And, his people to truſt and pay their vows to him, ver. 10—12.

¶ To the chief muſician on [a] Neginoth,
A pſalm or ſong † of Aſaph.

a Pſ. iv. tit.
† Or, for.

1. [b] IN Judah is God known: his name is great in Iſrael. 2. In Salem alſo is his tabernacle, and his dwelling-place in Zion. 3. [c] There brake he the arrows of the bow, the ſhield, and the ſword, and the battle.
Selah. 4. Thou art more glorious and excellent than [d] the mountains of prey. 5. [e] The ſtout-hearted are ſpoiled, [f] they have ſlept their ſleep: and none of the men of might have found their hands. 6. [g] At thy rebuke, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horſe are caſt into a dead ſleep.

b Pſ. xlviii. 3. & cxlvii. 19, 20.
c Ibid. xlvi. 9. Ezek. xxxix. 9.
d Ezek. xxxviii. 12, 13. & xxxix. 4.
e Iſa. xlvi. 12.
f Pſal. xiii. 3. Jer. li. 39.
g Ex. xv. 1, 21. Ezek. xxxix. 20. Zech. xii. 4.

v. 1—6. The church of God is often made to ſing her triumphant ſongs, even here below.

1. God is here repreſented as eminently appearing for her. In Judah is God known; there he had made the moſt glorious revelation of himſelf, and of his will: his name is great in Iſrael, exalted and praiſed by his people, and magnified in the wonders he wrought on their behalf. In Salem alſo is his tabernacle, and his dwelling-place in Zion; favoured with his immediate preſence, viſible in the Shecinah of glory. And this may refer to the incarnation of the Son of God, made known in Judah by the preaching of the Baptiſt, as Iſrael's exalted Saviour, who pitched his tabernacle among men, appeared in the fleſh at Jeruſalem, and in his church, the ſpiritual Zion, continues to take up his abode.

2. A glorious victory is obtained, whether by David, 2 Sam. xii, 26—31. or by Jehoſhaphat, 2 Chron. xx. 1—29. or by Hezekiah, 2 Kings, xix. 35. or by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to whom emphatically it may be applied, over the powers of ſin, Satan, death, and hell. The enemies are repreſented as ſtout-hearted, as men of might, as completely armed, v. 3. But there is no contending againſt God; the arrows are broken, the ſhield, the ſword, and the battle: unable to defend themſelves, the mighty are fallen with their chariots and horſes, they ſleep the ſleep of death, and the weak take the ſpoil, v. 5, 6. Thus hath our Redeemer ſpoiled principalities and powers; and following him, the weakeſt believer ſeizes the prey, and triumphs over vanquiſhed foes; for all the enemies of Chriſt's church and people, however many or mighty, ſhall be rooted out at the laſt.

3. The whole is aſcribed to God alone, his is the work, to him muſt be the praiſe. Not by our might or power, but at thy rebuke, O God, they are caſt down. Thou art more glorious and excellent than the mountains of prey; tyrannical kings, and all the perſecuting powers, are nothing in the hands of his omnipotence; the higher they are exalted, the more will he be glorified in their abaſement, for every mountain ſhall be brought low. Note, In all the dangers to which God's people are expoſed, they muſt look to the glorious power of God, engaged for them, and not be afraid.

7. Thou, even thou art to be feared, and who may ſtand in thy ſight when once thou art angry? 8. [h] Thou didſt cauſe judgment to be heard from heaven: [i] the earth feared and was ſtill, 9. When God aroſe to judgment to ſave all [k] the meek of the earth. Selah.
10. Surely [l] the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee: [m] the remainder of wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain. 11. [n] Vow, and pay unto the LORD your God: [o] let all that be round about him bring preſents unto him that ought to be feared. 12. [p] He ſhall cut off the ſpirit of princes: he is terrible to the kings of the earth.

h Judg. v. 20.
i 2 Chron. xx. 29. Pſ. xlvi. 10. Zech. ii. 13.
k Zeph. ii. 3.
l Ex. ix. 16. & xviii. 11.
m Pſ. lxv. 7.
n Eccleſ. v. 4, 5.
o 2 Chron. xxxii. 23. Pſ. lxviii. 29. & lxxxix. 7.
p Pſ. lxviii. 35.

v. 7—12. The effects of this glorious victory are deſigned,

1. To ſtrike terror into their enemies. Thou, even thou art to be feared, ſo able to deſtroy to the uttermoſt, and who may ſtand in thy ſight when once thou art angry? when his wrath, like a conſuming fire, devours round about him. Thou didſt cauſe judgment to be heard from heaven; decided the cauſe in favour of his people, by a miraculous interpoſition; the earth feared and was ſtill, or trembled and was quiet; ſome ſuppoſe it refers to an earthquake, or a clap of thunder, when the deſtroying angel deſcended from heaven againſt the Aſſyrians; or it deſcribes the ſilent awe with which the whole earth will be ſtruck, in that great day when the Judge of all ſhall be revealed from heaven; when God aroſe to judgment, and to ſave all the meek upon earth; this being the diſtinguiſhing character of that people whom the Saviour will deliver from all their enemies. Note, (1.) They who expect God to appear in their behalf, muſt ſee that, as the meek of the earth, they patiently wait for his ſalvation. (2.) Though patient ſufferers in ſilence refrain their complaints, God ſees, and will avenge them ſpeedily.

2. To engage the dependance of his people in times of greateſt danger. Surely the wrath of man ſhall praiſe thee; ultimately, whatever the ſaints of the moſt High ſuffer under oppreſſors, it ſhall ſerve to brighten their graces, and redound to his glory, who in the fire preſerves them, and the more it rages, the more will he be exalted in quenching the flames: the remainder of wrath ſhalt thou reſtrain; no farther can it go than his permiſſion. Thus all the rage and malice of the enemies of Jeſus moſt effectually, in the iſſue, tended to God's glory, and his people's ſalvation; and when he had permitted them to bring his dead body to the grave, he checked their fury, and by his glorious reſurrection accompliſhed that redemption they meant to defeat. What comfort and confidence then ſhould this miniſter to us under our ſevereſt trials?

3. To quicken them to the more diligent diſcharge of their duty, conſtrained by ſuch manifeſtations of the Divine grace on their behalf. Vow, and pay unto the Lord your God, the bounden tribute of thankfulneſs, and that not only with their lips, but in their lives devoted to his ſervice; let all that are round about him, the congregation of his ſaints, bring preſents unto him, even that moſt acceptable preſent of themſelves, their bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits, offered up at his footſtool, the ſacrifices due to him, that ought to be feared, with reverential and filial fear by his children, and who is the terror of his enemies. He ſhall cut off the ſpirit of princes, diſpirit the moſt daring, and deſtroy the moſt formidable: he is terrible to the kings of the earth, who in the day of final judgment will call to the mountains to cover them, and the rocks to fall on them and hide them from his intolerable wrath, Rev. vi. 16.

PSALM LXXVII.

The complaints of this pſalm are by ſome applied to the Jews in Babylon; and by others to their preſent deplorable ſtate; but they may be conſidered as expreſſive of the pſalmiſt's griefs, and in him of every believer. 1. He complains of the deep impreſſions which his troubles made upon his ſpirits, and the temptation he was in to deſpair of relief, ver. 1—10. 2. He encourageth himſelf to hope that it would be well at laſt, by the remembrance of God's former appearances for the help of his people, ver. 11—20. In ſinging this pſalm we muſt take ſhame to ourſelves for our ſinful diſtruſt of God, his providence and promiſe, and give to him the glory of his power and goodneſs by a thankful commemoration of what he has done for us formerly, and a chearful dependence on him for the future.

¶ To the chief muſician, [a] to Jeduthun,
A pſalm † of Aſaph.

1. I Cried unto God with my voice: even unto God with my voice, and he gave ear unto me. 2. [b] In the day of my trouble I ſought the Lord: ‡ my ſore ran in the night, [c] and ceaſed not: my ſoul [d] refuſed to be comforted. 3. I remembred God, and was troubled: I complained, and my ſpirit was overwhelmed. Selah. 4. Thou holdeſt mine eyes waking: I am ſo troubled that I cannot ſpeak. 5. [e] I have conſidered the days of old, the years of ancient times. 6. I call to remembrance my ſong in the night: I [f] commune with mine own heart, and my ſpirit made diligent ſearch. 7. [g] Will the Lord caſt off for ever? and will he be favourable no more? 8. Is his mercy clean gone for ever? doth his promiſe fail § for evermore? 9. Hath God [h] forgotten to be gracious? hath he in anger ſhut up his tender mercies? Selah. 10. And I ſaid, This is my infirmity: but I will remember the years of the right hand of the moſt High.

[a] Pſ. xxxix. & lxii. tit.
† Or, for.
[b] Pſ. l. 15.
‡ Heb. My hand was ſtretched out.
[c] Luke xviii. 1.
[d] Jer. xxxi. 15.
[e] Deut. xxxii. 7. Pſ. cxliii. 5. Iſa. li. 9.
[f] Pſ. iv. 4.
[g] Ibid. xiii. 1.
§ Heb. To generation and generation.
[h] Iſa. xlix. 15.

v. 1—10. Among the ſevereſt conflicts the believer endures, are thoſe inward diſtreſſes and dejections with which his ſpirit is ſometimes afflicted; but let him not think ſome ſtrange thing is happened unto him, here is a holy man of God in his ſtate; nor let him deſpair of comfort and relief, when it ſtands here on record, I cried, and he gave ear to me. We have here,

1. The pſalmiſt's fervent and inceſſant prayers in the day of his trouble. I cried with my voice, earneſt and aloud; I ſought the Lord with eager importunity; my ſore ran in the night, his heart bled with anguiſh; or, my hand was ſtretched out in the night in prayer to God, and ceaſed not. Note, (1.) God's people muſt expect to ſee many a day of trouble from temptation, corruption, affliction, and deſertion. (2.) In our diſtreſs we are eſpecially called upon to fly to the compaſſionate boſom of our God, and pour out our complaints to him. (3.) If we would ſpeed, we muſt be both importunate and unwearied in our application.

2. His anguiſh was bitter, and he could find no immediate relief. My ſoul refuſed to be comforted; could lay hold on none of the promiſes; yea, when ſuggeſted to him, he thruſt them from him as if they belonged not to him. I remembred God, and inſtead of finding relief from thence, I was troubled; his inexorable juſtice, and terrible majeſty, faſtened on his mind, and ſunk him in deeper dejection: I complained of my ſin and ſufferings, and my ſpirit was overwhelmed, as if the one were too great to be forgiven, and the other too heavy to be born. Thou holdeſt mine eyes waking; no balmy ſleep brought for a time a truce of reſpite to his afflicted ſpirit: I am ſo troubled I cannot ſpeak; his diſtreſs ſo unutterable, and his ſoul ſo dejected. Note, (1.) Under deep temptation we are apt to feed our own ſorrows, and reject the conſolations God's word ſuggeſts to us. (2.) If we cannot ſpeak but in groans, that is a language which God can underſtand, and will anſwer.

3. His reflections on paſt experience rather aggravated than alleviated his ſorrows. I have conſidered the days of old, the years of ancient times; what goodneſs God had ſhown to his faithful, and what himſelf had experienced, which made the preſent ſad reverſe the more afflicting. I call to remembrance my ſong in the night, which in his happier days he ſung with delight; but now unſtrung, and out of tune, he cannot ſtrike one chearful note.

4. His melancholy fears occaſioned great ſearchings of heart. I commune with mine own heart, and my ſpirit made diligent ſearch into the cauſe of my diſtreſs, and where it would end; and between hope and fear reaſon with myſelf, Will the Lord caſt off for ever? as he ſeems now to have forſaken me; and will he be favourable no more? Is his mercy, ſo often ſhown to me, clean gone for ever? Is there no more mercy, not a drop yet in ſtore for me? doth his promiſe fail for evermore? that no word of comfort ſhall again refreſh my ſpirit. Hath God forgotten to be gracious? is it poſſible? hath he in anger ſhut up his tender mercies? ſo muſed, ſo reaſoned his dejected heart: and it ſpeaks the ſtrength of the temptation, that could call him to queſtion truths ſo evident; and of his unbelief, that could ſuggeſt ſuppoſitions ſo diſhonourable to God; or by theſe queſtions he ſought to ſtrengthen his faith ſeverely tried, by ſuggeſting the impoſſibility of his being utterly abandoned, when all God's promiſes and perfections, his truth, mercy, and faithfulneſs, were engaged never to deſert him. Note, (1.) They who are God's deareſt children, ſometimes diſtreſs themſelves with the moſt melancholy apprehenſions of being forſaken by him, and left to eternal perdition. (2.) This is of all troubles the moſt grievous. (3.) It is an unſpeakable mercy the fear is groundleſs; for he hath ſaid, I will never leave nor forſake thee.

5. One beam of hope at laſt brightens up the proſpect: he had gone far in his fears, much farther than he had any real cauſe for; now he ſtops ſhort, and chides his unbelieving heart. I ſaid, This is my infirmity, my lot of affliction, under which I ought not to complain, or rather my weakneſs and ſin ever to entertain a doubt of the love and compaſſions, the faithfulneſs and truth of God and his promiſes: but I will remember the years of the right hand of the moſt High, that he is the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever, able to ſave to the uttermoſt, and therefore ever to be remembred and truſted. Some render the words, the changes of the right hand of the moſt High; intimating, that notwithſtanding what he at preſent felt, he hoped to ſee a bleſſed alteration, and that God would change his diſpenſations towards him, and give him the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praiſe for the ſpirit of heavineſs. Note, (1.) We have already got, in a meaſure, out of our troubles when we begin to condemn our unbelief, and to caſt our care upon God. (2.) No ſin more beſetting, none more to be lamented, than this diſhonourable diſtruſt of God's faithfulneſs and love. (3.) If we have the right hand of the moſt High to hold us faſt, who can ever pluck us thence?

11. I will remember the works of the Lord: ſurely I will remember [i] thy wonders of old. 12. [k] I will meditate alſo of all thy work, and talk of thy doings. 13. [l] Thy way, O God, is in the ſanctuary: [m] who is ſo great a God as our God? 14. Thou art the God that doſt wonders; thou haſt declared thy ſtrength among the people. 15. [n] Thou haſt with thine arm redeemed thy people, the ſons of Jacob and Joſeph. Selah. 16. [o] The waters ſaw thee, O God, the waters ſaw thee: they were afraid: the depths alſo were troubled. 17. The clouds † poured out water, the ſkies ſent out a ſound: thine arrows alſo went abroad. 18. The voice of thy thunder was in the heaven: [p] the lightnings lightned the world, the earth trembled and ſhook. 19. [q] Thy way is in the ſea, and thy path in the great waters, and [r] thy foot-ſteps are not known. 20. [s] Thou leddeſt thy people like a flock, by the hand of Moſes and Aaron.

[i] Pſal. xliv. 1.
[k] Ibid. cxliii. 5.
[l] Ibid. lxxiii. 17.
[m] Ex. xv. 11.
[n] Ibid. vi. 6.
[o] Ibid. xiv. 21. Pſ. cxiv. 3. Hab. iii. 8, &c.
† Heb. Were poured forth with water.
[p] Pſ. xcvii. 4.
[q] Neh. ix. 11. Hab. iii. 15.
[r] Ex. xiv. 28. Rom. xi. 33.
[s] Ex. xiv. 19. Pſal. lxxviii. 52. & lxxx. 1.

v. 11—20. Though we find not the immediate effect of the means of grace, we muſt not grow weary in uſing them; when we are found in God's way, we ſhall certainly ſucceed at laſt.

1. He continues to meditate on God's works and ways for the comfort of his ſoul. I will remember the works of the Lord: ſurely I will remember thy wonders of old; the great things he had done for his people of old, and the earneſt of what he will do for them for ever. I will meditate alſo of all thy ways, of providence, redemption, and grace, for his own ſtrength and conſolation, and talk of all thy doings, for others ſupport and edification. Note, (1.) It becomes us often to remember the wonders of God's diſpenſations of providence and grace towards us, to awaken our greater thankfulneſs and gratitude. (2.) What he hath done for our ſouls ſhould be ſpoken of to his glory, and for the encouragement of others who may be in the like diſtreſs.

2. He acknowledges God's way to be holy. Thy way, O God, is in the ſanctuary, or in holineſs; all his diſpenſations altogether righteous, and they who wait upon him in his ſanctuary will ſee the reaſons of them opened and made known to them. Note, Though we may not always ſolve particular difficulties in God's dealings with men, yet this principle we muſt hold faſt, that God is holy in all his ways, and juſt in all his works.

3. He magnifies God's power and grace, ſo eminently diſplayed in behalf of his people: Thou art the God that doſt wonders; thou haſt declared thy ſtrength among the people, in thoſe ſtupenduous miracles wrought for their redemption out of Egypt, v. 15. Afraid and troubled at the preſence of God, the depths of the red ſea were diſcovered, and its waters ſtood up as congealed into a wall of ſtone, v. 16. the ſhowring ſkies poured down torrents on the Egyptians, the thunders roared, the lightnings flaſhed, the earth quaked, and killed them with terror and diſmay before the waters overwhelmed them; circumſtances which, though not recorded in the moſaical hiſtory, attended that fatal overthrow of Iſrael's enemies, v. 17, 18. whilſt they, conducted by the way God opened through the ſea, following his paths in theſe great waters, paſſed ſafely through, and then the ſea returned to his ſtrength, and no footſteps remained: thus, like a flock, God led them by the hand of Moſes and Aaron, and brought them at laſt to the promiſed reſt in Canaan, v. 19, 20. In all which he glorioufly manifeſted his power and grace towards his people, and hath given them everlaſting cauſe to triumph in him: Who is ſo great a God as our God? Note, (1.) The redemption of Iſrael from Egypt, is typical of our redemption from the bondage of corruption; and whatever difficulties lie in the way, God will aſſuredly bring his people to their eternal inheritance as he led them into the land of promiſe. (2.) Like this paſſage through the ſea, ſo are many of the works of God's grace and providence, incomprehenſible to us; we can only ſtand on the ſhore and cry, O the depth! Rom. xi. 33. (3.) As God of old thus delivered his people, ſo will he ever lead, guide, and preſerve them, and they who truſt in him ſhall never be diſappointed of their hope.

PSALM LXXVIII.

This pſalm is hiſtorical; it is a narrative of the great mercies God had beſtowed upon Iſrael; the great ſins wherewith they had provoked him, and the many tokens of his diſpleaſure they had been under for their ſins. The perſon ſpeaking is the Lord Jeſus, as appears from Math. xiii. 34, 35. and the deſign of it is not only to convince the Jews of their unbelief and ingratitude, but to caution us againſt the ſame ſins, For theſe things happened to them for enſamples, 1 Cor. x. 11.

¶ [a] Maſchil † of Aſaph.

1. GIVE ear, O my people, to my law: [b] incline your ears to the words of my mouth. 2. [c] I will open my mouth in a parable: I will utter dark ſayings of old: 3. [d] Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us. 4. [e] We will not hide them from their children, ſhewing to the generation to come, the praiſes of the LORD; and his ſtrength and his wonderful works that he hath done. 5. For [f] he eſtabliſhed a teſtimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Iſrael, which he commanded our fathers: [g] that they ſhould make them known to their children. 6.
[h] That the generation to come might know them, even the children which ſhould be born: who ſhould ariſe and declare them to their children: 7. That they might ſet their hope in God, and not forget the works of God; but keep his commandments: 8. And might not be as their fathers, [i] a ſtubborn and rebellious generation; a generation [k] that ‡ ſet not their heart aright, and whoſe ſpirit was not ſtedfaſt with God.

[a] Pſ. xxxii. & xlii. tit.
† Or, for.
[b] Iſa. lv. 3.
[c] Pſ. xlix. 4. Mat. xiii. 35.
[d] Pſal. lxiv. 1.
[e] Deut. iv. 9. Joel i. 3.
[f] Pſ. cxlvii. 19.
[g] Deut. iv. 9. & vi. 7. & xi. 19.
[h] Pſ. cii. 18.
[i] Ex. xxxii. 9. & xxxiv. 9. Deut. ix. 6, 13. & xxxix. 27.
[k] Ver. 37.
‡ Heb. Prepared not their heart.

v. 1—8. The pſalm opens with a ſolemn call from the Lord Chriſt to attend the inſtructive truths here recorded: they are addreſſed to his people, the Jews in general, who are called his own, John i. 11. and who were peculiarly bound to remember the wonders he had wrought on their behalf, to incline their ears to the words of his mouth; that everlaſting goſpel, which in the law and the prophets, was declared to them, and in the fulneſs of time preached by himſelf among them.

1. The matter required attention. I will open my mouth in a parable; which was his uſual method of teaching, Math. xiii. 34, 35. I will utter dark ſayings of old; truths which challenge the moſt ſerious regard, and which have antiquity to recommend them, the goſpel being as old as the firſt man, though more clearly and plainly diſpenſed when Chriſt the ſubſtance came, and the ſhadows fled away: which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us; thoſe holy anceſtors, of whom, as concerning the fleſh, Chriſt came, who carefully tranſmitted the revelation God had made to them, and the memory of all his wondrous works which follow, to their poſterity: and we will not hide them from their children, the Jewiſh people, to whom Chriſt and his apoſtles fully publiſhed the glorious goſpel, ſhewing to the generation to come, in a conſtant ſucceſſion of miniſters, the praiſes of the Lord; thoſe truths of goſpel grace, which will furniſh matter for the ſaints everlaſting praiſes; and his ſtrength, manifeſted in the redemption, converſion, and ſalvation of ſinners; and his wonderful works that he hath done for his people in all ages, in delivering them from the hands of their enemies. Note, (1.) The matters of our ſalvation are infinitely important, and demand our moſt ſerious attention. (2.) Among all the moſt precious treaſures we can tranſmit to our children, we muſt ever eſteem the doctrines of the grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt to be the chief, and carefully inſtruct them in this moſt ineſtimable wiſdom.

2. The two chief particulars of thoſe inſtructions, which, with ſuch care, are here enjoined to be delivered down ſucceſſively through all ages, are the word and works of God: the word of God containing both the law and goſpel; the works of God including all his providential diſpenſations in behalf of his people, v. 5, 6. and theſe are carefully to be inculcated on the riſing generation. [1.] That they might ſet their hope in God, and in him alone; renouncing all other confidences, expecting pardon, righteouſneſs, ſtrength, and ſalvation, from his ſovereign grace and mercy in Chriſt Jeſus, and not forget the works of God, manifold and marvellous, working for the good of his people, eſpecially the finiſhed work of the Redeemer; but keep his commandments from a principle of love, and through the grace miniſtered to them from God. [2.] That they might not be like their fathers, whoſe ill examples ſhould be their warnings; as Stephen alſo admoniſhed the Jews of his time, Acts vii. 51. a ſtubborn and rebellious generation, which, in innumerable inſtances, appeared from the day of their coming out of Egypt; a generation that ſet not their heart aright, faithleſs and hypocritical, and whoſe ſpirit was not ſtedfaſt with God; when they made the moſt ſolemn engagements, and moſt ſpecious profeſſions, they quickly ſtarted aſide as a broken bow. Note, (1.) Hypocriſy is the high-road to apoſtacy. (2.) The children of ungodly parents ſhould be doubly careful to avoid their evil ways, the bad effects of which they often ſeverely feel.

9. The children of Ephraim being armed, and † carrying bows, turned back in the day of battle. 10.
They kept not the covenant of God, and [l] refuſed to walk in his law: 11. And [m] forgat his works, and his wonders that he had ſhewed them. 12. Marvellous things did he in the ſight of their fathers, in the land of Egypt, in the field of [n] Zoan. 13. [o] He divided the ſea, and cauſed them to paſs through, and [p] he made the waters to ſtand as an heap. 14. [q] In the day-time he alſo led them with a cloud, and all the night with a light of fire. 15. [r] He clave the rocks in the wilderneſs, and gave them drink as out of the great depths.
16. He brought [s] ſtreams alſo out of the rock, and cauſed waters to run down like rivers. 17. And they ſinned yet more againſt him, by [t] provoking the moſt High in the wilderneſs. 18. And [u] they tempted God in their heart, by aſking meat for their luſt. 19. Yea, [x] they ſpake againſt God: they ſaid, Can God furniſh a table in the wilderneſs? 20. Behold, [y] he ſmote the rock, that the waters guſhed out, and the ſtreams overflowed; can he give bread alſo? can he provide fleſh for his people? 21. Therefore the LORD heard this, [z] and was wroth, ſo a fire was kindled againſt Jacob, and anger alſo came up againſt Iſrael; 22. Becauſe they believed not in God, and truſted not in his ſalvation: 23. Though he had commanded the clouds from above, and [a] opened the doors of heaven, 24.
And had [b] rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven. 25. Man did eat ‡ angels food: he ſent them meat to the full. 26.
[c] He cauſed an eaſt-wind to blow in the heaven: and by his power he brought in the ſouth-wind. 27. He rained fleſh alſo upon them as duſt, and feathered fowls like as the ſand of the ſea. 28. And he let it fall in the midſt of their camp, round about their habitations. 29. So they did eat, and were well filled: for he gave them their own deſire; 30. They were not eſtranged from their luſt: but [d] while their meat was yet in their mouths, 31. The wrath of God came up on them, and ſlew the fatteſt of them, and § ſmote down the choſen men of Iſrael. 32. For all this [e] they ſinned ſtill: and believed not for his wondrous works.
33. [f] Therefore their days did he conſume in vanity, and their years in trouble. 34. [g] When he ſlew them, then they ſought him: and they returned and enquired early after God. 35. And they remembred that [h] God was their rock, and the high God their redeemer.
36. [i] Neverthele[s]s, they did flatter him with their mouth, and they lied unto him with their tongues. 37. For [k] their heart was not right with him, neither were they ſtedfaſt in his covenant. 38. But he [l] being full of compaſſion, forgave their iniquity, and deſtroyed them not; yea, many a time [m] turned he his anger away, [n] and did † Heb. Throwing forth, or ſhooting with.

[l] 2 Kings xvii 14.
[m] Jer. ii. 32.
[n] Num. xiii. 22.
[o] Ex. xiv. 21.
[p] Ibid. xv. 8. Pſ. xxxiii. 7.
[q] Ex. xiii. 21. Pſ. cv. 39.
[r] Ex. xvii. 6. Num. xx. 11. Pſ. cv. 41. 1 Cor. x. 4.
[s] Deut. ix. 21
[t] Pſ. xcv. 8.
[u] Ex. xvi. 2, &c.
[x] Num. xi. 4.
[y] Ex. xvii. 6. Num. xx. 11.
[z] Num. xi. 1, 10.
[a] Gen. vii. 11. Mal. iii. 10.
[b] Ex. xvi. 14. Pſ. cv. 40. John vi. 31. 1 Cor. x. 3.
‡ Heb. The food of the mighty ones, Pſ. ciii. 20.
[c] Num. xi. 31.
[d] Ibid. xi. 33.
§ Heb. Made to bow.
[e] Num. xiv. & xvi. & xvii.
[f] Ibid. xiv. 29.
[g] Hoſ. v 15.
[h] Deut. xxxii. 4.
[i] Ezek. xxxiii. 31.
[k] Ver. 8.
[l] Num. xiv. 18. Pſ. cxxx. 7.
[m] Iſa. xlviii. 9.
[n] 1 Kings xxi. 29.

not ſtir up all his wrath. 39. For [o] he remembered that [p] they were but fleſh; [q] a wind that paſſeth away and cometh not again.

[o] Pſ. ciii. 14, 16.
[p] Gen. vi. 3. John iii. 6.
[q] Job vii. 7, 16. Jam. iv. 14.

v. 9—39. In a variety of inſtances the mercies of God, the rebellions of Iſrael, and the ſufferings they endured, are here recorded.

1. The diſcomfiture of the Ephraimites is mentioned, v. 9. which is by ſome referred to the times of Eli, 1 Sam. iv. 1—12. by others to the days of Jephthah, Judg. xii. 1—6. or it may probably relate to that more ancient tranſaction, when, in oppoſition to the Divine command, they went up againſt the Canaanites, Numb. xiv. 40—45. Whatever event be referred to, the cauſe of their defeat is clearly told; They kept not the covenant of God, and refuſed to walk in his law; faithleſs, diſobedient, and ungrateful withal, they forgat his works, and his wonders which he had ſhewed them: no marvel, therefore, they were forſaken of God, and left to themſelves became an eaſy prey to their enemies. Note, (1.) If God, by our ſins, is turned to be our enemy, vain are the ſhield, the ſpear, and the bow in the day of battle. (2.) Guilty fear makes men cowards; the wicked even fleeth when no man purſueth.

2. Many marvellous works of God are taken notice of: the plagues of Egypt, which procured the deliverance of the Jews; their paſſage through the red ſea between the divided waters; their conſtant guard and guide, the pillar of a cloud by day, and of fire by night; the copious ſtreams guſhing from the rock. Theſe all beſpoke his wondrous regard towards them, and ſhould have engaged the warmeſt returns of duty and affection. Note, In Jeſus we have all a greater redemption than from Egypt: by him a way is opened through the ſea of troubles that obſtructs our way to glory: his word and ſpirit afford us a ſure guide to heaven; and ſtreams of grace, infinitely more precious than theſe waters, guſhing from the rock Chriſt, follow the faithful ſoul in all his journey through this world's wilderneſs, till he reaches the heavenly Canaan.

3. Their baſe ingratitude is obſerved. They had been bad in Egypt, but they grew worſe in the wilderneſs, the place where ſuch amazing mercies had been ſhown them; and after all they had ſeen and received from God, ſinned yet more, and provoked his wrath and indignation againſt them, v. 17. [1.] They tempted God in their hearts; within the wickedneſs began, for there is the root of evil, an apoſtate nature: they were diſcontent with the proviſion he beſtowed on them, though ſo rich, ſo wonderfully provided, and ſo plentiful; from heaven's windows the manna daily fell, angelic food, ſo excellent it was; or the bread of the mighty, princely fare; and to the full: yet, like the firſt ſinners even in Eden, they entertained hard thoughts of God, nor ſmothered them in their boſoms, but dared to mutter their perverſeneſs, by aſking meat for their luſt, not ſatisfied to be fed, unleſs their pampered appetite was indulged in all its cravings. Note, (1.) Nothing will ſatisfy a diſcontented ſpirit. (2.) To murmur againſt God as a hard maſter, is a deep proof of the deſperate and unſubdued wickedneſs of the fallen heart. [2.] They ſpake againſt God, broke out into open blaſphemy, arraigning his providence, and diſtruſting his power. They admit he had opened the rock and given them water; but that was little in their eyes; could he give them bread alſo? (for manna they loathed as light food, though the bread of heaven) and provide fleſh for his people? Can he furniſh a table in the wilderneſs? without which his other gifts ſeemed to them ſcarce worth a thank.

4. With indignation God heard their murmurs, v. 21. for he ever hears, and is wroth with thoſe who doubt his power, and quarrel with his proviſion: inſtant the fire kindled; at his word the winds aroſe, and blew from thoſe points of the compaſs whence their meat was to be brought, and ſtrait immenſe clouds of feathered fowls appeared, (which ſome ſuppoſe were locuſts, though I rather take them literally to be quails, for, to God's almighty power, it was alike eaſy to bring the one as the other) thick they fell about their camp, cubits in heighth, enough to feed for a month ſix hundred thouſand men, beſides women and children, Numb. xi. 19—32. Note, (1.) The meals of luxury are deceitful meat, it may be ſweet in the mouth, but in the belly it will be bitter as gall. (2.) When God gratifies ſinners in their requeſts, his gifts become their ſnare and curſe.

5. They ſhamefully abuſed their proviſion. They did eat, and were filled, or gorged; their appetite was ſatiated, and their luſts gratified to the full. Note, (1.) This world's abundance is often thus abuſed to groſs exceſs. (2.) When men are given up to their luſts, reflection is baniſhed, and they ruſh on their ruin.

6. God ſmote them in the very act of ſin. Whilſt the meat was yet in their mouth his wrath fell upon them, and ſlew the fatteſt of them, prepared as ſheep for the ſlaughter; and ſmote down their choſen men, the mightieſt and ſtrongeſt. Note, (1.) They who make a God of their bellies, will find their end to be deſtruction. (2.) When the arm of death is lifted up, the ſtouteſt and moſt affluent fall an eaſy prey.

7. They perſiſted in their ſins, and God followed them with repeated judgments: neither mercies nor corrections bowed their ſtubborn hearts; their faith ſcarce laſted whilſt the miracles were before their eyes, and on every new difficulty they relapſed into murmuring and unbelief. For this, in fruitleſs marches he conſumed their days, forbidding them to enter Canaan, and during forty years ſtrewed the wilderneſs with their carcaſes. Note, (1.) They who will not be bowed by mercies nor corrections, muſt be broken by judgments. (2.) Whilſt ſin is indulged, ſorrow muſt follow.

8. When they profeſſed to repent, they proved themſelves inſincere. When he ſlew them, terrified at the judgment, they ſought him for pardon and mercy, and ſeemed to return and enquire after God, as though they deſired to know and ſerve him; then they remembred his wondrous ſupport of them, and their deliverance from the Egyptian bondage: but ſhort-lived and hypocritical were theſe appearances; it was mere lip ſervice, their prayers were faithleſs, and their profeſſions falſe; the promiſes their fears extorted, were no ſooner made than broken; their heart was unſound, and therefore their covenanted obedience quickly failed. Note, (1.) If the heart be not right with God, however a hypocrite may ſeek to keep up appearances, he will be detected at laſt. (2.) Men in a fright fall to their knees and their prayers, like ſailors in a ſtorm; but they forget their convictions and promiſes the moment the danger is blown over.

9. Notwithſtanding, God's compaſſions with-held him from utterly deſtroying them: many a time turned he his anger away, and did not ſtir up all his wrath. For he remembred that they were but fleſh, corrupt in nature, and prone to evil; or ſo frail and feeble, that they muſt be cruſhed under the lighting down of his arm; a wind that paſſeth away and cometh not again; for ſo tranſitory, ſo irrecoverable is the breath of man. Note, We may all ſay, It is of the Lord's mercies that we are not conſumed, becauſe his compaſſions fail not.

40. How oft did [r] they † provoke him in the wilderneſs, [s] and grieve him in the deſert? 41. Yea, they turned back and tempted God, and [t] limited the holy One of Iſrael. 42. They remembred not his hand, nor the day when he delivered them ‡ from the enemy. 43. How [u] he had wrought his ſigns in Egypt, and his wonders in the field of Zoan: 44. And had [x] turned their rivers into blood; and their floods, that they could not drink. 45. [y] He ſent divers ſorts of flies among them, which devoured them; and [z] frogs which deſtroyed them. 46. [a] He gave alſo their increaſe unto the caterpiller, and their labour unto the locuſt. 47. [b] He § deſtroyed their vines with hail, and their ſycamore-trees with ‖ froſt. 48. [c] He gave up their cattle alſo to the hail, and their flocks to † hot thunderbolts. 49. He caſt upon them the fierceneſs of his anger, [d] wrath, and indignation, and trouble, by ſending ‡ evil angels among them. 50. He § made a way to his anger, he ſpared not their ſoul from death: but gave ‖ their life over to the peſtilence. 51. And [e] ſmote all the firſt-born in Egypt: the chief of their ſtrength [f] in the tabernacles of Ham: 52. But [g] made his own people to go forth like ſheep, and guided them in the wilderneſs like a flock. 53. And he led them on ſafely, ſo that they feared not: but [h] the ſea overwhelmed their enemies. 54. And he brought them to the border of his ſanctuary, even to this mountain, [i] which his right hand had purchaſed. 55. He caſt out the heathen alſo before them, and [k] divided them an inheritance by line, and made the tribes of Iſrael to dwell in their tents. 56. [l] Yet they tempted and provoked the moſt high God, and kept not his teſtimonies: 57. But turned back, and dealt unfaithfully like their fathers: they were turned aſide [m] like a deceitful bow. 58. For [n] they provoked him to anger with their high places, and moved him to jealouſy with their graven images. 59. When God heard this, he was wroth, and greatly abhorred Iſrael: 60. So that [o] he forſook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which he placed among men: 61. And delivered his ſtrength into captivity, and [p] his glory into the enemies hand. 62. He gave his people over alſo unto the ſword: and was wroth with his inheritance. 63. The fire conſumed their young men: and their maidens were not † given to marriage. 64. [q] Their prieſts fell by the ſword: and [r] their widows made no lamentation. 65. Then the LORD [s] awaked as one out of ſleep, and [t] like a mighty man that ſhouteth by reaſon of wine. 66. And [u] he ſmote his enemies in the hinder parts: he put them to a per-

[r] Pſ. xcv. 9, 10. Iſa. vii. 13. Eph. iv. 30.
† Or, rebel againſt.
[s] Iſa. lxiii. 10.
[t] Ver. 20.
‡ Or, from affliction.
[u] Pſal. cv. 27, &c.
[x] Ex. vii. 20. Pſ. cv. 29.
[y] Ex. viii. 24. Pſ. cv. 31.
[z] Ex. viii. 6.
[a] Ibid. x. 13. Pſ. cv. 34.
[b] Ex. ix. 23. Pſ. cv. 37.
§ Heb. Killed.
‖ Or, great hail ſtones.
[c] Ex. ix. 23. Pſ. cv. 28.
† Or, lightnings.
[d] Rom. ii. 8, 9.
‡ i. e. Deſtroying.
§ Heb. Weighed a path.
‖ Or, their beaſts to the murrain, Ex. ix. 3, 6.
[e] Ex. xii. 29. Pſ. cv. 36.
[f] Pſ. cvi. 22.
[g] Ibid. lxxvii. 20.
[h] Ex. xiv. 27. & xv. 10.
[i] Pſ. xliv. 3.
[k] Joſh. xiii. 7. Pſal. cxxxvi. 21, 22.
[l] Iſa. xxvi. 10.
[m] Hoſ. vii. 16.
[n] Deut. xxxii. 16, 21.
[o] 1 Sam. iv. 11. Jer. vii. 12. & xxvi. 6, 9.
[p] 1 Sam. iv. 21.
† Heb. Praiſed.
[q] 1 Sam. iv. 11.
[r] Ibid. iv. 19. Job xxvii. 15. Ezek xxiv. 23.
[s] Pſal. xliv. 23.
[t] Iſa. xlii. 13.
[u] 1 Sam. v. 6, 12.

a perpetual reproach. 67. Moreover, he refuſed the tabernacle of Joſeph: and choſe not the tribe of Ephraim.
68. But choſe the tribe of Judah, the mount Zion [x] which he loved. 69. And he built his ſanctuary like high palaces, like the earth which he hath † eſtabliſhed for ever. 70. [y] He choſe David alſo his ſervant, and [z] took him from the ſheepfolds: 71. From following the ewes great with young, he brought him [a] to feed Jacob his people, and Iſrael his inheritance. 72. So he [b] fed them according to the integrity of his heart, and guided them by the ſkilfulneſs of his hands.

[x] Pſ. lxxxvii. 2.
† Heb. Founded.
[y] 1 Sam. xvi. 12.
[z] 2 Sam. vii. 8.
[a] Ibid. v. 2. 1 Chron. xi. 2.
[b] Iſa. xl. 11.

v. 40—72. The ſubject, as before, is here continued, of God's mercies, and their provocations.

1. By a ſeries of rebellion they marked their abode in the wilderneſs, and grieved his holy Spirit, v. 40. Repeatedly they tempted God, and turned back from their profeſſions of repentance; and ſometimes talked of returning to Egypt. They limited the holy One of Iſrael, as if unable to ſupply their wants, or daring to preſcribe to him the time and manner of doing it, v. 41. forgetful of all the works of power he had ſhown in their deliverance from the Egyptian bondage. Note, (1.) God is grieved to ſee the perverſeneſs of his children, and feels for them when they provoke him to take up the ſcourge. (2.) When we are poor penſioners on mercy, unworthy the leaſt regard, it ill becomes us to preſcribe how God ſhall order the diſpenſations of his providence or grace towards us.

2. By a ſeries of miracles and favours, God marked his peculiar regard towards them, which rendered their ingratitude more aggravated. With a high hand he brought them from their houſe of bondage, having, by the moſt heavy and repeated plagues, compelled their oppreſſors to let them go. All the creatures appear armed in their quarrel; and the meaneſt, when he employs them, can be made ſevere executioners of his vengeance. Flies, lice, frogs, locuſts, caterpillars, devour, torment, deſtroy their enemies. Their waters are turned into blood, their cattle ſlain with thunderbolts, and every tree broken with the battering hail. Yea, heaven, as well as earth, appears againſt them, to execute the fierceneſs of God's wrath and indignation. The holy angels draw the ſword of judgment, and bring the threatned evil upon this devoted people. Death marks their way; in every houſe of Egypt the firſt-born expires. Eager now to haſten their departure, as obſtinate before to retain them, the Egyptians urge them to go; and, like a flock under the divine guidance, Iſrael departs, delivered from all their fears, conducted through the ſea, and beholding their enemies ſink like ſtones in theſe mighty waters, v. 52, 53. Brought at laſt to the promiſed land by the power of God, even to the mountain where God's ſanctuary ſhould be built; their enemies, though ſo mighty, diſpoſſeſſed and deſtroyed; and they made to inherit their cities, and divide their ſpoil, v. 54, 55. Such miracles of mercy God had ſhewn them, that deſerved to be kept in everlaſting remembrance. Note, (1.) Where God hath been liberal in his gifts, he may well of ſuch expect more abundant returns of thankfulneſs, love, and ſervice. (2.) The creatures, if armed with God's wrath, can quickly cover his enemies with deſolation. (3.) The ſame bleſſed ſpirits that miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation, are the executioners of wrath upon the ungodly. (4.) The greateſt of our mercies is not ſo much the poſſeſſing the good land, as being brought to the ſanctuary, and having a place among the living members of Chriſt's church.

3. Their ingratitude and rebellions in Canaan continued as before: they exactly followed their fathers bad examples; neglected God's commands; apoſtatized from his worſhip; unfaithful to their engagements, as a deceitful bow that diſappoints the archer, either breaks in his hand, or carries not the arrow to the mark. By their idolatries and ſpiritual adultery they provoked God's jealouſy, and kindled the wrath of the moſt High againſt them, v. 56—58. Note, (1.) The evil example of parents is dreadfully influential. (2.) The unfaithfulneſs of thoſe who profeſs to ſerve God, is more criminal than the wickedneſs of ſuch as live in open rebellion againſt him.

4. God's wrath broke forth upon them. He marked their baſeneſs, eſpecially their idolatry, and with abhorrence regarded this apoſtate people, v. 59. As a token of his diſpleaſure, he forſook the tabernacle of Shiloh, where he had been pleaſed to fix his abode, and manifeſt his glory, v. 60. No longer under his protection, their enemies prevailed againſt them. He delivered his ſtrength and glory, the ark in which they truſted, and where God's glory reſted, into the hands of the Philiſtines; whilſt the ſword devoured them, and their inheritance was plundered, becauſe he was wroth, v. 61, 62. Their young men were conſumed in the prime of life; their maidens left unmarried, or, were not praiſed; no bridal ſongs and ſolemnities were heard, v. 63. Even their prieſts fell with their ſacred charge, whoſe wickedneſs, notwithſtanding their character, juſtly expoſed them to the divine wrath; and their widows made no lamentation: either their ill conduct made them diſregarded, or they were ſwallowed up in deeper grief on the loſs of the ark, and the impending calamities, as appeared in the wife of Phinehas, who inſtantly fell in labour, and died, 1 Sam. iv. 19—22. Note, (1.) If God's people forſake him, juſtly may they expect to be forſaken by him. (2.) It is a fooliſh dependance to truſt on the tabernacle and the formalities of religion, when the ſpirit of it is loſt, and God is departed.

5. Though they had ſo ſhamefully departed from God, he had not utterly caſt them off, but returned in mercy to them. As one awaked from ſleep, and refreſhed with wine, the Lord aroſe in pity to their caſe, and with power ſtretched forth his arm. His enemies felt the dreadful blow, ſmitten with hæmorrhoids, or the piles, and confounded: their Dagon falls, and their treſpaſs-offering ſent with the returning ark, perpetuates their reproach, 1 Sam. vi. 5. Once more he pitched his tent among them; and, though he refuſed Shiloh and the tribe of Ephraim for his abode, v. 67. he choſe the tribe of Judah, and in the beloved Zion choſe his habitation. There he built his ſanctuary: the work was Solomon's; the plan, the power, and ability, were from God. There firm he fixed the pillars of his throne, and eſtabliſhed that church, againſt which, though the temple's walls are long ſince demoliſhed, neither earth nor hell can ever prevail. To crown his favours, he raiſed the man after his own heart to ſit on Iſrael's throne; exalted him from his low eſtate, where he fed his flock as a ſhepherd, to feed Jacob his people, and Iſrael his inheritance; and he diſcharged the important truſt with the greateſt integrity and uprightneſs; aiming at his ſubjects' good, and making God's word the rule of his adminiſtration: and his wiſdom as great as his probity: ſo that, endued with theſe qualities, he was enabled to make his people happy, and thankful to God for his wiſe and righteous government. Note, (1.) Though God may viſit his people ſharply for their ſins, he hath yet mercy in ſtore for them. (2.) They who triumph over God's people, ſhall find their glory quickly turned into ſhame. (3.) God will maintain his church for ever; but if one nation prove unfaithful, he will remove their candleſtick, and ſend the light of his truth to another people. (4.) This king of Iſrael was the type of his greater Son, who feeds, like a tender ſhepherd, the flock of the redeemed, and with ſuch ſurpaſſing righteouſneſs and wiſdom adminiſters the affairs of his ſpiritual kingdom. Bleſſed and happy are thoſe ſubjects, who can claim an intereſt in his government, and call him, My king, and my God!

PSALM LXXIX.

This pſalm ſeems to be prophetical of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by Nebuchadnezzar, or Veſpaſian, and may have a farther reſpect to the afflictions of the church of God. We have here, 1. The deplorable condition that the people of God were in at the time, ver. 1—5. 2. A petition to God for ſuccour and relief; that their enemies might be reckoned with, ver. 6, 7, 10, 12. their ſins pardoned, ver. 8, 9. and they themſelves delivered, ver. 11. 3. A plea taken from the readineſs of his people to praiſe him, ver. 13.

¶ A pſalm † of Aſaph.

† Or, for.

1. O GOD, the heathen are come into thine inheritance, [a] thy holy temple have they defiled:
[b] they have laid Jeruſalem on heaps. 2. [c] The dead bodies of thy ſervants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, the fleſh of thy ſaints unto the beaſts of the earth. 3. Their blood have they ſhed like water round about Jeruſalem: and [d] there was none to bury them. 4. [e] We are become a reproach to our neighbours: a ſcorn and deriſion to them that are round about us. 5. [f] How long, LORD? wilt thou be angry for ever? ſhall thy jealouſy burn like fire?

[a] Pſ. lxxiv. 7.
[b] Mic. iii. 12.
[c] Jer. vii. 33. 1 Mac. vii. 17.
[d] Pſ. cxli. 7. Jer. xiv. 16. & xvi. 4. Rev. xi. 9.
[e] Pſ. xliv. 14. & lxxx. 6.
[f] Pſ. lxxxix. 46.

v. 1—5. In this world the church of Chriſt is in a militant ſtate: many are the troubles of the righteous; and whither can they ſo properly carry their complaints, as to him who is able to ſave them from the hands of their enemies? We have here,

1. Their ſorrowful complaint.

[1.] They are invaded, and laid waſte. O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance, where God himſelf abode, and his Iſrael dwelt by his gift. Thy holy temple have they defiled, by entering it, and ſetting up their abominations, as Antiochus had done; or by deſtroying it, as was the caſe under Nebuchadnezzar and Titus; and this was a bitter grief to the faithful, to whom this temple was dearer than all they held beſide. They have laid Jeruſalem in heaps; burnt and deſolate, and the inhabitants buried in the ruins. Note, The church of God may be ſometimes brought to the moſt abject ſtate of miſery, but ſhall riſe as a phœnix from her aſhes.

[2.] They were ſlain and expoſed. The dead bodies of thy ſervants, who fell in the common calamity; for in national judgments it is often ſeen that the righteous periſh with the wicked: or, in hatred to their memory, their enemies dug up their bodies from the graves; theſe they have given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven, and the fleſh of thy ſaints unto the beaſts of the earth. Cruel, and without remorſe, their blood have they ſhed like water round about Jeruſalem; and, the multitude of the ſlain ſo great, or their malice ſo inveterate againſt their very corpſes, that there was none to bury them. See Rev. xi. 7—9.

[3.] They were reviled. We, the few ſurvivors, are become a reproach to our neighbours: they inſult over our fall, Pſal. cxxxvii. 7. a ſcorn and deriſion to all that are round about us, who mock at our pretended relation to God, and our profeſſions of expected relief. Note, It is no new thing for the people of God to be loaded with reproach, and turned into ridicule by their ungodly neighbours.

2. Their humble expoſtulation hereupon. How long, Lord, ſhall theſe ſufferings and reproaches continue? wilt thou be angry for ever? and leave us under theſe marks of diſpleaſure? Shall thy jealouſy burn like fire? and utterly conſume us? No: his wrath is but for a moment; he keepeth not his anger for ever; and therefore his people muſt ſtill hope in his mercy. Note, The bittereſt part of every Chriſtian's ſufferings ariſes from the fear of God's diſpleaſure.

6. [g] Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen [h] that have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name. 7. For they have devoured Jacob, and laid waſte his dwelling-place. 8. O [i] remember not againſt us † former iniquities: let thy tender mercies ſpeedily prevent us: for we are brought very low. 9. Help us, O God of our ſalvation, for the glory of thy name: and deliver us, and purge away our ſins [k] for thy name's ſake. 10. [l] Wherefore ſhould the heathen ſay, Where is their God? let him be known among the heathen in our ſight, by [m] the revenging of the blood of thy ſervants which is ſhed. 11. Let [n] the ſighing of the priſoner come before thee; according to the greatneſs of thy power ‡ preſerve thou thoſe that are appointed to die. 12. And [o] render unto our neighbours [p] ſeven-fold into their boſom, [q] the reproach wherewith they have reproached thee, O LORD. 13. So [r] we thy people and ſheep of thy paſture, will give thee thanks for ever: we will ſhew forth thy praiſe to all generations.

[g] Jer. x. 25.
[h] 2 Theſ. i. 8.
[i] Iſa. lxiv. 9.
† Or, the iniquities of them that were before us.
[k] Joſh. vii. 9. Pſ. cvi. 8.
[l] Pſ. xlii. 10. & cxv. 2.
[m] Jer. li. 36.
[n] Pſ. cii. 20.
‡ Heb. Reſerve the children of death.
[o] Iſa. lxv. 7. Luke vi. 38.
[p] Gen. iv. 15.
[q] Pſ. lxxiv. 22.
[r] Ibid. xcv. 7. & c. 3.

v. 6—13. We have here the requeſts of God's people, under the preſſure of their heavy afflictions.

1. They beg God would avenge their quarrel in the puniſhment of their oppreſſors. Pour out thy wrath upon the heathen; which is not to be conſidered as an imprecation of private revenge, but of public juſtice, their evil character provoking God's wrath, as it is added, that have not known thee, and upon the kingdoms that have not called upon thy name. And what alſo farther contributed to fill up the meaſure of their iniquities, was, that they have devoured Jacob, and laid waſte his dwelling-place, ſpreading mercileſs havock on every ſide. Note, (1.) They who live in ignorance of God, and neglect of prayer, will aſſuredly be viſited with his wrath. (2.) Though God permit his people to be oppreſſed and harraſſed for a while, he will ſpeedily avenge them of their perſecutors.

2. They intreat him not to remember either their own former iniquities, or thoſe of their forefathers, now alſo viſited upon them; but that their conſciences might be purged from guilt, and then they hope the ſufferings, which were the effects of their ſins, would ceaſe. Note, (1.) When God forgives, he forgets alſo; and our ſins are caſt behind his back, as if they had never been. (2.) The blood of Jeſus alone can purge the conſcience; to this therefore the ſinner muſt apply.

3. They importunately pray for ſpeedy deliverance, pleading the greatneſs of the affliction, and the glory of God concerned in their ſalvation. Let thy tender mercies ſpeedily prevent us; for ſinners have no merit to plead, nor hope, but in God's unbounded love. Their caſe required ſpeedy relief, or they were undone; for we are brought very low, or weak, ſin being the diſeaſe of the ſoul, and inevitably mortal, unleſs the Lord interpoſe to heal. Help us, O Lord God of our ſalvation, for the glory of thy name, and deliver us. All other help they knew was vain; and their own ſtrength but weakneſs: therefore they caſt their care upon him, as every periſhing ſinner muſt do, truſting his promiſes, as the God of their ſalvation, and pleading his own glory, the moſt prevailing argument; for his name would be diſhonoured by their enemies, if they were ſuffered to prevail and triumph with impunity. Wherefore ſhould the heathen ſay, Where is their God? whilſt in the ſalvation of his people a large revenue of praiſe would accrue to him; and the deeper their diſtreſs, the more would he be magnified in their deliverance. Let him therefore, the God of our ſalvation, be known among the heathen in our ſight, in his righteous judgment, by the avenging of the blood of thy ſervants which is ſhed; giving them blood to drink, in retaliation of their cruelty. They urge their preſent danger, from which nothing but the greatneſs of his power could reſcue them; priſoners, appointed to die, and ready to be ſacrificed by their mercileſs enemies, they ſighed out their ſorrows, and look to him to render unto their neighbours ſeven-fold into their boſom, not merely the wrongs they ſuffered, but the reproach wherewith they have reproached thee, O Lord, denying his being, diſbelieving his providence, deſpiſing his power, and reviling his true religion and faithful worſhippers. Note, (1.) Our greateſt extremity is God's opportunity. (2.) If the criminal appointed to die, even with the halter round his neck, caſts his eyes on the croſs of Jeſus, and in faith cries, Save, Lord, he may in this laſt ſigh ſtill find a pardoning God. (3.) The reproaches caſt on God ſhould be a greater grief to us, than any reproaches caſt on ourſelves. (4.) When our diſtreſs is ſo great that we can only ſpeak in ſighs and groans, that is a language God will hear and anſwer.

4. They engage to render their hearty thanks for ſuch mercy ſhown them. So we thy people, and ſheep of thy paſture, in which bleſſed relation they comforted themſelves in confidence of ſpeedy help, will give thee thanks for ever; the voice of prayer exchanged for praiſe, and their ſighing turned into ſongs of joy. We will ſhew forth thy praiſe unto all generations; recording the wonders of his grace, and miniſtring matter of thankſgiving to their grateful poſterity. Note, (1.) Praiſe is the tribute we owe for mercies; and, though ever paying, we muſt own ourſelves poor, even in thanks. (2.) Our experience of Divine grace and providence ſhould be tranſmitted to the ſucceeding ages, to engage their truſt in God, and excite their praiſes.

PSALM LXXX.

To which of Iſrael's many diſtreſſes this pſalm particularly refers, ſeems uncertain. The pſalmiſt here, 1. Begs for the tokens of God's preſence with, and favour to them, ver. 1—3. 2. He complains of the preſent rebukes they were under, ver. 4—7. 3. He illuſtrates the preſent deſolations of the church, by the compariſon of a vine and a vineyard, which had flouriſhed, but was now deſtroyed, ver. 8—16. 4. He concludes with prayer to God for the preparing of mercy for them, and the preparing of them for mercy, ver. 17—19.

¶ To the chief muſician upon [a] Shoſhannim, Eduth,
A pſalm † of Aſaph.

[a] Pſ. xlv. & lx. tit.
† Or, for.

1. GIVE ear, O Shepherd of Iſrael, thou [b] that leadeſt Joſeph like a flock, thou [c] that dwelleſt between the cherubims, [d] ſhine forth. 2. [e] Before Ephraim, and Benjamin, and Manaſſeh, ſtir up thy ſtrength, and come and ſave us. 3. [f] Turn us again, O God:
and [g] and cauſe thy face to ſhine, and we ſhall be ſaved.
4. O LORD God of hoſts, how long wilt thou ‡ be angry againſt the prayer of thy people? 5. [h] Thou feedeſt them with the bread of tears: and giveſt them tears to drink in great meaſure. 6. [i] Thou makeſt us a ſtrife unto our neighbours: and our enemies laugh among themſelves. 7. [k] Turn us again, O God of hoſts, and cauſe thy face to ſhine, and we ſhall be ſaved.

[b] Pſ. lxxvii. 20. & lxxviii. 52.
[c] 1 Sam. iv. 4. 2 Sam. vi. 2.
[d] Pſ. l. 2. & xciv. 1.
[e] Num. ii. 18—23.
[f] Ver. 7, 19. Lam. v. 21.
[g] Num. vi. 25, 26. Pſ. iv. 6.
‡ Heb. Smoke. Pſ. lxxiv. 1.
[h] Pſ. xlii. 3. & cii. 9. Iſa. xxx. 20.
[i] Pſ. xliv. 13. & lxxix. 4.
[k] Ver. 3, 19.

v. 1—7. The eyes of the Lord are ever upon his people, and his ears open to their prayers; to him therefore in every diſtreſs they look, and find him ever near to help in time of need.

1. The pſalmiſt begs God's gracious regard, and powerful deliverance. He addreſſed him as the Shepherd of Iſrael, whoſe tender care towards the ſheep of his paſture had been proved by long experience. Thou that leadeſt Joſeph like a flock; who had done ſo in time paſt, and was ſtill ready to manifeſt the ſame regard towards them: thou that dwelleſt between the cherubims, exalted on a throne of grace, to receive the petitions of his people, give ear to our prayers; ſhine forth, to diſpel the gloom that thickens round us: Before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manaſſeh, ſtir up thy ſtrength, theſe tribes on their march, Numb. xi. 17, 24. immediately following the ark, and come and ſave us from the power of our enemies, who are too mighty for us. This may be conſidered as the prayer of the church for the appearance of Chriſt in the fleſh, the Sun of righteouſneſs, whoſe riſing with healing in his wings was the great object of their deſire, and his ſpiritual ſalvation the great hope of their ſouls.

2. He humbly expoſtulates with God on their afflictions. How long wilt thou be angry againſt the prayer of thy people? appear ſo at leaſt, by refuſing them an anſwer; or be really diſpleaſed with them, becauſe they aſked amiſs, were inſincere, or lukewarm. Thou feedeſt them with bread of tears, and giveſt them tears to drink in great abundance: ſo abundant were their ſorrows, that even they did not eat or drink, but tears mingled with their repaſt. Thou makeſt us a ſtrife to our neighbours, which divide our ſpoil; and our enemies laugh among themſelves, at the eaſy prey they have gotten, and the diſappointment of our hopes. Note, (1.) When we pray, it becomes us well to conſider what we ſay, and in what manner we approach God; leſt, by our formality and unbelief, our prayers ſhould be turned into ſin. (2.) If God delays or refuſes the prayers of his people, it is never in anger, but in love. (3.) The way to join the everlaſting ſongs of angels lies uſually, in this world, through the vale of tears. (4.) The people of God will be often the deriſion of their enemies; and nothing more expoſes them to ridicule, than thoſe tears of godly ſorrow which they ſhed over their ſins. But woe to thoſe who laugh now, for they ſhall mourn and weep; when bleſſed are thoſe that mourn, for they ſhall be comforted.

3. In order to obtain the ſalvation he deſired, the pſalmiſt begs the converſion of their ſouls to God. Turn us again, O God, and cauſe thy face to ſhine, in token of reconciliation, and then he is ſure their hope ſhall not be delayed, we ſhall be ſaved. And this is repeated, v. 7, 19. as the great burden of their prayer; for this being obtained, every other requeſt would be granted. Note, (1.) The ſoul hath already begun to turn to God, on whom this ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication is poured out. (2.) The great deſire of the awakened ſinner is to obtain reconciliation with God. (3.) If ever we are converted to God, it muſt be his own work, for we have no power of ourſelves to help ourſelves. (4.) Every ſoul who is a partaker of converting grace, will be an inheritor of eternal glory.

8. Thou haſt brought [l] a vine out of Egypt: [m] thou haſt caſt out the heathen, and planted it. 9. Thou preparedſt room before it, and didſt cauſe it to take deep root, and it filled the land. 10. The hills were covered with the ſhadow of it, and the boughs thereof were like † the goodly cedars. 11. [n] She ſent out her boughs unto the ſea, and her branches unto the river. 12.
Why haſt thou then [o] broken down her hedges, ſo that all they which paſs by the way, do pluck her? 13.
The boar out of the wood doth waſt it, and the wild beaſt of the field doth devour it. 14. Return, we beſeech thee, O God of hoſts: [p] look down from heaven, and behold, and viſit this vine: 15. And the vineyard which thy right hand hath planted, and the branch that thou madeſt ſtrong for thyſelf. 16. It is burnt with fire: it is cut down: [q] they periſh at the rebuke of thy countenance. 17. [r] Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand, and upon [s] the ſon of man whom thou madeſt ſtrong for thyſelf. 18. So will not we go back from thee: quicken us, and we will call upon thy name.
19. [t] Turn us again, O LORD God of hoſts, cauſe thy face to ſhine, and we ſhall be ſaved.

[l] Iſa. v. 7. Jer. ii. 21. Ezek. xvii. 6.
[m] Pſ. xliv. 2. & lxxviii. 55.
† Heb. The cedars of God.
[n] Pſ. lxxii. 8.
[o] Pſ. lxxxix. 40. Iſa. v. 5.
[p] Iſa. lxiii. 15.
[q] Pſ. lxxvi. 6.
[r] Ib. lxxxix. 21.
[s] Dan. vii. 13.
[t] Ver. 3, 7.

v. 8—19. The former favours of God to his Iſrael are here pleaded as an argument for his preſent regard towards them in their diſtreſs. The church is compared to a vine, of which Jeſus is the living root; to a vineyard, of which God is the huſbandman; and he who planted it, will preſerve and keep it night and day.

1. By the Divine mercy and providence they had been brought out of Egypt; the Canaanites diſpoſſeſſed to make room for them; and they planted in their ſtead. Deep-rooted and vigorous, they multiplied exceedingly, and extended their branches unto the ſea and the river, their conqueſts being bounded by ſea on the weſt, and reaching from Egypt to the river Euphrates, v. 8—10.

2. They had experienced a ſad reverſe of ſtate, and enquire into the cauſe. Why haſt thou then broken down her hedges? withdrawn his defence and protection, in conſequence of which they were become deſolate; ſo that every traveller, every enemy, now made inroads upon them, to ſpoil and lay their vineyard waſte, v. 12. Fierce and cruel as the beaſts of the deſert, their foes devoured them without pity or remorſe, v. 13. Their cities burnt with fire; their land waſted; and the inhabitants ſlaughtered: being under God's rebuke, they fell an eaſy prey to their invaders, v. 16. Note, (1.) If God corrects, ſurely there is a cauſe: ſin, ſin, breeds all our miſery. (2.) The ſtrongeſt nation becomes an eaſy prey the moment God withdraws his protection. (3.) Though the Lord ſuffers the rage of the enemy to prevail againſt his own people, it is with a view not to deſtroy them, but to excite their prayers, to quicken their repentance, and magnify the more the wonders of his power and grace in their deliverance.

3. They earneſtly intreat a return of the divine favour; that God would from heaven caſt a favourable look towards them, and, as he was ſo able to reſcue them, would graciouſly viſit them with his ſalvation, v. 14. nor ſuffer the vineyard, the planting of his own hands, and therefore dear to him, to be deſtroyed; and the branch he had made ſo ſtrong for himſelf, the people ſeparated for his ſervice, and deſigned for his glory, to be broken down, v. 15. Therefore, let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand, which ſome apply to the king of Iſrael, but rather belongs to the Lord Jeſus, the great repairer of the breaches of his church, who in the fulneſs of time ſhould become incarnate, the Son of man, the object of his Father's regard, and made ſtrong for all the arduous work of redemption he undertook in behalf of his people; and for thyſelf, becauſe by his undertaking, and the accompliſhment of his mediatorial office, glory was given to God in the higheſt. Note, (1.) The return of a ſenſe of God's favour is more earneſtly deſired by his people, than the removal of their afflictions. (2.) What God hath planted none ſhall be able to pluck up. (3.) There is help laid on one mighty to ſave; we may therefore boldly truſt, and not be afraid.

4. They engage heartily to cleave unto God. So will we not go back from thee: the all-ſufficiency of Jeſus would encourage their faith and hope; and God's love, herein manifeſted, for ever attach them to his ſervice. Quicken us, and we will call upon thy name: ſo dead and lifeleſs often are our hearts, that we have no power to pray with any fervency, till the Lord pours out a ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication, and then our drooping ſouls revive. Note, (1.) Though we can do nothing in ourſelves, we can do all things, Chriſt ſtrengthening us. (2.) In him the perſeverance of believers is ſecured; and they whom he draws with the cords of his love, ſhall never go back from him. (3.) Prayer is the conſtant and daily employment of every one who is truly alive to God.

5. The pſalmiſt concludes with reiterating his former ſupplication for converting grace, and addreſſing his prayer to the Lord God of hoſts, ſo able to ſave all that come to him, expects in faith the ſalvation for which he ſo ardently pleads. Note, Repetition in our prayers is not always vain, but often ſpeaks the language of moſt importunate deſire. Lord have mercy upon us! Chriſt have mercy upon us! Lord have mercy upon us!

PSALM LXXXI.

This pſalm is ſuppoſed to have been penned for the new moons and ſolemn feaſt days, 1. To praiſe God, for what he is to his people, ver. 1—3. and has done for them, ver. 4—7. 2. To admoniſh one another concerning the obligations we lie under to God, ver. 8—10. The danger of revolting from him, ver. 11, 12. And the happineſs we ſhould have if we would but keep cloſe to him, ver. 13—16.

¶ To the chief muſician, [a] upon Gittith,
¶ A pſalm † of Aſaph.

1. SING aloud unto God [b] our ſtrength: make a joyful noiſe unto the God of Jacob. 2. Take a pſalm, and bring hither the timbrel, the pleaſant harp with the pſaltery. 3. [c] Blow up the trumpet in the new-moon, in [d] the time appointed, on our ſolemn feaſt-day.
4. For [e] this was a ſtatute for Iſrael, and a law of the God of Jacob. 5. This he ordained in Joſeph for a teſtimony, when he went out through the land of Egypt:
[f] where I heard a language that I underſtood not. 6.
[g] I removed his ſhoulder from the burden: his hands were delivered from [h] the ‡ pots. 7. [i] Thou calledſt in trouble, [k] and I delivered thee; [l] I anſwered thee in the ſecret place of thunder: [m] I proved thee at the waters of § Meribah. Selah.

[a] Pſ. viii. tit.
† Or, for.
[b] 2 Sam. xxii. 33.
[c] Num. x. 10.
[d] Deut. xvi. 16.
[e] Lev. xxiii. 24.
[f] Pſ. cxiv. 1.
[g] Iſa. ix. 4. & x. 27.
[h] Exod. i. 14.
‡ Or, baſkets.
[i] Exod. ii. 23. & xiv. 10.
[k] Pſ. l. 15.
[l] Exod. xix. 19.
[m] Ibid. xvii. 6, 7. Num. xx. 13.
§ i. e. Strife.

v. 1—7. Before we join the ſongs of angels, the work of praiſe ſhould be our joyful employment here below.

1. The pſalmiſt excites the people of God to unite heart and voice in adoring their covenant God, the rock of their ſalvation; by whoſe ſtrength every faithful Iſraelite is enabled to grapple with all the enemies of his ſoul, to fulfil every ſervice, and endure every ſuffering to which the Lord is pleaſed to call him, v. 1. To raiſe the concert high, ſweet inſtruments of muſic are employed, and the loud trumpet's ſound proclaims, on the ſolemn feaſt day, the appointed ſeaſon for the general aſſembly, the great Jehovah's praiſe. Note, (1.) The more we regard God as our ſtrength, the ſurer is our ſtability. (2.) Muſic is not only pleaſing, but, under proper regulations, might be made profitable too, and aſſiſt in raiſing up the ſoul to God in hymns of praiſe.

2. This was God's inſtituted ordinance, v. 4. and deſigned as a means to keep up the grateful remembrance of the mercies he had beſtowed on them, when he went out through the land of Egypt, in judgments againſt their oppreſſors. Eſpecially it was appointed to perpetuate the memorial of his favour towards them, when, on the night of the paſſover, he paſſed by their doors, and ſlew the Egyptians, a people whoſe language they underſtood not, which was an aggravation of their afflictions, v. 3. Then God reſcued them from their hard ſervitude, and delivered them from the pots, in making which they were employed; or the baſkets, in which they carried the bricks, v. 6.

He heard their prayer in their trouble, and brought them forth, and with his mighty thunderings ſcared their foes, Exod. xiv. 25. Pſal. lxxvii. 18. and when they proved rebellious at the waters of ſtrife, he bore with them, and deſtroyed them not, as they deſerved. All which inſtances of his mercy they were bound to commemorate, eſpecially on the days of their ſolemn aſſemblies, to excite their praiſes, and engage their fidelity. Note, (1.) They who call on God in trouble, will find him near to help and ſave them. (2.) A greater redemption than this is wrought out for ſinners by the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and ſhould excite our more abundant thankfulneſs.

8. [n] Hear, O my people, and I will teſtify unto thee ;
O Iſrael, if thou wilt hearken unto me ; 9. [o] There ſhall no ſtrange god be in thee : neither ſhalt thou worſhip any ſtrange god. 10. [p] I am the LORD thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt : [q] open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it. 11. But my people would not hearken to my voice : and Iſrael would none of me. 12. [r] So I gave them up unto † their own hearts luſt : and they walked in their own counſels. 13.
[s] O that my people had hearkned unto me, and Iſrael had walked in my ways ! 14. I ſhould ſoon have ſub-dued their enemies, and turned my hand againſt their adverſaries. 15. The haters of the LORD ſhould have ‡ ſubmitted themſelves unto him : but their time ſhould have endured for ever. 16. He ſhould [t] have fed them alſo with the fineſt of the wheat : and with honey [u] out of the rock ſhould I have ſatisfied thee.

n Pſ. l. 7.
o Exod. xx. 3.
p Ibid. 2.
q Pſ. xxxvii. 4. Eph. iii. 20.
r Acts vii. 42. & xiv. 16. Rom. i. 24.
† Or, the hardneſs of their hearts.
s Deut. v. 29 & xxxii. 29. Iſa. xlviii. 18.
‡ Heb. Lied, i. e. yielded feigned obedience, Pſ. xviii. 44. & lxvi. 3.
t Deut. xxxii. 13, 14. Pſ. cxlvii. 14.
u Job xxix. 6.

v. 8—16. When the eternal Jehovah ſpeaks, let every mortal ear attend. Hear, O my people, peculiarly bound to be adviſed and governed by him ; O Iſrael, if thou wilt, or, O that thou wouldſt hearken unto me. It was their duty, and God wiſhes it might be their deſire to do ſo. His peculiar charge to them is,

1. Flee from idolatry. There ſhall no ſtrange god be in thee ; neither ſhalt thou worſhip any other god. This is the firſt and great commandment : God muſt be made the ſupreme object of our faith, fear, and love : whatever creature rivals him in our heart, we become ſpiritual idolaters.

2. He enforces the command by two conſiderations. [1.] His right in them, and their obligations to him. I am the Lord thy God, the only object of worſhip, ſtanding in a peculiar relation to them, and therefore eſpecially demanding it from them ; that brought thee out of the land of Egypt, and therefore from gratitude are they moſt bound to love and ſerve him. [2.] It would be their higheſt intereſt alſo to cleave to him alone ; Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it : he will be their all-ſufficient portion ; and they cannot aſk more than he is willing to beſtow on them, provided they continue faithful. Note, (1.) God's ſervice is our higheſt intereſt, as well as duty. (2.) If we had no future promiſes in view, paſt obligations ſhould engage our hearts to him. (3.) The prayer of faith can never aſk too much. (4.) They who have God for their portion, have all that heart can wiſh.

3. He charges them with their diſobedience and ingratitude. But my people, from whom he had ſuch juſt expectation, would not hearken to my voice, inattentive and perverſe ; and Iſrael would none of me ; fooliſhly as wickedly rejecting their own mercies, and neither willing to ſerve God as their maſter, nor content with his love, as their portion.

4. Juſtly God viſited their iniquities. So I gave them up unto their own hearts luſts ; which is of all judgments the moſt terrible ; for, his grace withdrawn, we are then abandoned to ſin and miſery, and ruſh on our deſtruction, as the horſe into the battle : and they walked in their own counſels. Since they were headſtrong and obſtinate, he left them to their own devices, and the dreadful conſequences which muſt enſue. Note, They who reſiſt God's word and Spirit, have only their own wilfulneſs to blame, when their deſtruction cometh.

5. He expreſſes his kind wiſhes for them, and his gracious deſigns towards them, had they been faithful. O that my people, bound by every tie to approve themſelves to him, had hearkned unto me, obeyed my law, and attended to my warnings, and Iſrael had walked in my ways, ſo much their intereſt as well as duty. For then, [1.] They would have been for ever victorious over their foes, and God himſelf would have appeared to fight their battles, and make them more than conquerors, v. 14. (2.) They would have uninterruptedly enjoyed the poſſeſſion of their good land ; and all that hated God and his worſhip, ſhould have ſubmitted themſelves unto him, or lied unto him ; ſo that, though it might be a feigned and forced ſubmiſſion, they ſhould not be able to diſturb them. [3.] They would have been bleſt with plenty of every earthly good : the fineſt wheat, and honey ready provided for them in the rock, where the bees had formed their hive, would have been their food ; of all which, their folly and ſin would deprive them, and leave them as wretched as they might have been happy. Note, (1.) Sinners are the greateſt enemies to their own ſouls. (2.) They who attend to the voice of Chriſt, will ſee all their foes become their foot-ſtool. (3.) The ſupplies of his grace to his faithful people are more ſtrengthening than bread, and ſweeter than honey. (4.) If any periſh, it is not through want of compaſſion in God, but through the hardneſs and impenitence of their own hearts.

PSALM LXXXII.

This pſalm is calculated for the meridian of princes courts and courts of juſtice, not in Iſrael only, but in other nations. We have here, 1. The dignity of magiſtracy, and its dependence upon God, ver. 1. 2. The duty of magiſtrates, ver. 3, 4. 3. The degeneracy of bad magiſtrates, and the miſchief they do, ver. 2, 5. 4. Their doom read, ver. 6, 7. 5. The deſire and prayer of all good people, that the kingdom of God may be ſet up more and more, ver. 8.

¶ A pſalm † of Aſaph.

† Or, for.

1. [a] GOD ſtandeth in the congregation of the mighty : he judgeth among the gods. 2. How long will ye judge unjuſtly, and [b] accept the perſons of the wicked ? Selah. 3. ‡ Defend the poor and father-leſs : [c] do juſtice to the afflicted and needy. 4. [d] Deliver the poor and needy : rid them out of the hand of the wicked. 5. [e] They know not, neither will they underſtand ; they walk on in darkneſs : [f] all the foundations of the earth are § out of courſe.

a 2 Chron. xix. 6. Eccleſ. v. 8.
b Deut. i. 17. 2 Chron. xix. 7.
‡ Heb. judge.
c Jer. xxii. 3.
d Job xxix. 12. Prov. xxiv. 11.
e Mic. iii. 1.
f Pſ. xi. 3.
§ Heb. moved.

v. 1—5. All power is from God : the powers that be, are ordained of God : a ſtrong argument to enforce our obedience, and to engage them to rule with uprightneſs, knowing from whom they have received authority, and to whom they are accountable for the uſe of it.

1. God's preſence and preſidence is aſſerted in the congregations of the mighty, and among the gods. The magiſtrates of the earth, who receive their honour from him, as his vicegerents upon earth, are appointed to adminiſter judgment with impartiality, according to God's holy word ; and his eye is ever upon them, obſerving their conduct, for which they muſt anſwer before him in the great day of his appearing and glory.

2. God gives a ſolemn charge to his delegates. They are to be the defenders of the poor and fatherleſs ; to do juſtice to the afflicted and needy, whoſe poverty, and want of friends to vindicate their rights, expoſes them to injuries ; and, however great or rich their oppreſſors, they muſt deliver them out of their wicked hands. Note, (1.) They who are poor, are too often trampled upon. (2.) It is a grievous thing when the law is made ſo expenſive, that the poor cannot right themſelves ; or the injury ſuſtained is more tolerable, than the method of redreſs.

3. God lodges an accuſation againſt wicked magiſtrates. How long will ye judge unjuſtly, and make oppreſſion more intolerable under the ſanction of the law ? and accept the perſons of the wicked ? awed by their greatneſs, or ſwayed by perſonal regard, or influenced by bribes. They know not, neither will they underſtand : plain as the caſe is, they know not to fear God, and do juſtice, and wilfully pervert judgment. They walk on in darkneſs, partiality having blinded their eyes, and ſtudiouſly avoiding the light of truth ; in conſequence of which, all the foundations of the earth are out of courſe, or moved ; for when magiſtrates are thus unjuſt and oppreſſive, confuſion and every evil work muſt enſue. This deſcription is very applicable to the Jewiſh rulers in the days of Chriſt, to whom it may particularly refer.

6. [g] I have ſaid, Ye are gods : and all of you are children of the moſt High. 7. But [h] ye ſhall die like men, and fall like one of the princes. 8. [i] Ariſe, O God, judge the earth : for [k] thou ſhalt inherit all nations.

g John x. 34.
h Job xxi. 32. Ezek. xxxi. 14.
i Mic. vii. 7.
k Pſ. ii. 8. Rev. xi. 15.

v. 6—8. The higheſt God can humble, when they abuſe their power.

1. He pronounces their doom. I have ſaid, Ye are gods ; have given you authority as my delegates ; and all of you children of the moſt High, exalted to a ſtate of ſingular eminence. But think not your greatneſs will protect you in the abuſe of your power ; for ye ſhall die like men ; though as gods in the eyes of men, yet dying worms in the ſight of God, and ready to fall as one of the princes, See Pſal. lxxxiii. 11. cut off in their iniquities, and brought before his dread tribunal, to anſwer the charges lodged againſt them. Note, (1.) The mightieſt men are mortal ; let them therefore ſtand in awe, and ſin not, leſt they provoke God to cut them down. (2.) Though magiſtrates abuſe their power, we muſt leave it to God to puniſh them : vengeance is his work ; patient ſubmiſſion our duty.

2. The pſalmiſt looks up to God as the judge of the earth, to redreſs theſe grievances, v. 8. and this with a particular reſpect to the coming of Chriſt, for which he prays, who will judge the folk righteouſly : and being appointed heir of all things, and having all judgment committed to him in heaven and in earth, will come quickly according to his promiſe, and reſtore all things ; redreſſing the evils his people have ſuffered in this diſordered world, and recompenſing tribulation to them that troubled them ; ſo come, Lord Jeſus !

PSALM LXXXIII.

This pſalm was penned, as ſome ſuppoſe, on David's victories over the nations recorded, 2 Sam. viii. 1—14. or was prophetical of the invaſion mentioned, 2 Chron. xx. 1. And it may well be referred to all the confederate enemies of God's ſpiritual Iſrael, whoſe projects will fail, and their attacks be baffled. The pſalmiſt here makes an appeal and application, 1. To God's knowledge, by a remonſtrance of their deſigns and endeavours to deſtroy Iſrael, ver. 1—8. 2. To God's juſtice and jealouſy, both for his church and for his own honour, by an earneſt prayer for the defeat of their attempt, that the church might be preſerved, the enemies humbled, and God glorified, ver. 9—18.

¶ A ſong or pſalm † of Aſaph.

† Or, for.

1. [a] KEEP not thou ſilence, O God : hold not thy peace, and be not ſtill, O God : 2. For lo, thine enemies make a tumult : and they [b] that hate thee, have lift up the head. 3. They have taken crafty counſel againſt thy people, and conſulted againſt [c] thy hidden ones. 4. They have ſaid, [d] Come, and let us cut them off from being a nation : that the name of Iſrael may be no more in remembrance. 5. For they have conſulted together with one ‡ conſent : they are confederate [e] againſt thee. 6. [f] The tabernacles of Edom, and the Iſhmaelites : of Moab, and the Hagarenes.
7. Gebal, and Ammon, and Amalek, the Philiſtines, with the inhabitants of Tyre. 8. Aſſur alſo is joined with them : they have § holpen the children of Lot. Selah.

[a] Pſ. xxviii. 1. & xxxv. 22. & cix. 1.
[b] Pſ. lxxxi. 15.
[c] Pſ. xxvii. 5. & xxxi. 20. Col. iii. 3.
[d] Prov. i. 11. Jer. xi. 19.
‡ Heb. Heart.
[e] Acts ix. 4.
[f] 2 Chron. xx. 1, 10, 11.
§ Heb. Been an arm, to, &c.

v. 1—8. The church on earth is ever militant, and muſt ſoon be cruſhed, were it not for the protection of their glorious head.

1. The pſalmiſt directs his prayer to God. Keep not thou ſilence, but hear our cry, and ſend a word of encouragement to us amidſt the threatnings of our enemies. Hold not thy peace, as if unconcerned at their blaſphemies, or conniving at their attempts ; and be not ſtill, O God, but ariſe to preſerve and protect us from their malice and violence. Note, Sometimes the Lord appears to diſregard his people's diſtreſs, but it is to quicken them with greater importunity to fly to him for ſuccour.

2. He deſcribes the confederacy formed ; urges their wicked deſigns ; repreſents their rage and craftineſs, againſt which they were unable to ſtand, unleſs the Lord appeared to ſtrengthen his people, and confound their foes. [1.] The quarrel was his own : they were his enemies, and hated him, his laws, and his worſhip ; but, unable any other way to vent their enmity, turned it againſt his people, his hidden ones, who were covered with the ſhadow of his wings, and their excellencies unknown. Note, (1.) Whatever pretences men may make for their oppoſition againſt God's people, the real cauſe is enmity againſt God, whoſe holineſs they cannot endure, and whoſe image they cannot ſee in their neighbour, without hatred. (2.) The faithful are hid with Chriſt in God, and impotent is the rage of their enemies againſt them. [2.] The confederacy was ſtrong. Might and policy were united againſt them : ten nations, however divided in intereſts, were faſt leagued againſt God's Iſrael ; inſolent, and confident of ſucceſs ; with ſchemes deep laid, and in tumultuous rage breathing out threatnings and ſlaughter ; content with nothing leſs than the extirpation of the very name of Iſrael. Note, (1.) Whatever differences of ſentiments men entertain, or however otherwiſe at variance, all cordially unite in oppoſing the cauſe of God and truth. (2.) A wicked world would be heartily glad, if there were neither a preacher nor profeſſor of true religion left ; for theſe are ever their troublers. (3.) Though craft be employed to ſeduce, and threatnings to intimidate the faithful, the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure. God knoweth thoſe that are his, and they ſhall never be moved. (4.) When all other help fails us, it is a comfort we have that all-ſufficient Lord to fly to, who can ſtill the madneſs of the people.

9. Do unto them as [g] unto the Midianites : as [h] to Siſera, as to Jabin, at the brook of Kiſon : 10. Which periſhed at En-dor : [i] they became as dung for the earth. 11. Make their nobles like [k] Oreb, and like Zeeb : yea, all their princes as [l] Zebah, and as Zalmunna :
12. Who ſaid, Let us take to ourſelves the houſes of God in poſſeſſion. 13. O my God, [m] make them like a wheel : [n] as the ſtubble before the wind.
14. As the fire burneth the wood, and as the flame ſetteth the mountains on fire ; 15. So perſecute them with thy tempeſt, and make them afraid with thy ſtorm.
16. Fill their faces with ſhame : † that they may ſeek thy name, O LORD. 17. Let them be confounded and troubled for ever : yea, let them be put to ſhame and periſh : 18. [o] That men may know, that thou, whoſe name alone is JEHOVAH, art the moſt high over all the earth.

[g] Numb. xxxi. 7, 8. Judg. vii. 22.
[h] Judg. iv. 15, 24. & v. 21.
[i] 2 Kings ix. 37. Zeph. i. 17.
[k] Judg. vii. 25.
[l] Judg. viii. 21.
[m] Pſ. lxviii. 2.
[n] Iſa. xvii. 13.
† Or, that men may, &c. Pſ. lviii. 11.
[o] Pſ. lix. 13.

v. 9—18. Having deſcribed the enemies of the church, the prophet prays for, and foreſees, their diſappointment and deſtruction, whereby God will be glorified, and his people delivered.

1. He prays, that their preſent enemies may meet the ſame fate as thoſe of old. Do unto them as to the Midianites, who, in the time of Gideon, deſtroyed one another ; as to Siſera and Jabin, who fell before Barak and Deborah, and all their mighty warriors lay in heaps unburied on the field of battle, v. 11. They thought to make an eaſy prey of the temple and city, and ſeize the inheritance of Iſrael ; but he hopes their lot will be no better than that which befel the princes of Midian, ſlain by the Ephraimites, and the victorious ſword of Gideon, Judg. vii. 25. viii. 21. Note, Paſt examples of God's interpoſition in behalf of his people, ſhould encourage us to pray, and hope for the like mercy.

2. He prays they may be quickly and utterly conſumed, as the wheel moves on a declivity : or the alluſion may be to the going round of the wheel by which the corn was ground, Iſa. xxviii. 28. Prov. xx. 26. As the chaff, which the wind diſſipates ; and as the wood before the raging flames, or the briars and fern on the mountain, which in an inſtant are burnt up, ſo perſecute them with thy tempeſt to their deſtruction, and make them afraid with thy ſtorm, confounded and diſmayed. Note, (1.) Even in this life the ſinner is often made to feel terrors, that embitter all his joys, and make life a burden to him ; but how much heavier are in ſtore for him after death, when the deluge of the wrath of God ſhall be poured on his devoted head ! (2.) All oppoſition againſt God and his church is as vain as ſetting briars and thorns in array againſt devouring fire.

3. He prays that ſhame may cover them : either godly ſhame for their ſins ; or, if they refuſed to repent, eternal confuſion. Fill their faces with ſhame, at their folly and diſappointment, or for their ſins, that they may ſeek thy name, O Lord ; acknowledging their ſinfulneſs and penitently returning : or, that men may ſeek thy name, ſeeing the judgments brought on the ungodly. Let them be confounded and troubled for ever, that they may know no peace, who refuſe the proffers of God's pardoning grace : yea, let them be put to ſhame, and periſh, uttterly and eternally, who continue obſtinately impenitent ; that men may know, by their dreadful ruin, that thou, whoſe name alone is Jehovah, the only ſelf-exiſtent, almighty, and eternal God, art the moſt high over all the earth : and thoſe who walk in pride and enmity againſt his people, he is able and determined to abaſe. Note, (1.) Our bittereſt enemies are entitled to our prayers, and we muſt long for their conviction and converſion rather than their deſtruction. (2.) Men muſt know at laſt that the Lord omnipotent reigneth, and the execution of deſerved vengeance on the ungodly will redound to his everlaſting glory.

PSALM LXXXIV.

David is ſuppoſed the author of this pſalm, and is thought to have compoſed it during his abſence from the ſanctuary, occaſioned by Abſalom's rebellion : though it may alſo be equally the breathing of his devout ſpirit at any other time. He expreſſeth his affection, 1. To the ordinances of God ; his value for them, ver. 1. deſire towards them, ver. 2, 3. His conviction of the happineſs of thoſe that did enjoy them, ver. 4—7. And his placing his own happineſs ſo very much in the enjoyment of them, ver. 10. 2. To the God of the ordinances ; his deſire towards him, ver. 8, 9. His faith in him, ver. 11. And his conviction of the happineſs of thoſe that put their confidence in him, ver. 12. In ſinging this pſalm, we ſhould have the ſame devout affections working towards God that David had.

¶ To the chief muſician, [a] upon Gittith,
A pſalm for the ſons of Korah.

[a] Pſ. viii. tit.

1. HOW [a] amiable are thy tabernacles, O LORD of hoſts ! 2. [b] My ſoul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the LORD : my heart and my fleſh crieth out for the living God. 3. Yea, the ſparrow hath found an houſe, and the ſwallow a neſt for herſelf, where ſhe may lay her young, even thine altars, [c] Pſ. lxv. 4. O LORD of hoſts, my King and my God. 4. [c] Bleſſed are they that dwell in thy houſe: they will be ſtill praiſing thee. Selah. 5. Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſtrength is in thee: in whoſe heart are the ways of them. 6.

[a] Pſ. xxvii. 4.
[b] Pſ. xlii. 1, 2. & lxiii. 1, 2.

† Or, mulberry-trees. 2 Sam. v. 22, 23. Who paſſing through the valley of † Baca, make it a [d] Prov. iv. 18. well: the rain alſo filleth the pools. 7. [d] They go ‡ Or, from company to company. ‡ from ſtrength to ſtrength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God.

v. 1—7. We have here,

1. The pſalmiſt admiring the beauty of God's ordinances. How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hoſts! Externally the tabernacle appeared without beauty, but within all was glorious; there dwelt the Shechinah; there the incenſe ſmoaked upon the golden altar, and the miniſters of God performed the ſacred ſervice. More amiable ſtill the goſpel church appears, where God incarnate dwells, where incenſe of prayer and praiſe is continually offered, and the glad tidings of ſalvation proclaimed.

2. The fervent longings of his ſoul burſt forth after God: probably now he was at a diſtance from the ſanctuary, but his heart was there. My ſoul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; ſo intenſely were his deſires after them: my heart and my fleſh crieth out for the living God; importunate to be reſtored to the ſanctuary, but moſt importunate to meet God there, and maintain delightful communion with him in the ordinances of his ſervice. Note, (1.) A ſoul who hath no delight in God's houſe, can have no lot in his kingdom. (2.) The thing which makes all the acts of worſhip ſo deſirable, is the communion therein maintained with the living God, the life and joy of our ſouls; and without this they are dry, barren, and formal.

3. He looks upon the little birds, and envies them as it were their happineſs. Yea, the ſparrow hath found an houſe, and the ſwallow a neſt, &c. even thine altars: not that we can ſuppoſe they literally built their neſts in theſe altars, but near them; either in the houſes adjoining to the ſanctuary, or perhaps within the ſacred incloſure; and this was a ſituation ſo deſirable to the pſalmiſt, that with them he longed to dwell. Some interpret the words in another ſenſe: The birds have their neſts, and lodge ſecurely; but I, a wanderer, can find no reſting-place abſent from thine altars, my King and my God. As ſuch by faith the pſalmiſt regarded him, and intimates the hope he had, that as a faithful ſubject, and true worſhipper, the Lord would hear his prayer, and bring him to this bleſt abode. Note, (1.) The meaneſt abode with God's preſence, is better than a palace without him. (2.) They who know the value of the ordinances of God, will ſeek a ſettlement where they may be moſt profitably enjoyed. (3.) When faith can ſay, My King, and my God, we are ſure all our prayers will ſpeed.

4. He counts them moſt bleſſed, who are continually employed in the ſervice and praiſe of God. Bleſſed are they that dwell in thy houſe; the miniſters of the ſanctuary, who were in conſtant attendance: they will be ſtill praiſing thee; and ſurely, if there be ought like heaven upon earth, it is this bleſſed work. Note, (1.) However deſpicable in the eyes of men the ſervice of the miniſtry may appear, it is of all employments the moſt bleſſed and honourable. (2.) They who draw neareſt to God, and ſerve him moſt faithfully, ſee moſt abundant cauſe to praiſe him continually.

5. He not only counts the prieſts and Levites happy, but regards it as the portion of all the people of God, who have liberty of acceſs to the courts where his honour dwelleth. Bleſſed is the man whoſe ſtrength is in thee; ſuch as are enabled to go up to celebrate the appointed feaſts, and find their ſouls as well as their bodies ſtrengthened for the work and ſervice of the ſanctuary: in whoſe heart are the ways of them, earneſtly engaged in the ſervice of God, and delighted to be found in the ways of Zion; who paſſing through the vale of Baca, a rough and barren road, make it a well; overlook the difficulties of the way, and find divine conſolations like a well of water; or, make him a well, meditating upon God, and thus renew their ſtrength. The rain alſo filleth the pools; the Lord providing them with a rich ſupply of his graces and comforts. They go from ſtrength to ſtrength, more vigorous as they advance nearer Zion; or from company to company, in which way they went up to Jeruſalem from the country, Luke xi. 44. and thoſe who were earneſt, would be overtaking thoſe who were before. Every one of them in Zion appeareth before God; and in this their happineſs the pſalmiſt longed to partake. Note, (1.) All our ſtrength cometh from the Lord; without him we cannot take one ſtep heavenward. (2.) When the heart is engaged, we ſhall walk with pleaſure in God's ways. (3.) They who have a reliſh for the lively adminiſtration of the word and ordinances, will chearfully travel far, in order to partake of them, and count the labour amply repaid. (4.) Our way to heaven lies through many a difficult paſs, and they who would be ſoldiers of Chriſt, muſt be ready to endure hardſhip. But when our tribulations abound, our conſolations abound alſo; and perhaps the ſweeteſt hours of our lives were thoſe in which we ſtruggled with the greateſt obſtacles. (5.) The farther a ſoul goes in the ways of God, the ſtronger he grows. Inſtaurabit iter vires. (6.) They can never faint, who make God the ſtrength of their heart. (7.) It will be the unutterable felicity of the faithful ſoul in the heavenly Zion, to behold the King in his beauty, and to enjoy the uninterrupted viſion of the bleſſed God.

8. O LORD God of hoſts, hear my prayer: give ear, O God of Jacob. Selah. 9. Behold, O God [e] our [e] Gen. xv. 1. ſhield, and look upon the face of [f] thine anointed. 10. [f] Pſ. ii. 2.
For a day in thy courts is better than a thouſand: I had rather † be a door-keeper in the houſe of my God, † Or, ſit at the threſhold. than to dwell in the tents of wickedneſs. 11. For the LORD God is a ſun and [g] ſhield: the LORD will give [g] Gen. xv. 1. Pſ. cxv. 9. & cxix. 114. Prov. ii. 7.
grace and glory: [h] no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. 12. O LORD of hoſts, [h] Pſ. xxxiv. 9, 10.
[i] bleſſed is the man that truſteth in thee. [i] Pſ. ii. 12.

v. 8—12. Having teſtified his earneſt deſire after the courts of God's houſe, the pſalmiſt here,

1. Intreats a gracious acceptance of his prayer. O Lord God of hoſts, able to ſave to the uttermoſt, and ſupply the deſires of every longing ſoul, hear my prayer, and give an anſwer of peace: give ear, O God of Jacob, our covenant God. Behold my preſent ſituation, and the ardent breathings of my heart, O God our ſhield, my protector, and the ſure hope of every believer; and look upon the face of thine anointed; either himſelf, God's anointed king, or the Meſſiah, for whoſe ſake he hoped God would be gracious to him; and on whoſe interceſſion he truſted, more than on his own ſupplications. Note, (1.) The ſeed of Jacob, his praying children, may confidently expect their father's bleſſing, and be aſſured they ſhall not ſeek God's face in vain. (2.) When God is our ſhield, then ſhall we be ſafe from fear of evil. (3.) Our confidence towards God ſtands ſolely on the foundation of the Redeemer's all-prevailing advocacy: when we look to him with an eye of faith, God will look on us with an eye of favour.

2. He profeſſes the high regard he had for God's courts. For a day in thy courts, ſpent in the bleſſed work of prayer and praiſe, meditation and communion with God, is better than a thouſand ſpent in every delight that earth can give. I had rather be a door-keeper, employed in the meaneſt offices, as the lower Levites in the temple, or ſtand at the threſhold, as the poor beggar, Acts iii. 1, 2. in the houſe of my God, which endeared relation afforded him the moſt enlivened ſatisfaction, and made the houſe of God ſo deſirable, than to live among the tents of wickedneſs, where perhaps by ſad neceſſity he might now, as formerly, Pſal. cxx. 5. be compelled to take up his abode. Note, (1.) They who never found delight in God's houſe and worſhip, prove themſelves utter ſtrangers to his grace and truth. (2.) One hour's communion with God is as much ſuperior to all the joys of pleaſurable ſin, as heaven is higher than the earth.

3. He ſhews the ground of this preference. For the Lord God is a ſun and ſhield; a ſun, to enlighten our ſpiritual darkneſs, and chear us with his bright beams of love; a ſhield, to protect us from every danger. The Lord will give, ſovereignly and abundantly, grace, according to all our neceſſities; preventing, pardoning, juſtifying, ſanctifying, comforting, perſevering grace; and glory eternal in the heavens, the free gift of God in Jeſus Chriſt our Lord. No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. Indeed, what good can be conceived, which theſe two, grace and glory, do not include? be it therefore our care to walk under the influence of ſuch great and precious promiſes, and in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity to approve our fidelity to God.

4. They who truſt God's promiſes are partakers of all this bleſſedneſs. O Lord of hoſts, bleſſed is the man that truſteth in thee. Though he may be unable to appear before God in his courts, he ſhall have all the bleſſings of the ordinances of which he is deprived. God is his portion, and what can he wiſh for more?

PSALM LXXXV.

Interpreters are generally of opinion that this pſalm was penned after the return of the Jews out of their captivity in Babylon, when under diſtreſs, as in the days of Nehemiah, or under Antiochus. We have here, 1. Their prayer, and pleas from former favours and preſent trouble, looking up to God for mercy and deliverance, ver. 1—7. 2. The pſalmiſt in faith expects an anſwer, and prophetically deſcribes the favours God would beſtow on them, as already preſent, ver. 8—13.

¶ To the chief muſician, A pſalm [a] † for the ſons of Korah.

1. LORD, thou haſt been ‡ favourable unto thy land: thou haſt brought back the captivity of Jacob. 2. [b] Thou haſt forgiven the iniquity of thy people, thou haſt covered all their ſin. Selah. 3. [c] Thou haſt taken away all thy wrath: thou haſt turned thyſelf from the fierceneſs of thine anger. 4. Turn us, O God of our ſalvation, and cauſe thine anger towards us to ceaſe. 5. [d] Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations? 6. Wilt thou not [e] revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee? 7. Shew us thy mercy, O LORD, and grant us thy ſalvation.

[a] Pſ. xlii. Tit.
† Or, of.
‡ Heb. Well pleaſed with.
[b] Pſ. xxxii. 1.
[c] Ibid. lxxx. 7.
[d] Ibid. lxxvii. 7.
[e] Hab. iii. 2.

v. 1—7. Experience of paſt mercies gives encouragement under preſent diſtreſs. Thus the people of God here draw near to him.

1. They thankfully acknowledge his great goodneſs in time paſt, and this in many particulars, in his favour ſhewn them, which is the chief bleſſing and the ſpring of all the reſt; in the reſtoration of them from captivity, v. 1. in the full and free forgiveneſs of their manifold tranſgreſſions, v. 2. and the bleſſed effects thereof, the removal of all that wrath and indignation they had ſo highly provoked, v. 3. Note, (1.) Preſent diſtreſs muſt never obliterate the grateful memory of paſt mercies. (2.) What can ſo deſervedly engage our thanks, as the deliverance wrought by Jeſus for his people, from the captivity of ſin and Satan? (3.) When God pardons, he does it fully as freely; the blood of Jeſus ſprinkled on the conſcience covers all ſin. (4.) When guilt is removed, wrath ceaſes of courſe.

2. They cry for mercy and ſalvation under their preſent troubles. Turn us again, O God of our ſalvation: they had backſlidden, and ſuffered for their faithleſſneſs, therefore they beg of God to turn them from their ſins, that their ſufferings may be removed, and plead the covenant of ſalvation, which ſtill affords them grounds of hope: and cauſe thine anger towards us to ceaſe, ſin, the cauſe of it, being removed. Shew us thy mercy, O Lord, how thy grace abounds beyond all our demerit, and grant us thy ſalvation; appear for our deliverance, and make us know that thou art able to ſave to the uttermoſt. Note, (1.) Though we may have been unfaithful, God is not inexorable; when we are led to cry, Turn us, he will return in mercy. (2.) No ſalvation can be hoped whilſt we continue in our ſins, and without deſire to part from them. (3.) All a ſinner can ever aſk at God's hands is mercy: unleſs he ſave freely, without reſpect to our deſerts, we are undone eternally.

3. They humbly expoſtulate on his diſpleaſure now teſtified towards them. Wilt thou be angry with us for ever? that we have deſerved thy anger we own, but muſt periſh if it be not removed. Wilt thou draw out thine anger to all generations? no; thou art, though our offended, yet our covenant God, and wilt not retain thine anger for ever towards the people of thy grace. Wilt thou not revive us again with words of conſolation, with the light of thy countenance, and the interpoſition of thy grace and providence, raiſing us from our ſtate of languiſhing, through our backſliding, and from the ſufferings under which we are oppreſſed; that thy people may rejoice in thee, experienceing thy love, power, and faithfulneſs, and aſcribing to thee the entire glory of their ſalvation. Note, (1.) Though God's people provoke him to correct them, he will not be angry with them for ever. (2.) It is the fearful lot of the impenitent and damned ſinner to endure God's wrath to all generations. (3.) They who experience the power of reſtoring grace, will rejoice in God their Saviour, and ſpeak, to his glory, of the wonders of his grace.

8. [f] I will hear what God the LORD will ſpeak: for [g] he will ſpeak peace unto his people, and to his ſaints: [h] but let them not turn again to folly. 9. Surely his ſalvation is nigh them that fear him; that [i] glory may dwell in our land. 10. [k] Mercy and truth are met together: righteouſneſs and peace have kiſſed each other. 11. [l] Truth ſhall ſpring out of the earth: and righteouſneſs ſhall look down [m] from heaven. 12. [n] Yea, the LORD ſhall give that which is good: and [o] our land ſhall yield her increaſe. 13. [p] Righteouſneſs ſhall go before him: and ſhall ſet us in the way of his ſteps.

[f] Hab. ii. 1.
[g] Zech. ix. 10.
[h] 2 Pet. ii. 21.
[i] Zech. ii. 5. John i. 14.
[k] Luke ii. 14. John i. 17.
[l] Iſa. xlv. 8.
[m] Jam. i. 17.
[n] Pſ. lxxxiv. 11.
[o] Ibid. lxvii. 6.
[p] Ibid. lxxxix. 14.

v. 8—13. The Pſalmiſt's prayer quickly meets an anſwer of peace.

1. He waits in confidence of being heard and anſwered. I will hear what God the Lord will ſpeak, patiently, compoſedly, and confidently expecting a reply to his petitions; for he will ſpeak peace unto his people, and to his ſaints, they are his, ſeparated for his bleſſed work and ſervice, and deſigned for the eternal enjoyment of himſelf; and however for a ſeaſon here they may be afflicted, he will keep their ſouls in peace, while truſting upon him, in the midſt of their troubles, and bring them at laſt to that eternal peace which paſſeth all underſtanding; but let them not return again unto folly, to ſin, and backſliding, which muſt deſtroy their peace, and bring the ſcourge upon them. Note, (1.) They who pray, ſhould expect an anſwer. (2.) When God hath ſpoken peace to our ſouls, let us be careful not to provoke him again, to withdraw it from us, through our folly.

2. He enlarges on the bleſſings that in faith he expects to receive, and ſeems particularly to have in view the coming of the glorious Meſſiah and his kingdom, the great hope and happineſs of Iſrael. Surely his ſalvation is nigh them that fear him; his ſalvation, for from God alone cometh our help, and it is nigh, when we are moſt oppreſſed he is at hand, and thoſe who fear him will never be forſaken by him in any of their diſtreſſes; and this may refer to the Lord Jeſus, whoſe day, by faith, the believers of old beheld approaching, and rejoiced in his ſalvation; that glory may dwell in our land, honourable as well as ſafe, under the divine protection, and moſt eminently glorious by the appearing of Immanuel, and the preaching of the everlaſting goſpel. Mercy, or grace, and truth are met together: righteouſneſs and peace have kiſſed each other, ſo full of theſe good fruits is their land, and ſuch harmony maintained among the Iſrael of God; or rather in the Redeemer's perſon, grace and truth are met, John i. 14, 17. grace in the moſt tranſcendant manner ſhewn to periſhing ſinners, and God's faithfulneſs to all his promiſes eminently manifeſted. The righteouſneſs of God now fully revealed and magnified, and yet peace on earth, and good will to men reſtored, Luke xi. 14. The puniſhment of ſin is exacted, yet the ſinner ſaved, the juſtice of God awfully executed, and withal abounding grace extended to the fallen ſons of Adam. Truth ſhall ſpring out of the earth, either the goſpel-word, ſo univerſally ſpread abroad, as graſs covers the earth watered with vernal ſhowers; or the truth of divine grace ſpringing up in the heart, through the enlightening and ſanctifying influences of the Spirit of truth; and righteouſneſs ſhall look down from heaven, the righteous God being well pleaſed with beholding the Redeemer executing his work of redemption, and regarding with delight all thoſe who, waſhed in his blood, and cloathed in his righteouſneſs, are now without ſpot or blemiſh. Yea, the Lord ſhall give that which is good, not merely temporal gifts, but the greater ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt Jeſus, of pardon, grace, and glory; and our land ſhall yield her increaſe, not only abundance of corn and wine and oil, but thoſe fruits of righteouſneſs which are by Jeſus Chriſt, to the praiſe and glory of God; or the Saviour himſelf born on earth, the moſt bleſſed fruit it ever produced. Righteouſneſs ſhall go before him, in perfect righteouſneſs all his ways will be directed, or it may ſignify a righteous perſon, as John the Baptiſt, ſent to prepare the way of the Lord; and ſhall ſet us in the way of his ſteps, pointing us to the Lamb of God, and teaching us to be followers of him in faithfulneſs and truth, that we may be led into the paths of everlaſting peace.

PSALM LXXXVI.

This pſalm is intitled a prayer of David; probably it was penned under Saul's perſecution, and he may herein be conſidered as a type of Chriſt, who in the days of his fleſh offered up ſtrong cries, Heb. v. 7. 1. He gives glory to God, ver. 8, 9, 10, 12, 13. 2. He prays that God would hear him, ver. 1, 6, 7. Preſerve him, and be merciful to him, ver. 2, 3, 16. that he would give him joy, and ſtrength, and put honour upon him, ver. 4, 11, 17. He pleads God's goodneſs, ver. 5, 15. and the malice of his enemies, ver. 14.

¶ A prayer of David.

1. BOW down thine ear, O LORD, hear me: for I am poor and needy. 2. Preſerve my ſoul, for I am † holy: O thou my God, ſave thy ſervant that truſteth in thee. 3. Be merciful unto me, O LORD: for [a] I cry unto thee ‡ daily. 4. Rejoice the ſoul of thy ſervant: for [b] unto thee, O LORD, do I lift up my ſoul. 5. For [c] thou, LORD, art good, and ready to forgive: and [d] plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee. 6. Give ear, O LORD, unto my prayer: and attend to the voice of my ſupplications. 7. [e] In the day of my trouble I will call upon thee: for thou wilt anſwer me.

† Or one whom thou favoureſt.
[a] Luke xviii. 1.
‡ Or all the day.
[b] Pſ. xxv. 1. & cxliii. 8.
[c] Ver. 15. Pſ. cxlv. 9. Joel ii. 13.
[d] Pſ. cxxx. 7.
[e] Ibid. l. 15.

v. 1—7. The ſame compoſition may breathe the language of prayer and praiſe, and our hymns ſpeak our requeſt for mercy, as well as our thankfulneſs for what we have received.

1. He intermixes his prayers and pleas for mercy and ſalvation. Bow down thine ear, O Lord, and hear me, ſpeaking after the manner of men, and intimating the great condeſcenſion of God, when he takes notice of ſuch poor worms as we are, and vouchſafes a hearing to our imperfect ſupplications; for I am poor and needy, this is his plea, for God hath promiſed to hear ſuch, and will be magnified in his mercy towards them, who have nothing but their wants and miſeries to bring to him. Preſerve my ſoul, or my life, the life of his body, from Saul's enmity, or the more precious life of his ſpirit; which, in his ſojourning among idolaters, amidſt temptations, and far from the ordinances of the ſanctuary, was in danger; for the greateſt ſaint of God, without his continual preſervation, would quickly fall. His plea is, for I am holy, innocent of all the accuſations laid againſt him by Saul and his courtiers, and alſo being renewed by divine grace, he pleads it as an argument for God's carrying on his work in his ſoul. Note, However poor we are, yet if rich in grace, we need never repine at our lot. O thou my God, ſave thy ſervant; other ſalvation he expected none, but hoped to find it in him, his reconciled God; in whoſe love he had a ſure intereſt, as being his ſervant, and therefore entitled to his protection; and that truſteth in thee, not in his own holineſs, but God's grace, and therefore God's faithfulneſs was engaged to him, for the fulfilment of his promiſes. Be merciful unto me, O Lord, for merit he utterly diſclaimed, and now in time of need ſought the promiſed mercy; for I cry unto thee daily, and therefore waiting on God in his appointed way, was emboldened to expect the help he wanted. Rejoice the ſoul of thy ſervant with diſcoveries of thy pardoning love, with thy comforting ſpirit, and with deliverance from his preſent trouble: and he urges this argument, for unto thee, O Lord, do I lift up my ſoul, as an oblation on God's altar, devoted to his ſervice; and whoever thus continues inſtant in prayer, will be ſent away rejoicing in God.

2. He expreſſes his confidence in God's grace and help. For thou, Lord, art good, eſſentially ſo in himſelf, and manifeſting in innumerable inſtances his goodneſs to his people, and ready to forgive, which is an eſpecial proof of it, nothing being ſo deſirable to a guilty ſoul, as the pardon of his ſins; and plenteous in mercy unto all that call upon thee: knowing the riches of God's grace, his heart reſted ſatisfied in him, and left his caſe contentedly in God's hands, Give ear, O Lord, unto my prayer, and attend to the voice of my ſupplications; and being fully perſuaded of God's willingneſs to hear and help him, he profeſſes it as his continual purpoſe to wait upon God, In the day of my trouble, for ſuch muſt every faithful ſoul expect, from corruption within, and temptation, oppoſition, and affliction without, I will call upon thee, committing all the concerns of body and ſoul into thy hands; for thou wilt anſwer me, of this I reſt aſſured, and therefore wait in confidence to ſee the ſalvation of God.

8. [f] Among the gods there is none like unto thee, O
LORD, [g] neither are there any works like unto thy works.
9. [h] All nations whom thou haſt made ſhall come and worſhip before thee, O LORD: and ſhall glorify thy name. 10. For thou art great, and [i] doſt wondrous things: [k] thou art God alone. 11. [l] Teach me thy way, O LORD, I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name. 12. I will praiſe thee, O LORD my God, with all my heart: and I will glorify thy name for evermore. 13. For great is thy mercy toward me:
and thou haſt delivered my ſoul from the loweſt † hell.
14. O God, [m] the proud are riſen againſt me, and the aſſemblies of ‡ violent men have ſought after my ſoul:
and have not ſet thee before them. 15. [n] But thou, O LORD, art a God full of compaſſion, and gracious:
long-ſuffering, and plenteous in mercy and truth. 16.
O turn unto me, and have mercy upon me, give thy ſtrength unto thy ſervant, and ſave [o] the ſon of thine handmaid. 17. Shew me a token for good, that they which hate me may ſee it, and be aſhamed: becauſe thou, LORD, haſt holpen me, and comforted me.

[f] Exod. xv. 11. Pſ. lxxxix. 6.
[g] Deut. iii. 24.
[h] Pſ. lxxii. 8.
[i] Ibid. 17. & lxxvii. 44.
[k] Deut. vi. 4. & xxxii. 39. Iſa. xxxvii. 16. & xliv. 6. Mark xii. 29. 1 Cor. viii. 4. Eph. iv. 6.
[l] Pſal. xxv. 4. & xxvii. 11. & cxix. 33. & cxliii. 8. Jer. x. 23.
† Or, grave.
[m] Pſ. liv. 3.
‡ Heb. Terrible.
[n] Exod. xxxiv. 6. Num. xiv. 18. Neh. ix. 17. Ver. 5. Pſ. ciii. 8. & cxi. 4. & cxxx. 7. & cxlv. 8. Joel ii. 13.
[o] Pſ. cxvi. 16.

v. 8—17. Having profeſſed his own dependance upon God, the Pſalmiſt,

1. Aſcribes to him the glory due unto his name, and therein ſhews what ground he had to truſt, and not be afraid, when this glorious God was his ſupport. Among angels, or men, none can be found comparable with him, or that can preſume to rival his ſtupendous works of creation, providence, and redemption, v. 8. All nations are the work of his hands, and muſt own him their great Creator: They ſhall come and worſhip him alone, and glorify his name, by yielding themſelves up to his ſervice, in body, ſoul, and ſpirit, as bound for ever to approve themſelves his faithful ſervants, which will receive its glorious accompliſhment in the latter days of the Meſſiah's kingdom, v. 9. Infinitely great in his adorable perfections, he worketh wonders in nature, providence, and grace; which angels, as well as men, behold with admiration: and as there is none like him, neither is there any beſides him, thou art God alone!

2. He prays for a heart to fear and follow him. Teach me thy way, O Lord, for we are blind and ignorant without divine teaching, and never elſe could know the way of ſalvation. I will walk in thy truth; when taught of God what is truth, he would follow it, particularly when inſtructed in the knowledge of Chriſt, the way, the truth, and the life, in whom we muſt walk, believing in him, and expecting happineſs from him, John i. 17. xiv. 6. Col. xi. 6. Unite my heart to fear thy name, ſolely and ſincerely attached to God, fearing nothing but to offend him, deſiring nothing ſo much as to pleaſe him, and this can only be received from God, whoſe grace can alone enable us thus to walk.

3. He acknowledges the everlaſting obligations lying on him to bleſs and praiſe God's name, and declares it his full purpoſe of heart to do ſo. I will praiſe thee, O Lord my God, with all my heart, moſt cordially, and with delight; and I will glorify thy name for evermore, whilſt I have a being upon earth, and through the days of eternity, and with abundant reaſon: For great is thy mercy towards me, yea, greater than I am able to expreſs; and to me in ſuch an aſtoniſhing manner declared; thou haſt delivered my ſoul from the loweſt hell, when by his ſins, eſpecially in the matter of Uriah, he had ſo juſtly deſerved the wrath of God, and yet had obtained mercy, and plucked as a brand from the burning, ſtood a monument of God's infinitely rich and ſovereign grace. Note, The greateſt ſaints of God reflect with deepeſt gratitude on the mercies they have experienced, and it heightens the ſongs of heaven, when thoſe who are advanced to that glorious place, look down on the flames beneath, and ſee on what a precipice of miſery they ſtood, when God ſnatched them from the everlaſting burnings.

4. He lodges his complaint with God againſt his enemies. O God, the proud are riſen againſt me, that could not bear the thoughts of his exaltation, and the aſſemblies of violent men, or terrible ones, have ſought after my ſoul, confederate to deſtroy him, plotting his ruin, and with cruelty and malice breathing forth ſlaughter; and have not ſet thee before them, regardleſs of God's omniſcience, and fearleſs of his vengeance. Note, (1.) Proud men cannot bear the rebuke of a holy converſation, and therefore turn perſecutors of the righteous. (2.) Though the wicked forget God, he does not forget them; but will, to their confuſion, return their miſchievous devices upon their own heads.

5. He profeſſes his dependance on God's kindneſs, to ſave him from their malice. But thou, O Lord, art a God full of compaſſion, and gracious, though they were cruel, he was kind; though they perſecuted, he would protect: long-ſuffering, even to the wicked, and much more to his own people; plenteous in mercy, to redeem them from every miſery, and truth to engage their confidence, on the faithfulneſs of his promiſes. Note, They who are under the care of this good God, need not fear the enmity of evil and malicious men.

6. He renews his prayer. O turn unto me with kind regard, and have mercy upon me, for thereon my hope is placed; give thy ſtrength unto thy ſervant, for my own is very weakneſs, but thine almighty, and ſave the ſon of thine handmaid, as one born in God's houſe, from days of infancy devoted to his ſervice, and who had taken the Lord by choice for his bleſſed maſter. Shew me a token for good, both for his own comfort, and viſibly for his enemies confuſion, that they which hate me, may ſee it and be aſhamed of their malice and enmity; becauſe thou, Lord, haſt holpen me, and comforted me, and therefore in fighting againſt his favoured ſervant, they will find they have been impotently ſtruggling againſt that omnipotent arm which protected him. Note, (1.) All our ſpiritual ſtrength is from God alone; without him, we are weak and helpleſs as infancy. (2.) Whom God helps, he comforts; his aſſiſtance being the pledge of his love, and that for everlaſting. (3.) Sooner or later the enemies of God's people will be aſhamed of their impotent malice.

PSALM LXXXVII.

This pſalm is an encomium of Sion, as a type and figure of the goſpel church. Sion, for the temple's ſake, is here preferred, 1. Before the reſt of the land of Canaan, as being crowned with ſpecial tokens of God's favour, ver. 1, 2, 3. 2. Before any other place or country whatſoever, as being repleniſhed with more eminent men, and with a greater plenty of divine bleſſings, ver. 4—7. And theſe glorious things ſpoken of here have their perfection and accompliſhment in the goſpel church.

¶ A pſalm or ſong † for the ſons of Korah.

1. HIS foundation is [a] in the holy mountains. 2. [b]
The LORD loveth the gates of Zion, more than all the dwellings of Jacob. 3. Glorious things are ſpoken of thee, O city of God. Selah.

† Or, of.
[a] Pſ. xlviii. 1.
[b] Ibid. lxxviii. 67, 68.

v. 1—3. The pſalm begins abruptly, as if he had been muſing on the glories of God's Zion, and inſtantly burſts forth in deſcribing them.

1. His foundation is in the holy mountains; the Lord hath laid the foundations of his church on Chriſt, the rock of ages; it is ſupported by his everlaſting promiſes, and ſtands firm in the beauty of holineſs.

2. He delights in the work of his own hands. The Lord loveth the gates of Zion, more than all the dwellings of Jacob; though all are dear to him, yet not alike dear; in Zion he hath choſen to fix his peculiar abode. Note, God is preſent in every family of his worſhipping people, and accepts their ſervice, but his eſpecial delight is in the great congregation, where all his people appear together before him.

3. Glorious things are ſpoken of thee, O thou city of God. Jeruſalem was a beautiful place, the joy of the whole earth, adorned with ſtately palaces, and moſt adorned with God's magnificent temple; but even this hath no glory, in compariſon with the goſpel church, which ſo far excelleth, the ſpouſe of Chriſt, the purchaſe of his blood; where all are kings and prieſts unto God; the walls ſalvation; the gates praiſe; the building eternal; that time, ſo far from ruining, muſt improve; and againſt which the gates of hell cannot prevail.

4. I will make mention of [c] Rahab, and Babylon, to them that know me: behold Philiſtia, and Tyre, with Ethiopia: this man was born there. 5. And of Zion it ſhall be ſaid, This and that man was born in her: and the higheſt himſelf [d] ſhall eſtabliſh her. 6. The LORD ſhall count when [e] he writeth up the people, that this man was born there. Selah. 7. As well the ſingers as the players on inſtruments ſhall be there: [f] all my ſprings are in thee.

[c] Pſ. lxxxix. 10.
[d] Mat. xvi. 18.
[e] Ezek. xiii. 9.
[f] Pſ. xlvi. 4.

v. 4—7. Some of the church's peculiar glories are here farther mentioned.

1. A great increaſe of converts ſhall be made to her. I will make mention of Rahab, that is Egypt, and Babylon, to them that know me, that they may expect their converſion, and receive them into the boſom of the church, or among them that know me; admitting them to the privileges of native Iſraelites, as fellow-citizens with the ſaints. Behold Philiſtia, and Tyre, with Ethiopia, ſtrangers hitherto, and foreigners; this man was born there, not any ſingular perſon, eminent for wiſdom, who might be produced among them; or here and there a proſelyte made to the Jewiſh religion; but rather it ſignifies, that in theſe countries multitudes ſhould be called to the faith and hope of the goſpel, and become regenerate by divine grace. And of Zion it ſhall be ſaid, this and that man was born in her; not ſo much the kings and prophets, the ornament of the Jewiſh Zion, as the redeemed of the Lord out of all lands, begotten to Chriſt, by the preaching of that everlaſting goſpel, that went forth out of Zion. And,

2. The higheſt himſelf ſhall eſtabliſh her. God, the moſt high, whoſe power none can withſtand, undertakes for her ſtability; and though floods of errors and hereſies threaten to overwhelm her, and ſtorms of perſecution furiouſly beat againſt her, ſhe ſhall never be removed, but riſe ſuperior to every foe, mergas profundo, pulchrior exilit. Note, It is a comfort amidſt the attacks of all the enemies of our ſalvation, to think what an almighty friend we have engaged to preſerve and protect us.

3. God will regiſter the names of his people in his book. From eternity they were written in the book of life of the Lamb, Rev. xiii. and now in the fulneſs of time, are called into the fellowſhip of the goſpel, and have a name among the living ſaints of God. So that the Lord ſhall count when he writeth up the people, in that great day, when they ſhall paſs in review before him, that this man was born there; each individual being known by him, ordained of him unto life, and not one ſhall periſh of all whom he hath given to be ſubjects and children to his king in Zion.

4. Great joy ſhall be in the midſt of her. As well the ſingers as players upon inſtruments ſhall be there, as in Zion of old, rehearſing God's praiſes, ſo in the goſpel-church ſhall be heard the voice of thoſe who ſing and make melody in their hearts unto God. All my freſh ſprings are in thee, which may be the words of the Pſalmiſt, or the ſong of the Redeemed, adoring Chriſt the ſource of all their joys, from whom they drink in pleaſures, as out of a river, and find freſh ſprings of grace implanted by him in their hearts, ſpringing up into everlaſting life.

PSALM LXXXVIII.

This pſalm is the moſt melancholy of all the pſalms; from firſt to laſt it is full of mourning, lamentation, and woe. We have, 1. The great preſſure of ſpirit that the pſalmiſt was under, ver. 3—6. 2. The wrath of God, which was the cauſe of that preſſure, ver. 7, 15—17. 3. The wickedneſs of his friends, ver. 8, 18. 4. The application he made to God by prayer, ver. 1, 2, 9, 13. 5. His humble expoſtulations and pleadings with God, ver. 10, 12, 14. And herein he ſeems to have been a type of Chriſt, to whom theſe things are more applicable than to any other.

¶ A ſong or pſalm † for the ſons of Korah, to the chief muſician ‡ upon Mahalath Leannoth, [a] Maſchil of [b] Heman the Ezrahite.

1. O LORD God of my ſalvation, [c] I have cried day and night before thee. 2. Let my prayer come before thee: incline thine ear unto my cry. 3. For my ſoul is full of troubles: and [d] my life draweth nigh unto the grave. 4. I am counted with them that go down into the pit: I am as a man that hath no ſtrength.
5. [e] Free among the dead, like the ſlain that lie in the grave whom thou remembreſt no more: and they are cut off ‖ from thy hand. 6. Thou haſt laid me in the loweſt pit, in darkneſs, in the deeps. 7. Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, and [f] thou haſt afflicted me with all thy waves, Selah. 8. [g] Thou haſt put away mine acquaintance far from me: thou haſt made me an abomination unto them: [h] I am ſhut up, and I cannot come forth. 9. [i] Mine eye mourneth by reaſon of affliction:
LORD, I have called daily upon thee, [k] I have ſtretched out my hands unto thee.

† Or, of.
‡ Or, concerning the afflicting diſeaſe.
[a] Pſ. xxxii. Tit.
[b] 1 Kings iv. 31. 1 Chron. ii. 6.
[c] Pſ. lxxxvi. 3. Luke xviii. 7.
[d] Pſ. cvii. 18.
[e] Ibid. xxxi. 12.
‖ Heb. Or, by thy hand.
[f] Pſ. xlii. 7.
[g] Job xix. 13. Pſ. xxxi. 11. & cxlii. 4.
[h] Sam. iii. 7.
[i] Pſ. xxxviii. 10.
[k] Job xi. 13. Pſ. cxliii. 6.

v. 1—9. The penman of this pſalm is called Heman the Ezrahite: there were two of this name; the one famed for wiſdom, 1 Chron. xi 6. 1 Kings iv. 31. the other, who lived in David's time, a ſinger, and the king's ſeer, 1 Chron. vi. 33. xv. 17, 19. who was probably the perſon. The title of it is Mahalath Leannoth, which ſome ſuppoſe to be the muſical inſtrument; others, to ſignify the ſubject of the pſalm, The afflicting diſeaſe, whether of body or ſoul, or it may be of both, for it is evidently penned in great bitterneſs; and except in the addreſs to God, whom he calls the God of my ſalvation, affords not one comfortable word of hope. Yet where God is our ſalvation, though we are ſunk in deepeſt diſtreſs, and all the ſtorms and billows go over us, we ſhall at laſt emerge, and cannot finally periſh.

1. His prayer is fervent and importunate. O Lord God of my ſalvation, from whom alone I can expect relief, I have cried day and night before thee, long and often, and ſtill continue to look up, though my troubles are unabated. Let my prayer come before thee, and incline thine ear unto my cry; thus in the days of his fleſh the Redeemer poured out his prayers, with ſtrong crying and tears, unto him who was able to ſave him from death, Heb. v. 7. and in all our trials, to a throne of grace muſt we continually fly, and never faint, or be weary of praying and waiting upon God, till he is pleaſed to viſit us with his ſalvation, and ſay to our tempeſtuous ſouls, Peace, be ſtill.

2. His ſorrows are enlarged. For my ſoul is full of trouble, and ſoul-troubles are the ſoreſt of all others: a wounded ſpirit who can bear? yet with theſe, God is ſometimes pleaſed to exerciſe his deareſt ſaints, and they muſt not count this fiery trial ſtrange: and my life draweth nigh unto the grave, unable to ſupport the burden, or unto hell, ſo dreadful were his apprehenſions, now the light of God's countenance was withdrawn. The Son of God repeated theſe deep complaints, and with a bitterneſs which never any ſoul but his taſted, Math. xxvi. 38.

3. He is reduced to the brink of deſpair. I am counted with them that go down into the pit, as a dead man, or among malefactors, whoſe dead bodies were caſt into the pit together. I am as a man that hath no ſtrength, helpleſs and hopeleſs: free among the dead, of that ghaſtly family, like the ſlain that lie in the grave, whom thou remembereſt no more, no longer the objects of his providential care; and they are cut off from thy hand, no more ſtretched out to feed them, or by thy hand, and that is of all deaths the moſt miſerable, which is ſent as a judgment from God. Thou haſt laid me in the loweſt deep, ſunk under the moſt deplorable diſtreſs, in darkneſs, both with regard to the concerns of body and ſoul; and in the deeps, lower he cannot be, but in the belly of hell. Among thoſe who go down to the loweſt pit, yea, among the vileſt malefactors was the ſon of God reckoned; and though the mighty God, as unable to help himſelf, he yielded up his body to be nailed to the tree: with the ſlain he lay down, and viſited the manſions of the dead, cut off by the hand of juſtice, under the tranſgreſſions of his people, Iſa. liii. 8. Note, Though the faith of God's people never faileth, it may ſometimes, in thoſe who are in general the ſtrongeſt believers, be ſo ſhaken, and unbelief ſo prevalent, that they are ready to give up all for loſt, and conclude their ſtate deſperate.

4. A ſenſe of divine wrath was the bittereſt part of his ſufferings. Thy wrath lieth hard upon me, ſuch were then his gloomy fears, though towards his people there is no wrath in God; and thou haſt afflicted me with all thy waves, one dark providence and diſtreſſing fear ſucceeding another, as if he was about to overwhelm him in the abyſs of miſery: thus may God's deareſt children ſuffer under that moſt painful of all their troubles, the fear of his intolerable anger. What he feared, really fell on Jeſus, our ſubſtitute, who bore our ſins, and the wrath due to them, on his own body on the tree; and over him every wave of juſtice broke terrible, till in death he paid the dreadful debt.

5. His friends deſerted him in his troubles, but he ſaw God's hand in the affliction. Thou haſt put away mine acquaintance far from me; to find a kind and compaſſionate friend is an alleviation to our ſorrows; but he had none, or by divine Providence they were removed from him, or incapacitated for ſerving him; thou haſt made me an abomination to them; perhaps, like Job's friends, they miſinterpreted his ſufferings, as if they proved him a wicked man, and ſhunned him as ſuch, which made it the more grievous: thus was Jeſus alſo betrayed by one diſciple, denied by another, forſaken of all. Let no follower of his therefore wonder, if deareſt friends forſake, ſlight, or abhor him; he is then but as his Lord.

6. His caſe appeared remedileſs. I am ſhut up, confined with bodily affliction, or in a priſon of ſpiritual darkneſs, and I cannot come forth, ſee no door open, have no power to help myſelf, and can only vent my diſconſolate ſorrows. Mine eye mourneth by reaſon of affliction, but neither tears or prayers brought him relief: Lord, I have called daily unto thee, I have ſtretched out my hands unto thee, and yet found no relief: a diſcouraging caſe indeed! when even our prayers ſeem to return unanſwered, and our miſeries to continue unremoved. The agonizing prayers of Jeſus ſpoke his deep apprehenſions of the Divine wrath, from which the humanity ſhrunk, and wiſhed the cup to paſs from him, but it is decreed he muſt drink it.

10. [l] Wilt thou ſhew wonders to the dead? ſhall the dead ariſe and praiſe thee? Selah. 11. Shall thy loving kindneſs be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulneſs in deſtruction? 12. [m] Shall thy wonders be known in the dark? and thy righteouſneſs in [n] the land of forgetfulneſs? 13. But unto thee have I cried, O LORD, and [o] in the morning ſhall my prayer prevent thee. 14. LORD, why caſteſt thou off my ſoul? why hideſt thou thy face from me? 15. I am afflicted and ready to die from my youth up: while [p] I ſuffer thy terrors, I am diſtracted. 16. Thy † fierce wrath goeth over me, thy terrors have cut me off. 17. They came round about me ‡ daily like water, they compaſſed me about together. 18. [q] Lover and friend haſt thou put far from me, and mine acquaintance into darkneſs.

[l] Pſ. vi. 5. & xxx. 9. & cxv. 17. & cxviii. 17. Iſa. xxxviii. 18.
[m] Job x. 21. Pſ. cxliii. 3.
[n] Pſ. xxxi. 12. Eccleſ. ix. 5.
[o] Pſ. v. 3.
[p] Job vi. 4.
† Heb. Burnings
‡ Or all the day.
[q] Pſ. xxxi. 11. & xxxviii. 11.

v. 10—18. From prayer, he proceeds,

1. To expoſtulations. Wilt thou ſhew wonders to the dead? ſhall the dead ariſe and praiſe thee? they no more tell of his goodneſs, declare his loving-kindneſs, proclaim his faithfulneſs, ver. 11. diſplay his amazing grace, or exalt his righteouſneſs here below. Though in the eternal world they live, yet here God could receive no more ſervice from them; and this he intimates muſt be his caſe, without ſpeedy relief, as death would quickly put it out of his power for ever to glorify God among the living, Job vii. 8. x. 21. Note, The great end for which a good man wiſhes to live, is to ſerve God's intereſts in the world, and ſhew forth his praiſe.

2. He returns to prayer again. But unto thee have I cried, O Lord; he had done ſo, and reſolved to continue unwearied, yea, more diligent in the work: and in the morning ſhall my prayer prevent thee, not that he could riſe earlier to pray, than God would wake to hear, for he never ſlumbers nor ſleeps; but he would begin before the uſual time of prayer for others, and ſooner than he himſelf was wont to pray, Mark i. 35. Note, (1.) Early prayers will uſually be moſt lively. (2.) The more affliction preſſes, the more preſſing and perſevering ſhould be our ſupplications.

3. He determines what to ſay in his early approach to God. Lord, why caſteſt thou off my ſoul? he dreaded the thought of being abandoned of God, deſired to know the cauſe why he contended thus with him, for cauſe no doubt there was, that it might be removed. Why hideſt thou thy face from me? better, infinitely better be without the light of the ſun, than of God's countenance: ſo thinks a child of God. In like manner did the Saviour reaſon under his ſad deſertion on the tree, Matth. xxvii. 46.

4. He repeats his bitter complaints, and leaves them in God's compaſſionate boſom. I am afflicted in body and mind, from earth and hell; and worſt of all, even heaven ſeems to frown. Or, I am poor, reduced to the deepeſt ſtate of want and wretchedneſs, and ready to die from my youth up, ſo ſickly, or ſo beſet with enemies, as Jeſus was, even when a babe. While I ſuffer thy terrors, I am diſtracted; the frightful apprehenſions of God's wrath quite diſcompoſed his ſpirit, and drove him for a while to the very brink of deſpair; and this hath been the caſe with many a ſoul now rejoicing in glory. Even the divine Redeemer once was ſore amazed at what he felt and ſaw, Mark xiv. 33. Thy fierce wrath goeth over me, or wraths; ſuch inceſſant waves of anguiſh and diſtreſs rolled upon him, and ſo inſupportable this wrath of God appeared, that he was ready to give over himſelf for loſt: thy terrors have cut me off from the land of the living, as the Meſſiah was, Iſa. liii. 8. or from God's favour for ever, in which conſiſts the miſery of the damned, and he looked only for a place with them, ſo deſperate his ſtate appeared. Note, The way to heaven lies often by the very gates of hell. They came round about me daily like water, the terrors of God riſing like a ſwelling flood; they compaſſed me about together, ſo that no eſcape ſeemed poſſible, as when the Egyptians were hemmed in by the ſea on every ſide. Thus Jeſus complained, Pſal. xxii. 12, 16. xl. 12. and to ſuch aſſaults of temptation may his people be expoſed. Lover and friend haſt thou put far from me, taken from me, or become unkind and faithleſs; and mine acquaintance into darkneſs, or are darkneſs, dead, at leaſt to him, as bringing no chearing beam of conſolation, to alleviate his ſorrows; next to religion are the comforts of friendſhip; to be deſtitue of both, is wretchedneſs in perfection. Thus ends this mournful ſong: but though no word of comfort is added, we may ſupply it without fear; for none ever thus ſowed in tears, who did not reap in joy.

PSALM LXXXIX.

This pſalm bears the name of Ethan, of him mentioned 1 Kings iv. 31. or of a ſinger, who lived in Solomon's reign, and ſaw the decline of David's houſe on his deceaſe, or by one of his name during the captivity in Babylon. 1. He begins with joy, (1.) In God's covenant of mercy, ver. 1—4. (2.) In his glorious perfections, ver. 5—14. (3.) In the happineſs of thoſe who are admitted into communion with him, ver. 15—18. (4.) In the hope of the Meſſiah's enduring kingdom, ver. 19—37. 2. He ends with mourning over the calamities of the houſe of David, ver. 38—45. Expoſtulates with God thereon, ver. 46—49. and begs redreſs, ver. 50, 51.

¶ [a] Maſchil of [b] Ethan the Ezrahite.

1. I WILL ſing of the mercies of the LORD for ever: with my mouth will I make known thy faithfulneſs † to all generations. 2. For I have ſaid, Mercy ſhall be built up for ever: [c] thy faithfulneſs ſhalt thou eſtabliſh in the very heavens. 3. I have made a covenant with my choſen, [d] I have ſworn unto David my ſervant. 4. [e] Thy ſeed will I eſtabliſh for ever, and [f] build up thy throne to all generations. Selah.

[a] Pſ. xxxii. Title.
[b] 1 Kings iv. 31. 1 Chron. ii. 6.
† Heb. To generation and generation. Ver. 4.
[c] Pſ. cxix. 89.
[d] 2 Sam. vii. 11, &c. or Jer. xxx. 9. Ezek. xxxiv. 23.
[e] Ver xxix. 36.
[f] Luke i. 32, 33.

v. 1—4. The Pſalmiſt opens with praiſe, notwithſtanding the deſolations before him, which ſo deeply affected and afflicted him; for no troubles ſhould untune our hearts: we can be in no ſtate or condition, when we have not matter for a ſong, and ſhall get more heart's-eaſe by praiſing than complaining.

1. The Pſalmiſt declares his purpoſe to celebrate with ceaſeleſs praiſe, the mercies and faithfulneſs of the Lord, v. 1. However dark preſent providences appeared, he could not doubt his boundleſs mercy, nor diſtruſt his inviolable faithfulneſs; and therefore not only his lips ſhould praiſe, but he would make known God's mercy and truth, and leave it upon record to future generations.

2. He profeſſes his own faith and hope in God. For I have ſaid, confiding in God's promiſe, in oppoſition to all appearances, Mercy ſhall be built up for ever, the tabernacle of David be revived from its ruins, flouriſh for ever through God's mercy: thy faithfulneſs ſhalt thou eſtabliſh in the very heavens, his promiſes enduring as the heavens, and his faithfulneſs moſt eminently proved, when his ſaints ſhall be taken up to heaven, and herein with unſhaken confidence he reſted.

3. The ground on which this faith was built, is God's everlaſting covenant of grace. I have made a covenant with my choſen David, as the type of the Meſſiah, and called by the name of David, Ezek. xxxiv. 23. 24. Hoſ. iii. 5. choſen from eternity, appointed to be the covenant head of his people, their ſurety and repreſentative, and in whoſe hands all the bleſſings of the covenant are lodged. I have ſworn unto David my ſervant, to ſhew the immutability of his counſel, Heb. vi. 18. Thy ſeed will I eſtabliſh for ever, not his natural ſeed merely, but all believers, the ſpiritual ſeed of Chriſt, who have an intereſt in this everlaſting covenant; and build up thy throne to all generations, the throne of Chriſt, whoſe kingdom is an everlaſting kingdom, and of his government there will be no end. And this is the grand foundation of every believer's hope and confidence, that the covenant ſtands firm in Chriſt, and therefore is ſure to all the ſeed, however ſore beſet with trials, and compaſſed with enemies on every ſide. We have the word, the oath of God for us; till they fail, we cannot.

5. And [g] the heavens ſhall praiſe thy wonders, O LORD: thy faithfulneſs alſo in the congregation of the ſaints.

[g] Pſ. xix. 1.

ſaints. 6. For [h] who in the heaven can be compared unto the LORD? who among the ſons of the mighty can be likened unto the LORD? 7. [i] God is greatly to be feared in the aſſembly of the ſaints: and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him. 8. O LORD God of hoſts, who is a ſtrong LORD like unto thee? or to thy faithfulneſs round about thee? 9. [k] Thou ruleſt the raging of the ſea: when the waves thereof ariſe, thou ſtilleſt them. 10. [l] Thou haſt broken † Rahab in pieces, as one that is ſlain; thou haſt ſcattered thine enemies with thy ſtrong arm. 11. [m] The heavens are thine, the earth alſo is thine: as for the world, and the fulneſs thereof, thou haſt founded them. 12. The north and the ſouth thou haſt created them: Tabor and Hermon ſhall rejoice in thy name. 13. Thou haſt ‡ a mighty arm: ſtrong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand. 14. [n] Juſtice and judgment are the ‖ habitation of thy throne, [o] mercy and truth ſhall go before thy face.

[h] Pſal. lxxi. 19. & lxxxvi. 8. & cxiii. 5.
[i] Pſ. lxxvi. 11.
[k] Ibid. lxv. 7. & xciii. 4.
[l] Exod. xiv. 26. Iſa. li. 9.
† i.e. Egypt.
[m] 1 Chron. xxix. 11. Pſ. xxiv. 1. & l. 12.
‡ Heb. An arm with might.
[n] Pſ. xcvii. 2.
‖ Or, eſtabliſhment.
[o] Pſ. lxxxv. 13.

v. 5—14. The Pſalmiſt reiterates the praiſes of God, and moſt worthy he appears to be adored, and had in everlaſting remembrance.

1. Heaven and earth muſt celebrate his glory. The heavens, with all their bright inhabitants, ſhall praiſe thy wonders, or that wonderful work of thine, the covenant of grace eſtabliſhed in Chriſt with loſt ſinners, or that ſtupenduous incarnation of the Son of God: thy faithfulneſs alſo in the congregation of the ſaints, earth as well as heaven unites in adoration, and ſaints ſeek to emulate the ſervice of angels; and moſt eſpecially bounden are they to join in the ſong of praiſe, when aſſembled in the great congregation, where God has promiſed the eſpecial preſence of his grace, and is to be approached with filial reverence and godly fear, v. 7. Heb. xii. 28. Note, They who ever hope for heaven, muſt begin the ſervice upon earth. If we have now no joy in God's worſhip and praiſes, how can we expect happineſs there, where this is the everlaſting employment of the glorified ſoul?

2. Moſt abundant reaſon there is, why God ſhould be thus adored,

[1.] Becauſe his greatneſs is beyond compare. Heaven yields none like him; the higheſt archangel is infinitely more beneath his perfection, than they are above the worm, the meaneſt worm that crawls: and much leſs can earth, among its mightieſt ſons, produce a rival to him, who ſitteth on the circle of the heavens, and the inhabitants of the world are but as graſhoppers before him.

[2.] His ſtrength and faithfulneſs are moſt tranſcendantly great. None can do what he doth, nor did ever any truſt him and were diſappointed, v. 8. Several inſtances of this his Almighty power are here given:

(1.) In his controul of the moſt unruly elements, Thou ruleſt the raging of the ſea: when the waves thereof ariſe, thou ſtilleſt them: he hath appointed their bounds; and though the foaming billows lift their heads, they cannot paſs them, but in an inſtant at his word ſubſide, and creep in murmurs to the ſhore. By this act of omnipotence did Jeſus manifeſt his godhead and glory, Mat. viii. 24—27.

(2.) In his victories over Egypt, and his people's enemies, when Pharaoh, that Rahab, that proud one was deſtroyed, and all his hoſts, as corpſes, ſcattered on the ſhore; an emblem of the victories of Jeſus over Satan and the powers of darkneſs, and of his deſtruction of the antichriſtian foe, when Babylon myſtical, as Rahab, ſhall be broken in pieces.

(3.) In his univerſal dominion over all the creatures. The heaven and earth, and all who dwell in them own his authority, and regard him as their creator: from pole to pole he is Lord of all, and Tabor and Hermon rejoice in his name, all the fertility, ſtrength, and beauty they poſſeſs, are from his gift; and if Tabor, as is generally ſuppoſed, was the mount where our Lord was transfigured, it might with peculiar propriety be ſaid to rejoice in him.

(4.) In his providential government. Thou haſt a mighty arm, able to ſave and to deſtroy; ſtrong is thy hand, and high is thy right hand, to preſerve, protect, and chaſtiſe his people for their good, or to puniſh and overwhelm his enemies with judgments irreſiſtible; and withal moſt holy juſt and good are all his diſpenſations. Juſtice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne, the adminiſtration of the kingdom of his providence is altogether righteous and equitable. Mercy and truth ſhall go before his face; mercy in pardoning the periſhing ſinner, truth in performing all his promiſes; and juſtly do theſe exalt him, and render him worthy to receive bleſſing, and glory, and majeſty, and might, and dominion, for ever and ever.

15. Bleſſed is the people that know [p] the joyful ſound: they ſhall walk, O LORD, in the light of thy countenance. 16. In thy name ſhall they rejoice all the day: and in thy righteouſneſs ſhall they be exalted. 17. For thou art the glory of their ſtrength: and [q] in thy favour our horn ſhall be exalted. 18. For † the LORD is our defence: and the holy One of Iſrael is our king.

[p] Lev. xxv. 9. or Num. xxiii. 21.
[q] Ver. 24. Pſ. cxxxii. 17.
† Or, our ſhield is of the Lord, and our king is of the holy One of Iſrael. Pſ. xlvii. 9.

v. 15—18. The bleſſedneſs of God's people is here deſcribed; as there is no God like him, ſo no people ſo happy as thoſe who know him, love him, ſerve him.

1. They know the joyful ſound of goſpel-grace, like the ſhout of a victorious army, Numb. xxiii. 21. or the welcome trump of Jubilee, proclaiming victory over ſin, death, and hell, liberty from the bondage of corruption, and ſpeaking pardon, peace, and eternal reconciliation between the offended God, and the ſinful ſoul.

2 They ſhall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance, under the ſpecial tokens of his favour, enjoying the moſt endeared communion with him, and walking in the comforts of the Holy Ghoſt.

3. Their joy ſhall be permanent. In thy name ſhall they rejoice all the day, every day they will have cauſe to do ſo, in further and clearer manifeſtations of the divine grace and love, and in the darkeſt hour, ſtill they may find matter for a ſong.

4. Their exaltation will be great, cloathed with the divine righteouſneſs of Jeſus, which, from the loweſt ſtate of miſery and ſin, entitles them to a place among God's princes, v. 16. endued with divine ſtrength, which will make them more than conquerors over all the enemies of their ſouls; and poſſeſſed of theſe, they will appear glorious in the eyes of God, in that beauty and comelineſs he hath put upon them; and lifting up their horn on high, be aſſured, through the unchangeable favour of their God, that none ſhall be able to move them, or make their glorying void.

5. Their relation to God makes them both ſafe and honourable. For the Lord is our defence or ſhield, to protect and defend us from every evil, and the holy One of Iſrael, whoſe promiſes never fail, is our king, to rule and guide us in paths of everlaſting peace, under his happy ſway. Bleſſed, for ever bleſſed are the people that are in ſuch a caſe!

19. Then thou ſpakeſt in viſion to the holy One, and ſaidſt, I have laid help upon [r] one that is mighty: I have exalted one choſen out of the people. 20. I have found David my ſervant: [s] with my holy oil have I anointed him. 21. [t] With whom my hand ſhall be eſtabliſhed: mine arm alſo ſhall ſtrengthen him. 22. [u] The enemy ſhall not exact upon him: nor [x] the ſon of wickedneſs afflict him. 23. And [y] I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him. 24. But [z] my faithfulneſs and my mercy ſhall be with him: and [a] in my name ſhall his horn be exalted. 25. [b] I will ſet his hand alſo in the ſea, and his right hand in the rivers. 26. He ſhall cry unto me, Thou art my father, my God, and the rock of my ſalvation. 27. Alſo I will make him [c] my firſt-born, [d] higher than the kings of the earth. 28. [e] My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and my covenant ſhall ſtand faſt with him. 29. [f] His ſeed alſo will I make to endure for ever, [g] and his throne as the days of heaven. 30. [h] If his children forſake my law, and walk not in my judgments; 31. If they † break my ſtatutes, and keep not my commandments: 32. Then [i] will I viſit their tranſgreſſion with the rod, and their iniquity with ſtripes. 33. [k] Nevertheleſs my loving kindneſs will I not ‡ utterly take from him, nor ſuffer my faithfulneſs to ‖ fail. 34. My covenant will I not break, [l] nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. 35. Once [m] have I ſworn [n] by my holineſs, that I will not lie unto David. 36. [o] His ſeed ſhall endure for ever, and his throne [p] as the ſun before me. 37. It ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever as the moon, and as [q] a faithful witneſs in heaven. Selah.

[r] Iſa. ix. 6.
[s] Pſ. xlv. 7. John iii. 34.
[t] Pſ. lxxx. 17.
[u] 2 Sam. vii. 10.
[x] 2 Theſſ. ii. 8.
[y] Pſ. cx. 1.
[z] Ibid. lxi. 7.
[a] Ver. 17.
[b] Pſ. lxxii. 8.
[c] Ibid. ii. 7. Col. i. 15, 18.
[d] Num. xxiv. 7. Rev. xxi. 24.
[e] Iſa. lv. 3.
[f] Ver. 4, 36.
[g] Iſa. ix. 7. Jer. xxxiii. 17. Luke i. 33.
[h] 2 Sam. vii. 14.
† Or, prophane. Ver. 34.
[i] Heb. xii. 7, &c.
[k] 2 Sam. vii. 15.
‡ Heb. Make void.
‖ Heb. Lie.
[l] Mal. iii. 6. Jam. i. 17.
[m] Heb. vi. 13.
[n] Amos iv. 2.
[o] 2 Sam. vii. 16. Ver. 4. 29. Luke i. 33. John xii. 34.
[p] Pſ. lxxii. 17.
[q] Gen. ix. 13.

v. 19—37. The covenant God had made with David was before mentioned, and here is enlarged upon, as a ground of comfort in the preſent low eſtate of the royal family. And herein eſpecial relation is had to Chriſt, to whom alone the things here mentioned are entirely applicable, and the everlaſting covenant is therefore called the ſure mercies of our ſpiritual David, Acts xiii. 34. We have here,

1. The glorious perſonage pointed out with whom the covenant is made. Then thou ſpakeſt in viſion to thy Holy One, to Samuel, who was appointed to anoint David king, 1 Sam. xvi. 1. or Nathan, 2 Sam. vii. 4. or concerning thy Holy One, the Meſſiah, to whom gave all the prophets witneſs; and to him moſt emphatically belongs the character here deſcribed. The mighty One, able to ſave to the uttermoſt; choſen out of the people, God's elect, in whom his ſoul delighteth; one in our nature, ſingled out to be united to the eternal word, no longer two but one Chriſt. Found and provided of God from eternity, anointed with the oil of gladneſs above his fellows, for the diſcharge of all his offices of prophet, prieſt, and king. Help laid upon him, that he might be fully qualified for the arduous work of bringing many ſons unto glory, from the depths of wretchedneſs and weakneſs into which we were fallen; God's ſervant willingly undertaking the buſineſs aſſigned him, and exalted by him to the higheſt place of honour and dignity at his right hand, all power being committed to him in heaven and in earth, and angels, principalities, and powers made ſubject unto him.

2. The great and precious promiſes made to this mighty and exalted Meſſiah.

[1.] For himſelf God promiſes, (1.) That in all his undertakings he ſhall be ſupported with the arm of omnipotence; enabled to encounter and overcome all difficulties; be ready armed againſt every temptation, and unmoved under every aſſault, v. 21. Note, If almighty ſtrength be engaged for us, then ſurely we cannot miſcarry. (2.) He ſhall be made victorious over his enemies. Satan, with all his wiles, ſhall not prevail, nor be able to exact upon him more than as the ſinner's ſurety he undertook to bear; or afflict him farther than the determinate counſel and fore-knowledge of God decreed: and though he raiſed up all the malice of earth and hell, the blow he meditates muſt cruſh his own head. God will beat down all his foes before him, whether the powers of darkneſs, or the Jewiſh people that conſpired againſt him, or the antichriſtian oppreſſors of his people: all who hate him muſt be confounded at his feet; bow down, and feel his iron rod breaking them in pieces as a potter's veſſel, and dooming them to the everlaſting burnings, the juſt puniſhment of their ſins. Note, The end of all the enemies of the Redeemer and his people is to periſh for ever. (3.) God will never fail him in his undertaking. My faithfulneſs and my mercy ſhall be with him: all the promiſes ſhall be made good to him, and all the bleſſings engaged for in the covenant of grace be lodged in his hands for his people's uſe and benefit; ſo that out of his fulneſs we may all receive, and find all the promiſes of God in him, yea, and Amen. (4.) He ſhall be advanced to great honour and extenſive dominion. In my name ſhall his horn be exalted, high in power and glory: I will ſet his hand in the ſea, and his right hand in the rivers: both continent and iſlands, ſea and rivers, with all that dwell in them, and occupy their buſineſs there, ſhall own his ſway, and ſubmit to his government. (5.) He ſhall be owned of God as his Son, as his firſt-born, and enjoy the bleſſings of that endeared relation, which in a ſenſe belonged to Solomon, 2 Sam. vii. 14 but more peculiarly to Chriſt Jeſus. He ſhall cry unto me, Thou art my Father, by eternal generation, as he is very God of very God; or rather as Mediator, for whom a body was prepared, when in the fulneſs of time it was fulfilled, This day have I begotten thee, Pſal. ii. 7. My God, whoſe power and protection were engaged for him and over him, John xx. 17. and the rock of my ſalvation, to carry him through his arduous undertaking, and enable him to accompliſh it for his own and his people's glory. Alſo I will make him my firſt-born, the moſt eminent and exalted of all the ſons of God in the human nature, he having in all things the pre-eminence, higher than the kings of the earth, for he is King of kings, and Lord of lords, Rev. xix. 16. His throne exalted over all, and that for ever and ever, for his kingdom is an everlaſting kingdom. (6.) In him God's covenant ſhall ſtand faſt for ever with all thoſe for whom he hath undertaken: all the mercies of the everlaſting covenant ſhall be ſure to them both in time and eternity.

[2.] For them God promiſes, in general, that his ſeed ſhall endure for ever, which cannot well be applied to David and his poſterity, which, though the throne long continued in his family, are now no more, unleſs conſidered as ſtill ſubſiſting in the Meſſiah, whoſe throne is eſtabliſhed for ever. But it moſt properly belongs to believers, the ſpiritual ſeed of Chriſt, who ſhall have a people to the praiſe of the glory of his grace, whilſt ſun and moon endureth; and when theſe luminaries are extinguiſhed, ſhall ſtill reign over his choſen through all the ages of eternity: and though in ſome ſeaſons the proſpect looks threatning, through declenſions, perſecutions, and apoſtacy, and few men left, yet not one jot or tittle of the promiſes ſhall ever fail.

(1.) It is ſuppoſed, that even among the redeemed, ſome things, yea much, may be found amiſs. They may be guilty of many and great offences, by omiſſion, and commiſſion, thro' neglect, yea, thro' wilfulneſs: all but the unpardonable ſin they may be ſeduced to commit; yet, though they are falſe, God is faithful to his covenant with Chriſt, and will not deſtroy, but recover them, v. 30, 31.

(2.) He will viſit them with a father's rod; though they are not undone, they ſhall not go unpuniſhed. Yea, with ſevere ſcourges ſhall they be often made to ſmart for their frowardneſs and folly, yet whilſt God's honour is thus vindicated, and their ſouls humbled, the effects wrought will be peace and righteouſneſs, and good be brought even out of their evil. Note, This ſhould teach us to hear and kiſs the rod, and bleſs the hand that corrects us, that we ſhould not be given over unto death.

(3.) God's covenant ſhall nevertheleſs ſtand faſt with them. My kindneſs will I not take from them, though the ſenſe of it may be withdrawn, yet his mercy ſhall not ever totally or finally depart. There remain a father's bowels under the ſevereſt ſtrokes of deſerved chaſtiſement, and this becauſe of the faithfulneſs of God to his Meſſiah, according to his promiſe, confirmed by an oath to him. Whatever breaches or profanations they were guilty of in God's law and worſhip, he would not break, or prophane, as the word ſignifies, his covenant. He had promiſed him a ſeed for ever on earth, perpetual as ſun and moon, and the bright bow in the clouds, the faithful witneſs of God's covenant with Noah, and the emblem of this everlaſting covenant of grace. Nor ſhall they end with the days of time, but live and reign with their exalted head coeval with the days of eternity.

38. But thou haſt caſt off and abhorred, thou haſt been wroth with thine anointed. 39. Thou haſt made void the covenant of thy ſervant: [r] thou haſt profaned his crown, by caſting it to the ground. 40. [s] Thou haſt broken down all his hedges, thou haſt brought his ſtrong holds to ruin. 41. All that paſs by the way, ſpoil him: he is a reproach to his neighbours. 42. Thou haſt ſet up the right hand of his adverſaries: thou haſt made all his enemies to rejoice. 43. Thou haſt alſo turned the edge of his ſword, [t] and haſt not made him to ſtand in the battle. 44. Thou haſt made his † glory to ceaſe, and caſt his throne down to the ground. 45. The days of his youth haſt thou ſhortned: thou haſt covered him with ſhame. Selah. 46. [u] How long, LORD, wilt thou hide thyſelf for ever? [x] ſhall thy wrath burn like fire? 47. Remember [y] how ſhort my time is: wherefore haſt thou made all men in vain? 48. [z] What man is he that liveth, [a] and ſhall not ſee death? ſhall he deliver his ſoul from the hand of the grave? Selah. 49. LORD, where are thy former loving-kindneſſes, [b] which thou ſwareſt unto David in thy truth? 50. Remember, LORD, the reproach of thy ſervants; [c] how I do bear in my boſom the reproach of all the mighty people; 51. [d] Wherewith thine enemies have reproached, O LORD; wherewith they have reproached the footſteps of thine anointed. 52. [e] Bleſſed be the LORD for evermore. Amen, and amen.

[r] Lam. v. 16.
[s] Pſ. lxxx. 12.
[t] Deut. xxviii. 25.
† Heb. Brightneſs.
[u] Pſ. xiii. 1. & lxxix. 5.
[x] Pſ. lxxviii. 63.
[y] Ibid. xxxix. 5. & cxix. 84.
[z] Pſ. xlix. 9.
[a] Heb. xi. 5.
[b] 2 Sam. vii. 15. Iſa. lv. 3.
[c] Pſ. lxix. 9.
[d] Ibid. lxxiv. 22.
[e] Ibid. xli. 13.

v. 38—52. We have here an awful change. The language of praiſe and exultation is ſunk to the loweſt depth of mourning and woe; and this may be conſidered as a lamentation over the fall of the houſe of David under Rehoboam, or during the captivity, when he and his ſeed appeared to be fallen paſt recovery, their honour tarniſhed, their ſtrength broken, their enemies prevailing, and their utter ruin expected. But as the former part of the pſalm ſeems moſt eminently to relate to the ſpiritual David and his church, theſe words may be better interpreted of them. We have here,

1. A melancholy complaint of their miſerable ſtate, when the Meſſiah appeared in his ſufferings, as caſt off and abhorred of God, under God's wrath, v. 38. The covenant made with him broken, and his crown laid in the duſt, v. 39. His people given up to be a ſpoil to the enemy, himſelf reproached and vanquiſhed, his enemies triumphant, his days cut ſhort by an ignominious death, and laid with ſhame in the duſt of death, v. 40—45. And by the afflictive diſpenſations of God's providence, the church hath often ſince been brought low, oppreſſed, devoured, and reviled by the antichriſtian foe, pagan and papal, that all the promiſes to appearance ſeemed to fail: but as in the loweſt ſtate of the Saviour's humiliation the covenant ſtood faſt, and by his death his conqueſts were obtained; ſo when the ſufferings of his people are greateſt; their enemies moſt ſecure and joyous; the ſword of the Spirit, as they fear, blunted; and themſelves ready, as they apprehend, to be utterly conſumed; their fears will be be proved groundleſs, and their troubles only heighten their triumphs.

2. A very pathetical expoſtulation with God,

(1.) On the continuance and ſeverity of the trial. How long wilt thou hide thyſelf for ever? and ſhall thy wrath burn like fire? which may be the words of Chriſt, under his ſufferings; or of his church, to whom the withdrawing of the ſenſible tokens of his favour is very grievous, and his wrath apprehended the bittereſt affliction. Note, (1.) A ſoul who hath ever taſted God's love, cannot but dread the thoughts of his diſpleaſure. (2.) The torments of the damned ariſe from this eternal and fiery wrath of God.

(2.) On the ſhortneſs of life, and the certainty of death, v. 47, 48. Remember how ſhort my time is; but a moment, and therefore let it not wholly be conſumed in miſery. Wherefore haſt thou made all men in vain? as they would be, if the anointed Meſſiah were left under the power of his enemies; of death particularly, for no redemption then could be hoped for by any of his people. What man is he, however mighty, that liveth, and ſhall not ſee death? ſhall he deliver his ſoul from the hand of the grave? No: death is the ſure portion of man; and therefore, if after death the everlaſting covenant did not ſtand faſt, we, who have believed, ſhould be of all men moſt miſerable. But, bleſſed be God, Chriſt is riſen from the dead, and is become the firſt fruits of thoſe that ſlept. Note, (1.) It is a truth deſerving our conſtant remembrance, how ſhort, how uncertain, our days are here below. (2.) If we would not have lived in vain, it muſt be our care, through Jeſus the reſurrection and the life, to live to God's glory here, that we may live with God in glory for ever.

(3.) On his former loving-kindneſſes. Lord, where are thy former loving-kindneſſes, the promiſes of the everlaſting covenant, including every ſpiritual bleſſing, which thou ſwareſt unto David in thy truth? confirmed to Chriſt by the truth and oath of Jehovah, and therefore cannot fail. However his death may have ſhaken the confidence of his people, his reſurrection ſhall confirm all the promiſes. Note, They who plead the covenanted mercies of David, are ſure not to be diſappointed; for faithful is he that hath promiſed.

(4.) On their enemies' reproaches and triumphs. The Scribes and Phariſees having crucified the maſter, reviled his ſervants. They reproached him as a ſabbath-breaker, as in connection with Satan, as executed among the vileſt criminals, and mocked at them for placing any dependance on a crucified man, v. 50, 51. And thus the mighty people of this world are in general ſcoffers ſtill; neither hath the offence of the croſs ceaſed. They who will be Chriſt's diſciples, muſt ſtill go to him without the camp, bearing their reproach.

3. The pſalmiſt, in the perſon of all God's people, concludes with a triumphant benediction, as an anſwer to all their own fears, and their enemies' reproaches, Bleſſed be the Lord for ever more! Jeſus is riſen from the dead; the covenant ſtands faſt; we are begotten to a new and lively hope; and, ſince he now for ever lives to make interceſſion for us, we know our work ſhall ſhortly be everlaſting praiſe, when he ſhall perfect in us the redemption he hath obtained for us; and therefore every faithful ſoul cannot but join the pſalmiſt in his faith and hope, and cry, Amen and Amen.

PSALM XC.

This is the moſt ancient of all the pſalms. It was compoſed by Moſes, on occaſion, as it ſhould ſeem, of the rebellion of Iſrael, Numb. xiv. for which they were cut off in the wilderneſs, and the days of their life ſhortned. In it, 1. Moſes comforts himſelf and his people with the eternity of God, and their intereſt in him, ver. 1, 2. 2. He humbles himſelf and his people with the conſideration of the frailty of man, ver. 3—6. 3. He ſubmits himſelf and his people to the righteous ſentence of God paſſed upon them, ver. 7—11. 4. He commits himſelf and his people to God by prayer, for divine mercy and grace, and the return of God's favour, ver. 12—17. Though it ſeems to have been penned upon this particular occaſion, yet it is very applicable to the frailty of human life in general, and we may eaſily apply it to the years of our paſſage through the wilderneſs of this world, and it furniſheth us with meditations and prayers very ſuitable to the ſolemnity of a funeral.

¶ A prayer of Moſes, [a] the man of God.

[a] Deut. xxxiii. 1.

1. LORD, [b] thou haſt been our dwelling-place in all generations. 2. [c] Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadſt formed the earth and the world: even from everlaſting to everlaſting, thou art God. 3. Thou turneſt man to deſtruction: and ſayeſt, [d] Return, ye children of men. 4. For [e] a thouſand years in thy ſight are but as yeſterday, when it is paſt, and as a watch in the night. 5. Thou carrieſt them away as with a flood, [f] they are as a ſleep: in the morning [g] they are like graſs which † groweth up. 6. [h] In the morning it flouriſheth, and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down, and withereth.

[b] Ibid. xxxiii. 27. Ezek. xi. 16.
[c] Prov. viii. 25.
[d] Gen. iii. 19. Eccleſ. xii. 7.
[e] Eccleſ. xviii. 10. 2 Pet. iii. 8.
[f] Pſ. lxxiii. 20.
[g] Ibid. ciii. 15. Iſa. xl. 6.
† Or, is changed.
[h] Pſ. xcii. 7.

v. 1—6. This pſalm is entitled, A prayer of Moſes the man of God, eminently raiſed up by him, and faithful to the truſt committed to him. It opens,

1. With an acknowledgment of God's goodneſs to his people. Lord, thou haſt been our dwelling-place in all generations. From the days that Abraham firſt at his command left his native land, God had provided for him and his ſeed, and made them to dwell in ſafety. Chriſt our Lord is every believer's reſt: in him by faith we dwell; ſafe under the covert of the wings of his love we abide, protected from every ſtorm, and enduring to all generations; for none ever periſh, whom he will preſerve.

2. He adores God as the everlaſting Jehovah, v. 2. the conſideration of whoſe eternity and unchangeableneſs adminiſters the greateſt conſolation to his people; for whatever we meet with of diſappointment or miſery in this tranſitory and periſhing world, we have in him an ever-living God, a never-failing portion; the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever.

3. He aſcribes to him the univerſal ſovereignty. Thou turneſt man to deſtruction, or until he is broken, by ſickneſs, diſeaſe, and age; and till at laſt his body corrupts in the grave; and ſayeſt, Return, ye children of men, either to the duſt of death, or from going down to the pit, by reſtoring man to health again; or, as calling them under his afflicting hand to repent, and return to him; or finally at the reſurrection-day, by his mighty word collecting the ſcattered duſt, and reuniting again the bodies and ſouls of men.

4. He owns the diſproportion between the eternal God and the longeſt-lived of all the ſons of men. For a thouſand years in thy ſight are but as yeſterday, when it is paſt, and as a watch in the night. All compariſon fails between finite and infinite, between time and eternity: to God's exiſtence, a thouſand years and one day bear juſt the ſame proportion, and all the events of time are equally preſent with him; ſo that reſpecting the coming of Chriſt, and the reſurrection of the body, the length of time they may be deferred, is not the leaſt objection to either, 2 Pet. iii. 4—8.

5. He deſcribes the frailty of man even in his beſt eſtate; Thou carrieſt them away with a flood, ſwiftly, ſuddenly, irreſiſtably, as in the deluge, they are as a ſleep, their life inſenſibly ſpent, and at beſt to the ſinner but a pleaſing dream, which at death vaniſhes: in the morning they are like graſs which groweth up. In the morning of youth it flouriſheth, and groweth up; beauty, vigour, wealth, proſperity make them appear like the verdant field, but momentary is the joy: in the evening it is cut down and withereth, the beauty fades, the ſtrength fails, the poſſeſſions vaniſh; when death, the mower, puts in the ſickle, and under diſeaſe, or age, the enfeebled body bends to the tomb. Note, (1.) The vanity of earthly enjoyments, and the folly of ſeeking happineſs in things ſo fleeting and unſatisfactory. Shall we exchange an eternity of bleſſedneſs for the pleaſures of a dream? (2.) They who look often in their glaſs, ſhould look oftner into their coffin; this will check the pride of beauty. (3.) If our hour is ſo ſhort, it becomes us to improve it as it flies, and not dream our life away, leaſt death awaken us at laſt in terrible ſurprize, inſtead of finding us watching, and prepared for his ſummons.

7. For we are conſumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath are we troubled. 8. [i] Thou haſt ſet our iniquities before thee, [k] our ſecret ſins [l] in the light of thy countenance. 9. For all our days are paſſed away in thy wrath: [m] we ſpend our years as a † tale that is told. 10. The days of our years are threeſcore years and ten; and if by reaſon of ſtrength they be fourſcore years, yet is their ſtrength labour and ſorrow: for it is ſoon cut off, and we flee away. 11. Who knoweth the power of thine anger? even according to thy fear, ſo is thy wrath.

[i] Ibid. l. 21.
[k] Ibid. xix. 12.
[l] Jer. xvi. 17.
[m] Pſ. xxxix. 5.
† Or word, or meditation.

v. 7—11. The Iſraelites for their rebellion being appointed to die in the wilderneſs, are here taught to humble their ſouls under the righteous ſentence of God pronounced upon them.

1. They acknowledge God's hand in their miſeries. For we are conſumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath we are troubled; death is the wages of ſin, and however reſpecting the ſaints of God, through the Redeemer, this ſting is taken away; yet when coming upon ſinners in wrath, it appears of all terribles the moſt terrible, and even to the people of God, through their unfaithfulneſs, brings ſometimes fear and diſmay. They will be able to meet it with the greateſt confidence, who have moſt ſurely embraced him by faith, who is the reſurrection and the life.

2. They confeſs their ſins which had provoked God's diſpleaſure; thou haſt ſet our ſins before thee, our open tranſgreſſions, nor are our boſom iniquities hid, our ſecret ſins in the light of thy countenance, laid naked and open, and as well as outward actions rendering us guilty. Note, (1.) Our ſins are all recorded before God; nor doth a vain or fooliſh thought paſs through our minds unnoticed. (2.) They who confeſs their iniquities, deſire to unveil their inmoſt ſoul to God, and fly to the ſinner's refuge, will find all cancelled, forgiven, and forgotten, and ſhall be made glad with the light of God's countenance.

3. They expected no reverſion of the divine ſentence. For all our days are paſſed away in thy wrath, they had begun, and muſt continue to wander in the wilderneſs, under the evident tokens of divine diſpleaſure, till all the men of that generation, except Caleb and Joſhua, were conſumed. And this is the caſe alſo of wicked men; yea, of man in general, burdened now with all the various ills that fleſh is heir to. We ſpend our years as a tale that is told, or a meditation, or a word, expreſſive of the vanity and ſhortneſs of their life; ſuch were the years which Iſrael ſpent in their wanderings, and we may well apply the ſimilitude. As a tale, compoſed of various incidents, pleaſing and afflictive, ſuch is our life; and often ſpent as vainly as in telling idle ſtories; fleeting as the word which iſſues from our lips, and our miſpent time as irrecoverable.

4. They mention the bounds ſet to their mortal days, v. 10. Though thoſe of their fathers had much exceeded, theirs is limited to threeſcore years and ten; and if a few reached fourſcore, it would be weariſome, and rather a burden than a bleſſing. And ever ſince this hath been counted the age of man, which far the greater number never reach, and few exceed; and if here and there one hoary head is found ſurviving the wintry blaſts of fourſcore years, it is but a kind of dying life, the whole extent of their days hath been full of trouble, and thoſe of old age peculiarly burdened with infirmities quickly to be cut off, and vaniſhing as the ſhadow. Note, (1.) The aged, who defer the thoughts of dying, are peculiarly inexcuſable. (2.) Leave this earth we ſhortly muſt, happy they who then fly away to the boſom of Jeſus.

5. They tremble at the wrath they have deſerved. Who knoweth the power of thine anger? expreſſed in all his judgments on earth, or in hell: the fallen angels and damned ſouls know and feel it; but how imperfect are our apprehenſions, and who amongſt us conſiders it as it deſerves? even according to thy fear, ſo is thy wrath; in other caſes our fears may exceed our danger, but our deepeſt fears of the wrath of God not only do not exceed, but come unſpeakably ſhort of the reality. Note, The conſideration of God's intolerable wrath will be a profitable ſubject for our meditations, both to quicken our watchfulneſs againſt ſin, and to excite the greater thankfulneſs for our deliverance from it.

12. [n] So teach us to number our days, that we may † apply our hearts unto wiſdom. 13. Return, O LORD, how long? and [o] let it repent thee concerning thy ſervants. 14. O ſatisfy us early with thy mercy; that we may rejoice and be glad all our days. 15. Make us glad according to the days wherein thou haſt afflicted us; and the years wherein we have ſeen evil. 16. [p] Let thy work appear unto thy ſervants, and thy glory unto their children. 17. And [q] let the beauty of the LORD our God be upon us: and eſtabliſh thou the work of our hands upon us, yea, the work of our hands eſtabliſh thou it.

[n] Pſ. xxxix. 11.
† Heb. Cauſe to come.
[o] Deut. xxxii. 36.
[p] Pſ. lxxxv. 6. Hab. iii. 2.
[q] Pſ. xxvii. 4.

v. 12—17. The man of God having in the name of his people confeſſed their ſin, puts up his prayer,

1. For wiſdom to improve under their afflictions. So teach us to number our days, to conſider their brevity, uncertainty, and ſinfulneſs, that we may apply our hearts unto wiſdom, to redeem the time, prepare for our great change, and by the knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, become wiſe unto ſalvation. Note, (1.) The great buſineſs of life is to get ready for death. (2.) It is a vain curioſity to be ſolicitous to know the preciſe period of our days, but a neceſſary enquiry what will become of us when we go hence and are no more ſeen. (3.) The concerns of our ſouls and eternity deſerve the moſt ſerious and attentive application. (4.) As all true wiſdom can only come from above, we muſt be ceaſeleſs in prayer, ſeeking it from God.

2. For pardon and mercy. Return, O Lord, with ſome tokens of thy regard: How long ſhall we ſuffer and be thus afflicted, without help or redreſs? and let it repent thee concerning thy ſervants, implying not a change of his mind, for that never happens, but of his method of dealing with them; or comfort thy ſervants, by removing from them his chaſtiſing hand, and reſtoring them to the comforts of his ſalvation. O ſatisfy us early with thy mercy, merit they diſclaim, and caſt themſelves on ſovereign grace, and urge it may quickly be extended to them, and abundantly, that their ſouls may receive ſatisfaction therein, that we may rejoice and be glad all our days in the favour and love of God; and this joy proportioned to their former ſorrows, Make us glad according to the days thou haſt afflicted us, and the years wherein we have ſeen evil. Note, (1.) Every moment a child of God apprehends his diſpleaſure appears an age, ſo grievous it is to him, and importunately he ſeeks its removal. (2.) They who cry for mercy, will find a God who will hear them, eſpecially thoſe who early in the morning of their days ſeek to him. (3.) The ſoul that hath truly taſted of the bitterneſs of ſin, can never be ſatisfied, till the Lord return in pardoning mercy, and ſpeak peace to the conſcience. (4.) They who ſee God as their reconciled God, rejoice in him all their days, at leaſt it is their privilege to do ſo. (5.) A chriſtian's experience is uſually chequered, ſometimes afflictions draw forth his tears, then conſolations make glad his heart; both he receives as coming from God's hand, and with thankfulneſs acknowledges the rod of correction as needful as the cup of joy is delightful.

3. For the progreſs and accompliſhment of God's work among them. Let thy work appear unto thy ſervants, the work of his providence in their protection in the wilderneſs, and thy glory unto their children, who ſhould be brought to the promiſed land of Canaan; or more generally it may be conſidered as their prayer for the coming of the Meſſiah, the great ſalvation he ſhould obtain, the powerful operations of his grace upon their hearts, and herein for the manifeſtation of his glory to their lateſt poſterity; and let the beauty of our God be upon us, or with us, either Chriſt himſelf, or his preſence in their aſſemblies, or his grace renewing their hearts in the beauty of holineſs: And eſtabliſh thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands eſtabliſh thou it, from God alone all power being derived to work and walk aright. Note, (1.) Till God work in us to will and to do of his good pleaſure, we can neither think or do any thing truly pleaſing to him. Our ſanctification is as much his act, as our juſtification. (2.) God is magnified in his grace beſtowed upon ſinners, whoſe fruits of righteouſneſs are by Jeſus Chriſt to the praiſe and glory of God. (3.) They who are moſt deeply ſenſible of their want of divine ſtrength, and ſeek to God for his Spirit, will be ever moſt ſteadfaſt, immoveable, and abounding in the work of the Lord.

PSALM XCI.

This pſalm, though without a title, is generally aſcribed to David, and is ſuppoſed to be written at the time of the peſtilence, 2 Sam. xxiv. Obſerve, 1. The Pſalmiſt's own reſolution to take God for his keeper, ver. 2. from which he gives both direction and encouragement to others, ver. 9. 2. The promiſes which are here made in God's name to all thoſe that do ſo in ſincerity. (1.) They ſhall be taken under the peculiar care of heaven, ver. 1—4. (2.) They ſhall be delivered from the malice of the powers of darkneſs, ver. 3—5, 6. and that by a diſtinguiſhing preſervation, ver. 7, 8. (3.) They ſhall be the charge of the holy angels, ver. 10, 11. (4.) They ſhall triumph over their enemies, ver. 13. (5.) They ſhall be the ſpecial favourites of God himſelf, ver. 14—16. Many think, that to Chriſt, as mediator, theſe promiſes do primarily belong, (Iſa. xlix. 2.) not becauſe to him the devil applied one of theſe promiſes, Mat. iv. 6. but becauſe to him they were applicable, and coming through him, they are more ſweet and ſure to all believers.

1. [a] HE that dwelleth in the ſecret place of the moſt High, ſhall † abide under [b] the ſhadow of the Almighty. 2. I will ſay of the LORD, [c] He is my refuge, and my fortreſs; my God, in him will I truſt. 3. Surely [d] he will deliver thee from the ſnare of the fowler: and from the noiſome peſtilence. 4. [e] He ſhall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings ſhalt thou truſt: his truth ſhall be thy ſhield and buckler. 5. [f] Thou ſhalt not be afraid for the terror by night: nor for the arrow that flieth by day: 6. Nor for the peſtilence that walketh in darkneſs: nor for the deſtruction that waſteth at noon-day. 7. A thouſand ſhall fall at thy ſide, and ten thouſand at thy right hand: [g] but it ſhall not come nigh thee. 8. Only [h] with thine eyes ſhalt thou behold, and ſee the reward of the wicked.

[a] Pſ. xxvii. 5. & xxxi. 20. & xxxii. 7.
† Heb. Lodge.
[b] Pſ. xvii. 8.
[c] Ibid. xviii. 2. & cxlii 5.
[d] Pſ. cxxiv. 7.
[e] Ibid. xvii. 8. & lvii. 1. & lxi. 4. Mat. xxiii. 37.
[f] Job v. 19, &c. Prov. iii. 25. Iſa. xliii. 2.
[g] Pſ. xxxii. 6.
[h] Ibid. xxxvii. 34.

v. 1—8. The ſcripture abounds with great and precious promiſes, and God's people who come to theſe ſacred fountains, may ever draw waters of comfort.

1. The Pſalmiſt deſcribes the ſafety and conſolation of the gracious ſoul. He that dwelleth in the ſecret place of the moſt High, delights in his worſhip, and ſeeks repoſe for his ſoul in the boſom of his grace, ſhall abide under the ſhadow of the Almighty, ſheltered from every danger by Almighty power, comforted with a ſenſe of everlaſting love.

2. He profeſſes his purpoſe to fly to this bleſt hiding-place. I will ſay of, or to the Lord, He is my refuge in every time of danger, my fortreſs, impregnable to the aſſaults of every enemy, ſpiritual or temporal, my God, in whoſe regard, by faith, I claim a ſure intereſt, in him will I truſt, confident of his never-failing protection, and expecting all felicity from his power, grace, and faithfulneſs, according to his promiſes. Note, They who make God their only truſt, will never be diſappointed of their hope.

3. He inſtances a great variety of particulars, wherein God's care of his people would appear. Surely he will deliver thee from every evil and danger, temporal or ſpiritual.

(1.) From the ſnare of the fowler, and from the noiſome peſtilence, either literally, from thoſe who lie in wait to deſtroy our bodies, and from the peſtilential diſeaſes which endanger our lives, or from the ſnares and temptations which Satan lays for our ſouls; from that moſt peſtilential of all diſeaſes, ſin, and that worſt of plagues, the plague of our own hearts. Note, (1.) How often may every man reflect on ſeaſons of danger, when he owed the preſervation of his life purely to the divine providence? (2.) If God hath once given ſpiritual life to our ſouls, he will preſerve them, that they ſhall never periſh.

(2.) He ſhall cover thee with his feathers, expreſſive of God's tender regard toward his people, as a hen covereth her chickens calling them when danger threatens, protecting and cheriſhing them under her wings, v. 1. His faithfulneſs and truth, whereon the believer's confidence is placed, ſhall be thy ſhield and buckler; his promiſes engaged for him, his power almighty to defend him. Note, Though we are weak and helpleſs, our God is able to ſave to the uttermoſt; bleſſed and happy are they whom he covers with his wings and ſhield.

(3.) No fear ſhall diſmay. Thou ſhalt not be afraid for the terror by night, from fire, ſtorm, robbers, or ſpirits of darkneſs, who would in frightful dreams diſturb the mind, or inject diſtruſtful fears of God's care and protection: nor for the arrow that flieth by day; the ſudden and unexpected judgments of God: nor for the peſtilence that walketh in darkneſs, when the dead are carried forth to their graves; or, as ariſing from hidden cauſes, and ſtalking terrible through the land: nor for the deſtruction that waſteth at noon, when the heat cauſeth the peſtilential vapour to be more fatal; or reſpect may be had to that ſuffocating wind, which, in ſome eaſtern countries, kills thoſe who are expoſed to it: none of theſe ſhall terrify the faithful, God can preſerve him from death, or make him triumphant over it, ſo that he ſhall never know that fear which hath torment. Note, (1.) If we lie down in peace, and ſleep undiſturbed, if we awake refreſhed, and paſs the day in ſafety amidſt the unnumbered dangers which ſurround our path, God's hand is to be thankfully acknowledged. (2.) No arrow of death flies but God directs it unerring to the mark. (3.) Faith in God delivers from terrifying fear, and even death, to the believer, hath loſt its ſting.

(4.) In general deſolations the faithful ſhall be ſafe. A thouſand ſhall fall at thy ſide, and ten thouſand at thy right hand, ſuch dreadful havock doth the plague often make, as David had ſeen, 2 Sam. xxiv. but it ſhall not come nigh thee; either a particular providence ſhall guard their houſes, as when the deſtroying angel paſſed through Egypt; or at leaſt they ſhall not be hurt by it if they fall, for to them death is gain. Only with thine eye ſhalt thou behold, and ſee the reward of the wicked, in whoſe deſtruction God is glorified, and in his righteous judgments they rejoice and adore him.

9. Becauſe thou haſt made the LORD which is my refuge, even the moſt High, [i] thy habitation: 10. [k] There ſhall no evil befal thee, neither ſhall any plague come nigh thy dwelling. 11. For [l] he ſhall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee [m] in all thy ways. 12. They ſhall bear thee up in their hands, [n] leſt thou daſh thy foot againſt a ſtone. 13. Thou ſhalt tread upon [o] the lion [p] and adder: the young lion and the dragon ſhalt thou trample under foot. 14. Becauſe he hath ſet his love upon me, therefore I will deliver him: I will [q] ſet him on high, becauſe he hath known my name. 15. [r] He ſhall call upon me, and I will anſwer him: [s] I will be with him in trouble, I will deliver him, [t] and honour him. 16. With † long life will I ſatisfy him, and ſhew him my ſalvation.

i Pſ. xc. 1.
k Prov. xii. 21.
l Pſ. xxxiv. 7. Mat. iv. 6. Luke iv. 10. Heb. i. 14.
m 2 Chron. xv. 2.
n Job v. 23. Pſ. xxxvii. 24.
o Dan. vi. 22. or 1Pet. v. 8.
p Mark xvi. 18.
q Iſa. xxxiii. 16.
r Pſ. l. 15.
s Iſa. xliii. 2.
t 1 Sam. ii. 30.
† Heb. Length of days.

v. 9—16. We have here many farther rich promiſes of God declared, and the character of his people deſcribed, to whom they are ſure.

1. Their character. [1.] They make the Lord their refuge, truſting in him in every time of trial. [2.] The moſt High is their habitation, where their ſoul finds ſweet repoſe, and a comfortable proviſion of all good things, v. 9. The words may be rendered, Becauſe thou, Lord, art my refuge, thou haſt made the moſt High thy habitation; and thus they contain an apoſtrophe of the Pſalmiſt to his own ſoul, intimating the ground of his ſafety and confidence. [3.] They ſet their love on God, he is the grand object of it, and reigns in their hearts without a rival. [4.] They know his name; are acquainted with his word, where he hath made the moſt glorious diſplays of his perfections, and with his Son the brightneſs of his glory, by whom alone the Father can be truly known, Mat. xi. 27. [5.] They call upon him in ceaſeleſs prayer for the relief of all their wants, and teſtify their continual dependance on his protection and care. Reader, is this thy character? then bleſſed art thou. For,

2. Great are the promiſſed bleſſings which the Pſalmiſt, in God's name, yea, which God himſelf, pronounces on all ſuch.

(1.) No evil ſhall befal thee, nor any plague come nigh thy dwelling; either God will, by a diſtinguiſhing act of his providence, protect them, or whatever trouble comes it ſhall be ſanctified, in the iſſue produce their greateſt good, and prove a real bleſſing in diſguiſe.

(2.) Angelic guards ſhall attend their ſteps; they miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation, and from every unforeſeen danger preſerve and protect them with the moſt condeſcending tenderneſs and mighty power, v. 11, 12. Satan applied this paſſage to Chriſt, but with the omiſſion of a material clauſe: they ſhall keep thee in all thy ways, into which by Divine providence thou art led, or by the Divine word directed; for out of the path of duty we may not expect the way of ſafety.

(3.) The powers of darkneſs ſhall be ſubdued under them. Thou ſhalt tread upon the lion and adder; literally, theſe noxious animals being reſtrained from hurting; or, figuratively, wicked men and wicked devils, for power and ſubtilty, compared to theſe, ſhall be trodden down: the young lion and dragon ſhalt thou trample under foot, even Satan, whoſe head ſhall ſhortly be bruiſed under the feet of God's redeemed people.

(4.) God himſelf promiſes, in trouble to be with them, and out of trouble to deliver them, v. 15. Trouble we may expect; it is the lot of God's people; but his preſence, and a ſenſe of his love, over-balances every affliction, and living and dying he will deliver us, either from our trials, by giving us ſtrength to ſupport and overcome them, or by diſcharging us from the warfare, and admitting us to his eternal reſt.

(5.) He will hear all their prayers, and give them anſwers of peace, v. 15. He gives the ſpirit of ſupplication, then grants the requeſts his grace enables us to preſent before him, for the prayer of faith never returned empty.

(6.) He engages to ſet them on high, v. 14. on the rock Chriſt, againſt which all ſtorms and tempeſts rage in vain, and from whence they can look down on all the impotent malice of their foes; and to honour them, not only with the title of his ſons and daughters, with the robe of a Redeemer's righteouſneſs, and the graces of his ſpirit here below, but with an inheritance eternal in the heavens, and with a throne of glory everlaſting.

(7.) With length of days will I ſatisfy him; they ſhall live here as long as they deſire to live, and God has work for them to do, and ſhew him my ſalvation; the fulneſs of it above, when all the unutterable bleſſedneſs, which the Lord Jeſus hath purchaſed, ſhall fully, freely, and eternally be beſtowed on the faithful ſoul, and he ſhall be for ever ſatiſfied with it.

PSALM XCII.

It is probable this pſalm was penned by David. It is calculated for the ſabbath-day, 1. Praiſe, the buſineſs of the ſabbath, is here recommended, ver. 1—3. 2. God's works, which gave occaſion for the ſabbath, are here celebrated as great and unſearchable, ver. 4—6. 3. God's enemies ſhall be cut off, but David ſhall be exalted, ver. 9, 10. 4. David's enemies ſhall be confounded, ver. 11. but all the righteous ſhall be fruitful and flouriſhing, ver. 12—15.

¶ A pſalm or ſong for the ſabbath-day.

1. [a] IT is a good thing to give thanks unto the LORD, and to ſing praiſes unto thy name, O moſt High: 2. To ſhew forth thy loving-kindneſs [b] in the morning, and thy faithfulneſs [b] every night; 3. Upon an inſtrument of ten ſtrings, and upon the pſaltery; upon the harp with † a ſolemn ſound. 4. For thou, LORD, haſt made me glad through thy work: I will triumph in the works of thy hand. 5. [c] O LORD, how great are thy works! and [d] thy thoughts are very deep. 6. [e] A brutiſh man knoweth not: neither doth a fool underſtand this.

a Pſ. cxlvii. 1.
bb Pſ. lv. 17.
† Heb. Higgaion.
c Pſ. xl. 5. & cxxxix. 17.
d Iſa. xxviii. 29. Rom. xi. 33.
e Pſ. xciv. 8. Iſa. i. 3.

v. 1—6. This pſalm is entitled, A ſong for the ſabbath; praiſe being the moſt becoming work of that holy-day If, as ſome ſuppoſe, it refers to the eternal reſt that remaineth for the people of God, under the reign of the Meſſiah, Heb. iv. 9. we know our happy labour then will be everlaſting praiſe.

1. The pſalmiſt encourages us to join heartly in the ſacred ſong. It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, and to ſing praiſes unto thy name, O moſt High; it is both our duty and privilege, the tribute of gratitude we owe, and the preparation for the ſervice of heaven; and abundant matter we have for the bleſſed ſervice, to ſhew forth thy loving-kindneſs in the morning, the various inſtances of it we have experienced in providential care, and eſpecially in the ſpiritual bleſſings obtained by Chriſt Jeſus, and thy faithfulneſs every night; not merely confining our grateful acknowledgment to one day, but day and night continually, as moſt bounden, aſcribing to God the glory due unto his name, whoſe mercy and truth never fail, upon an inſtrument of ten ſtrings, and upon the pſaltery; upon the harp with a ſolemn ſound. Note, (1.) Whatever our engagements may be, we are bound at leaſt to begin and end each day with prayer and praiſe. (2.) They who have themſelves a deep experience of the Divine love and faithfulneſs, will delight to be telling of his ſalvation from day to day.

2. He ſets before us his own example for our imitation. Thou, Lord, haſt made me glad through thy work; the work of creation and providence, or rather of redemption and grace by Jeſus Chriſt: an experimental knowledge of which is matter of the moſt enlivened joy: I will triumph in the works of thy hands, confident of the completion of that ſalvation God hath begun. O how great are thy works! when we contemplate the works of creation, providence, redemption, and grace, we are loſt in admiration, and can only wonder and adore; and thy thoughts are very deep, unfathomable by the ſhallow line of human reaſon, and above our conception as the heaven is higher than the earth. Iſa. lv. 9.

3. They who diſregard the works of God, and neglect to praiſe him, are brutiſh and wicked. A brutiſh man knoweth not: neither doth a fool underſtand this; by the indulgence of their appetites they degrade themſelves into beaſts, and brutiſh in their knowledge, looking no higher than the earth, nor farther than the grave, they leave God far above out of their ſight, inſenſible all his mercies, and negligent of his ſervice.

7. When [f] the wicked ſpring as the graſs, and when all the workers of iniquity do flouriſh: it is that [g] they ſhall be deſtroyed for ever. 8. But [h] thou, LORD, art moſt high for evermore. 9. For lo, thine enemies, O LORD, for lo, thine enemies ſhall periſh: [i] all the workers of iniquity ſhall be ſcattered. 10. But [k] my horn ſhalt thou exalt like the horn of an unicorn: [l] I ſhall be anointed with freſh oil. 11. [m] Mine eye alſo ſhall ſee my deſire on mine enemies: and mine ears ſhall hear my deſire of the wicked that riſe up againſt me. 12. [n] The righteous ſhall flouriſh like the palm-tree: he ſhall grow like a cedar in Lebanon. 13. Thoſe that be [o] planted in the houſe of the LORD, [p] ſhall flouriſh in the courts of our God. 14. They ſhall ſtill bring forth fruit in old age: they ſhall be fat and † flouriſhing: 15. To ſhew that the LORD is upright: [q] he is my rock, and [r] there is no unrighteouſneſs in him.

[f] Job xii. 6. & xxi. 7. Jer. xii. 1, 2.
[g] Pſ. xxxvii. 2.
[h] Ex. xviii. 11. Pſ. lvi. 2.
[i] Pſ. lxviii. 1.
[k] Ibid. lxxv. 10. & lxxxix. 17, 24.
[l] Ibid. xxiii. 5.
[m] Ibid. liv. 7. & lix. 10. & xci. 8. & cxii. 8.
[n] Cant. vii. 7. Iſa. lxv. 22. Hoſ. xiv. 5, 6.
[o] Rom. vi. 5. & xi. 17.
[p] Pſ. i. 3.
† Heb. Green.
[q] Deut. xxxii. 4.
[r] Rom. ix. 14.

v. 7—15. The pſalmiſt triumphs over his enemies, and in God's love and favour to him, and all his faithful ones.

1. He expects to ſee the ruin of the wicked, however proſperous and proud. When the wicked ſpring up as the graſs, ſo numerous and vigorous, and when all the workers of iniquity do flouriſh, in health, wealth, power, and every earthly poſſeſſion, it is that they ſhall be deſtroyed for ever: their proſperity becomes their ruin, and they are only fattened for the ſlaughter. But thou, Lord, art moſt high for evermore, reigning over all, abaſing the proud, and ever living to inflict on them their deſerved puniſhment. For lo, thine enemies, O Lord, for lo, thine enemies ſhall periſh; for ſuch are all the workers of wickedneſs, who daringly oppoſe the moſt high, reject his government, and rebel againſt his crown and dignity; but vain their impotent malice, they muſt periſh under his eternal wrath; and all the workers of iniquity ſhall be ſcattered, their ſchemes fruſtrated, their combinations broken, their ruin irrecoverable and everlaſting, when God ſhall ſay unto them, Depart accurſed, &c. But my horn ſhalt thou exalt like the horn of an unicorn, eſtabliſhing his royal authority, and exalting his throne on high. This may be applied to the Meſſiah, who is the horn of ſalvation, raiſed up from the houſe of David, Luke i. 69. And thus alſo will all the ſaints of God be at the laſt day ſet above their enemies. I ſhall be anointed with freſh oil; every attack of his foes ſhould only ſerve to bring renewed ſupplies of grace, ſtrength, and divine conſolations into his ſoul. Mine eyes alſo ſhall ſee my deſire on mine enemies: and mine ears ſhall hear my deſire of the wicked who riſe up againſt me, whoſe power to hurt ſhould be broken, and God glorified in their puniſhment, which he could not but deſire and rejoice in. Note, (1.) All the enemies of Chriſt and his people rage in vain; they who will not ſubmit to his government muſt periſh together and for ever under his vengeance. (2.) Though we may not wiſh evil to our bittereſt enemies through any private revenge, we cannot but deſire to ſee the power of the wicked reſtrained, and God's glory manifeſted in his righteous judgments.

2. He expects to ſee the exaltation of the ſaints of God, however now depreſſed and low. The righteous ſhall flouriſh as a palm-tree; whatever burdens are laid on him, he ſhall not only be enabled to ſupport them, but proſper in his ſoul under the load. Creſcit ſub pondere virtus. He ſhall grow like a cedar in Lebanon, ſtrong and high, reaching to the heavens, unmoved by ſtormy blaſts, and incorruptible. Such is the believer, going from ſtrength to ſtrength, having his affections ſet on heaven and heavenly things, rooted on Chirſt, never to be moved, and more durable than the cedar, even poſſeſſed of life eternal. Thoſe that be planted in the houſe of the Lord, removed from the wilderneſs of the world, grafted into Chriſt, and thus tranſplanted into his church, where they partake of the heavenly dew of Divine benediction, and in the word and ordinances are watered day by day, theſe ſhall flouriſh in the courts of our God, being full of ſap, derived from Chriſt the living root; adorning the doctrine of God the Saviour in all things, and continuing, not merely for a while, as the graſs to which the wicked are compared, but to eternity; their leaf ſhall never wither, nor their fruit fail; for they ſhall bring forth fruit in old age, grace being often moſt vigorous and fruitful when nature's ſtrength decays: they ſhall be fat and flouriſhing, not withered or decayed by time, as other trees, but partaking of the fatneſs of the root, Rom. xi. 17. walking in the moſt enlivened exerciſe of Divine grace, and abounding in every good work. To ſhew that the Lord is upright, faithful to all his promiſes, carrying his people on to hoary hairs, and never leaving or forſaking them till he hath brought them to his eternal glory: he is my rock, firm and ſtable; ſuch the pſalmiſt had by experience proved him to be, and ſo will every ſoul that truly truſts upon him; and there is no unrighteouſneſs in him; he never raiſes expectations to diſappointment them, what he promiſes he fully performs; he never leaves nor forſakes his people, nor fails to puniſh the workers of iniquity, for juſt and right is he.

PSALM XCIII.

The Meſſiah and his kingdom are the ſubject of this pſalm, which ſpeaks comfort to his loving ſubjects, and terror to his inveterate enemies. Of this kingdom glorious things are here ſpoken. 1. Have other kings their royal robes? ſo has he, ver. 1. 2. Have they their throne? ſo has he, ver. 2. 3. Have they their enemies whom they ſubdue and triumph over? ſo has he, ver. 3, 4. 4. Is it their honour to be faithful and holy? ſo it is his, ver. 5.

1. [a] THE LORD reigneth, [b] he is clothed with majeſty, the LORD is clothed with ſtrength [c] wherewith he hath girded himſelf: [d] the world alſo is ſtabliſhed, that it cannot be moved. 2. [e] Thy throne is eſtabliſhed of old: thou art from everlaſting. 3. The floods have lifted up, O LORD, [f] the floods have lifted up their voice: the floods lift up their waves. 4. The LORD on high is mightier than the noiſe of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the ſea. 5. Thy teſtimonies are very ſure: [g] holineſs becometh thine houſe O LORD, † for ever.

[a] Pſ. xcvi. 10. & xcvii. 1. & xcix. 1. Iſa. lii. 7. Rev. xi. 15.
[b] Pſ. civ. 1.
[c] Ibid. lxv. 6.
[d] Ibid. xcvi. 10.
[e] Ibid. xlv. 6. Prov. viii. 22, &c.
[f] Pſ. lxv. 7.
[g] Zech. xiv. 20.
† Heb. To length of days.

v. 1—5. The ſovereign dominion, the glorious and eternal kingdom of Jeſus, Jehovah, God over all, bleſſed for ever, is a ſubject of pleaſing meditation to the faithful ſoul.

1. He reigns in majeſty and power. The Lord reigneth; all power in heaven and earth is given to the Lord Chriſt, his kingdom of grace is ſet up in the hearts of his people, and his throne in glory is prepared, when he ſhall reign over them for ever and ever; he is clothed with majeſty, compared with which all the glory of earthly monarchs vaniſhes as the light of the glow-worm before the meridian ſun; the Lord is clothed with ſtrength wherewith he hath girded himſelf, needing no ſupport but from his own Almighty arm, doing whatſoever pleaſeth him among the hoſts of heaven and the inhabitants of the earth, and able to bear down all oppoſition that can be raiſed againſt his kingdom and people in an inſtant: the world alſo is ſtabliſhed, that it cannot be moved; he upholdeth all things which he created, and eſpecially his church and the goſpel diſpenſation, called, The world to come, Heb. xi. 5. which, however diſturbed and diſtreſſed, the powers of darkneſs never can prevail againſt, for it is eſtabliſhed for ever. Note, (1.) The more we look to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, clothed with majeſty and power, the leſs ſhall we fear worms of the earth. (2.) They who have Chriſt for their keeper ſhall never be moved from their ſteadfaſtneſs.

2. He reigns from everlaſting to everlaſting. Of old, even from eternity, his throne is eſtabliſhed: thou art from everlaſting, the eternal God, and therefore the everlaſting King; of whoſe government there will be no end.

3. He reigns unmoved by all the oppoſition of his enemies. Though angels in heaven dared to rebel, and men and devils join on earth to deſtroy his kingdom, and, like roaring waves of the ſea, lift up themſelves to overwhelm his people, their rage is impotent and vain. The Lord on high is mightier than the noice of many waters; and as of old he caſt from their ſhining thrones the angels which ſinned, ſo will he deſtroy all the principalities and powers of earth leagued againſt his people, will ſilence their tumult, and keep his people in perfect peace whoſe minds are ſtayed upon him. Note, In all our frights and fears, if we look up with an eye of faith, our tempeſtuous ſouls will ſoon be calmed, and Jeſus will ſay to every ſtorm, Peace, be ſtill.

4. He reigns in righteouſneſs. Thy teſtimonies are very ſure; all his promiſes inviolably faithful, and we may confidently truſt him for ſupport and ſalvation in time and eternity; let it be our care only to walk agreeable to our glorious hope, ſince holineſs becometh thine houſe, O Lord, for ever. This is the great ornament of the church of Chriſt on earth; and whilſt every faithful member of Jeſus ſeeks to grow in grace below, it is his joy and happineſs, that ſhortly he ſhall be perfected in holineſs above.

PSALM XCIV.

This pſalm was penned when the church of God was oppreſſed and perſecuted; and it is an appeal to God, as the judge of Heaven and and earth, and an addreſs to him, to appear for his people againſt his and their enemies. Two things this pſalm ſpeaks, 1. Conviction and terror to the perſecutors, ver. 1—11. 2. Comfort and peace to the perſecuted, ver. 12—23. and this, under every diſcouragement and ſuffering, ſhould engage us with patience and hope to wait the ſalvation of God.

1. O LORD God, [a] to whom vengeance belongeth: O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, † ſhew thyſelf. 2. [b] Lift up thyſelf, thou Judge of the earth: render a reward to the proud. 3. LORD, how long ſhall the wicked, [c] how long ſhall the wicked triumph? 4. How long ſhall [d] they utter and ſpeak hard things? and all the workers of iniquity boaſt themſelves? 5. They break in pieces thy people, O LORD, and afflict thine heritage. 6. They ſlay the widow and the ſtranger, and murder the fatherleſs. 7. [e] Yet they ſay, The LORD ſhall not ſee: neither ſhall the God of Jacob regard it. 8. [f] Underſtand ye brutiſh among the people: and ye fools, when will ye be wiſe? 9. [g] He that planted the ear, ſhall he not hear? he that formed the eye, ſhall he not ſee? 10. He that chaſtiſeth the heathen, ſhall not he correct? he that teacheth man knowledge, ſhall not be know? 11. [h] The LORD knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity.

[a] Deut. xxxii. 35. Nah. i. 2.
† Heb. Shine forth, Pſ. lxxx. 1.
[b] Ibid. vii. 6.
[c] Job xx. 5.
[d] Ibid. xxxi. 18. Jude 15.
[e] Pſ. x. 11, 13. & lix. 7.
[f] Ibid. xcii. 6.
[g] Ex. iv. 11. Prov. xx. 12.
[h] 1 Cor. iii. 20.

v. 1—11. There is an Almighty Judge, to whom the oppreſſed may appeal, and who will vindicate their cauſe.

1. The pſalmiſt lodges his appeal with God againſt his adverſaries. O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongeth, who hath the power to avenge the oppreſſed with wrong, and whoſe holineſs engages him to exert it, ſhew thyſelf, or ſhine forth, appear in behalf of thy ſuffering people, and confound with the light of truth the works of darkneſs. Lift up thyſelf, thou Judge of the earth, that thoſe who ſay the Lord hath forſaken the earth, and with confidence of impunity grow daring in wickedneſs, may be diſmayed, and that God's own people may be comforted by his appearing: render a reward to the proud; according to their provocations repay them with puniſhment. Note, Under every preſent oppreſſion it becomes God's people patiently to endure, and wait the day when he that judgeth righteouſly ſhall ariſe to avenge them ſpeedily.

2. He complains of the wickedneſs of the enemies of God's people, and expoſtulates with God on ſuffering them ſo long. [1.] They are wicked in nature and heart. [2.] With their lips they blaſpheme God, and utter hard ſpeeches againſt his providence, his Chriſt, his truth, his people. [3.] In their lives they are workers of iniquity, ſtick at nothing to compaſs their deſigns, and make it their habitual practice. [4.] They are cruel oppreſſors, afflicting and perſecuting God's people, whom he hath choſen for his heritage for ever, not ſparing the widow and ſtranger, and, adding cruelty to oppreſſion, they murder the fatherleſs, who are unable to defend themſelves. [5.] They are atheiſtical, they ſay, The Lord ſhall not ſee; either there is no God, or that he concerns himſelf not about the affairs of men: neither ſhall the God of Jacob regard it; which title they ſeem to give to God, as ridiculing their confidence who called him their covenant God. For theſe abominations he cannot but expoſtulate. How long, Lord, how long ſhall the wicked triumph? &c. It was grievous to him to behold God's people ſo harraſſed, and his name ſo diſhonoured; and he urges the Lord without delay to appear on their behalf. This is very applicable to the blaſphemies, perſecutions, cruelties, and atheiſm, that have diſtinguiſhed the Romiſh antichriſtian church: but their triumphing is but for a moment, the vengeance due to Babylon myſtical advances.

3. He addreſſes theſe wicked men, and urges them to conſider their ways. Underſtand, ye brutiſh among the people; for ſuch conduct as is above deſcribed, ſhews more of the tyger of the deſert than of humanity: and ye fools, in their own infidel conceits the only knowing men, in God's account, the moſt wretchedly ignorant, when will ye be wiſe? and learn true wiſdom and the fear of God? He that planted the ear, ſhall he not hear? he that formed the eye, ſhall he not ſee? It argues the fooliſhneſs of folly to ſuppoſe, that he who formed theſe organs of our bodies with ſuch exquiſite art, ſhould himſelf be defective in thoſe faculties he ſo wonderfully beſtows. He that chaſtiſeth the heathen, as he did the old world, the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the idolatrous inhabitants of Canaan, ſhall not be correct? hath he not the ſame abhorrence of the like ſins, and the ſame power to puniſh them? undoubtedly: he that teacheth man knowledge, that gave man his natural reaſon and underſtanding, and is the fountain of all human wiſdom, ſhall not be know? yea, verily; his underſtanding is infinite, extending to all perſons and things, and from him nothing is hid, nothing is ſecret, even our hearts are naked and open before him. The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man, that they are vanity; either that their object is vain, the ſinful pleaſures and purſuits of a periſhing world, or the iſſue of them is vanity, he diſappointing the devices of men and bringing them to nought. Seeing then we have to do with ſuch an all-ſeeing God, how careful ſhould we be to keep our hearts with all diligence, and watch over the firſt motions within of evil concupiſcence?

12. [i] Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſtneſt, O LORD, and [k] teacheſt him out of thy law? 13. That thou mayſt give him reſt from the days of adverſity, until the pit be digged for the wicked. 14. For [l] the LORD will not caſt off his people, neither will he forſake his inheritance. 15. But judgment ſhall return unto righteouſneſs: and all the upright in heart ſhall † follow it. 16. Who will riſe up for me againſt the evil-doers? or who will ſtand up for me againſt the workers of iniquity! 17. [m] Unleſs the LORD had been my help, my ſoul had ‡ almoſt dwelt in ſilence. 18. When I ſaid, [n] My foot ſlippeth: thy mercy, O LORD, held me up. 19. [o] In the multitude of my thoughts within me, thy comforts delight my ſoul. 20. [p] Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowſhip with thee, [q] which frameth miſchief by a law? 21. [r] They gather themſelves together againſt the ſoul of the righteous, and condemn the innocent blood. 22. But the LORD is my defence: and my God is the rock of my refuge. 23. And [s] he ſhall bring upon them their own iniquity, and ſhall cut them off in their own wickedneſs; yea, the LORD our God ſhall cut them off.

[i] 1 Cor. xi. 32. Heb. xii. 5, &c.
[k] Job xxxiii. 16.
[l] 1 Sam. xii. 22. Rom. xi. 1, 2. Heb. xiii. 5.
† Heb. Be after it.
[m] Pſ. cxxvi. 1, &c. 2 Tim. iv. 16, 17.
‡ Or, quickly.
[n] Pſ. xxxviii. 16.
[o] 2 Cor. i. 4.
[p] Ibid. vi. 14.
[q] Iſa. x. 1. Mic. vi. 16.
[r] Pſ. ii. 2.
[s] Ibid. vii. 16. & lv. 23. Prov. v. 22.

v. 12—23. Verily there is a reward for the righteous, they ſhall be comforted in, and be delivered from, all their troubles.

1. God will bleſs them in all their ſufferings; though their enemies for a time are permitted to prevail, they are but the rod in God's hand, and lifted up with the moſt gracious deſign for their good. Bleſſed is the man whom thou chaſtneſt; every child of God may expect his corrections, they are abſolutely neceſſary, and the proof of his adoption; and ſo far from complaining of them as hard, ſhould he regard them as the kindeſt inſtances of paternal tenderneſs; and teacheſt him out of thy law, afflictions being deſigned for our inſtruction and improvement; God by his word and ſpirit teaching his children how to profit under his correcting hand, and we are then bleſſed indeed, when by our trials we gain a ſurer evidence of our ſonſhip, and grow more conformed to the image of our crucified Maſter: that thou mayſt give him reſt from the days of adverſity, or evil; for this works peaceable fruits of righteouſneſs to thoſe who are exerciſed thereby; the Lord alſo ſweetly ſupports the ſouls of his ſaints under their troubles, till the end for which they were ſent is anſwered, and then he delivers them ſafely out of them; and he will ſhortly bring them to his eternal reſt, where their enemies ſhall for ever ceaſe from troubling, until the pit be digged for the wicked, whoſe end is deſtruction, eternal torment their portion, and the pit of hell their accurſed abode. For the Lord will not caſt off his people; how long, or how greatly ſoever he may ſuffer them to be afflicted, he is bound to them in a covenant of everlaſting love in Jeſus Chriſt, and they ſhall never periſh; neither will he forſake his inheritance, his title to them he will never quit, even in the loweſt eſtate to which his church and every individual member of it may be reduced, they are precious in his ſight, and he hath promiſed, I will never leave nor forſake thee; ſo that we may confidently truſt him, and wait in hope. But judgment ſhall return unto righteouſneſs; the ſeeming diſorders of providence ſhall be rectified, when in the laſt days all the antichriſtian perſecutors of God's people ſhall have their plagues poured out upon them; and in the day of final retribution, God will appear righteous in all his judgments: and all the upright in heart ſhall follow it; either the judgment of God with their praiſes, acknowledging the glory of his juſtice, Rev. xvi. 6, 7. xix. 12. or righteouſneſs, approving themſelves before him in all holy converſation and godlineſs; or, as the words may be rendered, all the upright in heart ſhall be after him, as the flock of his paſture attending their ſhepherd, and following the Lamb whitherſoever he goeth with their unceaſing praiſes.

2. He will help and defend them, and make them at laſt more than conquerors. Who will riſe up for me againſt the evil-doers? or who will ſtand up for me againſt the workers of iniquity? The pſalmiſt ſpeaks in the perſon of God's ſuffering church and people, deſcribing the character of their enemies, evil-doers and workers of iniquity, who made no difficulty of committing all manner of abominations, and therefore the more to be feared; whilſt the queſtion put intimates the weakneſs of the faithful to ſtruggle with their mightier foes, unleſs God interpoſe; for indeed, when we conſider our enemies ſpiritual and temporal, we ſhall find ourſelves a very unequal match for them, and may well ſay, Unleſs the Lord had been my help, my ſoul had almoſt, or muſt quickly have, dwelt in ſilence, as was the caſe of the apoſtles,

2 Cor. i. 10. and in innumerable inſtances every chriſtian hath experienced it to be his own caſe, when almoſt reduced to deſpair, he feared he ſhould fall under his temptations, but the Lord was his helper. When I ſaid, My foot ſlippeth, I am ſinking, help, Lord, I periſh: thy mercy, O Lord, held me up; mercy that never fails, and then appears moſt precious when extended to us in the time of need: let no afflicted child of God therefore utterly deſpond, but look to him who glorifies his grace in delivering the ſouls appointed unto death. In the multitude of my thoughts within me, perplexed and diſtreſſed, as God's deareſt people ſometimes are, with apprehenſions of his purity and majeſty which confounds them; with ſuch a ſenſe of their own guilt as terrifies them, with unbelieving fears that their ſins are too great to be forgiven, their corruptions too ſtrong to be ſubdued, that they cannot be children of God, and their hope is deluſion, that they ſhall never be able to endure unto the end: theſe, and the like diſcouraging thoughts, tumultuous riſe within the ſoul, and breed anxiety and trouble; but thy comforts delight my ſoul; comforts, ariſing from a ſenſe of the unchangeable love, and tranſcendantly rich and ſovereign grace of God, derived from Jeſus, and by his ſpirit ſhed abroad in the heart; comforts, not like thoſe poor pleaſures the world can miniſter to ſooth the melancholy, which often are ineffectual to diſpel the gloom, and when ſucceſsful are but like the momentary relief procured by an opiate, whilſt the diſeaſe remains rooted as ever; but theſe comforts delight the ſoul, are ſolid, ſubſtantial, abiding, enjoyed independant of all the world can give or take away, and the fore-taſtes of eternal conſolation. Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowſhip with thee? No, that God abhors, and moſt abhors thoſe, who, in his name, pretend authority for committing iniquity; as the man of ſin, the head of the Romiſh church, who claims all power in heaven and earth, and pretends a right to beſtow indulgences and pardons for ſin at his pleaſure, which frameth miſchief by a law, then moſt oppreſſive when clad with the appearance of juſtice; and ſuch are the horrid decrees of the church of Rome; or againſt law, the character given of Antichriſt, 2 Theſſ. xi. 8. They gather themſelves together againſt the ſouls of the righteous, to deſtroy them, or uſurp dominion over their conſciences, and condemn the innocent blood; murdering the juſt for refuſing to ſubmit to their abominations, Rev. xvii. 6. xviii. 24. But the Lord is my defence from every aſſault, and my God is the rock of my refuge, where the ſoul of the faithful is ſafe, and founded on Chriſt the gates of hell cannot prevail againſt him, who will protect his people, and puniſh their cruel enemies. He ſhall bring upon them their own iniquities, the juſt puniſhment of them, and for the blood they have ſhed give them blood to drink, Rev. xvi. 6. and ſhall cut them off in their own wickedneſs; yea, the Lord our God ſhall cut them off; and then wo unto their ſouls, they muſt periſh without hope; their wickedneſs will follow them to their graves, witneſs againſt them in judgment, and thruſt them down into the belly of hell. Such is the end of the ungodly.

PSALM XCV.

This pſalm belongs to the times of the Meſſiah, as is evident, Heb. iii. 7—19. It contains, 1. The praiſe we owe to our divine Redeemer, as our maker and benefactor, ver. 1—7. 2. A warning not to harden our hearts againſt his goſpel, leaſt, like the Jews, we periſh under his wrath, ver. 7—11.

1. O Come, [a] let us ſing unto the LORD: [b] let us make a joyful noiſe to [c] the rock of our ſalvation. 2. Let us † come before his preſence with thankſgiving, and make a joyful noiſe unto him with pſalms. 3. For [d] the LORD is a great God, and a great King above all gods. 4. In his hand are the deep places of the earth: the ‡ ſtrength of the hills is his alſo. 5. The ſea is his, [e] and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land. 6. O come, let us worſhip and bow down: let us kneel before the LORD [f] our maker. 7. For he is our God, and [g] we are the people of his paſture, and the ſheep of his hand:

a Col. iii. 16.
b Pſ. c. 1.
c 1 Cor. x. 4.
† Heb. Prevent his face.
d Pſ. xcvi. 4. & xcvii. 9. & cxxxv. 5. 1 Tim. vi. 15.
‡ Or, knights.
e Gen. i. 9, 10.
f Joh. i. 3.
g Pſ. lxxix. 13. & lxxx. 1. & c. 3.

v. 1—7. The pſalmiſt opens with a warm exhortation to all around him, to unite in the delightful work of praiſe to the great God and Saviour.

1. He directs how they ſhould draw near to him with a joyful noiſe, not only making melody in their hearts, but ſpeaking forth his praiſe in pſalms, and hymns, and ſpiritual ſongs, with thankſgiving for all his boundleſs mercies; with humble reverence and lowly adoration kneeling before him; the poſture of their body expreſſing the deep abaſement of their ſouls in his preſence.

2. He points out abundant matter for their praiſes.

(1.) He is the rock of our ſalvation, hath obtained it for his people in time and eternity; and all who are built upon him are ſecure from all wrath, ſafe from all enemies, and ſure to ſtand unto eternity.

(2.) He is a great God, partaking of all the eſſential attributes of the Deity, ſelf-exiſtent, eternal, omnipotent, omniſcient.

(3.) His dominion is univerſal: He is a great King over all Gods; by him all earthly princes reign, to him all magiſtrates are accountable, and before him the fictitous gods of the heathen periſh: he is King of kings, and Lord of lords. His dominion is wide extended from pole to pole; both land and ſea acknowledge his ſovereignty: the deepeſt receſſes of the earth he ſearches, and the higheſt mountains are fixed by his power, and upheld by his providence, v. 4. 5. Note, If all the world be thus in the hands of our Jeſus, how can his people want any manner of thing that is good?

(4.) He is the maker of all, and therefore juſtly the owner; by him and in him we live and move and have our being: he bad the dry land appear, and bound up the great deep in ſwaddling bands. Theſe are thy works, O God; and juſtly therefore does he deſerve to be praiſed; of whom are all things, and for whom are all things.

(5.) He ſtands in a peculiar relation to his people, and demands their grateful tribute of thankſgiving. For he is our God and Saviour, who became incarnate for us, our ſubſtitute and ſurety, and in an everlaſting covenant of love hath united us to himſelf in one body, and we are the people of his paſture, and the ſheep of his hands; not merely fed by his providence, but formed for himſelf by grace, to be a peculiar people, led by his word and ſpirit, protected by his power, and preſerved for his everlaſting kingdom. Well, therefore, may we ſay in this view, O come, let us ſing unto the Lord, who is ſo worthy to be praiſed, and to be had in everlaſting remembrance.

7. — [h] to day if ye will hear his voice, 8. Harden not your heart, [i] as in the provocation, and as in the day of † temptation in the wilderneſs: 9. When [k] your fathers tempted me, proved me, and ſaw my work. 10. Forty years long was I grieved with this generation, and ſaid, It is a people that do err in their heart, and they have not known my ways. 11. Unto whom I ſware in my wrath, ‡ that [l] they ſhould not enter into my reſt.

h Heb. iii. 7. & iv. 7.
i Ex. xvii. 2, 7. Numb. xiv. 22, &c.
† Or, maſſah.
k Pſ. lxxviii. 40, 56. 1 Cor. x. 9.
‡ Heb. If they enter, &c. l Heb. iii. 11, 19. & iv. 9, 11.

v. 7—11. The tribute of our lips is but a vain oblation, unleſs our lives alſo ſhew forth the Saviour's praiſe; therefore we are called upon,

1. To hear his voice: this is our great duty as the ſheep of his hand, who muſt know the ſhepherd's voice and follow it. Note, If Chriſt be our Saviour and King, juſtly doth he expect we ſhould be obedient ſubjects; to none but theſe is he the author of eternal ſalvation.

2. This muſt be done immediately, to-day, whilſt it is called to-day, delays are dangerous. By nothing are ſouls more frequently undone than by procraſtination; they put off the concerns of eternity to a more convenient ſeaſon, and periſh ere it arrives.

3. We are warned of our danger. Harden not your hearts againſt Chriſt and his goſpel, as the Jews did, who rejected the true Meſſiah, and, as their fathers before them had done in the wilderneſs, in the day of temptation, or the day of Maſſah, their whole conduct being one continued ſcene of rebellions and provocations againſt him. Note, (1.) However ſlightly men paſs over their ſins, in God's ſight they are highly provoking. (2.) Diſbelief of God's promiſes is among the greateſt inſults we can put upon him, yet a crime we are very apt to diſregard and make light of. (3.) That heart is hardened indeed, that the great and precious promiſes of the goſpel cannot affect. (4.) It is wiſe to be warned by others harms, leaſt we fall after the ſame example of unbelief.

4. The great aggravation of the unbelief, and hardneſs of heart of the Jewiſh people, is inſiſted upon. They had ſeen the Lord's wonders, had proved his providential care ſo long, ſo often, during forty years; but their hearts were perverſe, they would neither know nor walk in his ways; and having wearied out his patience, brought down his wrath upon them. In the ſame manner did the Jews, from the miniſtry of John to the death of Chriſt, continue to reject the counſel of God againſt themſelves, refuſing to be convinced by all the miracles he wrought, and hardening their hearts, till wrath came upon them to the uttermoſt. Note, (1.) Every mercy we receive from God, aggravates our ingratitude againſt him. (2.) Wilful ignorance is wilful ſin. (3.) They who err in heart, chuſe darkneſs rather than light; and none more blind than thoſe who will not ſee.

5. The doom denounced againſt them was terrible. I ſware in my wrath, that they ſhould not enter into my reſt; in juſt indignation he excluded them from the land of promiſe, and by an oath confirmed the immutability of his counſel: which things are written for our admonition, 1 Cor. x. 11. There remaineth a reſt for the people of God, into which they who believe in Jeſus do enter: whilſt unbelief is the injurious bar, as ruinous to our ſouls as diſhonourable to God. They who diſtruſt God's power and love, or, careleſs about the promiſed inheritance above, ſeek for their portion on earth, and take up their reſt below, are juſtly excluded from the heavenly Canaan.

PSALM XCVI.

This pſalm is part of that which was delivered into the hand of Aſaph and his brethren, 1 Chron. xvi. 7. by which it appears, that David was the penman of it, and that it has reference to the bringing up of the ark to the city of David; but it looks farther, and is deſigned to celebrate the glories of Chriſt's kingdom, eſpecially the acceſſion of the Gentiles to it. Here is, 1. A call given to all people to praiſe, worſhip, and glorify Chriſt, as the great and glorious God, ver. 1—9. 2. Notice given to all people of his univerſal government and judgment, ver. 10—13.

1. O [a] Sing unto the LORD a new ſong: ſing unto the LORD all the earth. 2. Sing unto the LORD, bleſs his name: ſhew forth his ſalvation from day to day. 3. Declare his glory among the heathen, his wonders among all people. 4. For [b] the LORD is great, and [c] greatly to be praiſed: [d] he is to be feared above all gods. 5. For [e] all the gods of the nations are † idols: but [f] the LORD made the heavens. 6. Honour and majeſty are before him: ſtrength and beauty are in his ſanctuary. 7. Give unto the LORD, O ye kindreds of the people, [g] give unto the LORD glory and ſtrength. 8. Give unto the LORD the glory ‡ due unto his name: bring [h] an offering and come into his courts. 9. O worſhip the LORD § in the beauty of holineſs: fear before him all the earth.

a 1 Chron. xvi. 23. Pſ. xxxiii. 3.
b Pſal. cxlv. 3.
c Pſ. xviii. 3. Rev. iv. 11.
d Pſ. xcv. 3.
e Jer. x. 11, 12.
† Or, nothings, 1 Cor. viii. 4.
f Pſ. cxv. 15.
g Ibid. xxix. 1, 2.
‡ Heb. Of his name.
h Rom. xii. 1.
§ Or, in the glorious ſanctuary, Pſ. xxix. 2.

v. 1—9. When Jeſus is the ſubject of our ſong, words muſt fail to ſpeak our gratitude.

1. With warm devotion the enraptured pſalmiſt calls on the redeemed of the Lord, through the whole earth, to join the ſong of praiſe, and publiſh abroad from day to day, to the moſt diſtant heathen lands, the glory of his grace, and the wonders of his mercy in that amazing work he hath accompliſhed, the ſalvation of ſinners; a theme which will be ever new, nor to eternity be exhauſted, but miniſter occaſion for new and everlaſting praiſes, Rev. xiv. 3.

2. He mentions various particulars that afford motives and matter for our ſongs. For the Lord is great, in uncreated glory, in the works of creation and providence, and eſpecially of redemption and grace, and greatly to be praiſed; and when we raiſe our loftieſt ſtrains he is exalted ſtill far above all bleſſing and praiſe: he is to be feared above all gods. For, however high their votaries exalt them, all the gods of the nations are idols, or mere nothings, unable to do good or hurt, lifeleſs and inſenſible: but the Lord made the heavens, and garniſhed them with all their luſtre to declare his glory. Honour and majeſty are before him; enthroned in brightneſs inacceſſible; adoring angels bow before him, and cover their faces with their wings: ſtrength and beauty are in his ſanctuary; ſtrength, viſible in the converſion of ſinners, and the ſupport of his militant ſaints; and beauty diſplayed in all the ordinances of his worſhip, and graces of his Spirit beſtowed on his church and people here below, or in heaven, where the moſt glorious manifeſtations of his power and excellence appear, amidſt cherubic hoſts, and ſpirits of the juſt made perfect, who wonder and adore.

3. The manner of their ſervice is preſcribed. No longer confined to one people, his courts are open to all kindreds or families, and the redeemed out of the whole earth muſt approach him, giving him the glory ſo peculiarly his own; not that we can beſtow any thing on him, we receive all from him before we can render ought unto him; acknowledging his power, dominion, and ſovereignty, v. 7. bring our offering, not the blood of beaſts, but our own bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits, a living ſacrifice; worſhipping him in the beauty of holineſs, both in his own inſtituted ordinances of prayer and praiſe, and out of pure hearts, ſanctified by his grace, devoted to his glory; and with reverential fear, ſenſible of our own vanity, vileneſs, and unworthineſs, to approach him ſo high, ſo holy.

10. [i] Say among the heathen, that [k] the LORD reigneth: the world alſo ſhall be eſtabliſhed that it ſhall not be moved; [l] he ſhall judge the people righteouſly. 11. [m] Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad: [n] let the ſea roar, and the fulneſs thereof. 12. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein: then ſhall all the trees of the wood rejoice 13. Before the LORD, for he cometh, for he cometh to [o] judge the earth: he ſhall judge the world with righteouſneſs, and the people with his truth.

i Rom. xv. 6.
k Pſ. xciii. 1. & xcvii. 1.
l Ibid. xcviii. 9. Iſa. xi. 4.
m Pſal. lxix. 34.
n Ibid. xcviii. 7.
o Pſal. lxvii. 4. Rev. xix. 11.

v. 10—13. The converted Jews and Gentiles, or rather the miniſters put in truſt with the goſpel, are here directed what to ſay among the heathen.

1. The Lord reigneth victorious over death and hell, and all his foes; aſcended up on high, ſat down on his throne, and all power committed to him in heaven and earth; exalted to be a Prince and Saviour, to give repentance and remiſſion of ſins.

2. The world alſo ſhall be eſtabliſhed that it ſhall not be moved; for he upholdeth all things by the word of his power, will preſerve this material world till his elect are gathered out of it, and eſpecially will eſtabliſh his church to the end of time, and then take it to himſelf a glorious church, and reign over his redeemed people for ever and ever.

3. He ſhall judge the people righteouſly; the ordinances of his kingdom ſhall be moſt perfectly juſt and equitable; in the hearts of his people he ſhall rule by his ſpirit, eſtabliſhing them in righteouſneſs and true holineſs, and be their judge to vindicate their cauſe againſt the accuſations and attacks of every enemy.

4. Let heaven and earth adore him. Let the heavens rejoice, the angelic hoſts who behold with joy the incarnate Saviour, and the converſion of the Gentile world, and let the earth be glad; the righteous, who ſee the Redeemer's kingdom exalted among men! let the ſea roar, and the fulneſs thereof; all who ſail on theſe mighty waters muſt advance his praiſe. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein; the church, and all the members of it, incloſed by divine love, and cultivated by the great huſbandman, exult in God their Saviour: then ſhall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord; every child of God, the planting of the Lord, ſhall bleſs and praiſe him. Note, The eſtabliſhment of the Redeemer's kingdom upon earth is matter of general joy; and how much greater will the exultation be, when at laſt in heaven he ſhall for ever reign over his antients glorioully?

5. Let the world prepare to meet their God, for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the earth, it is certain, it is near, at his tremedous bar muſt all appear, to receive according to the things they have done in the body, with righteouſneſs, and the people with his truth: he needs no evidence who is omniſcient; and being by his nature altogether righteous and true, his deciſions will appear perfect juſtice. May we be found of him in peace at that day!

PSALM XCVII.

This pſalm dwells upon the ſame ſubject with the foregoing, Chriſt is the alpha and the omega of both. He it is that reigns to the joy of all mankind, ver. 1. and his government ſpeaks, 1. Terror to his enemies; for he is a prince of inflexible juſtice, and irreſiſtible power, ver. 2—7. 2. Comfort to his faithful ſubjects, ariſing from his ſovereign dominion; the care he takes of his people, and the proviſion he makes for them, ver. 8—12.

1. [a] THE LORD reigneth, let the earth rejoice! let † the multitude of iſles be glad thereof. 2. [b] Clouds and darkneſs are round about him: [c] righteouſneſs and judgment are the ‡ habitation of his throne. 3. [d] A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about. 4. [e] His lightnings enlightned the world: the earth ſaw [f] and trembled. 5. [g] The hills melted like wax at the preſence of the LORD: at the preſence of the LORD of the whole earth. 6. [h] The heavens declare his righteouſneſs: and all the people ſee his glory. 7. [i] Confounded be all they that ſerve graven images, that boaſt themſelves of idols: [k] worſhip him, all ye gods.

a Pſal. xcvi. 10.
† Heb. Many, or great iſles.
b 1 Kings viii. 12. Pſ. xviii. 11.
c Pſ. lxxxix. 14.
‡ Or, eſtabliſhment.
d Pſ. l. 3. Dan. vii. 10. 2 Theſ. i. 8.
e Pſ. lxxvii. 18.
f Ibid. xviii. 7. & civ. 32.
g Judg. v. 5. Mic. i. 4. Nah. i. 5.
h Pſ. xix. 1. & l. 6.
i Exod. xx. 4. Lev. xxvi. 1. Deut. v. 8.
k Heb. i. 6.

v. 1—7. The Lord reigns. This is the glorious ſubject; all power in heaven and earth is committed into his hands.

1. It ſhould be matter of joy to all. Let the earth rejoice in the bleſſings which attend his government: let the multitude of the iſles be glad thereof, and among the reſt eſpecially our own, ſo highly favoured with the light of his glorious goſpel: though ſometimes, as to us it appears, clouds and darkneſs are round about him, and his diſpenſations of providence or grace are dark and myſterious; yet, notwithſtanding, righteouſneſs and judgment are the habitation of his throne, the baſis and ſupport of it, and all his deciſions moſt indiſputably equitable.

2. His wrath will be terrible to thoſe who refuſe obedience to his government. A fire goeth before him, and burneth up his enemies round about him; which was ſeen in the vengeance executed on the Jewiſh people, who would not have him to rule over them; and will more eminently appear when he ſhall be revealed at the laſt day from heaven in flaming fire, and the breath of his mouth ſhall ſlay the wicked, 2 Theſſ. i. 7, 8. His lightnings enlightned the world; and, ſtruck with terror at the judgments, which, ſwift and irreſiſtible as the flaſh of lightning, fell upon his murderers, the earth ſaw and trembled. The hills, his mighty oppoſers, proud of their ſtrength, and immoveable in their obſtinacy, melted like wax at the preſence of the Lord: at the preſence of the Lord of the whole earth. Thus the Jewiſh nation were conſumed before the Roman ſword; and thus the powers of Antichriſt ſhall be diſſolved, when he ariſeth in the latter day to ſhake terribly the earth. Note, However ſecure and confident ſinners are at preſent, the day is near when their ſtout hearts ſhall melt, and their knees tremble before the eternal Judge and King.

3. His judgments, executed on the ungodly, will be acknowledged as altogether righteous. The heavens declare his righteouſneſs; the lightning and thunder, employed as inſtruments of his vengeance; or the angelic hoſts, who laud and praiſe him for the juſtice executed on the wicked: and all the people of his grace ſee and acknowledge his glory, manifeſted in the ſalvation of his redeemed, and the deſtruction of the impenitent. Confounded be all they, or they ſhall be confounded, that ſerve carved images, whether heathen or popiſh idolaters; and it may be conſidered either as a prayer for them, that they may with ſhame repent and be converted; or rather as a prophecy of the ruin they will bring upon themſelves by ſuch abominations; and that boaſt themſelves of idols, which is remarkably verified in the Papiſts, who glory in their pictures and images of the Virgin Mary and their ſaints, and place ſuch confidence in them, with a folly equal to their wickedneſs, and which at laſt will be manifeſt to all men: worſhip him, all ye gods; the angels, ſo called, Heb. i. 6. who adore him for all his works of righteous judgment. Note, (1.) Jeſus is very God, the angels worſhip him, and teach us where to pay our adorations. (2.) If they are our fellow-ſervants, and fellow-worſhippers, what folly, as well as profaneneſs, would it argue to make them the objects of our devotions.

8. Zion heard, and was glad, and the daughters of Judah rejoiced; becauſe of thy judgments, O LORD. 9. For thou, LORD, art high above all the earth: [l] thou art exalted far above all gods. 10. Ye that love the LORD, [m] hate evil: he preſerveth the ſouls of his ſaints, he delivereth them out of the hand of the wicked. 11. [n] Light is ſown for the righteous, and gladneſs for the upright in heart. 12. [o] Rejoice in the LORD, ye righteous: [p] and give thanks at the remembrance of his holineſs.

l Pſ. xcv. 3. & xcvi. 4.
m Pſ. xxxiv. 14. Am. v. 15. Rom. xii. 9.
n Eſth. viii. 16. Pſ. cxii. 4.
o Pſ. xxxii. 11. & xxxiii. 1.
p Pſ. xxx. 4.

v. 8—12. It was commanded, v. 1: that the whole earth ſhould rejoice in the eſtabliſhment of Chriſt's kingdom on the ruin of his enemies; and, however others may be affected, his Zion, his church, and the daughters of Judah, all faithful ſouls, cannot but be glad.

1. They have abundant cauſe to do ſo.

(1.) Becauſe of the dignity of their Redeemer's perſon. For thou, Lord, art high above all the earth; the name of Jeſus is above every name, not only on earth but in heaven, and all power is given him over them both: thou art exalted far above all gods; not only above the fictitious deities of men, but the angels, principalities and powers, are all ſubject to him, Heb. i. 13. 1 Pet. iii. 22.

(2.) Becauſe he preſerveth the ſouls of his ſaints. This is their character: They are ſeparated by His grace from a world that lieth in wickedneſs; they are righteous through the imputation of his righteouſneſs to them, and upright in heart by the power of the Divine Spirit, renewing their minds in true holineſs; they love the Lord, unfeignedly make him the object of their affections, and cleave to him alone. Such ſouls are precious in his ſight; he preſerves them from the power of ſin, ſtrengthens them againſt every temptation, enables them to perſevere in the ways of truth, and brings them at laſt to life eternal: he delivers them out of the hand of the wicked, of wicked men, or wicked devils, that ſeek to ſeduce and deſtroy them, but cannot, for God is their refuge and ſtrength, and they ſhall never periſh; and therefore they are bound to praiſe him.

(3.) Becauſe light is ſown for the righteous, and gladneſs for the upright in heart; whatever darkneſs may at times ſurround their path, at eventide it ſhall be light, and the brightneſs of eternal glory awaits them. Though for a moment they may be now in heavineſs through manifold temptations, yet even in the midſt of their ſorrows, God's comforts do refreſh their ſouls, and quickly every tear ſhall be wiped from their eyes; and joy and gladneſs, eternal and uninterrupted, be their happy portion.

(4.) Becauſe of his judgments, ver. 8. The juſtice of God magnified in the damnation of the wicked, as well as the mercy of God exalted in the ſalvation of the righteous, affords juſt matter for his people's everlaſting praiſe.

2. The manner in which they muſt expreſs their joy and gratitude is deſcribed. (1.) Rejoice in the Lord, in Chriſt Jeſus, not in ourſelves, our own doings, or deſerts, but in his righteouſneſs, promiſes, and grace. (2.) Give thanks at the remembrance of his holineſs, with our lips we muſt ſpeak to his honour, and his holineſs be eſpecially the theme at which ſinners tremble, and ſaints rejoice. (3.) Hate evil, our lives as well as lips muſt ſhew forth his praiſe; without which, all the offerings of the tongue and knee are unacceptable, and hypocritical. Note, (1.) The love of God, where genuine, cannot but produce hatred of ſin. (2.) The more we keep in mind God's holineſs, the more we ſhall be deterred from approaching whatever is offenſive to him.

PSALM XCVIII.

This pſalm is to the ſame purpoſe with the two foregoing; it is a prophecy of the kingdom of the Meſſiah, the ſetting it up in the world, and the bringing in of the gentiles. It ſets forth, 1. The glory of the Redeemer, ver. 1—3. 2. The joy of the redeemed, ver. 4—9. And if they who ſaw Chriſt's day at a diſtance, and in the promiſe only, rejoiced and triumphed thus, much more reaſon we have to do ſo, that ſee theſe things accompliſhed, and ſhare in the better things provided for us, Heb. xi. 40.

¶ A Pſalm.

1. O [a] Sing unto the LORD a new ſong, for [b] he hath done marvellous things: [c] his right hand, and his holy arm hath gotten him the victory. 2. [d] The LORD hath made known his ſalvation: his righteouſneſs hath he † openly ſhewed in the ſight of the heathen. 3. He hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the houſe of Iſrael: all the ends of the earth have ſeen the ſalvation of our God.

a Pſ. xxxiii. 3. & xcvi. 1. Iſa. xlii. 10.
b Rev. xv. 3.
c Iſa. lix. 16. & lxiii. 5.
d Ibid. lii. 10.
† Or, revealed.

v. 1—3. We have repeated calls to ſing unto the Lord, for our hearts are too often ſadly out of tune, and need be urged to the bleſſed work; and what can enliven them, if this new ſong doth not, the ſubject of which is redeeming love?

Three things are here ſuggeſted, as claiming our moſt enlarged praiſe.

1. The work Jeſus hath wrought. For he hath done marvellous things. His incarnation, miracles, life, death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, are all wonderful: his love to ſinners; his gifts of pardon, grace, and glory, ſtupendous: his whole ſalvation, from its firſt contrivance to its conſummation, marvellous. His right hand and his holy arm hath gotten him the victory. Alone he took the field againſt our foes, infinitely too great to need aſſiſtance, and too jealous of his own honour to accept it. Alone he won the day, vanquiſhed Satan, made an end of ſin, deſtroyed death, ſhut up the jaws of hell, opened the gates of heaven. Can we believe it, and not triumph in the God of our ſalvation!

2. The goſpel preached. The Lord hath made known his ſalvation, himſelf the great Evangeliſt, and commiſſioning his ſervants in his name to carry the glad tidings to the ends of the earth. His righteouſneſs hath he openly ſhewed in the ſight of the heathen; either the faithfulneſs of God in fulfilling his promiſes, or his own divine and all-perfect righteouſneſs, by which the ſalvation is obtained, and openly ſhewed, not in dark types, but in his own obedience unto death; and his grace not confined to one people, but all nations freely invited to the faith and privileges of the goſpel.

3. The prophecies fulfilled. He hath remembred his mercy and truth towards the houſe of Iſrael; appearing as their Meſſiah in the fulneſs of time, according to the promiſes which went before concerning him. All the ends of the earth have ſeen the ſalvation of our God; agreeable to the prophetic word, which declared he ſhould be the light to lighten the Gentiles, as well as the glory of his people Iſrael.

4. [e] Make a joyful noiſe unto the LORD, all the earth: make a loud noiſe, and rejoice, and ſing praiſe. 5. Sing unto the LORD with the harp; with the harp, and the voice of a pſalm. 6. With trumpets and ſound of cornet, make a joyful noiſe before the LORD, the King. 7. [f] Let the ſea rore, and the fulneſs thereof: the world, and they that dwell therein. 8. Let the floods clap their hands: let the hills be joyful together 9. Before the LORD; for he cometh to judge the earth; [g] with righteouſneſs ſhall he judge the world, and the people with equity.

e Pſ. xcv. 1.
f Ibid. xcvi. 11, &c.
g Ibid. lxvii. 4. Rev. xix. 11.

v. 4—9. The pſalm concludes much like the ninety-ſixth, with an exhortation to all people, with voices and muſic, aloud to exalt the Redeemer's name, and with that warmth of affection to his perſon, zeal for his glory, and exceeding great joy, which his tranſcendently rich ſalvation ſhould inſpire; yea, the inanimate creation are called upon to join the ſong of praiſe to the univerſal Lord, and the eternal King; whoſe government, in the diſpenſation of the goſpel, will be ever moſt juſt and equitable; and his deciſions, when he ſhall ſit upon the throne of final judgment, be altogether righteous, v. 9. Note, If we know Jeſus as our Lord and King, it cannot but miniſter to us matter of the moſt enlivened joy, and tune our hearts for his praiſe in time and in eternity.

PSALM XCIX.

This pſalm is a prophecy of the glory of the Meſſiah's kingdom. 1. The people of God are called to praiſe and worſhip him in the view of his greatneſs and glory, ver. 1—5. 2. For the inſtances of his mercy of old vouchſafed to his people Iſrael, ver. 6—9.

1. [a] THE LORD reigneth, let the people tremble: [b] he ſitteth between the cherubims, let the earth † be moved. 2. The LORD is great in Zion, and [c] he is high above all people. 3. Let them praiſe thy great and terrible name: for it is holy. 4. [d] The king's ſtrength alſo loveth judgment, thou doſt eſtabliſh equity, thou executeſt judgment and righteouſneſs in Jacob. 5. [e] Exalt ye the LORD our God, and worſhip at [f] his footſtool: for [g] ‡ he is holy.

a Pſ. xciii. 1. & xcvi. 10. & xcvii. 1.
b Ex. xxv. 22. Pſal. lxxx. 1.
† Heb. Stagger.
c Ex. xviii. 11. Pſ. xcvi. 4. & xcvii. 9.
d Job xxxvi. 5.
e Ver. 9.
f 1 Chron. xxviii. 2.
g Iſa. v. 16.
‡ Or, it is holy.

v. 1—5. The exaltation of Jeſus is the joy of his people and the terror of his enemies.

1. It ſpeaks terror to his enemies. The Lord reigneth, whom men by wicked hands had crucified and ſlain; but by Divine power ariſen from the dead, is ſet down at the right hand of the Majeſty on high; let the people tremble; all the enemies of his kingdom, that will not have him to reign over them, ſhall feel ere long with terror the rod of his judgment: he ſitteth between the cherubims, on his exalted throne, attended by miniſtring ſpirits, ready to fulfil his pleaſure, let the earth be moved, as when the Jewiſh civil and eccleſiaſtical ſtate was diſſolved by his righteous vengeance, and as the whole world will be in the day of perdition of the ungodly. Note, Many mock at the terrors of God's judgments, who will, to their coſt, ſhortly find them awful realities.

2. It is the joy of his people. The Lord is great in Zion, where many of his miracles were wrought, and from whence his goſpel went forth, or rather in the ſpiritual Zion his church, who behold the glory of his perſon and offices, and enjoy his protection and bleſſing, and he is high above all people; not only as head of his church, but as God over all, bleſſed for ever, and therefore are they bound to rejoice in him. Let them praiſe thy great and terrible name; terrible to his foes, but moſt lovely to his people: for it is holy, and this it is which renders it a terror to ſinners, and ſo glorious in the eyes of his ſaints. The king's ſtrength alſo loveth judgment; Almighty as he is, his power is never abuſed to injuſtice, but righteouſneſs is his delight, and the conſtant guide of his adminiſtration; thou doſt eſtabliſh equity; his laws are all moſt holy and juſt; or, thou haſt prepared righteouſneſs, a perfect and compleat righteouſneſs, wrought out by his obedience unto death for his people, and withal has the fulneſs of Divine grace to beſtow, to ſanctify their hearts, and make them upright before him; thou executeſt judgment and righteouſneſs in Jacob, protecting his people by his providence, correcting them when they offend, and governing his mediatorial kingdom in the moſt righteous manner; and for this his ſubjects are called upon to adore him. Exalt ye the Lord our God with heart and voice, in all the glorious offices he bears, and worſhip at his footſtool with lowly reverence, praiſing him for all his greatneſs and glory, and looking up to him for the continual ſupplies of his power and grace: for he is holy; worthy our higheſt adoration, and faithful to all his promiſes, as they will ever find who worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth.

6. [h] Moſes and Aaron among his prieſts, and Samuel among them that call upon his name: they called upon the LORD, and he anſwered them, 7. [i] He ſpake unto them in the cloudy pillar: they kept his teſtimonies, and the ordinance that he gave them. 8. Thou anſweredſt them, O LORD our God: [k] thou waſt a God that forgaveſt them, though thou tookeſt vengeance of their inventions. 9. [l] Exalt the LORD our God, and worſhip at his holy hill: for the LORD our God is holy.

h Jer. xv. 1.
i Ex. xxxiii. 9.
k Num. xiv. 20. Jer. xlvi. 28.
l Ver. 5.

v. 6—9. The Lord hath been the object of adoration to all his ſaints of old, and their experience proves him to be the God that heareth and anſwereth the prayers of his people. We have,

1, The names and characters of theſe moſt eminent men of God: Moſes and Aaron among his prieſts, Moſes having exerciſed the ſacerdotal office till Aaron was appointed thereunto, with his brethren, and this by his conſecration, and Samuel among them that call upon his name: theſe eminent worthies ſtand diſtinguiſhed not ſo much for their ſtation and dignity, to which God advanced them, as for their piety: they called upon the Lord, in every emergence they placed their dependance on God, and found him a never-failing refuge: they kept his teſtimonies, and the ordinance that he gave them, conſcientiouſly obſervant of the precepts of his law, and the ceremonies of his worſhip: and they who thus walk in God's ways, may expect in theſe ways he will meet them, and anſwer all their petitions.

2. The notice and regard God ſhewed them. He anſwered them; granted their requeſts, and communed with them as a man with his friends. He ſpake unto them out of the cloudy pillar; to Moſes and Aaron often, and probably to Samuel alſo, in the frequent viſions vouchſafed to him, or when he anſwered his prayer by mighty thunderings, 1 Sam. xii. 18. Thou anſweredſt them, O Lord our God, when, as advocates for rebellious Iſrael, they lifted up their prayer for mercy: thou waſt a God that forgaveſt them, at the interceſſion of theſe holy men, though thou tookeſt vengeance of their inventions, making them ſmart for their ſins by their ſufferings, though prevailed upon by their prayers from utterly deſtroying them. Note, (1.) We can never ſufficiently value the prayers of good men; they are indeed often branded as the troublers, but are in fact the preſervers of the nation. (2.) God will make his own people ſmart ſeverely for their perverſeneſs, even when he hath, reſpecting the eternal conſequences of their ſins, delivered their ſouls from death.

3. The praiſe due to God for theſe mercies. Exalt the Lord our God; as our God he deſerves our love and praiſe, and our father's mercies are our own, and demand our grateful acknowledgments; and worſhip at his holy hill; in the church of Chriſt: for the Lord our God is holy in his nature, in all his works and ways, and to be exalted by all his people according to his adorable perfections.

PSALM C.

It is with good reaſon that we ſing this pſalm very frequently in our religious aſſemblies, ſince we are the Gentile lands, now called to the knoweldge of the goſpel, and therefore bound to praiſe our God and Saviour. 1. We are called upon to praiſe God, and rejoice in him, ver. 1—4. 2. We are furniſhed with matter for praiſe; we muſt praiſe him, conſidering his being and relation to us, ver. 3. and his mercy and truth, ver. 5.

¶ [a] A pſalm of † praiſe.

1. [b] MAKE a joyful noiſe unto the LORD, [c] all ye lands. 2. Serve the LORD with gladneſs: come before his preſence with ſinging. 3. Know ye that the LORD he is God, [d] it is he that hath made us, and not we ourſelves; [e] we are his people, and the ſheep of his paſture. 4. [f] Enter into his gates with thankſgiving, and into his courts with praiſe: be thankful unto him, and bleſs his name. 5. For the LORD is good: [g] his mercy is everlaſting: and his truth endureth ‡ to all generations.

a Pſ. cxlv. tit.
† Or, thankſgiving.
b Pſ. xcv. 1.
c Rom. xv. 10.
d Pſ. cxix. 73. & cxxxix. 13, &c. & cxlix. 2. Eph. ii. 10.
e Pſ. xcv. 7. Ezek. xxxiv. 30, 31.
f Pſ. lxvi. 13.
g Ibid. cxxxvi. 1, &c.
‡ Heb. To generation and generation.

1—5. Praiſe is the work of heaven, and upon earth the pleaſing employment of God's redeemed people.

1. The pſalmiſt calls upon them to laud the Lord, and directs how to worſhip and ſerve him acceptably. Make a joyful noiſe unto the Lord, aloud proclaim his glory, all ye lands from pole to pole, whither the glad tidings of ſalvation ſhall ſpread abroad. Serve the Lord with gladneſs, not under the yoke of Jewiſh ceremonies, and the ſpirit of bondage, which under the law prevailed, but with that delight which the ſpirit of adoption gives, rendering his ſervice perfect freedom: come before his preſence with ſinging; in private and public worſhip celebrating his mercies, and pouring forth the tribute of our grateful ſongs. Enter into his gates with thankſgiving, and into his courts with praiſe, joining our voices to the great congregation that in his houſe adore him: be thankful unto him for all the innumerable bleſſings, ſpiritual and temporal, that with unſparing hand he hath beſtowed, and daily ſhowers down upon us, and bleſs his name, aſcribing to him the honour and glory of all, to whom alone the praiſe of all his due.

2. Abundant cauſe there is why we ſhould thus bleſs and praiſe him. [1.] He is the Lord, the only true God, the fountain of bleſſedneſs, in his perfections tranſcendantly adorable, and exalted far above all bleſſing and praiſe. [2.] He is the God that made us, and not we ourſelves, in him we live and move and have our being; our bodies and our ſouls are both the work of his hands, and the new creation in Chriſt Jeſus is purely by the mighty working of his Spirit. [3.] We are his people; as our creator, he hath the moſt inconteſtible right to our ſervice, all we have and are is his, derived from him, and ſhould be devoted to him, and before him we muſt at laſt render up an account of the talents with which he hath entruſted us.

[4.] We are the ſheep of his paſture, bought with his blood, fed by his providence and grace, protected by his care, and regarded as his treaſure. [5.] He is good in himſelf, and in the diſpenſations of his providence and grace is continually manifeſting his goodneſs to us. [6.] His mercy is everlaſting, he bears with us long, and is kind, multiplies his pardons, and though we deſerve ſo often to be diſowned and forſaken by him, his love is unchangeable, and continues unto the end, ſo that we can never periſh. [7.] His truth endureth to all generations; his fidelity to his promiſes is inviolable for ever, and all the generations of his people ſhall prove it to their great conſolation; for he will never fail them in their way to glory, nor diſappoint their expectations in eternity. This know ye, O ye children of God, meditate on the glorious ſubject, and then it cannot but fill your enraptured hearts with love, and your joyful lips with never-ending praiſe.

PSALM CI.

David was for certain the penman of this pſalm; it is a ſolemn vow he made to God when he took upon him the charge of a family and of the kingdom. It might be penned during his reigning in Hebron over Judah, whilſt he waited for the ſubmiſſion of the other tribes: it contains a model of good government, not only for kings, but for every maſter of a family over their houſhold. Here is, 1. The general ſcope of David's vow, ver. 1, 2. 2. The particulars of it, that he would deteſt and diſcountenance all manner of wickedneſs, ver. 3, 4, 7, 8. and that he would favour and encourage ſuch as were virtuous, ver. 6. Some think this may fitly be accommodated to Chriſt, the Son of David, who governs his church, the city of the Lord, by theſe rules, and who loveth righteouſneſs and hateth wickedneſs.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. I Will ſing of mercy and judgment: unto thee, O
LORD, will I ſing. 2. [a] I will behave myſelf wiſely in a perfect way; O when wilt thou come unto me? I will walk within my houſe with a perfect heart.
3. I will ſet no † wicked thing before mine eyes: [b] I hate the work of them [c] that turn aſide, it ſhall not cleave to me. 4. A froward heart ſhall depart from me:
I will not know a wicked perſon. 5. Whoſo privily ſlandereth his neighbour, him will I cut off: [d] him that hath an high look, and a proud heart, will not I ſuffer.
6. [e] Mine eyes ſhall be upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me: he that walketh in ‡ a perfect way, he ſhall ſerve me. 7. He that worketh deceit ſhall not dwell within my houſe: he that telleth lies ſhall not § tarry in my ſight. 8. I will [f] early deſtroy all the wicked of the land: that I may cut off all wicked doers from [g] the city of the LORD.

[a] 1 Sam. xviii. 14.
† Heb. Thing of Belial.
[b] Pſ. xcvii. 10.
[c] Ibid. cxxv. 5.
[d] Prov. vi. 17.
[e] Rom. xiii. 4.
‡ Or, perfect in the way.
§ Heb. Be eſtabliſhed.
[f] Pſ. lxxv. 10. Jer. xxi. 12.
[g] Pſ. xlviii. 2, 8.

v. 1—8. The pſalmiſt here appears an example unto believers how to demean themſelves as good maſters or good magiſtrates.

1. He opens with praiſe. I will ſing of mercy and of judgment; either of the mercy and juſtice he purpoſed to exerciſe in the adminiſtration of that kingdom to which he was advanced, or rather of God's diſpenſations towards him; his mercy in calling him to the throne, and his righteous judgments in ſubduing all his enemies before him, or of the chaſtiſements and corrections he had felt, as well as the grace and loving-kindneſs he had experienced, which alike wrought together for his good, and called for his gratitude. Note, A chriſtian's courſe is uſually chequered with mercies and judgments; but which-ever be his preſent portion, he is called upon, in every thing, in every ſtate, condition, and circumſtance, to give thanks.

2. He profeſſes his ſolemn reſolutions to approve himſelf faithful to God in all his ways.

(1.) He reſolves to devote his heart to God without guile, and that muſt be the root of all acceptable ſervice. I will behave myſelf wiſely in a perfect way: which, if taken in the ſtrict ſenſe of the words, is applicable only to Chriſt, and to him the whole pſalm may be well referred; but it is alſo the pſalmiſt's, and every faithful ſoul's purpoſe to ſet before them the perfect law of God as the rule of duty, and to walk circumſpectly and in ſimplicity, to pleaſe God in all things: O when wilt thou come unto me? and ſtrengthen me for thy ſervice; or it may be read without an interrogation, when thou ſhalt come unto me, then by thy grace and preſence I ſhall be enabled for every duty. I will walk within my houſe with a perfect heart, or, in the integrity of my heart, directing all the concerns of his family with a conſtant eye to God's glory, and walking before his houſhold an example of all holy converſation and godlineſs. Note, (1.) The moſt ſubſtantial wiſdom is ſerious godlineſs. (2.) They who would bring up their families in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, muſt themſelves ſhew the practice of the precepts they inculcate.

(2.) He reſolves to renounce every work of wickedneſs. I will ſet no wicked thing before mine eyes, neither ſuffering his bodily eyes to gaze on any object which might excite impure deſire, nor permitting his mind to harbour any baſe deſign: I hate the work of them that turn aſide from God, his worſhip and ſervice, it ſhall not cleave to me; he will have no fellowſhip with ſuch unfruitful works of darkneſs. Note, Did we ſee more of the evil and danger of ſin, our abhorrence of it would be more rooted, and we ſhould fly from it as from the face of a ſerpent.

(3.) He reſolves what company he will avoid, and with whom he will aſſociate. The froward ſhall depart unwelcome from his door; he will not know, or maintain the leaſt acquaintance with a wicked perſon, whoſe life is immoral and perverſe before God, v. 4. Every tongue that drops the invenomed words of ſlander, ſhall be cut off from the circle of his friends: the proud and ambitious ſhall not be ſuffered to enjoy his familiarity, v. 5. No flatterer or ſycophant ſhould find a welcome at his table, nor a deceitful perſon be harboured within his doors. A liar is his abhorrence, and ſhall never tarry in his ſight; but, the moment he is detected, ſhall be diſmiſſed. Thus, as a magiſtrate, he would diſcountenance the ungodly; as a maſter, entertain none ſuch as ſervants under him; nor, as a man, be ſeen in their company, or aſſociate with them as his friends. But mine eyes ſhall be upon the faithful in the land, to ſeek them out, to ſhew them favour, to receive them into his friendſhip and ſervice: they ſhall dwell with me, as miniſters of his council-board, as the companions in whom he delighted, as the menials of his family. He that walketh in a perfect way, making God's law his guide, and conſcientiouſly obſervant of it, he ſhall ſerve me, and well would it become all kings to follow David's pattern; for that land will be happy, where ſuch evil doers are rejected, and ſuch miniſters choſen. The peace, godlineſs, and internal comfort of every family will be greatly promoted where the maſter rejects the wicked from his doors, and employs thoſe faithful ſervants: and every man, who conſults his own happineſs, muſt follow the pſalmiſt in the choice of his friends, and reſolve to ſeparate from the workers of wickedneſs, and to make thoſe only his delight, who excel in virtue.

(4.) He reſolves to deſtroy all that were convicted of notorious wickedneſs out of the land of Iſrael, and the city of Jeruſalem, v. 8. which would conduce to the glory of God, and the ſtability of his throne. And herein throughout David may be conſidered as the type of Chriſt, whoſe perfection of obedience is abſolute, who hath an utter hatred of ſin, calls to his work and ſervice in the goſpel kingdom none that are ungodly, but the righteous are his delight; and as his knowledge is infinite, and his power almighty, no wicked doers can avoid his notice, or at the laſt eſcape his judgments.

PSALM CII.

Some think David penned this pſalm at the time of Abſalom's rebellion; others, that Daniel, Nehemiah, or ſome other prophet, penned it for the uſe of the church, during their captivity in Babylon: but it is clear, from the application of ver. 25, 26. to Chriſt, Heb. i. 11, 12. that the pſalm has reference to the days of the Meſſiah, and ſpeaks either of his afflictions, or the afflictions of his church for his ſake. In it we have, 1. A ſorrowful complaint made of great and grievous afflictions, ver. 1—11. 2. Seaſonable comfort fetched in againſt theſe grievances, (1.) From the eternity of God, ver. 12, 23, 27. (2.) From a believing proſpect of the deliverance which God would in due time work for his afflicted church, ver. 13—22. and the continuance of it in the world, ver. 28.

¶ [a] A prayer † of the afflicted, [b] when he is overwhelmed, and poureth out his complaint before the Lord.

[a] Jam. v. 13.
† Or, for.
[b] Pſ. lxi. 2.

1. HEAR my prayer, O LORD, and let my cry come unto thee. 2. [c] Hide not thy face from me in the day when I am in trouble, incline thine ear unto me: in the day when I call, anſwer me ſpeedily.
3. For [d] my days are conſumed ‡ like ſmoke: and [e] my bones are burnt as an hearth. 4. My heart is ſmitten, and withered like graſs, ſo that I forget to eat my bread. 5. By reaſon of the voice of my groaning, [f] my bones cleave to my § ſkin. 6. [g] I am like a pelican of the wilderneſs: I am like an owl of the deſert. 7. I watch, and am as a ſparrow alone upon the houſe-top. 8.
Mine enemies reproach me all the day: and they that are mad againſt me, [h] are ſworn againſt me. 9. For I have eaten aſhes like bread, and [i] mingled my drink with weeping: 10. Becauſe of thine indignation and thy wrath: for [k] thou haſt lifted me up, and caſt me down.

[c] Pſ. xxvii. 9. & lxix. 17.
[d] Jam. iv. 14.
‡ Some read, Into ſmoke.
[e] Job xxx. 30.
[f] Job xix. 20. Lam. iv. 8.
§ Or, fleſh.
[g] Job xxx. 29.
[h] Acts xxiii. 14.
[i] Pſ. xlii. 3. & lxxx. 5.
[k] Pſ. xxx. 7.

[l] Pſ. cix. 23. & cxliv. 4. Eccleſ. vi. 12. down. 11. [l] My days are like a ſhadow that declineth :
[m] Iſa. xl. 6. Jam. i. 10. and [m] I am withered like graſs.

v. 1—11. The title of this pſalm is obſervable ; it is a prayer of the afflicted, and ſuch are all the people of God at times, from a ſenſe of their ſins, the oppoſition of their enemies ſpiritual and temporal, and from the burden of their in-bred corruptions, when he is overwhelmed ; and ſo ſunk they ſometimes are under the load of their trials, that they are ready to deſpair ; yet, when he poureth out his complaint before the Lord, as he is invited freely to do, aſſured that his compaſſionate boſom can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, he will hear his cry, and will help him ; and this ineſtimable privilege the child of God fails not to improve, and lodges all his complaints with the Father of mercies, and the God of all conſolation. This the afflicted pſalmiſt did, and in his own caſe directs us how to act when under the like preſſure.

1. He directs his prayer to God, entreating kind regard, the return of the light of God's countenance, and a ſpeedy anſwer, becauſe his neceſſities were urgent, v. 1, 2. Note, (1.) Outward troubles are made light, when God comforts the ſoul with internal conſolations ; but when inward diſtreſs is joined with outward afflictions, the caſe is peculiarly grievous. (2.) If God ſuffers his people to be reduced very low, it is with a deſign to exerciſe their faith, and excite their more importunate prayers.

2. He ſpreads his particular complaints before the Lord. His body, through diſeaſe or trouble, is ſo emaciated, that his bones cleave to his ſkin, v. 5. and ſeem ready to burſt through it, enfeebled, and unable to ſupport him, as if burnt with fire, v. 3. His anguiſh bitter and continual ; his groans piercing ; his days conſumed like ſmoke, ſo tranſient ; or in ſmoke, in darkneſs, trouble, and vexation, v. 3. His ſpirits quite exhauſted ; his heart ſunk in dejection ; like the withered graſs, ſcorched up with inward torment ; and his appetite loſt, v. 4. Like the pelican and owl he ſhunned the light, and converſe of men, and pined away in melancholy ſolitude. No balmy ſleep cloſed up his eyes, but poring on his ſorrows, alone he ſat, as a ſparrow on the houſe-top, deſerted by all his friends, or avoiding their company, v. 7. His enemies, pleaſed to behold his griefs, inſulted him, as if his religion was vain, or his profeſſions hypocritical, ſince God had forſaken him ; and, mad in their rage againſt him, united, and bound themſelves by an oath to ſeize this opportunity of his diſtreſs in order to deſtroy him, v. 8. But what above all his ſufferings lay the heavieſt upon him, was the ſenſe of God's indignation, and the fear of his wrath, who, from the height of proſperity to which he had been advanced, had caſt him thus into the depths of adverſity, v. 10. This was the gall in his cup, that embittered every pang, made his bread like aſhes, and and filled his cup with tears, v. 9. The ſhadows of death ſeemed ſtretching over him, his ſun of life faſt declining, and like the graſs, cut down, dried up, and withered, he ſaw himſelf dropping into the grave. Such were his complaints : we may not count it ſtrange, if we are brought into circumſtances where they may be our own. Diſeaſe may waſte our bodies, trouble prey on our ſpirits, friends prove faithleſs, enemies inveterate ; our fears of guilt be ſtrong, and death at our door. but whilſt there is life, there is hope ; and whilſt there is a God of all grace, we may not deſpair : He can ſtill hear and help, when all other help and hope ſhall fail us : truſt therefore in the Lord for ever, and pray without ceaſing.

[n] Lam. v. 19. 12. But [n] thou, O LORD, ſhalt endure for ever, and [o] Pſ. cxxxv. 13. [o] thy remembrance unto all generations. 13. Thou ſhalt ariſe, and have mercy upon Zion : for the time to favour her, yea, the ſet time is come. 14. For thy ſer-[p] Pſ. lxxix. 1. vants take pleaſure in [p] her ſtones, and favour the duſt thereof. 15. So the heathen ſhall fear the name of the LORD : and all the kings of the earth thy glory.
16. When the LORD ſhall build up Zion, he ſhall appear in his glory. 17. He will regard the prayer of the deſtitute, and not deſpiſe their prayer. 18. This ſhall [q] Pſ. xxii. 31. Iſa. xliii. 21. be written for the generation to come : and [q] the people which ſhall be created, ſhall praiſe the LORD. 19.
[r] Pſ. xiv. 2. & xxxiii. 13. For [r] he hath looked down from the height of his ſanc-tuary : from heaven did the LORD behold the earth :
[s] Pſ. lxxix. 11. 20. [s] To hear the groaning of the priſoner, to looſe † Heb. The children of death. † thoſe that are appointed to death ; 21. To declare the name of the LORD in Zion, and his praiſe in Jeruſalem : 22. When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms to ſerve the LORD.

v. 12—22. Many and great are the troubles of the righteous, but out of all the Lord delivereth them : and herein the pſalmiſt expreſſes his own confidence, and that of all the redeemed in Zion.

1. The Lord Jeſus is an everlaſting Saviour ; for to him are the words addreſſed, (See Heb. i. 10.) Thou, Lord, ſhalt endure for ever. However long continued the afflictions of his church and people, becauſe he endureth for ever, they ſhall out-live and overcome them. The perpetuity of his mediatorial kingdom, and his fidelity in the conſtant diſcharge of his truſt, as our ceaſeleſs advocate, unchangeable friend, and almighty King, enſures us the victory at laſt : and thy remembrance to all generations ; ſeeing he ſhall be exalted to eternity in the praiſes of his redeemed, for all the great ſalvation begun, continued, and compleated by him, for them, and in them.

2. There is an appointed time fixed in his decrees for the continuance and removal of the afflictions of Zion, v. 13. and faith, that knows it certain, brings it near. The time is come, becauſe the deliverance is as ſure, as if it were already accompliſhed : and this may have reſpect to the ſeventy years of the Babyloniſh captivity, or to the period of the church's calamity under the perſecutions of Antichriſt ; or more generally to the caſe of every ſuffering ſaint of God, who is called to truſt and wait in patient hope for the ſalvation of God ; for it is fixed unalterably, and ſure eternally.

3. This will iſſue to the glory of God, and the great comfort of his people. For thy ſervants take pleaſure in her ſtones, and favour the duſt thereof. Though in ruins the temple lay, the faithful Jews loved the place, and reſpected the very duſt : and how great muſt their delight then be, to ſee theſe ſtones revived from the rubbiſh ; and growing into an holy temple ? And thus the miniſters of the goſpel, in all the deſolations of the church, long for the glorious day of reſtitution ; and whenever the Lord puts it into the hearts of his people to pray for, and labour to ſerve, the intereſts of his Zion, it is a gracious ſign that the promiſed mercy is at hand. Herein alſo God will be abundantly glorified ; his ſaints will admire and adore him for the grace manifeſted in that great day, v. 16. and the heathen, ſtruck with reverence at the ſight of God's interpoſition in behalf of his people, ſhall be converted unto him, and the kings of the earth behold his glory, and yield themſelves up to his ſervice.

4. The prayers of the faithful ſhall be anſwered, v. 17. They are deſtitute of human help and comfort, and in their own ſpirits forlorn and dejected, but not the leſs dear to him : he will not deſpiſe thoſe whom man deſpiſeth, but as the contrite heart is his delight, they ſhall be accepted by him, and receive from him a rich ſupply of every want.

5. The record of this mercy ſhewn to Zion at the humble prayer of God's people, will encourage the faith, and excite the praiſes of ſucceeding generations of the faithful, created anew in Chriſt Jeſus, v. 18. Note, (1.) The paſt experience of God's care of his people ſhould ever encourage our confidence of the like protection. (2.) Our fathers' mercies, as well as our own, deſerve the grateful return of praiſe.

6. Even the groans of the poor priſoners, doomed to death, he hears, reſcues them from ruin, and magnifies thereby his mercy. He hath looked down from the height of his ſanctuary : from heaven did the Lord behold the earth, and all that was done under the ſun, with an eye of eſpecial regard to his people, particularly when ſuffering for his name's ſake, under the power of oppreſſors. To hear the groaning of the priſoner, bound for the teſtimony of God, and the faith of Jeſus, as multitudes have been, and ſtill continue under the power of the antichriſtian tyranny, and tortured in their inquiſitorial dungeons. To looſe thoſe that are appointed to death ; either to reſcue them from the death of the body, or to ſave the ſouls of thoſe who were tied and bound with the chain of their ſins, and in their own fears apprehended themſelves expoſed to the eternal death of body and ſoul in hell, but under deep conviction of their loſt eſtate, groaning in bitterneſs, cry and are heard, pardoned through the blood of Jeſus, and ſaved by ſovereign grace. To declare the name of the Lord in Zion, and his praiſe in Jeruſalem ; as the captives releaſed from Babylon did, and as the church of the redeemed, delivered from the yoke of Antichriſt, will do ; and which is now daily done by every poor ſinner reſcued from the bondage of corruption, and the jaws of hell, whoſe heart, big with thankfulneſs, adores the wonders of redeeming love, and aſcribes the praiſe of all to Jeſus his Lord. When the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms to ſerve the Lord, which will be moſt eminently the caſe, when the Lord Jeſus in the latter day ſhall take to himſelf his great power and reign, and thoſe who are the ſubjects of his happy government, ſhall with exultation rejoice in his kingdom and glory.

23. He † weakned my ſtrength in the way ; he ſhort- † Or, afflicted.
ned my days. 24. [t] I ſaid, O my God, take me not [t] Iſa. xxxviii. 10.
away in the midſt of my days : thy years are throughout all generations. 25. [u] Of old haſt thou laid the founda- [u] Heb. i. 10.
tion of the earth : and the heavens are the work of thy hands. 26. [x] They ſhall periſh, but thou ſhalt ‡ endure : [x] Iſa. li. 6. & lxv. 17. & lxvi. 22. Rom. viii. 20. 2 Pet. iii. 7, 10.
yea, all of them ſhall wax old like a garment ; as a veſture ſhalt thou change them, and they ſhall be changed. 27.
But thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall have no end. ‡ Heb. Stand.
28. [y] The children of thy ſervants ſhall continue, and [y] Pſ. lxix. 36.
their ſeed ſhall be eſtabliſhed before thee.

v. 23—28. Though reduced to deepeſt diſtreſs, the church of God, and every faithful ſoul, ſhall riſe ſuperior to their foes, and triumph at the laſt. We have here,

1. The low eſtate to which the church was reduced. He weakned my ſtrength in the way. In our journey to the heavenly Canaan every believer meets with many a diſcouragement from the length and difficulties of the road, and mortal ſtrength is ready often to fail; and the church itſelf, as when Iſrael was led captive to Babylon, is threatned frequently with extirpation, and her name to be had no more in remembrance; whilſt God ſeems to have withdrawn his protection: and he ſhortned my days; ſuch was his apprehenſion under the impending danger; and thus alſo the faithful ſoul under the preſſures of ſickneſs, with Hezekiah may be apt to conclude, that ere he hath compleated half the years of man's appointed time, he ſhall go down to the grave.

2. The pſalmiſt, in the name of the faithful, prays for a reſpite, v. 24. for though death is diveſted of its terrors by the Lord Jeſus, and every child of God may count it their mercy to have the days which might have been occupied in the labours of time, employed in the triumphs of eternity; yet there are reaſons why even good men, as Paul, may wiſh to abide in the fleſh. Or, if it be applied to the church, it is a prayer founded on the promiſe, that ſhe ſhall never fail, whilſt the eternal God endures, whoſe years are throughout all generations. Jeſus, (to whom theſe words belong, See Heb. i. 10—12.) is the ever-living and ever-loving Saviour of his redeemed: the worlds which he hath made, ſhall periſh; and the heavens his hands expanded, be changed as a veſture, v. 26, 27. but he, unchangeably the ſame, v. 27. ſhall be the everlaſting portion of his people. They may ſafely truſt him with all their concerns in time and eternity, and, when they do ſo, ſhall experience, to their unſpeakable comfort, his power, grace, and love, conſtantly and uniformly exerted to bleſs, preſerve, and keep them to his everlaſting kingdom. And this,

3. The pſalmiſt confidently expects. The children of thy ſervants ſhall continue; a ſucceſſion of faithful people ſhall ariſe in every age; and their ſeed ſhall be eſtabliſhed before thee. To the lateſt poſterity, amidſt the ſevereſt perſecutions, and the ſtrongeſt efforts of ſin and Satan, the church ſhall be preſerved, till her militant days on earth being compleated, ſhe ſhall reign triumphant for ever in heaven with her exalted head.

PSALM CIII.

The pſalmiſt, 1. Stirs up himſelf and his own ſoul to praiſe God, ver. 1, 2. for his favour to him in particular, ver. 3—5. to the church in general, and to all good men, to whom he is and will be juſt, kind, and conſtant, ver. 6—18. and for his government of the world, ver. 19. 2. He deſires the aſſiſtance of the holy angels, and all the works of God in praiſing him, ver. 20—22.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. [a] BLESS the LORD, O my ſoul: and all that is within me, bleſs his holy name. 2. Bleſs the LORD, O my ſoul, and forget not all his benefits. 3. [b] Who forgiveth all thine iniquities: [c] who healeth all thy diſeaſes. 4. [d] Who redeemeth thy life from deſtruction: [e] who crowneth thee with loving-kindneſs and tender mercies. 5. Who ſatisfieth thy mouth with good things: ſo that [f] thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.

[a] Pſ. civ. 1. & cxlvi. 1.
[b] Ibid. cxxx. 8. Mat. ix. 2, 6. Luke vii. 47.
[c] Exod. xv. 26.
[d] Job xxxiii. 24.
[e] Pſ. v. 12.
[f] Iſa. xl. 31.

v. 1—5. When God opens our hearts to a real diſcovery of what he is to us, and hath done for us, we ſhall be overwhelmed with wonder, and filled with thankſgiving. Thus the pſalmiſt, and with him every living ſervant of God,

1. Stirs up his ſoul to the grateful work of praiſe. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul; proclaim his goodneſs and grace; and all that is within me, let every faculty be engaged, and every nerve extended, to bleſs his holy name, ſo worthy to be praiſed. Bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul; delay not, nor be ſluggiſh in the ſervice; and forget not all his benefits, the leaſt ſo infinitely beyond our deſerts, and yet ſo great and numberleſs, that they are more than we are able to expreſs. Note, (1.) It is good often to commune with our own hearts, and ſtir them up to the needful work of gratitude. (2.) God deſerves our heart, our whole heart; and every faithful ſoul grieves that he doth not more univerſally ſurrender it to his bleſſed ſervice. (3.) We are ſtrangely apt to forget God's benefits, and have much reaſon to be deeply humbled at all times, that we are ſo unduly affected with the ſenſe of them, and ſo little thankful for them.

2. He enumerates a variety of particulars, for which his ſoul was bound to bleſs and praiſe God. [1.] Who forgiveth all thine iniquities: great, numberleſs, aggravated as they have been, he forgives them through Jeſus, freely, fully, eternally; ſo that they ſhall never riſe up again to accuſe, or condemn us, in an hour of death or a day of judgment. [2.] Who healeth all thy diſeaſes. Sunk under a complication of miſeries is the fallen ſpirit; diſeaſed in every faculty; fatally ſick, beyond the power of human medicine to recover; but there is balm in Gilead, and a phyſician there. He who is able to forgive all our ſins, can heal all our ſpiritual maladies by the power of his effectual grace; and every redeemed ſoul feels this, in a meaſure, by bleſſed experience, and praiſes the divine phyſician. [3.] Who redeemeth thy life from deſtruction. Eternal ruin, becauſe of our ſins, awaited us, and hell yawned ready to receive the guilty wretch; but Jeſus interpoſed, paid the immenſe ranſom, ſtayed us from going down to the pit, and opened the gates of life and immortality to the loſt and periſhing. For this great redemption praiſe the Lord, O my ſoul! [4.] Who crowneth thee with loving-kindneſs and tender mercies; with all the infinite bleſſings contained in the everlaſting covenant, that, like a royal diadem, adorn the brows of every redeemed ſoul. [5.] Who ſatisfieth thy mouth with good things; ſo that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's. Good things of a temporal nature, health, proſperity, long life, and juvenile vigour, even to old age. Good things of a ſpiritual nature, ſatisfying the hungrings and thirſtings of the heart with thoſe rich ſupplies of righteouſneſs and grace in Jeſus, that enable us with vigour, delight, and zeal, to run the way of God's commandments; and when coldneſs and decay would creep upon us, he renews our ſtrength; ſo that in the livelineſs and activity of our ſouls, even in old age, we mount up with wings as eagles, Iſa. xl. 31.

6. [g] The LORD executeth righteouſneſs and judgment for all that are oppreſſed. 7. [h] He made known his ways unto Moſes, his acts unto the children of Iſrael. 8. [i] The LORD is merciful and gracious, ſlow to anger, and plenteous in mercy. 9. [k] He will not always chide: neither will he keep his anger for ever. 10. [l] He hath not dealt with us after our ſins: nor rewarded us according to our iniquities. 11. [m] For as the heaven is high above the earth: ſo great is his mercy toward them that fear him. 12. As far as the eaſt is from the weſt: ſo far hath he removed our tranſgreſſions from us. 13. [n] Like as a father pitieth his children: ſo the LORD pitieth them that fear him. 14. For he knoweth our frame: [o] he remembreth that we are duſt. 15. As for man, [p] his days are as graſs: [q] as a flower of the field, ſo he flouriſheth. 16. For the wind paſſeth over it, and it † is gone; and [r] the place thereof ſhall know it no more. 17. But the mercy of the LORD is from everlaſting to everlaſting upon them that fear him: and his righteouſneſs [s] unto children's children: 18. [t] To ſuch as keep his covenant, and to thoſe that remember his commandments to do them.

[g] Pſ. cxlvi. 7.
[h] Ib. cxlvii. 19.
[i] Ex. xxxiv. 6, 7. Num. xiv. 18. Deut. v. 10. Neh. ix. 17. Pſ. lxxxvi. 15. Jer. xxxii. 18.
[k] Pſ. xxx. 5. Iſa. lvii. 16. Jer. iii. 5. Mic. vii. 18.
[l] Ezra ix. 13.
[m] Eph. iii. 18.
[n] Mal. iii. 17.
[o] Pſ. lxxviii. 39.
[p] Ib. xc. 5. 1 Pet. i. 24.
[q] Job xiv. 1, 2. Jam. i. 10, 11.
† Heb. is not.
[r] Job vii. 10. & xx. 10.
[s] Exod. xx. 6.
[t] Deut. vii. 9.

v. 6—18. Not only his own mercies excited the pſalmiſt's praiſes, but he felt the kindneſs ſhown to others as done to himſelf.

1. He praiſes God for his general care over the poor and oppreſſed, v. 6. whoſe patron he was ever found, and whoſe wrongs, ſooner or later, he would vindicate.

2. He adores him for the peculiar favour ever ſhewn to his Iſrael, [1.] In revealing to them his mind and will; committing to them his lively oracles; in all the divinely-inſtituted ordinances of his worſhip, which he delivered to Moſes, inſtructing them in the way of ſalvation; and in all his acts of power and grace exerted for them, engaging their truſt in him, and love towards him. [2.] In his patience and pardoning mercy ſhown to his people, notwithſtanding their provocations. His nature is mercy, and his boſom the ſeat of tender compaſſion, v. 8. Slow to anger, he bears long even with the veſſels of wrath; and though provoked ſo greatly and ſo often by his own people, is ever ready to forgive: yea, when for our good he is compelled to chide, to viſit our offences with the rod, and our ſin with ſcourges, his paternal heart yearns over our ſufferings; he is in haſte to fall on the necks of his returning prodigals, and turn away from his wrathful indignation; to reſtore comfort to his mourners, and ſeal their pardon and peace with the kiſſes of his love, v. 9. Had we our deſerts indeed, we had long ſince lain down in everlaſting burnings; but far other have been his dealings with us, v. 10. His rich grace pardons our innumerable offences. High as the heavens are above the earth, ſo vaſt and boundleſs is his mercy; and far as the eaſt is from the weſt, ſo far hath he put away our iniquities: they are forgiven, yea forgotten; ſunk as a ſtone in the abyſs of his infinite love, and never to riſe up again, v. 11, 12. He knows our feeble frame, the weakneſs of our bodies, that would be cruſhed as the moth, if he laid for a moment his heavy hand upon us: the infirmity of our fleſh, ſo impotent to good, ſo prone to evil; and therefore he pities us, as the tendereſt father the child of his love, v. 13, 14. Note, (1.) If God's pity to us be ſo great, let us learn of him to exerciſe the like compaſſion towards each other. (2.) They who have a real ſenſe of their own deſerts, muſt ever ſtand amazed at themſelves that they are out of hell. (3.) God's pardons are free, full, everlaſting: the greateſt diſhonour we can ſhew him, is to diſtruſt his promiſes, and queſtion his grace. [3.] In his unchangeable faithfulneſs. Man is the creature of a day, a worm of earth, frail as the withering graſs, and paſſing as the fading flower: one ſharp blaſt diſhevels all its beauty, and ſtrews the ground with its ruins. So death diſſolves our mortal frame, and paſſing into the unſeen world, we are quickly forgotten in the duſt: but God is to everlaſting years the ſame, and his mercy towards his people enduring as his being. From everlaſting he hath choſen them, to everlaſting he will bleſs them; for not only through life will he be gracious to them, but in death he will be their comfort, extend his favour to their ſeed, and be in eternity their portion. Note, (1.) Nothing is a more humbling and profitable conſideration, than the ſenſe of our own vanity and mortality. (2.) God's love towards his people is for ever: where once his mercy hath been ſhown, it will be everlaſting mercy; for having loved his own, he loveth them unto the end.

3. The character of the people of God, towards whom this love and kindneſs is manifeſted, is ſet forth; or rather this mercy ſhewn them, engages their hearts to him. They fear him, v. 17. not with that fear that hath bondage, but with that filial fear which ſprings from the ſpirit of adoption. They keep his covenant; live upon the ineſtimably precious promiſes of it; make it all their ſalvation, and all their deſire; and renouncing every other hope and confidence, depend alone on the compleat fulfilment of it made in the perſon of their Redeemer, v. 18. And they withal remember his commandments to do them; faithful to their obligations, and deſiring to approve themſelves obedient children to the Father of Mercies.

19. The LORD hath prepared his throne in the heavens: and his kingdom ruleth over all. 20. [u] Bleſs the LORD, ye his angels, † that excel in ſtrength, [x] that do his commandments, hearkning unto the voice of his word. 21. Bleſs ye the LORD, all ye his hoſts, [y] ye miniſters of his that do his pleaſure. 22. Bleſs the LORD, all his works, in all places of his dominion: [z] bleſs the LORD, O my ſoul.

[u] Pſ. cxlviii. 2.
† Heb. Mighty in ſtrength. Pſ. lxxviii. 25.
[x] Mat. vi 10.
[y] Dan. vii. 9, 10. Heb. i. 14.
[z] Pſ. civ. 1, 35.

v. 19—22. We have here,

1. God's eternal kingdom and glory ſet forth as an engagement to univerſal adoration of him. In heaven his radiant throne is placed, prepared, or eſtabliſhed, fixed and immoveable, and his dominion univerſal; for his kingdom ruleth over all; angels, men, yea devils, and all in heaven, earth, and hell, are ſubject to his government, and muſt ſubmit to his diſpoſals.

2. A call to render to this glorious Jehovah the univerſal praiſe due unto his name. [1.] Let the brighteſt and nobleſt creatures lead the way, and angels and archangels, his waiting hoſts, his attendant miniſters, mighty in power to fulfil God's high beheſts, deep in attention to his commanding word, let them begin the ſong, and bleſs their great Creator. [2.] Let all the hoſts of earth, the great congregation of the redeemed, unite their hearts and voices in his praiſe; eſpecially his miniſters of flame, whom he hath put in truſt with his goſpel, and ſent to ſpread the knowledge of his grace and good will to men, v. 21. [3.] Let all his works ſpeak forth his glory; the heavens above, with all their ſhining orbs; the world beneath, with every creature, animate or inanimate, that moves or grows, or dwells in air, earth, or ſea, all, all muſt learn to bleſs and praiſe. [4.] Shall then my ſoul, O Lord, alone be ſolitary, and ſilent amidſt the univerſal ſhout of thankſgiving? No; bleſs the Lord, O my ſoul! every day, ſtill increaſing, more conſtant, more enlarged, whilſt life and breath endures, may my boſom ſwell with gratitude, my lips be filled with praiſe, the earneſt and beginning of thoſe unceaſing praiſes which ſhall be my everlaſting employment, and my unutterable joy in the regions of eternal bliſs and glory.

PSALM CIV.

The object of the pſalmiſt's praiſes is Jeſus, the great author of all. (Compare ver. 5. with Heb. i. 7.) The pſalm contains a moſt ſublime deſcription of his works, his greatneſs, and his glory. It ſets forth, 1. The ſplendor of his majeſty in the upper world, ver. 1—4. 2. The creation of the ſea, and the dry land, ver. 5—9. 3. The proviſion he makes for the maintenance of all the creatures according to their nature, ver. 10—18, and again, ver. 27, 28. 4. The regular courſe of the ſun and moon, ver. 19—24. 5. The furniture of the ſea, ver. 25, 26. 6. His ſovereign power over all the creatures, ver. 29—32. And, laſtly, he concludes with a pleaſant and firm reſolution to continue praiſing him, ver. 33—35. With which we ſhould heartily join in ſinging this pſalm.

1. BLESS the LORD, O my ſoul: O LORD, my God, thou art very great, [a] thou art clothed with honour and majeſty. 2. [b] Who covereſt thyſelf with light, as with a garment: [c] who ſtretcheſt out the heavens like a curtain. 3. [d] Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters, [e] who maketh the clouds his chariot, [f] who walketh upon the wings of the wind. 4. [g] Who maketh his angels ſpirits: his miniſters a flaming fire. 5. † [h] Who laid the foundations of the earth, that it ſhould not be removed for ever. 6. [i] Thou coveredſt it with the deep as with a garment: the waters ſtood above the mountains. 7. [k] At thy rebuke they fled: at the voice of thy thunder they haſted away. 8. They go up by the mountains: they go down by the valleys unto the place which thou haſt founded for them. 9. [l] Thou haſt ſet a bound that they may not paſs over: [m] that they turn not again to cover the earth.

[a] Pſ. xciii.
[b] Dan. vii. 9.
[c] Iſa. xl. 22. & xlv. 12.
[d] Amos ix. 6.
[e] Iſa. xix. 1.
[f] Pſ. xviii. 10.
[g] Heb. i. 14.
† Heb. He hath founded the earth upon her baſes.
[h] Job xxvi. 7. & xxxviii. 4. Pſ. xxiv. 2. & cxxxvi. 6.
[i] Gen. vii. 19.
[k] Gen. viii. 1.
[l] Pſ. xxxiii. 7. Jer. v. 22.
[m] Gen. ix. 11, 15.

v. 1—9. One page of the holy ſcriptures contains more of the true ſublime, than is to be found in all the volumes of poets and philoſophers, of which this pſalm is a ſtriking inſtance, where majeſty of diction, vaſtneſs of idea, and the tranſcendantly dazzling brightneſs of the images, conſpire to fill the ſoul with ſacred reverence and awe of the Divine Majeſty, whoſe glory paſſes before us.

1. The pſalmiſt calls upon his own ſoul to awake, to praiſe Jehovah, Jeſus; exceeding great in his divine perſon; in his amazing works of creation, providence, and grace; in his diſtinguiſhed offices; in ſelf-exiſtent glory, clothed with majeſty and honour; the object of univerſal adoration in earth and heaven; and what above all engages the heart, my God, in all whoſe greatneſs and glory I am intereſted.

2. He deſcribes the exceeding greatneſs of his covenant God, before whoſe majeſtic preſence all human grandeur vaniſhes, as the glow-worm before the meridian ſun. What monarch ever appeared ſo clothed, ſo enthroned, ſo attended? Light itſelf is his garment, ſo bright and dazzling, that even angels themſelves veil their faces when they approach his footſtool, unable to bear the intolerable blaze. The vaſte expanſe of heaven is the curtain of his pavilion, as eaſily ſtretched out at his word, and, when he pleaſes, as inſtantly rolled together, v. 2. Above the firmament his radiant throne is fixed; and on thoſe waters that float in the ſkies are the beams of his chambers laid. If he comes forth, the clouds his chariots wait, and he walketh on the wings of the wind; ſo ſwift to ſuccour his people, or pour vengeance on their foes, v. 3. Bright angels, miniſters of flame, ſpirits diſencumbered from the fetters of material ſubſtance, ſtand ready, the creatures of his hand and the willing ſervants of his pleaſure, v. 4. Fixed by him on a baſis immoveable, the ſolid earth abides, v. 6. The vaſt abyſs of waters, that at creation covered it, at his command haſted to the hollow deep, fled over the mountains, and through the vallies retired to their appointed places: there ſhut up in bounds they cannot paſs, the billows toſs themſelves in vain; ſince God hath ſaid, Hitherto ſhalt thou come, and no further, and here ſhall thy proud waves be ſtayed. Meditate, my ſoul, on theſe wonders of power, and ceaſeleſs adore this glorious Jehovah.

10. He ſendeth the ſprings into the valleys, which run among the hills. 11. They give drink to every beaſt of the field: the wild aſſes quench their thirſt. 12. By them ſhall the fowls of the heaven have their habitation, which † ſing among the branches. 13. [n] He watereth the hills from his chambers: [o] the earth is ſatiſfied with the fruit of thy works. 14. [p] He cauſeth the graſs to grow for the cattle, and herb for the ſervice of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth: 15. And [q] wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to ſhine, and bread which ſtrengtheneth man's heart. 16. The trees of the LORD are full of ſap: the cedars of Lebanon [r] which he hath planted. 17. Where the birds make their neſts: as for the ſtork, the fir-trees are her houſe. 18. The high hills are a refuge for the wild goats, and the rocks for the conies.

† Heb. Give a voice.
[n] Pſ. cxlvii. 8.
[o] Ibid. lxv. 9.
[p] Gen. i. 29, 30. & iii. 18. & ix. 3.
[q] Judg. ix. 13. Pſal. xxiii. 5. Prov. xxxi. 6, 7.
[r] Num. xxiv. 6.

v. 10—18. Having mentioned the more auguſt diſplays of the Divine Majeſty in heaven and earth, the pſalmiſt paſſes on to conſider his bountiful providential care over the world, and the creatures in it, the work of his hands.

1. He ſends his rain from the clouds, his chambers, to fill the vaſt reſervoirs in the hills and mountains, from whence the ſprings burſt forth, and deſcend into the vallies beneath, v. 10. affording grateful refreſhment to the thirſty cattle, and at which even the wild aſſes quench their thirſt. Shall God then ſo kindly relieve the wants of creatures ſo worthleſs; and can we dare diſtruſt him, or fear he will let us lack?

2. By the ſides of theſe flowing ſtreams the birds take up their grateful abode, and on the branches ſing, as if attempting to articulate thankſgiving for the proviſion God hath made. Shall they ſing, and man be ſilent? forbid it, gratitude!

3. By theſe kind rains alſo the earth impregnated, teems with vegetative life, well-pleaſed to bear thoſe fruits which God cauſes to ſpring forth, v. 13. graſs for the cattle, and herb for the ſervice of man, for food or phyſic. A rich proviſion, not only for neceſſity but delight: corn, wine, and oil, to ſtrengthen his body, to chear his ſpirits, and beautify his countenance, v. 15. Note, (1.) Since we are daily fed by God's bounty, it becomes us to be thankful for the proviſion, and dependant on his providence. (2.) If God hath given us ſo many good things, and, far from tantalizing us merely with the ſight, bids us enjoy his bleſſings, let us beware we do not by our abuſe turn that into our curſe, which was deſigned for our comfort.

4. The trees, as well as animals, are fed with their proper nouriſhment: filled with ſap, under God's care they grow; his hand planted them, and he waters them with the dew of heaven. Such are his ſaints, planted by his grace, and watered with heavenly influences; full of ſap and ſpiritual life within; increaſing with the increaſe of God; tall as the cedars, and bringing forth the fruits of righteouſneſs, which are by Jeſus Chriſt to the praiſe and glory of God.

5. By ſtrange inſtinct the birds are taught to build their neſts on the lofty trees, as the place moſt ſuitable and ſafe, v. 17. and the wild goats, ſenſible of their defenceleſs ſtate, chuſe the high hills and precipices for their abode and refuge; and the feeble and fearful rabbits burrow under the rocks for their ſhelter, v. 18. Shall theſe all ſhew wiſdom in their choice, and ſhall we be the only fools in nature? Inſtead of flying to Jeſus as our refuge, and making him our munition of rocks, ſhall we neglect his great ſalvation, and careleſsly ſtand expoſed to every ſpiritual enemy, till we fall a prey to the deſtroyer?

19. [s] He appointeth the moon for ſeaſons; the ſun knoweth his going down. 20. [t] Thou makeſt darkneſs, and it is night: wherein all the beaſts of the foreſt † do creep forth. 21. [u] The young lions roar after their prey, and ſeek their meat from God. 22. The ſun ariſeth, they gather themſelves together, and lay them down in their dens. 23. Man goeth forth to his work, and to his labour until the evening. 24. [x] O LORD, how manifold are thy works! in wiſdom haſt thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches. 25. So is this great and wide ſea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both ſmall and great beaſts. 26. There go the ſhips: there is that leviathan, whom thou haſt ‡ made to play therein. 27. [y] Theſe wait all upon thee: that thou mayſt give them their meat in due ſeaſon. 28. That thou giveſt them, they gather: thou openeſt thine hand, they are filled with good. 29. Thou hideſt thy face, they are troubled; [z] thou takeſt away their breath, they die, and return to their duſt. 30. [a] Thou ſendeſt forth thy ſpirit, they are created: and thou reneweſt the face of the earth.

[s] Gen. i. 14.
[t] Iſa. xlv. 7.
† Or, do trample on the foreſt.
[u] Job xxxviii. 39. Joel i. 20.
[x] Prov. iii. 19.
‡ Heb. Formed.
[y] Pſ. cxlv. 15. & cxlvii. 9.
[z] Job. xxxiv. 14, 15. Pſ. cxlvi. 4. Eccleſ. xii. 7.
[a] Iſa. xxxii. 15. Ezek. xxxvii. 9.

v. 19—30. New wonders of God's power and providence, afford new matter for our contemplation and praiſe.

1. The day and night, and the luminaries which preſide over them, are the work of his hands: if the ſun knoweth his ſtated ſeaſons of revolution, and the moon in regular order fills and empties her orb with light, it is by Divine appointment, and with the wiſeſt purpoſes. The night, which affords welcome repoſe to man, emboldens the creatures, on whom the fear of man is impreſſed, to ariſe in queſt of food; the lions roaring, roam about the foreſt, and ſeek their meat from God who feedeth them, and when the ſun begins to rear his head, they return again to their dens: the welcome morning breaks, and ſlumbering man ariſes; the day is his time for labour, till the ſhadows of the evening warn him to retire, and recruit with repoſe his exhauſted ſtrength for the labours of another day. Note, (1.) If God at the lion's roar provides fleſh for his hunger, can it be poſſible his own children ſhould cry to him and be refuſed bread? (2.) In the night of deſertion and temptation the roaring lion, Satan, fails not to endeavour to ſcare the poor diſtreſſed ſoul: but lo! the morning breaks, and before the beams of the ſun of righteouſneſs our fears are diſpelled, and our enemy driven away. (3.) The day is for labour; a ſluggard is an offence to the ſun, that waſtes on him his glorious light. (4.) The ſhadows of the evening of death will be welcome to thoſe who have, through Divine grace, finiſhed the work God had given them to do.

2. The earth with all its riches, and the ſea with all its ſwarms of inhabitants, diſplay the wiſdom and power of the great Creator; there go the ſhips, tranſporting to other lands the various produce of different climes; and there fearleſs plays on the ſurface the vaſt leviathan; whilſt all the watery brood that ſwim or creep, both ſmall and great, depend on their Maker's hand, are fed from day to day, the leaſt not diſregarded, the largeſt liberally ſupplied, and all filled with good, receiving the portion ſuited to their wants. Shall men then be leſs careful to ſeek their meat from God, or dare impatiently murmur againſt the proviſion made for them?

3. In his hands they are to live or die; if he with-holds their ſupplies, they pine with hunger; if he command the breath he gave to depart, they return to their duſt. Yet, though death ſeems to threaten univerſal deſolation, a new creation in ſucceſſion riſes, no ſpecies of animals fails; the earth is repleniſhed with inhabitants, renewed daily by the riſing ſun, and annually by the returning ſpring.

4. Well might theſe views make the pious pſalmiſt cry out, O Lord, how manifold are thy works! ſo vaſt and various, and withal ſo exquiſitely finiſhed; in wiſdom haſt thou made them all: the works of man will hardly bear inſpection, and the teleſcopic eye deſcries the fouleſt flaws in the moſt finiſhed pieces; but here examination raiſes the wonder, all is executed beyond the power of imagination to add thereto, or the poſſibility of finding fault: as for God, his work is perfect.

31. The glory of the LORD ſhall † endure for ever: the LORD ſhall rejoice in his works. 32. He looketh on the earth, and it trembleth; [b] he toucheth the hills, and they ſmoke. 33. [c] I will ſing unto the LORD as long as I live: I will ſing praiſe unto my God, while I have my being. 34. My meditation of him ſhall be ſweet: I will be glad in the LORD. 35. Let the ſinners be conſumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more: bleſs thou the LORD, O my ſoul. ‡ Praiſe ye the LORD.

† Heb. be.
[b] Pſ. cxliv. 5.
[c] Pſ. lxiii. 4. & cxlvi. 2.
‡ Heb. Hallelujah. Rev. xix. 1, 3.

v. 31—35. We have here,

1. The pſalmiſt's reſolution, whilſt he hath a being, to give praiſe unto God for all he is in himſelf, and for the wonders he hath wrought. His glory is everlaſting; it will appear not only through time, but to eternity, and ſaints and angels will for ever adore him. The Lord ſhall rejoice in his works, well-pleaſed on the ſurvey; for all he doth, is well done: and, if he pleaſed, with one frown he could diſſolve all created nature. He looketh on the earth, and it trembleth, convulſed with earthquakes: he toucheth the hills, and ſtrait the fire kindles, they ſmoke, and burſt forth in flames. Moſt worthy therefore is he to be praiſed, who is ſo greatly to be feared. Let the ſinner tremble, who obſtinately refuſes, or careleſsly neglects, to give him the glory due unto his name. If but a touch, a frown, is ſo terrible, how will the guilty ſoul endure the fierceneſs of his wrath, and the lighting down of his indignation?

2. He determines with delight to meditate continually on all his wondrous works: his works of providence, and his yet more pleaſing works of redemption and grace; the ſweeteſt ſubject that can engage the believer's thoughts; and as the bleſt effect of ſuch contemplation, I will be glad in in the Lord; the reflections will fill his ſoul with joy, and his lips with praiſe to this divine and adored Jeſus.

3. He foreſees the end of the wicked, and prays for the appearing of God's glory in their deſtruction. Let the ſinners, who obſtinately reject God's government, and rob him of his glory, be conſumed out of the earth, by the ſtroke of judgment, and the brightneſs of the Saviour's coming; and let the wicked, whoſe ways are one continued ſcene of impiety and iniquity, be no more; cut off with everlaſting deſtruction from the preſence of the Lord. Note, The hour is near, when all God's patience with the ungodly ſhall have an end, and ruin terrible and eternal overtake them.

4. He concludes with calling on his own ſoul to bleſs the Lord for his judgments on the wicked, and invites all God's people to join his praiſes. Here firſt in the pſalms the word Hallelujah occurs, and this on occaſion of the deſtruction of the ungodly. It is in the New Teſtament only found in Rev. xix. 1—6. where it is uſed on a like occaſion. Note, The damnation of the finally impenitent will redound to God's glory, as well as the ſalvation of the faithful; and both afford matter for his ſaints everlaſting praiſes.

PSALM CV.

In the foregoing pſalm we are taught to praiſe God for his wondrous works of common providence, with reference to the world in general. In this we are directed to praiſe him for his ſpecial favours to his church. Here is the preface, ver. 1—7. and the hiſtory of the church in ſeveral articles. 1. God's covenant with the patriarchs, ver. 8—11. 2. His care of them while they were ſtrangers, ver. 12—15. 3. His raiſing up Joſeph to be the ſhepherd and ſtone of Iſrael, ver. 16—22. 4. The increaſe of Iſrael in Egypt, and their deliverance out of Egypt, ver. 23—38. 5. The care he took of them in the wilderneſs, and their ſettlement in Canaan, ver. 39—45.

1. O give

1. [a] O Give thanks unto the LORD: call upon his name: [b] make known his deeds among the people.
2. Sing unto him, ſing pſalms unto him: [c] talk ye of all his wondrous works. 3. Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that ſeek the LORD.
4. Seek the LORD and his ſtrength, ſeek his face evermore.
5. [d] Remember his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth.
6. [e] O ye ſeed of Abraham his ſervant, ye children of Jacob his choſen. 7. He is the LORD our God, [f] his judgments are in all the earth.

[a] 1 Chron. xvi. 8. Iſa. xii. 4.
[b] Jer. li. 10.
[c] Pſ. cxlv. 6, 11.
[d] Ibid. lxxvii. 11.
[e] 1 Chron. xvi. 13.
[f] Iſa. xxvi. 9.

v. 1—7. Before the Pſalmiſt enters on his ſubject, he prefaces his diſcourſe with an exhortation to all around him.

1. To exalt and magnify the great and glorious God, and this in a variety of ways. Give him thanks for all his mercies paſt and preſent, and all his promiſes ſo rich and gracious. Call upon his name in humble faith, aſſured of being heard and anſwered: make known his deeds, what great things he hath done for your ſouls and bodies, to encourage the hope, and excite the praiſes of all the faithful: talk of all his wondrous works, let it be the delightful daily ſubject of your converſation. Sing unto him, ſing pſalms unto him, in tongue as well as heart rejoice, ye that ſeek the Lord, as the grand object of your deſires, and the rock of your hopes. Yea, glory in his holy name, renouncing all glorying in yourſelves, to make mention only of his ineſtimably precious righteouſneſs and grace. Seek the Lord and his ſtrength, who alone can enable you to ſtand againſt your ſpiritual foes, and overcome them: ſeek his face evermore in ceaſeleſs prayer in this world, that you may behold the light of his countenance for ever in a better.

2. Abundant reaſon there is why we ſhould thus do, if we conſider, (1.) His paſt mercies, v. 5. works of providence and grace, wonderful and great, ſuch as Iſrael experienced in Egypt and the deſert, and as the people of God daily find in their journey through this world's wilderneſs; and the judgments of his mouth, his revealed word, according to which we muſt finally be judged, and which will bring upon us the heavieſt condemnation, if we forget or neglect the great ſalvation therein contained. (2.) Our relation to him, as the ſeed of Abraham his ſervant, peculiarly honoured in that title, and whoſe poſterity ſhould copy his bright example; the children of Jacob his choſen; elect, according to the fore-knowledge of God, as Jacob was, and thereby obliged, as obedient children, to approve ourſelves to him, who hath choſen us from the beginning unto ſalvation. (3.) Our intereſt in him, as the Lord our God, our Jehovah, all-ſufficient to ſupply every want of his people, worthy their moſt enlarged praiſe; and to engage them thereunto, offering himſelf to be their portion and exceeding great reward. (4.) His univerſal government; his judgments are in all the earth, and as the God of all the earth, he is moſt worthy to be obeyed and adored by all, and for ever: or it may refer to the judgments of his vengeance on the wicked, in the flood, in the deſtruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, or the plagues of Egypt, the fame of which were ſpread abroad, and God's juſtice and holineſs therein manifeſted, for which praiſe ſhould be aſcribed to him.

8. He hath remembred his covenant for ever, the word which he commanded to a thouſand generations.
9. [g] Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Iſaac: 10. And confirmed the ſame unto Jacob for a law, and to Iſrael for an everlaſting covenant:
11. Saying, [h] Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, † the lot of your inheritance. 12. [i] When they were but a few men in number: yea, very few, [k] and ſtrangers in it. 13. When they went from one nation to another, from one kingdom to another people. 14. [l] He ſuffered no man to do them wrong: yea, [m] he reproved kings for their ſakes: 15. Saying, Touch not mine [n] anointed, and do [o] my prophets no harm. 16. Moreover, [p] he called for a famine upon the land: he brake the whole [q] ſtaff of bread. 17. [r] He ſent a man before them, [s] even Joſeph, who was ſold for a ſervant. 18. [t] Whoſe feet they hurt with fetters: ‡ he was laid in iron. 19. Until the time that his word came: the word of the LORD tried him. 20. [u] The king ſent and looſed him: even the ruler of the people, and let him go free. 21. [x] He made him lord of his houſe, and ruler of all his ‖ ſubſtance:
22. To bind his princes at his pleaſure: and teach his ſenators wiſdom. 23. [y] Iſrael alſo came into Egypt: and Jacob ſojourned in the land of Ham. 24.
And [z] he increaſed his people greatly: and made them ſtronger than their enemies.

[g] Gen. xvii. 2. & xxii. 16, &c. & xxvi. 3. & xxviii. 13. & xxxv. 11. Luke i. 73. Heb. vi. 17.
[h] Gen. xiii. 15. & xv. 18.
† Heb. The cord. Deut. xxxii. 9.
[i] Gen. xxxiv. 30. Deut. vii. 7. & xxvi. 5.
[k] Heb. xi. 9.
[l] Gen. xxxv. 5.
[m] Ibid. xii. 17. & xx. 3, 7.
[n] 1 John ii. 27.
[o] Gen. xx. 7.
[p] Ibid. xli. 54.
[q] Lev. xxvi. 26. Iſa. iii. 1. Ezek. iv. 16.
[r] Gen. xlv. 5. & l. 20.
[s] Gen. xxxvii. 28.
[t] Ibid. xxxix. 20. & xl. 15.
‡ Heb. His ſoul.
[u] Gen. xli. 14.
[x] Ibid. xl. 40.
‖ Or poſſeſſion.
[y] Gen. xlvi. 6. Pſ. lxxviii. 51.
[z] Exod. i. 7.

v. 8—24. The grand ſubject of the Pſalmiſt's thankſgiving is the everlaſting covenant eſtabliſhed in Chriſt Jeſus, from eternity, and ſure to all his ſpiritual ſeed to the lateſt ages, even to a thouſand generations, v. 8.

1. He revealed it to Abraham, confirmed it with an oath to him and his ſeed Iſaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the ſame promiſes; and as the type of the eternal inheritance deſigned for his ſpiritual children, aſſured him of the poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan, as the inheritance of his natural poſterity.

2. He fulfilled the promiſe in oppoſition to all human appearances, notwithſtanding the difficulties which ſeemed inſurmountable. They were few, very few; ſtrangers, not poſſeſſed of a foot of land: driven from place to place, ſojourning ſometimes in Egypt, ſometimes in Philiſtia, on account of the famine; but in all their wandrings, ſtill Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob experienced the Divine protection; reſtrained by Divine power, none dared lift their hand to hurt them, and even kings are reproved, Gen. xii. 17. xx. 6. and warned how dangerous it would be to touch God's anointed ones, or harm his prophets. Note, (1.) Whatever difficulties oppoſe God's promiſes they will vaniſh; when God will work, none can lett it. (2.) Few, very few, in every age are the faithful; yet is it the Father's good pleaſure to give them the kingdom. (3.) The people of God are indeed ſtrangers and pilgrims upon earth, but God hath prepared for them a city: when their wandrings here below are ended, there remaineth for them an eternal reſt. (4.) God's prophets are his peculiar care; he that toucheth them, toucheth the apple of his eye, ſo jealous is he to vindicate their wrongs.

3. In the extraordinary caſe of Joſeph, God, in a moſt aſtoniſhingly providential manner, opened a way for the accompliſhment of his deſigns of mercy towards them. He ſent a famine on the land of Canaan, and brake the ſtaff of bread, ver. 17. ſo that inſtant death and utter deſtruction ſeemed to threaten the holy ſeed; but he had made proviſion for their ſuſtenance, by means of Joſeph, whom though his envious brethren had wickedly ſold for a ſlave, God had deſigned to ſend as their deliverer, after having experienced the deepeſt diſtreſſes, under the moſt cruel and unjuſt accuſations of an enraged miſtreſs, whoſe embraces he rejected, doomed to the loweſt dungeon, bound in fetters of iron, and loaded with the moſt ignominious reproaches, but all wrought together for his good; when his faith and patience had been tried, God's word came to him, and divinely taught to interpret the dreams of his fellow-priſoners, the fame reached Pharoah's court, and he ſought the inſpired priſoner. Convinced by his interpretation of his dreams, that God's ſpirit dwelt in him, Gen. xli. 38. he looſed his bands, and vindicated his injured innocence from the accuſations laid againſt him, v. 20. advanced him to the higheſt poſt in his kingdom; delegated to him the exerciſe of his royal power to enact laws which all, even the greateſt muſt obey; and, wiſer than the aged ſenators, appointed him their teacher, whence probably flowed the ſuperior wiſdom of the Egyptians. By him, his aged father and all his family were brought to Egypt, and in the land of Goſhen richly provided for during the days of famine; where they increaſed exceedingly, and God's promiſes began to take effect. Note, (1.) Myſterious are the ways of Providence. When all things ſeem moſt againſt us, they are often really working for our good. (2.) Joſeph in his humiliation and exaltation is the type of Jeſus, whoſe ſufferings far exceeded, and whoſe glory infinitely excelleth. (3.) In every advancement we muſt remember whoſe hand hath raiſed us, and that we only then adorn our ſtation, when we ſeek to make it ſubſervient to the advancement of his kingdom and glory. (4.) Whatever calumnies and ſufferings the ſaints of God endure, when their faith is tried, they ſhall be diſcharged with honour. (5.) God's church will never want a friend; he can raiſe them protectors where they leaſt expect to find favour. (6.) We are ſojourners on earth, as Jacob in that ſtrange land: this is not our home nor our reſt; nay, though never ſo much increaſed in worldly goods, we would not ſit here below, but look for our promiſed Canaan, and long for our heavenly inheritance.

25. [a] He turned their heart to hate his people, to deal ſubtilly with his ſervants. 26. [b] He ſent Moſes his ſervant, and Aaron whom he had choſen. 27. [c] They ſhewed † his ſigns among them, and wonders in the land of Ham. 28. [d] He ſent darkneſs, and made it dark: and [e] they rebelled not againſt his word. 29. [f]
He turned their waters into blood, and ſlew their fiſh.
30. [g] Their land brought forth frogs in abundance, in the chambers of their kings. 31. [h] He ſpake, and there came divers ſorts of flies, and lice in all their coaſts.
32. [i] He gave them hail for rain: and flaming fire in their land. 33. [k] He ſmote their vines alſo and their figtrees:
and brake the trees of their coaſts. 34. [l] He ſpake, and the locuſts came: and caterpillars, and that without number. 35. And did eat up all the herbs in their land: and devoured the fruit of their ground.

[a] Exod. i. 8, &c.
[b] Ibid. iii. 10. & iv. 12, 14.
[c] Exod. vii. 9. Pſ. lxxviii. 43, &c.
† Heb. Words of his ſigns.
[d] Exod. x. 22.
[e] Pſ. xcix. 7.
[f] Exod. vii. 20.
[g] Ibid. viii. 6.
[h] Ibid. viii. 17, 24.
[i] Ibid. ix. 23.
[k] Pſ. lxxviii. 47.
[l] Exod. x. 4, 13.

36. [m] He ſmote alſo all the firſt-born in their land: [n] the chief of all their ſtrength. 37. [o] He brought them forth alſo with ſilver and gold: and there was not one feeble perſon among their tribes. 38. [p] Egypt was glad when they departed: for the fear of them fell upon them.
39. [q] He ſpread a cloud for a covering: and fire to give light in the night. 40. [r] The people aſked, and he brought quails: [s] and ſatisfied them with the bread of heaven. 41. [t] He opened the rock, and the waters guſhed out, they ran in the dry places like a river. 42.
For he remembred [u] his holy promiſe, and Abraham his ſervant. 43. And he brought forth his people with joy, and his choſen with ‡ gladneſs: 44. [x] And gave them the lands of the heathen: and they inherited the labour of the people: 45. [y] That they might obſerve his ſtatutes, and keep his laws. [z] Praiſe ye the LORD.

[m] Ex. xii. 29. Pſ. lxxviii. 51.
[n] Gen. xlix. 3.
[o] Ex. xii. 35.
[p] Ibid. xii. 33.
[q] Ibid. xiii. 21.
[r] Ibid. xvi. 12.
[s] Pſ. lxxviii. 24, 25.
[t] Exod xvii. 6. Num. xx. 11. Pſ. lxxviii. 16. 1 Cor. x. 4.
[u] Gen. xv. 14. Exod. ii. 24.
‡ Heb. Singing.
[x] Deut. vi. 10, 11. Joſh. iii. 17.
[y] Deut. iv. 1, 40.
[z] Pſ. civ. 35.

v. 25—45. No ſooner became Iſrael a nation, than jealouſy at their increaſe aroſe in the heart of the Egyptians. God no longer reſtraining the native enmity of their minds, with cruelty and craft they ſought to deſtroy his people, but God was with them, and delivered them.

1. He ſent Moſes and Aaron to ſhew his ſigns, or the words of his ſigns, his miracles, accompanied with their explication, and they rebelled not againſt his word, no fear of Pharoah, nor diſtruſt of the Divine power accompanying them, nor pity for the Egyptians prevented the faithful execution of their commiſſion. Note, When God's work is to be done, no danger or difficulties muſt deter us.

2. His terrible plagues overtook their perſecutors. Thick darkneſs, which might be felt, covered them, v. 28. their waters became blood, their fiſh died, v. 29. the loathſome frogs filled even their houſes, v. 30. flies ſwarm around them, and lice torment them, v. 31. The battering hail broke down their trees, ſpoiled their vines, and the conſuming fire devoured around, v. 32, 33. The locuſts obſcured the ſkies, and the caterpillars conſumed every green thing the hail had left, v. 34. At laſt death, on his pale horſe, ſtalked through the land, and every houſe in bitterneſs lamented their firſt-born ſlain, v. 36. Who can ſtand before this holy Lord God? how fearful a thing to fall into his hands! Let us tremble before him, and never provoke, by our impenitence and hardneſs of heart, his intolerable wrath.

3. God enriched, as well as releaſed them with the ſpoils of the Egyptians. In haſte to diſmiſs them, they gladly gave them all they required, gold and ſilver; the wages they had indeed earned by long ſervitude, which God will now have repaid. Notwithſtanding their hard ſervitude, and dwelling in the midſt of a nation plagued with ſo many diſeaſes and deaths, there was not a feeble perſon among their tribes, all vigorous, ſtrong, healthy, and abounding with riches. Terrified with what they had felt, the Egyptians were glad of their departure, and honourably diſmiſſed thoſe whom they had treated with ſuch ignominy and ſeverity, v. 38. and Iſrael, happy in their deliverance, now turned the groanings of their ſervitude into ſongs of exultation and triumph. And ſuch changes ſtill doth the Lord often make in the ſtate of his afflicted people even here, turning their wants into abundance, their ſhame to honour, their mourning into gladneſs; and if not before, at death at leaſt, they ſhall be brought forth from the houſe of their priſon, and everlaſting joy be upon their heads.

4. He preſerved, protected, and provided for them richly, as he had reſcued them wonderfully. Over them he ſpread a cloud by day, to defend them from the ſultry beams: by night, the pillar of fire gave them light. He ſpread a table for them in the wilderneſs, furniſhed them with bread from heaven, and at their prayer added the moſt delicious fowls to their repaſt; whilſt by a continual miracle, the waters guſhing from the rock, followed them to ſlake their thirſt, amidſt the burning ſands, v. 39, 41. Note, With ſuch kind care are all the Iſrael of God ſtill watched over, in their journey through the wilderneſs of the world to the heavenly Canaan. Jeſus, their cloud, ſhelters them from the fierce wrath of God; their fire, he lightens their darkneſs in the night of deſertion and temptation, and warms their hearts when ſunk under diſcouragement. He is the bread from heaven, who ſtill gives life to his people, and on him, by faith, they daily feed, and find the ſweeteſt nouriſhment to their ſouls. He is the rock of living waters, where the thirſty ſinner may come and freely drink in conſolations, as out of a river.

5. He conducted them ſafe to the land of Canaan, the inheritance aſſigned to Abraham, and now poſſeſſed in virtue of that grant, by his poſterity, the heirs of the promiſe made unto their fathers. God is faithful; however long he may ſeem in the fulfilment of his word, the iſſue is certain: may we with faith and patience wait for it!

6. All this God did; not for their deſerts, but for the ſake of his covenant made to Abraham, and to prove them, whether ſuch amazing mercies would awaken their gratitude, and engage them to obſerve his ſtatutes, and keep his laws. Thus ſtill it is not for our worthineſs, but for the ſake of the covenant eſtabliſhed with Jeſus, that God ſhews reſpect to us vile ſinners; and highly it becomes us to teſtify our ſenſe of ſuch goodneſs, by yielding up to him ourſelves, our bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits, to ſerve him with all fidelity in the goſpel of his dear ſon. And when we do ſo, we ſhall eminently fulfil the word of exhortation with which the Pſalmiſt concludes, Praiſe ye the Lord, our lives, as well as lips, ſhewing forth his glory and our gratitude.

PSALM CVI.

The foregoing pſalm was a hiſtory of God's goodneſs to Iſrael: this is a hiſtory of their rebellions and provocations, and yet it begins and ends with hallelujah; for even ſorrow for ſin muſt not put us out of tune for praiſing God. In this pſalm we have, 1. The preface to the narrative ſpeaking honour to God, ver. 1, 2. comfort to the ſaints, ver. 3. and the deſire of the faithful toward's God's favour, ver. 4, 5. 2. The narrative itſelf of the ſins of Iſrael, aggravated by the great things God did for them, an account of which is intermixed. Their provocations at the Red ſea, ver. 6—12. Luſting, ver. 13—15. Mutinyings ver. 16—18. Worſhipping the golden calf, ver. 19—23. Murmuring, ver. 24—37. Joining themſelves to Baal-peor, ver. 28—31. Quarrelling with Moſes, ver. 32, 33. Incorporating themſelves with the nations of Canaan, ver. 34—39. To which is added an account how God had rebuked them for their ſins, and yet ſaved them from ruin, ver. 40—46. 3. The concluſion of the pſalm with prayer and praiſe, ver. 47, 48.

1. [a] PRaiſe ye the LORD, [b] O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever. 2. Who can utter the mighty acts of the LORD? who can ſhew forth all his praiſe? 3. Bleſſed are they that keep judgment: and he that doth righteouſneſs [c] at all times. 4. [d] Remember me, O LORD, with the favour that thou beareſt unto thy people: O viſit me with thy ſalvation: 5. That I may ſee the good of thy choſen, that I may rejoice in the glad-neſs of thy nation: that I may glory with thine inheritance.

[a] Pſ. civ. 35.
[b] 1 Chron. xvi. 34. Pſ. cvii. 1. & cxviii. 1. & cxxxvi. 1.
[c] Acts xxiv. 16.
[d] Pſ. cxix. 132.

v. 1—5. This pſalm begins as the foregoing concluded, with Hallelujah, for praiſe is always comely; and amidſt every complaint we have to make, it becometh well the juſt to be thankful.

1. The Pſalmiſt calls on us to bleſs God, for he is good, eſſentially ſo in himſelf, and manifeſting it to us in acts of kindneſs ſo ſurpaſſing great: for his mercy endureth for ever, from everlaſting to everlaſting his people will experience his regard, and therefore are bound to render him the tribute of praiſe. Though who can utter the mighty acts of the Lord, recount the innumerable inſtances of his kindneſs, and wondrous interpoſition? who can ſhew forth all his praiſe? alas! our utmoſt efforts come infinitely ſhort, and the beſt of our ſongs are ſcarçe the liſpings of infancy.

2. He pronounces a bleſſing on God's faithful people. Bleſſed are they that keep judgment, make God's word their rule, and deſire to walk according thereunto, and he that doth righteouſneſs at all times, placing continually his ſole dependance for acceptance with God on the righteouſneſs of Jeſus; or with ſteady integrity and ſimplicity ſeeking before God and man to approve himſelf in all his ways, and at all ſeaſons.

3. He prays for himſelf, that by divine grace he may be enabled to approve his fidelity to God, and partake of the bleſſedneſs of his people. Remember me, O Lord, with the favour that thou beareſt unto thy people; God hath a choſen generation, that from eternity were the peculiar objects of his regard, and whom he decreed to bring through grace to glory: we need no more to make us bleſſed, than to be remembered by him as of that happy number. O viſit me with thy ſalvation! for this cometh from God alone, and in time and eternity is to be received as the gift of his boundleſs favour and ſovereign grace; and poſſeſſed of this, he may hope to ſhare in the felicity of God's choſen, to partake in their eternal inheritance, and join their everlaſting ſongs around the throne of glory. May this be ever my prayer and portion!

6. [c] We have ſinned with our fathers: we have committed iniquity, we have done wickedly. 7. Our fathers underſtood not thy wonders in Egypt, they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies, [f] but provoked him at the ſea, even at the Red ſea. 8. Neverthe-leſs, he ſaved them for his name's ſake: [g] that he might make his mighty power be known. 9. [h] He rebuked the Red ſea alſo, and it was dried up: ſo he led them through the depths as through the wilderneſs. 10. And he ſaved them from the hand of him that hated them:
and redeemed them from the hand of the enemy. 11.
And

[e] 1 Kings viii. 47. Dan. ix. 5.
[f] Exod. xiv. 11, 12.
[g] Ibid. ix. 16.
[h] Ibid. xiv. 21. Pſ. xviii. 15. Iſa. lxiii. 42.

And [i] the waters covered their enemies: there was not one of them left. 12. [k] Then believed they his words, they ſang his praiſe. 13. [l] They ſoon forgat his works, they waited not for his counſel: 14. [m] But † luſted exceedingly in the wilderneſs, and tempted God in the deſert. 15. And [n] he gave them their requeſt, but ſent leanneſs into their ſoul. 16. [o] They envied Moſes alſo in the camp, and Aaron the ſaint of the LORD. 17. [p]
The earth opened and ſwallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram. 18. And [q] a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burnt up the wicked.
19. [r] They made a calf in Horeb, and worſhipped the molten image. 20. Thus [s] they changed their glory into the ſimilitude of an ox that eateth graſs. 21. They forgat God their Saviour, which had done great things in Egypt: 22. Wondrous works [t] in the land of Ham, and terrible things in the Red ſea. 23. [u] Therefore he ſaid that he would deſtroy them, had not Moſes his choſen [x] ſtood before him in the breach: to turn away his wrath, leſt he ſhould deſtroy them. 24. Yea, they deſpiſed the ‡ pleaſant land: they believed not his word:
25. [y] But murmured in their tents, and hearkned not unto the voice of the LORD. 26. [z] Therefore he lifted up his hand againſt them, to overthrow them in the wilderneſs: 27. To overthrow their ſeed alſo among the nations, and [a] to ſcatter them in the lands. 28. [b] They joined themſelves unto Baal-peor, and ate the ſacrifices of the dead. 29. Thus they provoked him to anger with their inventions: and the plague brake in upon them.
30. [c] Then ſtood up Phinehas, and executed judgment:
and ſo the plague was ſtayed. 31. And that was counted unto him for righteouſneſs, unto all generations for evermore. 32. [d] They angred him alſo at the waters of ſtrife, ſo that it went ill with Moſes for their ſakes: 33.
[e] Becauſe they provoked his ſpirit, ſo that he ſpake unadviſedly with his lips.

[i] Exod. xiv. 27. & xv. 5.
[k] Exod. xiv. 31. & xv. 1.
[l] Exod. xv. 24. & xvii. 2.
[m] Num. xi. 4, 33. Pſ. lxxviii. 18. 1 Cor. x. 6.
† Heb. Luſted a luſt [n] Numb. xi. 31.
[o] Ibid. xiv. 1, &c.
[p] Num. xvi. 31. Deut. xi. 6.
[q] Num. xvi. 35, 46.
[r] Exod. xxxii. 4.
[s] Jer. ii. 11. Rom. i. 23.
[t] Pſ. lxxviii. 51. & cv. 27.
[u] Ex. xxxii. 10, 11, 32. Deut. ix. 19. & x. 10.
[x] Ezek. xiii. 5. & xxii. 30.
‡ Heb. Land of deſire.
[y] Num. xiv. 2.
[z] Ibid. xiv. 28. Ezek. xx. 15.
[a] Lev. xxvi. 33. Ezek. xx. 23.
[b] Num. xxv. 3. & xxxi. 16. Hoſ. ix. 10.
[c] Num. xxv. 10.
[d] Num. xx. 13. Deut. iii. 26.
[e] Num. xx. 10.

v. 6—33. We have here an account of God's mercies, and Iſrael's rebellions, which in their hiſtory was before at large recorded, and need be often brought to remembrance, both for a warning againſt their ſins, and an encouragement ſtill to hope in God's mercy.

1. With humbling confeſſions the people of God acknowledge their own and their fathers tranſgreſſions: their fathers had done bad, very bad; and they, too prone to copy their examples, have added to the immenſe account, and farther augmented the fierce anger of the Lord. Note, (1.) We have all reaſon to lament our firſt father's ſin as our own, for in him we fell. (2.) We cannot upbraid the ſinners before us; we are, if we know ourſelves, in juſt the ſame condemnation. (3.) True penitents never ſeek to palliate, or excuſe their provocation, but with holy indignation againſt themſelves, deſire to take utter ſhame to themſelves for their tranſgreſſions.

2. The ſins of their forefathers are here ſet forth, and they were many, great, and aggravated.

They were ſtupidly inſenſible, and ſtrangely forgetful, v. 7. they underſtood not the deſigns of God in the miracles they ſaw, which were intended, not merely to reſcue them from their bondage, but to fix them in his worſhip; and remembered not to-day the mercies of yeſterday, but the moment new difficulties aroſe, all their doubts returned, as at the Red ſea, when though ſo lately reſcued by God's mighty arm, they queſtioned his power, and diſtruſted his faithfulneſs. Juſtly might he have left them to periſh there, but for his own glory, to make his power and his faithfulneſs known, v. 8. Though they deſerved nothing at his hands, he opened a paſſage for them thro' the divided waters, and ſafely as on the dry ground led them through the depths of the ſea, v. 9. He interpoſed his cloud between them and their purſuing enemies; and the hatred Pharaoh and his hoſt bore them, only haſtened their ruin, whilſt daring to purſue the Iſraelites through the Red ſea, the waters overwhelmed them, and left not a man alive, v. 11. A deliverance ſo marvellous extorted momentary praiſe, and whilſt the wonder met their eyes, they credited God's promiſe, v. 12. but ſcarce the ſong had dropped from their lips, before they forgat the mercy; impatient to be in Canaan, they would not bear delay, nor wait God's time, nor take his counſel, v. 13.

They were diſcontent with God's proviſion; though he fed them with bread from heaven, they luſted after fleſh, and whilſt their inordinate appetite was raging, their unbelief bore equal pace with it, diſtruſting his power to ſatisfy their cravings, v. 14. but in diſpleaſure he granted their requeſts, and therewith ſent leanneſs withal into their ſoul, the curſe of God was upon their tables, terrors in their conſcience, and their delicious morſels ſurfeited inſtead of ſatisfying. Thus inordinate appetites gratified, bring their plague along with them, and the gifts God beſtows in anger, prove the moſt fatal ſnares to the ſoul.

Rebellious; they rejected God's government, refuſing to obey their divinely-appointed generals Moſes and Aaron, envying the dignity to which they were advanced, the one as the captain, the other as the high-prieſt of God's people. But God eſpouſed their cauſe; the arch-rebels Dathan and Abiram, with their families, fell alive from the eminence to which they aſpired, into the gaping pit, ſwallowed up by the earth, whilſt fire from God devoured their wicked adherents, and ſcattered their unhallowed cenſers, v. 16, 17, 18. Note, (1.) To be envied is the tribute merit and greatneſs muſt expect to pay. (2.) Reſiſtance againſt the powers ordained of God, is rebellion againſt himſelf, and will be puniſhed accordingly.

Idolatrous: nowithſtanding all the warnings they had received, and the wonders they had ſeen in the plagues executed on thoſe who thus offended in Egypt, they copied their manners, and choſe their Gods; even before Horeb, where God's viſible preſence appeared in their view on the mountain's top, there did the golden calf rear his hateful head, and received their ſhameful and impious adorations, paying the glory due to the incorruptible God, to a ſenſeleſs idol, even to the baſe image of an ox that eateth hay, v. 19—22. Fierce wrath aroſe, deſtruction utter and everlaſting threatned them, had not Moſes, their advocate, pleaded earneſtly for them, and ſtayed the deſcending arm of vengeance. Behold the mighty efficacy of fervent prayer: if Moſes thus prevailed, ſhall not that advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the righteous, whom God heareth always, effectually ſecure his redeemed people, notwithſtanding all their provocations, from the wrath they have deſerved? Aſſuredly.

Murmurers and infidels; they gave no credit to God's word, hearkened to the miſrepreſentations of the wicked ſpies, and neither believed the country worth the pains of conqueſt, nor themſelves able to cope with the children of Anak. With inſolent effrontery, they charged God with the baſeſt intentions, Num. xiv. 2, 3. and when reminded of his power and promiſe, were ready to ſtone their faithful monitor. Juſtly provoked, he ſwore in wrath they ſhould not enter into his reſt, and with his mighty arm ſlew all the men of that generation in the wilderneſs; and though he brought in their poſterity into the land they had deſpiſed, yet wrath was upon them, and they were ſcattered by repeated captivities, and to this day continue evidences of the truth of this prophecy in their preſent diſperſion. Note, (1.) Unbelief is among the moſt mortal ſins. (2.) God's people have a goodly heritage, and they who have neglected and deſpiſed it, will ſhortly wonder and periſh. (3.) They who murmur againſt God, and his diſpenſations, bring his fierce wrath upon their ſouls.

Adulterers, corporally and ſpiritually; they joined themſelves to Baal-peor, partaking in all the infamous rites of that obſcene and filthy idol: feaſting on the ſacrifices offered to the ſenſeleſs idol, or their deceaſed and deified heroes, provoking moſt highly the Divine diſpleaſure, by ſuch contempt for his inſtitutions, v. 28, 29. and ſoon they felt the ſcourge, the dreadful plague made havock through their hoſt, till Phinehas, filled with zeal, by one great act of juſtice on the moſt diſtinguiſhed ſinners Zimri and Cozbi, obtained a ceſſation of the judgment, and the plague was ſtayed; an atchievement, the fame of which will deſcend to lateſt ages, and for which the dignity of the prieſthood was conferred upon himſelf and his deſcendants. Note, (1.) The ſaints of God are jealous of God's honour, and zealous to oppoſe the progreſs of iniquity. (2.) Thoſe who honour God, he will honour.

Finally, by their perverſeneſs at the waters of ſtrife, Numb. x. 3—5. they angred God, and by exaſperating the ſpirit of the meekeſt of men, with their repeated provocations, drew him into ſin, which excluded him from the promiſed land, Numb. xx. 10—12. Note, (1.) When aggravated provocations urge us, it is hard, very hard, to reſtrain our lips from ſpeaking unadviſedly. (2.) They who draw others to ſin, are chargeable with the guilt they bring upon them. (3.) It will be no excuſe for ſin at God's bar, to plead the provocations or temptations which led us into it. (4.) They who ungratefully abuſe their beſt friends, by their fretfulneſs and perverſeneſs, are juſtly puniſhed by their removal, that they may feel the loſs of the bleſſing they ſo little knew how to value.

34. [f] They did not deſtroy the nations, [g] concerning whom the LORD commanded them: 35. [h] But were mingled among the heathen, and learned their works.
36. And they ſerved their idols: [i] which were a ſnare unto them. 37. Yea, [k] they ſacrificed their ſons and their daughters unto devils, 38. And ſhed innocent blood, even the blood of their ſons and of their daughters, whom they ſacrificed unto the idols of Canaan: and [l] the land was polluted with blood. 39. Thus were they defiled with their own works, and [m] went a whoring with their own inventions. 40. Therefore was the wrath of [f] Judg. i. 21, 27.

[g] Deut. vii. 2.
[h] Judg. ii. 2. & iii. 5, 6. Iſa. ii. 6.
[i] Exod. xxiii. 33. Deut. vii. 16.
[k] 2 Kings xvi. 3. Iſa. lvii. 5. Ezek. xvi. 20. & xx. 26. 1 Cor. x. 20.
[l] Num. xxxv. 33.
[m] Lev. xvii. 7. Num. xv. 39.

the LORD kindled againſt his people, inſomuch that he abhorred his own inheritance. 41. And [n] he gave them into the hand of the heathen; and they that hated them ruled over them. 42. Their enemies alſo oppreſſed them, and they were brought into ſubjection under their hand. 43. [o] Many times did he deliver them, but they provoked him with their counſel, and were † brought low for their iniquity. 44. Nevertheleſs, he regarded their affliction when [p] he heard their cry. 45. And [q] he remembred them for his covenant, and repented according to the multitude of his mercies. 46. [r] He made them alſo to be pitied of all thoſe that carried them captives. 47. [s] Save us, O LORD our God, and gather us from among the heathen, [t] to give thanks unto thy holy name, and to triumph in thy praiſe. 48. Bleſſed be the LORD God of Iſrael from everlaſting to everlaſting: and let all the people ſay, Amen. [u] Praiſe ye the LORD.

n Jude iii. 8. & iv. 2.
o Judges ii. 16. Neh. ix. 28.
† Heb. Or, impoveriſhed, or weakened.
p Judg. iii. 9. & iv. 3. & vi. 7. & x. 10.
q Deut. xxx. 3.
r Ezra ix. 9. Jer. xv. 11.
s 1 Chron. xvi. 35, 36.
t Pſ. cxv. 1.
u Ibid. civ. 35.

v. 34—48. Their rebellions and diſobedience againſt God ended not in the wilderneſs; the land of promiſe was a witneſs to the ſame provocations.

1. They repeated the iniquities of their fathers, by diſobedience to God's word, in not extirpating the people of Canaan, as he had enjoined them, Deut. vii. 1, 2. by wicked connections with them, not only ſuffering them to live, but making them their friends, contracting marriages, and mingling among the heathen. And as evil communication muſt ever neceſſarily corrupt the beſt manners, they learned all their wicked works; enſnared hereby, they ſoon ſunk into idolatry, forſook God to ſerve the idols they ſhould have deſtroyed; and now become brutiſh and unnatural, they who would not offer a lamb at God's altar, ſhed the blood of innocents, and ſacrificed their ſons and daughters unto devils, ſhocking to tell! polluting the land with human gore, and that even of their own children; their conſciences defiled, enſlaved by their adulterous and idolatrous hearts, and madly ſet upon their own horrid inventions. Note, (1.) The way into ſin is headlong; one compliance makes way for a greater, till the ſoul is plunged into perdition and deſtruction. (2.) There is nothing ſo unnatural, barbarous, and inhuman, but the heart of man is capable of it, when hardned in ſin, and enſlaved by ſuperſtition.

2. God's anger was kindled for their wickedneſs; his once choſen people became his abhorrence, v. 40. and as the puniſhment of their abominations, he made them ſlaves to thoſe whoſe gods they ſerved: they who hated them ruled over them, and with a rod of iron oppreſſed them. And though in pity he often mitigated their ſufferings, and gave them temporary deliverance by the hands of the judges, yet they returned to their provocations; and, as the natural conſequence, were again enſlaved, and brought low by their iniquities. Note, (1.) Sin is ever God's abhorrence, and when his own people provoke him, he will viſit iniquities with the rod. (2.) God juſtly makes our tempters to ſin the inſtruments of our ſufferings. (3.) Where one ſtroke is ineffectual, God will, if he has love to the ſoul, lay on a heavier ſcourge, till he has brought his people into the duſt of humiliation.

3. Their troubles drove them in prayer to God, and he who waited to be gracious, no ſooner heard the groans of penitence, than he regarded with the tendereſt compaſſion their ſufferings, remembered his covenant with their fathers, and, according to the riches of his grace and the multitude of his mercies, repented, or altered his method of dealing with him; he gave them to find pity in the eyes of their conquerors, and their yoke was broken. Note, (1.) God hath in his hands the hearts of all men, and can turn foes into friends. (2.) Whenever a ſinner returns unto God in penitent prayer, he will ſend an anſwer of peace. (3.) All the mercies we receive from God, are in conſequence of that everlaſting covenant of grace eſtabliſhed with Jeſus our Redeemer, whom we muſt ever plead, as the foundation of all our hopes.

4. The Pſalmiſt prays in the perſon of the captive people for ſpeedy deliverance, Save us, O Lord our God, to whom we cannot renounce our relation, and who art able to ſave to the uttermoſt, and gather us from among the heathen, where we are diſperſed, to give thanks to thy holy name, when we return once more to Zion, and to triumph in thy praiſe, exulting in his ſalvation, and giving him the glory of their redemption.

5. He concludes with bleſſing God, the God of Iſrael, who, as faithful to his promiſes from everlaſting to everlaſting, deſerved his and their everlaſting praiſe; and he calls on all God's redeemed ones to add their joyful Amen, Hallelujah, to the benediction.

PSALM CVII.

The pſalmiſt having in the two foregoing pſalms celebrated the wiſdom, power and goodneſs of God in his dealings with his church in particular, here obſerves ſome of the inſtances of his providential care of the children of men in general. 1. He inſtances in ſome of the moſt common calamities of human life; and ſhews how God ſuccours thoſe that labour under them, in anſwer to their prayers. (1.) Baniſhment and diſperſion, ver. 2—9. (2.) Captivity and impriſonment, ver. 10—16. (3.) Sickneſs and diſtemper of body, ver. 17—22. (4.) Danger and diſtreſs at ſea, ver. 23—32. And theſe are put for all the like perils, in which thoſe that cry unto God have ever found him a very preſent help. 2. He inſtanceth in the varieties and viciſſitudes of events concerning nations and families; in all which God's hand is to be eyed by his own people with joyful acknowledgments of his goodneſs, ver. 33—43.

1. [a] O Give thanks unto the LORD, for [b] he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. 2. Let the redeemed of the LORD ſay ſo, whom he hath redeemed from the hand of the enemy: 3. And [c] gathered them out of the lands, from the eaſt and from the weſt, from the north and from † the ſouth. 4. [d] They wandred in the wilderneſs in a ſolitary way, they found no city to dwell in. 5. Hungry and thirſty, their ſoul fainted in them. 6. Then [e] they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their diſtreſſes. 7. And he led them forth by the right way, that they might go to a city of habitation. 8. [f] O that men would praiſe the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men! 9. For he ſatisfieth the longing ſoul, [g] and filleth the hungry ſoul with gladneſs.

a Pſ. cvi. 1. & cxviii. 1. & cxxxvi. 1.
b Pſ. cxix. 68.
c Ibid. cvi. 47.
† Heb. The ſea.
d Deut. viii. 15.
e Pſ. l. 15. Ver. 13, 19, 28. Hoſ. v. 15.
f Ver. 15, 21, 31.
g Luke i. 53.

v. 1—9. This pſalm opens as the foregoing, with a thankſgiving to God, and ſuggeſts the ſame argument for it, drawn from the goodneſs and mercy of God. And the redeemed of the Lord, whether temporally or ſpiritually, are bound to ſing the ſong. We have here,

1. The ſtate of the perſons ſpoken of; they lie under the power of their enemies; diſperſed, and outcaſt; wandring without a ſettled abode; ſuffering the deepeſt want; hungry and thirſty, and their ſoul fainting for want of nouriſhment: to ſuch ſore diſtreſſes the deareſt children of God are ſometimes reduced; and this is an emblem alſo of the ſtate of God's people, before the redemption of Jeſus is embraced by them; they are enſlaved by their ſins, outcaſts from God's favour, can find no true reſt for their ſouls in this diſordered world; convinced of their miſery and guilt, their ſoul is parched and ready to periſh, nor can any thing quench their intolerable thirſt, but the blood and righteouſneſs of Jeſus Chriſt.

2. What methods they took. They cried unto the Lord in their troubles, who alone is able to deliver, and to whom the miſerable and guilty ſinner may fly, and find mercy and grace to help in time of need; for none ever ſought his face in vain.

3. What relief they found. He delivered them out of their diſtreſſes; recovered them from their wandrings, and reſtored them to a peaceable abode. Thus ſhall the poor bewildered ſoul that cries to God, be led by the hand of his grace to Jeſus his Saviour; find him the way, the truth, and the life; and by him be conducted to an eternal manſion of undiſturbed repoſe in glory.

4. What thanks they are bound to render. O that men, redeemed ſouls, who experience ſuch mercy from God, would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſs, and for the wonderful works ſhewn to themſelves, and to the children of men in the like ſtate of diſtreſs.

10. Such as ſit in darkneſs, and in the ſhadow of death, [h] being bound in affliction and iron: 11. Becauſe they rebelled againſt the words of God, [i] and contemned the counſel of the moſt High: 12. Therefore he brought down their heart with labour, they fell down, and there was none to help. 13. [k] Then they cried unto the LORD in their trouble, and he ſaved them out of their diſtreſſes. 14. [l] He brought them out of darkneſs, and the ſhadow of death, and brake their bands in ſunder. 15. [m] O that men would praiſe the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men! 16. For [n] he hath broken the gates of braſs, and cut the bars of iron in ſunder.

h Job xxxvi. 8.
i Luke vii. 30.
k Ver. 6, 19, 28.
l Pſ. lxviii. 6. & cxlvi. 7.
m Ver. 8, 21, 31.
n Iſa. xlv. 2. Acts xii. 7.

v. 10—16. God deſpiſeth not the ſighing of the priſoners.

1. Their miſery is deſcribed; ſhut up in dark and diſmal dungeons, loaded with heavy irons, their ſouls afflicted, and the ſhadow of death extended over them. Such is man by nature, ſunk in ignorance, dwelling in the ſhadow of ſpiritual death, bound in the fetters of corruption, and ſitting down impotent to break the bands, or eſcape from the houſe of his priſon.

2. The cauſe of this ſuffering is their ſin, wilful rebellion againſt evident commands, and neglect of the faireſt warnings. God leaves not himſelf any where without witneſs, but peculiarly inexcuſable are thoſe who ſin againſt the light of his revealed will, and reject a preached goſpel.

3. By his afflictive providence God made their proud ſpirit bend; conſcious of the deſperateneſs of their ſtate, they fell at his feet; unleſs he ſave, they periſh. Thus by affliction and deep conviction of ſin, doth God break the proud ſpirit of fallen man; and as a loſt and ſelf-deſpairing ſinner, force him to fall at the feet of Jeſus, out of whom there is no ſalvation.

4. In their diſtreſs they cried unto the Lord, as their alone refuge and help, and he delivered them from their diſtreſs; he broke their bands, opened their priſon-doors, and brought them to behold the light of the day, and from the ſhadow of death reſtored them to life and liberty. From chains of iron thus to be releaſed, how great the bleſſing? but how much more invaluable the redemption of our ſouls, when Jeſus, at our prayer, plucked us as from the belly of hell, looſed the bonds of corruption, reſcued us from death eternal, and brought us forth to the glorious life and liberty of the ſons of God. For this tranſcendent grace, bleſs the Lord, O my Soul.

5. Every reſcued captive is bound to aſcribe glory to his great deliverer, and to praiſe his name, v. 15. and the redeemed ſinner will not fail to render this tribute of his gratitude, and with delight to proclaim what God hath done for his ſoul to the children of men, that they may come and partake of the ſame goodneſs.

17. Fools, [o] becauſe of their tranſgreſſion, and becauſe of their iniquities, are afflicted. 18. [p] Their ſoul abhorreth all manner of meat, and they [q] draw near unto the gates of death. 19. [r] Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, he ſaveth them out of their diſtreſſes. 20. [s] He ſent his word, and healed them, and delivered them from their deſtructions. 21. [t] O that men would praiſe the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men: 22. And [u] let them ſacrifice the ſacrifices of thankſgiving, and declare his works with † rejoicing.

[o] Lam. i. 8.
[p] Job xxxiii. 20.
[q] Pſ. ix. 13. & lxxxviii. 3.
[r] Ver. 6, 13, 28.
[s] 2 Kings xx. 5. Mat. viii. 8.
[t] Ver. 8, 15, 31.
[u] Lev. vii. 12. Pſ. l. 14. & cxvi. 17. Heb. xiii. 15.
† Heb. Singing.

v. 17—22. In ſickneſs alſo God's mercy is proved, in anſwer to the prayer of the afflicted. We have,

1. Their dangerous ſituation. Through the power of diſeaſe their appetite fails, medicine is vain, and death hovers on their eyelids, ready to cloſe them for ever in the duſt.

2. The cauſe of their ſickneſs is ſin; that opened the door to death, with all his train of evils, and we have only our own folly and wickedneſs to blame for all the bitter pangs we feel. Note, (1.) Every ſuffering of our bodies ſhould remind us of, and humble us for the ſin of our ſouls. (2.) However wiſe ſinners may conceit themſelves, in caſting off the reſtraints of God's law, and indulging their paſſions, they will be found at the laſt the moſt wretched fools.

3. God at their cry reſcues them from the jaws of death, raiſes them from the bed of languiſhing, rebukes the diſeaſe, and by his word reſtores their loſt health and ſtrength again. Note, (1.) Is any ſick? let him pray. Prayer can do more than medicine. (2.) Sin is the ſickneſs of the ſoul; but when Jeſus by his word and ſpirit ſpeaks to the heart, he healeth our ſpiritual maladies, breaks the power of corruption, reſtores our ſouls to the life of grace below, and ſecures to us the eternal life of glory above. Great phyſician, let me daily feel thy healing power!

4. Gratitude is the bounden duty of thoſe, whoſe life thro' mercy is reſtored. Let them acknowledge the goodneſs of God they have taſted, and ſhew forth his praiſes, not only with thankful lips, but by devoting to his glory the days he hath prolonged; rejoicing in his ſalvation, and publiſhing to his praiſe the wonders of his grace.

23. They that go down to the ſea in ſhips, that do buſineſs in great waters: 24. Theſe ſee the works of the LORD, and his wonders in the deep. 25. For he commandeth, and † raiſeth the ſtormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof. 26. They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths, [x] their ſoul is melted becauſe of trouble. 27. They reel to and fro, and ſtagger like a drunken man, and ‡ are at their wits end. 28. [y] Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their diſtreſſes. 29. [z] He maketh the ſtorm a calm, ſo that the waves thereof are ſtill. 30. Then are they glad becauſe they be quiet; ſo he bringeth them unto their deſired haven. 31. [a] Oh that men would praiſe the LORD for his goodneſs, and for his wonderful works to the children of men! 32. Let them exalt him alſo in the congregation of the people, and praiſe him in the aſſembly of the elders.

† Heb. Maketh to ſtand.
[x] Pſ. xxii. 14. & cxix. 28. Neh. ii. 10.
‡ Heb. All their wiſdom is ſwallowed up.
[y] Ver. 6, 13, 19.
[z] Mat. viii. 26.
[a] Ver. 8, 15, 21.

v. 23—32. The mariners who plough the main, dwelling in the midſt of dangers, and daily beholding God's wonders in the deep, have peculiar obligations lying upon them to bleſs and praiſe him for the preſervations they experience.

1. Their dangers are great and imminent. At God's command the ſtormy winds ruſh from their hollow caverns, and with tremendous roar raiſe up the foaming billows. Mounting the dreadful ſteep, the veſſel ſeems to climb the ſkies: then ruſhing down the horrid precipice, appears ſunk within a watery grave. The affrighted ſeamen, unable to keep their feet, ſtagger on the deck; and, no longer able to guide the ſhip, give her up to the winds and waves, ready to abandon themſelves to deſpair. How prepared to die ought they to be, who are in deaths ſo often!

2. They cry unto God. How can they do otherwiſe, when death in this moſt tremendous form ſtands ghaſtly in their view! Then inſtant help appears: he who rides on the whirlwind, and directs the ſtorm, checks with a word its fury: the winds are huſhed, the waves ſubſide, and, like a molten looking-glaſs, not a dimple ruffles the ſurface of the late troubled ocean. Note, (1.) A ſeaman, above all others, ſhould be a man of faith and prayer. (2.) He who bids the ſtormy waves be ſtill, and they obey him, can as eaſily ſpeak peace to the tempeſtuous ſoul, and calm the diſtreſſes of the deſpairing ſinner.

3. With delight and joy the mariner beholds the danger paſt, and now the wiſhed-for haven in view, expects reſt from all his toils. Thus, after toſſing long on life's tempeſtuous ocean, the believer, at death's approach, deſcries the happy ſhore, and enters the fair haven of eternal reſt, where he would be.

4. For ſuch wondrous deliverance and diſtinguiſhed goodneſs, how can we but adore the hand that ſaves us, and in the great congregation offer up our thankſgivings, the expreſſion of our lively gratitude, and the encouragement for others in the like diſtreſs to call upon the God who heareth prayer.

33. He turneth rivers into a wilderneſs, and the water-ſprings into dry ground: 34. A fruitful land into barrenneſs, for the wickedneſs of them that dwell therein. 35. [b] He turneth the wilderneſs into a ſtanding water, and dry ground into water-ſprings. 36. And there he maketh the hungry to dwell, that they may prepare a city for habitation; 37. And ſow the fields, and plant vineyards, which may yield fruits of increaſe. 38. [c] He bleſſeth them alſo, ſo that they are multiplied greatly, and ſuffereth not their cattle to decreaſe. 39. Again they are miniſhed and brought low through oppreſſion, affliction, and ſorrow. 40. [d] He poureth contempt upon princes, and cauſeth them to wander in the † wilderneſs, where there is no way. 41. [e] Yet ſetteth he the poor on high ‡ from affliction, and maketh him families like a flock. 42. [f] The righteous ſhall ſee it, and rejoice; and all [g] iniquity ſhall ſtop her mouth. 43. [h] Whoſo is wiſe, and will obſerve thoſe things, even they ſhall underſtand the loving kindneſs of the LORD.

[b] Pſ. cxiv. 8. Iſa. xli. 18.
[c] Exod. i. 7.
[d] Job xii. 21, 24.
† Or void place.
[e] 1 Sam. ii. 8. Pſ. cxiii. 7, 8.
‡ Or after.
[f] Job xxii. 19. Pſ. lviii. 10.
[g] Job v. 16. Prov. x. 11.
[h] Pſ. lxiv. 9. Jer. ix. 12. Dan. xii. 10. Hoſ. xiv. 9.

v. 33—43. Various and ſurprizing are the changes which God worketh in the earth.

1. He makes the fruitful land barren for the iniquity of its inhabitants, turning the rivers into a wilderneſs, as in the caſe of Sodom. Again, when his bleſſings reſt on ſome favoured people, the wilderneſs changes its face, and bloſſoms as the roſe. Plenty there ſatisfies the hungry, and the riſing city affords a ſafe abode to the inhabitants. The vineyards ſpring, the corn flouriſhes, and the vintage and harveſt crown the happy year. Their families multiply under the divine bleſſing, and their flocks and lands greatly increaſe. On the other hand, when he turns the current of his favour back again, they wither and decay; oppreſſed, afflicted, and groaning under their ſorrows, their numbers and ſtrength decreaſe, till they become as a beacon on a hill. Thus, when princes abuſe their divinely delegated power, he, by whom kings reign, pours contempt upon them, hurls them from the throne, and makes them deſpicable in their ſubjects eyes; and fallen from their high eſtate, compels them to wander deſtitute, and bewildered in the trackleſs wilderneſs; whilſt by his providence he ſometimes raiſes the poor from the dunghil, ſetteth them on high, crowns them with dignity, bleſſes them with a numerous family, and puts all affliction far away from them. In all which diſpenſations we may admire and adore the ſovereignty, juſtice, and power of God. Note, (1.) Sinners are the plague of the earth; for their ſakes the land mourneth, whilſt the righteous procure perpetual bleſſings on their abode. (2.) If we are providentially exalted, or brought low, increaſed or diminiſhed, let us ſee and acknowledge God's hand in the matter.

2. The effects theſe changes will produce. The righteous will ſee it, and rejoice; happy to behold the humble exalted, the creſt of pride fallen, and God glorified in his providential diſpenſations: and all iniquity ſhall ſtop her mouth; the ſinner confounded ſhall be forced to lay his mouth in the duſt, and own the righteous judgment. Whoſo is wiſe, or, with an interrogation, Who is wiſe? let him ſhow it by his attentive regard to theſe ways of providence, and obſerve theſe things, to profit thereby; and then they ſhall underſtand the loving-kindneſs of the Lord, ſee it in all his diſpenſations, and experience it to their own ſouls.

PSALM CVIII.

This pſalm begins with praiſe and concludes with prayer, and faith is at work in both. 1. David here gives thanks to God for mercies to himſelf, ver. 1—5, 2. He prays to God for mercies for the land, pleading the promiſes of God, and putting them in ſuit, ver. 6—13. The former part is taken out of pſalm lvii. 7, &c. the latter out of pſalm lx. 5, &c. and both with little variation..

¶ A ſong or pſalm of David.

1. [a] O God, my heart is fixed, I will ſing and give praiſe, even with my glory. 2. Awake, pſaltery and harp: I myſelf will awake early. 3. I will praiſe thee, O LORD, among the people: and I will ſing praiſes unto thee among the nations. 4. For [b] thy mercy is great above the heavens: and thy truth reacheth unto the clouds. 5. Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens: and thy glory above all the earth.

a Pſ. lvii. 7, &c. b Ibid. xxxvi. 5.

v. 1—5. For the fuller enlargement on theſe verſes, ſee Pſal. lvii. 7—11. The pſalmiſt diſcovers in them the bleſſed frame of his own ſpirit, and teaches us how our praiſes ſhould be offered up to God: with hearts fixed on the ſacred ſubject, riſing early to the pleaſing taſk, uniting voice and inſtruments to raiſe the ſound, and openly, with every warm expreſſion of grateful affection, proclaiming in the midſt of the people his mercy and faithfulneſs, his greatneſs and glory; mercy more extenſive than the heaven, truth which reaches to the clouds, and glory infinitely beyond all bleſſing and praiſe that men or angels can offer.

6. [c] That thy beloved may be delivered: ſave with thy right hand, and anſwer me. 7. God hath ſpoken [d] in his holineſs, I will rejoice, I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth. 8. Gilead is mine, Manaſſeh is mine, Ephraim alſo is the ſtrength of mine head, Judah is my lawgiver. 9. Moab is my waſhpot, over Edom will I caſt out my ſhoe: over Philiſtia will I triumph. 10. [e] Who will bring me into the ſtrong city? who will lead me into Edom? 11. Wilt not thou, O God, [f] who haſt caſt us off? and wilt not thou, O God, go forth with our hoſts? 12. Give us help from trouble: for vain is the help of man. 13. Through God we ſhall do valiantly: for he it is that ſhall tread down our enemies.

c Pſ. lx. 5, &c. d Ib. lxxxix. 35.
e Ibid. lx. 9.
f Ibid. xliv. 9.

v. 6—13. We had before theſe verſes, Pſal. lx. 5—12. They contain,

1. The Pſalmiſt's prayer in behalf of himſelf and people, v. 6. Note, Every believer is a David, a beloved, and may confidently expect to ſee the ſalvation of God.

2. He already triumphs, aſſured of ſucceſs, ſince he hath the truth of God engaged to bring him to Iſrael's throne, and put the neighbouring nations, their enemies, under his footſtool, v. 7—9. Note, (1.) What God promiſes, faith can rejoice in, as already done. (2.) The beloved Son of David hath an everlaſting kingdom, and before him all his enemies muſt lick the duſt.

3. Whatever difficulties were in the way, by human power inſurmountable, whatever diſcouragements he had met with, v. 11. and however numerous the hoſts of the enemies, he looks to God; if he be Iſrael's leader, not Edom's walls can withſtand, but ſtrong in his might, they ſhall be more than conquerors. Thus may the believer, in the view of the ſpiritual foes of his ſoul, and the ſtrong fortreſſes of corruption, be ready to ſtagger in the conſciouſneſs of his own weakneſs; but there is help laid on one mighty to ſave: through Chriſt ſtrengthening us, we can do all things; and it is he that ſhall tread down all our enemies, and bring us to ſhare his triumphs over ſin, death, and hell, in the eternal world of glory.

PSALM CIX.

Whatever particular perſon gave occaſion to the penning this pſalm, whether Saul or Doeg, or Abithophel, we are aſſured it hath a farther reſpect to the traitor Judas, to whom it is applied, Acts i. 20. 1. David lodgeth a complaint in the court of heaven of the malice and baſe ingratitude of his enemies, and with it an appeal to the righteous God, ver. 1—5. 2. He prays againſt his enemies, and devotes them to deſtruction, ver. 6—20. 3. He prays for himſelf, that God would help and ſuccour him in his low condition, ver. 21—29. 4. He concludes with a joyful expectation that God would appear for him, ver. 30, 31.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. [a] HOld not thy peace, O God of my praiſe. 2. For the mouth of the wicked, and the mouth † of the deceitful are opened againſt me: they have ſpoken againſt me with a lying tongue. 3. They compaſſed me about alſo with words of hatred: and fought againſt me [b] without a cauſe. 4. For my love, they are my adverſaries: but I give myſelf unto prayer. 5. And [c] they have rewarded me evil for good, and hatred for my love.

a Pſ. lxxxiii. 1.
† Heb. Of deceit.
b Pſ. lxix. 4. John xv. 25.
c Pſ. xxxv. 12. & xxxviii. 20.

v. 1—5. The Pſalmiſt in the perſon of the Meſſiah, addreſſes his prayer to God under the oppreſſions of the wicked.

1. He lodges his appeal with God, under the calumnies of his enemies. Hold not thy peace, as if diſregarding his ſufferings, O God of my praiſe, or my glorying, for even the Lord Jeſus, as man, regarded his Father, as the object of his worſhip and glory.

2. He deſcribes the invenomed malice of his enemies, from whom he ſought deliverance. Wicked in temper and practice, deceitful, with faireſt profeſſions covering the blackeſt deſigns; liars, whoſe tongues diſtilled poiſon into the incautious ear; filled with hatred, reſtleſly bent on miſchief, they compaſſed him about; and violent, they with cauſeleſs rage fought againſt him; returned his love with ingratitude and enmity, and rendered evil for the good he ſhewed them. Thus was Jeſus treated, reviled, traduced, attended by thoſe who called him maſter, and ſought only to enſnare him; things laid to his charge he knew not; perſecuted, though innocent, with the moſt implacable malice; all his love repaid with hatred, and the aſtoniſhing miracles of kindneſs he wrought, exaſperating their reſentment, and returned by an ignominious crucifixion.

3. Under theſe trials, prayer was his only recourſe. I give myſelf unto prayer, or I am a man of prayer; herein he exerciſed himſelf day and night, and even on the croſs ceaſed not to cry, Father, forgive them. May we learn of our divine Lord thus to pray for thoſe who deſpitefully uſe and perſecute us!

6. Set thou a wicked man over him: and let [d] † Satan ſtand at his right hand. 7. When he ſhall be judged, let him ‡ be condemned, and [e] let his prayer become ſin. 8. Let his days be few, and [f] let another take his || office. 9. [g] Let his children be fatherleſs, and his wife a widow. 10. Let his children be continually vagabonds, and beg: let them ſeek their bread alſo out of their deſolate places. 11. [h] Let the extortioner catch all that he hath: and let the ſtranger ſpoil his labour. 12. Let there be none to extend mercy unto him: neither let there be any to favour his fatherleſs children. 13. [i] Let his poſterity be cut off, and in the generation following let their name be blotted out. 14. [k] Let the iniquity of his fathers be remembred with the LORD: and let not the ſin of his mother be blotted out. 15. Let them be before the LORD continually, that he may [l] cut off the memory of them from the earth. 16. Becauſe that he remembred not to ſhew mercy, but perſecuted the poor and needy man, that he might even ſlay the broken in heart. 17. [m] As he loved curſing, ſo let it come unto him: as he delighted not in bleſſing, ſo let it be far from him. 18. As he clothed himſelf with curſing like as with a garment: ſo [n] let it come § into his bowels like water, and like oil into his bones. 19. Let it be unto him as the garment which covereth him, and for a girdle wherewith he is girded continually. 20. Let this be the reward of mine adverſaries from the LORD, and of them that ſpeak evil againſt my ſoul.

d Zech. iii. 1.
† i. e. an adverſary.
‡ Heb. Go out guilty.
e Prov. xxviii. 9.
f Acts i. 20.
|| Or charge.
g Exod. xxii. 24.
h Job v. 5. & xviii. 9.
i Job xviii. 19.
k Exod. xx. 5.
l Job xviii. 17. Pſ. xxxiv. 16.
m Ezek. xxxv. 6.
n Num. v. 22.
§ Heb. Within him.

v. 6—20. They who have blamed David's ſpirit, as if he appeared vindictive, have miſtaken him greatly. When he ſpeaks as a prophet, he foreſees and foretells what would be the end of the wicked; when he ſpeaks in the perſon of the Son of God, he denounces the juſt judgment due to the children of perdition. Terrible are the woes herein contained; Judas felt them: may we never, by like tranſgreſſions, provoke the ſame puniſhment.

1. We have the ſentence pronounced. Satan, as the executioner of vengeance, is permitted firſt to tempt, and then ſet over him to torment him, v. 8. At God's bar he is found guilty, and prayer then is vain, is ſinful, when mercy cannot be exerciſed, but to the diſhonour of God's juſtice. Cut off in the midſt of his days, the office and apoſtleſhip, of which he is ſo unworthy, is transferred to another: his orphan family beggared and vagabonds, reduced to pine in wretchedneſs and ſolitude; whilſt the extortioner ſeized on all his poſſeſſions, and ſpoiled all his ſubſtance; and not ſo much as a tear is dropped over his fatherleſs children. His poſterity are doomed to extirpation, and, within one generation, his name to be blotted out of the earth. All which was probably literally fulfilled in the caſe of Judas, and, in a more general ſenſe, is applicable to the whole Jewiſh people, who, for their rejection of the Meſſiah, were rejected by him, as we ſee to this day.

2. God's righteouſneſs is obſerved in the judgment. He doth not in his puniſhment exact more than is due. The ſin of his fathers, and of his mother, are remembered, v. 14. For this God viſits upon the children, and his own ſins fill up the meaſure of their guilt. Unmerciful and cruel, perſecuting the poor, and needy, and broken-hearted Jeſus even unto death; pouring curſes on the innocent Lamb of God, and bringing him to the accurſed tree; rejecting all the kindneſs and good-will of Jeſus, and taking a pride and pleaſure in his blaſphemies, as if they were ornamental; but terribly they return upon his own head, and the curſe cauſeleſs falls on the wretch that uttered it, penetrating into the inmoſt ſoul, and ſticking cloſe to him as his garment and girdle. Such was the wickedneſs of Judas, ſuch was the ſin of the Jewiſh people, rejecting, blaſpheming, and crucifying the Lord of glory; and as we have ſeen the dreadful vengeance which have fallen upon them, let it ſerve for a warning to us not to deſpiſe and oppoſe Chriſt and his goſpel, leſt we ſhare in their plagues; for ſuch will be the dreadful puniſhment of all his adverſaries, and of all the revilers, perſecutors, and blaſphemers of himſelf and his members.

[o] Pſ. cvi. 8. 21. But do thou for me, O God the LORD, [o] for thy name's ſake: becauſe thy mercy is good, deliver thou me. 22. For I am poor and needy, and my heart [p] Ibid. cii. is wounded within me. 23. I am gone [p] like the ſha-
11. & cxliv. dow, when it declineth: I am toſſed up and down as
4. the locuſt. 24. My knees are weak through faſting: and my fleſh faileth of fatneſs. 25. I became alſo a [q] Ibid. xxii. reproach unto them: when they looked upon me, [q] they
7. Mat. ſhaked their heads. 26. Help me, O LORD my xxvii. 39. God: O ſave me according to thy mercy: 27. That they may know, that this is thy hand: that thou, LORD, [r] 2 Sam. xvi. haſt done it. 28. [r] Let them curſe, but bleſs thou: when
12. they ariſe, let them be aſhamed: [s] but let thy ſervant
[s] Iſa. lxv. rejoice. 29. [t] Let mine adverſaries be clothed with
14. ſhame: and let them cover themſelves with their own [t] Pſ. cxxxii. confuſion, as with a mantle. 30. I will greatly praiſe
18. the LORD with my mouth: yea, I will praiſe him [u] Ibid. xvi. among the multitude. 31. For [u] he ſhall ſtand at the
8. & lxxiii. right hand of the poor, to ſave him † from thoſe that
23. & cxxi. 5. condemn his ſoul.

† Heb. From the judges of his ſoul.

v. 21—31. We have here, the Incarnate Redeemer's complaint and prayer, and his joy in being heard and anſwered.

1. His condition is very diſtreſſing: poor and needy, born in a ſtable, and having no place to lay his head; a man of ſorrows, and acquainted with grief; his heart wounded with bittereſt indignities, and more deeply ſtill with the wrath of God due to the ſins he bore: hurried to the grave by a violent death, as the declining ſhadow: toſſed to and fro, from Pilate to Herod, from Annas to Caiaphas: weak with faſting, and his body emaciated: reproached as a Samaritan, a magician, a mover of ſedition, and, even on the croſs, inſulted by thoſe who ſhook their heads at him, mocking at his high pretenſions of being the Son of God. Note, If our Head thus ſuffered, let not his members murmur at their lot, under the preſſures of poverty, a wounded ſpirit, a decaying body, or a reviling world: Jeſus hath endured the croſs before us.

2. His prayer is very importunate. Deliver, help, and ſave me: and to this end he pleads God's own glory, v. 21. concerned in vindicating his righteous cauſe; his mercy, ever ready to ſuccour the poor deſtitute. Such interpoſition alſo would carry conviction of God's intereſting himſelf on his behalf; others would acknowledge his hand, and theſe enemies themſelves be confounded and aſhamed: aſhamed, as penitent; or confounded as criminals. Thus, if God helped and bleſſed him, he could ſit eaſy under the curſes of his enemies, well knowing how impotent they were, and only big with vengeance on themſelves. Note, (1.) If God bleſs us, we need not care how much men curſe us. (2.) All our hope muſt be placed on God's boundleſs mercy and grace: he alone can help and ſave us, not we ourſelves. (3.) They who take ſhame to themſelves for their ſins now as penitents, will prevent their ſuffering hereafter everlaſting ſhame and contempt in hell, as reprobates.

3. His joy is great in the Lord. Among the multitude he will lift up his voice; yea, aloud his praiſes ſhall be heard for this great ſalvation of God For he ſhall ſtand at the right hand of the poor, his Meſſiah, and all his poor people, to ſupport and protect them; to ſave him from thoſe who condemn his ſoul; as he did, when he raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, and ſet him at his own right hand; and as he will do with all his perſecuted and ſuffering diſciples at the laſt day, when none ſhall appear to lay one charge againſt God's elect, and all their former adverſaries ſhall be found liars.

PSALM CX.

This pſalm is pure goſpel; it is only and wholly concerning Chriſt; ſo the Jews of old underſtood it, nor dared diſpute the application, Math. xxii. 41—46. though they were aſhamed to own the truth. Chriſt, as our Redeemer, executes the office of a prophet, of a prieſt, and of a king, both in his ſtate of humiliation and exaltation; and of each of theſe we have here an account. 1. His prophetical office, ver. 2. 2. His prieſtly office, ver. 4. 3. His kingly office, ver. 1, 3, 5, 6. 4. His eſtates of humiliation and exaltation, ver. 7.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. [a] THE LORD ſaid unto my LORD, Sit thou at [a] Mat. xxii.
my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy 44. Mark foot-ſtool. 2. The LORD ſhall ſend the rod of thy xii. 36. ſtrength [b] out of Zion: rule thou in the midſt of thine Luke xx. 42.
enemies. 3. [c] Thy people ſhall be willing in the day of Acts ii. 34.
thy power, [d] in the beauties of holineſs † from the womb 1 Cor. xv.
of the morning: thou haſt the dew of thy youth. 4. 25. Heb. i. 13.
The LORD hath ſworn, and will not repent, [e] Thou [b] Iſa. ii. 3.
art a prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchizedek. [c] Judg. v. 2. [d] Pſ. xcvi. 9.

† Or, more than the womb of the morning thou ſhalt have.

[e] Heb. v. 6. & vii. 17. 21. Zech. vi. 13.

v. 1—4. The glory of our incarnate Saviour is the great ſubject of the Pſalmiſt's praiſe.

1. He is exalted to the higheſt dignity in heaven, and David owns him his adored Lord. The Lord, Jehovah the Father, ſaid unto my Lord, Jeſus the Meſſiah, Sit thou at my right hand, advanced to the ſeat of moſt tranſcendant glory and honour, until I make thine enemies thy foot-ſtool; enemies innumerable hath our Lord to conflict with, the world, ſin, Satan, death, &c. but he ſits upon the throne, and they muſt bow before his foot-ſtool; ſome are already ſubdued, and ſhortly the conqueſt will be compleat, when the laſt enemy ſhall be deſtroyed, and all his redeemed people made to triumph with him in glory. Haſten, O Lord, this happy day!

2. All power is given him on earth. The Lord ſhall ſend forth the rod, or ſceptre, of thy ſtrength, the everlaſting goſpel, the power of God unto ſalvation; which by the ſpirits energy is made effectual to the converſion of the ſouls of ſinners, bowing them to ſubmit to the ſceptre of his righteouſneſs: and this went forth firſt out of Zion, and hath ſpread to the remoteſt corners of the earth: rule thou, or thou ſhalt rule, in the midſt of thine enemies; the Redeemer's kingdom will be eſtabliſhed in ſpite of all oppoſition, and his church riſe ſuperior to all the malice of men and devils: yea, ſuch will be the effectual working of his mighty power, that even thoſe whoſe minds were enmity againſt him, and their lives open rebellion, ſhall be convinced, humbled, ſue for mercy, and be converted unto him.

3. His ſubjects ſhall be a willing people, inclined to offer up themſelves, their bodies, ſouls, and ſpirits, to his bleſſed ſervice; chearfully liſting under his banners in the day of his power; when in the preaching of the word, accompanied with the demonſtration of the Spirit, they ſhould be drawn to him by cords of love irreſiſtible, and arrayed in the beauties of holineſs, meet to attend their glorious head, from the womb of the morning; as ſoon as ever the morning light of goſpel grace appears, they are converted; or their multitudes are as the drops of morning dew: thou haſt the dew of thy youth. Note, (1.) None ever chuſe Chriſt's ſervice till he firſt inclines their hearts: it is of grace that we become his willing people. (2.) There are tranſcendant beauties in Jeſus, effectual when ſeen to engage ſupremely the ſinners ſoul to him. (3.) Though Chriſt is to the believer all in all, it doth not make him neglect internal purity, but aſpire after perfect holineſs.

4. All is confirmed by the oath of God. The Lord hath ſworn by himſelf, ſince he can ſwear by no greater, and will not repent, for he is ever in one mind, without variableneſs, or ſhadow of turning; Thou art a prieſt for ever, after the order of Melchizedek; a prieſt, to make reconciliation for the ſins of his people; for ever, the efficacy of the one oblation he offered abiding the ſame, and he at the right of God, ever living to plead it, and make interceſſion for us; after the order of Melchizedek, an order of prieſthood, prior to and greater than that of Aaron, unchangeable and eternal. Note, The believer's hope is fixed upon the moſt ſolid baſis, on the all-ſufficiency of Jeſus, and the oath of the eternal Jehovah. With what confidence then ſhould we expect pardon, grace, and all the bleſſings of ſalvation, from the great high prieſt of our profeſſion; and how great is the diſhonour we caſt upon him, when for a moment we dare queſtion his power and grace, and ſtagger at promiſes confirmed by two immutable things, the word and oath of that God who cannot lie?

5. The LORD [f] at thy right hand ſhall ſtrike through kings [g] in the day of his wrath. 6. He ſhall judge among the heathen, he ſhall fill the places with the dead bodies: [h] he ſhall wound the head over † many countries. 7. He ſhall drink of the brook in the way: [i] therefore ſhall he lift up the head.

f Pſal. xvi. 8.
g Pſ. ii. 12. Rev. xi. 18.
h Pſ. lxviii. 21. Heb. iii. 13.
† Or, great.
i Phil. ii. 9.

v. 5—7. We have here,

1. The dreadful end of all the enemies of Chriſt and his people. The Lord at thy right hand, the Almighty Jeſus, ſhall ſtrike through kings, deſtroy the mightieſt who oppoſe his kingdom, in the day of his wrath, that great and terrible day, when no rock nor mountain can cover the guilty. He ſhall judge among the heathen, executing vengeance on the deſpiſers of his goſpel; he ſhall fill the places with dead bodies, at the great battle of Armageddon, Rev. xix. 17, 18. He ſhall wound the heads, or head, over many countries; Satan, the prince of this world, or Antichriſt, whoſe uſurped dominion extends over many people, and nations, and tongues, Rev. xvii. 2—10. Note, (1.) The greateſt men, who dare lift their rebel arm againſt the Lord's Chriſt, will ſoon be made to feel how unequal is the conteſt. (2.) There is a day of wrath appointed and approaching, when ſinners will find it a fearful thing to fall into the hands of him who ſitteth on the throne.

2. The glorious triumphs of our exalted Lord. He ſhall drink of the brook in the way: which ſome interpret of his humiliation and ſufferings in the execution of his mediatorial work, but rather ſeems to ſpeak the ſupplies of ſtrength afforded him, in order to the deſtruction of his enemies, or the delight and joy which would fill his heart on ſeeing the glorious victory gained, and the ſalvation of his people compleated: therefore, or ſo, ſhall he lift up his head, the conqueror of death and hell in the reſurrection-day, and aſcending to the throne of glory, where angels, principalities, and powers, are made ſubject unto him, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but in that which is to come. Let his faithful people rejoice in his triumphs, and expect to ſhare them ſhortly with him; when he ſhall take them to ſit down with him on his throne, as he is ſat down with the Father on his throne.

PSALM CXI.

This, and divers of the pſalms that follow it, ſeem to have been penned by David for the ſervice of the church in their ſolemn feaſts; the title of it is Hallelujah, Praiſe ye the Lord. It is compoſed alphabetically, each ſentence beginning with a ſeveral letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The pſalmiſt exhorting to praiſe God, 1. Sets himſelf for an example, ver. 1. 2. Furniſhes us with matter for praiſe from the works of God. (1.) The greatneſs of his works, and the glory of them. (2.) The righteouſneſs of them. (3.) The goodneſs of them. (4.) The power of them. (5.) The conformity of them to his word of promiſe. (6.) The perpetuity of them. Theſe obſervations are intermixed, ver. 2—9. 3. He recommends the holy fear of God, and a conſcientious obedience to his commands, as the moſt acceptable way of praiſing God, ver. 10.

1. [a] PRAISE ye the LORD. I will praiſe the LORD with my whole heart, in the aſſembly of the upright, and in the congregation. 2. [b] The works of the LORD are great, ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein. 3. His work is honourable and glorious: and his righteouſneſs endureth for ever. 4. He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered: [c] the LORD is gracious and full of compaſſion. 5. He hath given † meat unto them that fear him: he will ever be mindful of his covenant.

a Pſ. civ. 35.
b Rev. xv. 3.
c Pſ. lxxxvi. 5. & ciii. 8.
† Heb. Prey.

v. 1—5. According to the title, Hallelujah, we find the pſalmiſt,

1. Profeſſing his purpoſe to praiſe God with his whole heart, with unfeigned ſincerity, and warm affection, in the aſſembly of the upright, and in the congregation, in ſocial worſhip, or the courts of the ſanctuary.

2. He would take the matter of his ſong from the works of the Lord, the works of creation, providence, and redemption, which are each of them ſo great and wonderful, and ſought out of all them that have pleaſure therein; who make theſe the delightful ſubject of their contemplation, and long to increaſe their knowledge of them, that they may be more enlarged in love and praiſe. His work is honourable and glorious in itſelf, and ſuited to exalt the glory of the Divine artificer: his righteouſneſs endureth for ever; all the diſpenſations of his providence and grace are altogether and everlaſtingly righteous and true, and eſpecially that Divine righteouſneſs which Jeſus wrought out for his people abideth eternally the ſame, to juſtify all that truſt in it from every condemnation. He hath made his wonderful works to be remembred; they well deſerve to be treaſured up in our memories; and God hath graciouſly been pleaſed to tranſmit to us, in his word, his wonders of old time, to excite ſtill our wonder and praiſe: the Lord is gracious and full of compaſſion, as ſinners, to their unutterable comfort, experience in the ſalvation of Jeſus Chriſt, and the great and precious promiſes that are in him; and as appears alſo in all the inſtances of his providential care: for he hath given meat to thoſe that fear them, or a prey; the ſpoil of the Egyptians, and rather than they ſhould want, hath provided in the wilderneſs, for Iſrael, bread from heaven; and ſtill he continues to feed his choſen daily with that better bread from heaven, which giveth life unto the world: he will ever be mindful of his covenant, none of the promiſes of it ſhall ever fail, nor any of the bleſſings of it be with-held from his people; and therefore they are bound to ſay Hallelujah, for mercies ſo ineſtimably precious, and ſo ſovereignly free.

6. He hath ſhewed his people the power of his works, that he may give them the heritage of the heathen. 7. The works of his hands are verity and judgment; [d] all his commandments are ſure. 8. [e] They † ſtand faſt for ever and ever, and are done in truth and uprightneſs. 9. He ſent redemption unto his people; he hath commanded his covenant for ever: holy and reverend is his name. 10. [f] The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wiſdom: a good ‡ underſtanding have all they || that do his commandments: his praiſe endureth for ever.

d Pſal. xix. 7.
e Iſa. xl. 8. Mat. v. 18.
† Heb. Are eſtabliſhed.
f Deut. iv. 6. Job xxviii. 28. Prov. i. 7. & ix. 10. Eccleſ. i. 16.
‡ Or, ſucceſs.
|| Heb. That do them.

v. 6—10. The pſalmiſt inſtances various other particulars of God's works, which ſhould be matter of his people's praiſe.

1. The miracles he ſhewed them in their journey to the promiſed land, and his wonders in diſpoſſeſſing the heathen to make room for them, v. 6.

2. Herein he acted with the higheſt equity and judgment, as he doth in all his works; the meaſure of iniquity of theſe nations being full, and the time arrived to fulfil the promiſes he made unto Abraham and his ſeed. Note, In all God's works he will magnify his own juſtice and truth.

3. Immutable are all his counſels, unchangeable his word. All his commandments are ſure; whatever he commands muſt be accompliſhed, whatever he promiſes be fulfilled. They ſtand faſt for ever and ever, both his law and goſpel, and all the precepts and promiſes contained in them, and are done in truth and uprightneſs; they are conſonant to the rules of eternal righteouſneſs, and will be obeyed in ſimplicity by all that truly ſerve him.

4. He hath ſent redemption unto his people, delivered them from Egypt, and repeatedly reſcued them by their judges from the hands of their oppreſſors; and, above all, hath ſent that eternal redemption unto them which was wrought out by Jeſus Chriſt in the fulneſs of time: he hath commanded his covenant for ever; it is everlaſting, ordered in all things, and ſure to all the ſpiritual ſeed of David. Holy and reverend is his name; ſo it appears in all his works and ways, and worthy to be reverenced and adored by ſaints on earth, and angels in heavens.

5. For all theſe works of power he hath ſhewed, God is to be feared; and this is our higheſt wiſdom and bounden duty. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wiſdom; a reverential, filial fear of offending a God ſo great, and withal ſo gracious, is the beginning, or the ſummit, of wiſdom: a good underſtanding have all they that do his commandments: this proves them indeed wiſe unto ſalvation; and by obedience to his will, as far as it is revealed to them, they arrive at higher degrees of ſpiritual knowledge and underſtanding: his praiſe, the Lord's, or its praiſe, i. e. of ſuch a converſation, endureth for ever; God will appear everlaſtingly glorious; and all his faithful people, who have approved themſelves to him, ſhall have praiſe of him. Note, (1.) They are the truly wiſe who fear God and keep his commandments. (2.) Though the beſt we can do is unworthy of God, yet, when done in faith and love, he is not unrighteous to forget our works, nor will fail to reward us accordingly.

PSALM CXII.

This pſalm is compoſed alphabetically as the former is, and is entitled, Hallelujah. It deſcribes, 1. The character of the righteous, ver. 1. 2. The bleſſedneſs of the righteous. (1.) There is a bleſſing entailed on their poſterity, ver. 2. (2.) There is a bleſſing conferred upon themſelves. [1.] Proſperity outward and inward, ver. 3. [2.] Comfort, ver. 4. [3.] Wiſdom, ver. 5. [4.] Stability, ver. 6—8. [5.] Honour, ver. 6, 9. 3. The miſery of the wicked, ver. 10.

a Pſal. civ. 35. b Ibid. cxxviii. 1. c Ibid. cxix. 16, 47. d Mat. vi. 33. 1 Tim. iv. 8. e Eſth. viii. 16. Job xi. 17. Pſ. xcvii. 11. f Pſ. xxxvii. 26. Luke vi. 35. g Prov. xiii. 16. † Heb. Judgment.

1. [a] PRaiſe ye the LORD. [b] Bleſſed is the man that feareth the LORD, [c] that delighteth greatly in his commandments. 2. His ſeed ſhall be mighty upon earth: the generation of the upright ſhall be bleſſed. 3. [d] Wealth and riches ſhall be in his houſe: and his righteouſneſs endureth for ever. 4. [e] Unto the upright there ariſeth light in the darkneſs: he is gracious, and full of compaſſion, and righteous. 5. [f] A good man ſheweth favour, and lendeth; [g] he will guide his affairs with † diſcretion.

v. 1—5. The pſalmiſt opens with an aſcription of praiſe to God, who is to be acknowledged in all he doth for his people and in them, for by his grace alone they are what they are.

1. He deſcribes the character of the truly bleſſed and happy man. He feareth the Lord, and only him; he delighteth greatly in his commandments; he counts obedience his higheſt privilege, and God's ſervice perfect freedom: he is upright, ſincere before God in his profeſſions, and in all his dealings with men juſt and true: he is gracious, full of compaſſion, ſenſibly touched with the diſtreſſes of others, and ready to relieve them, and righteous; what he beſtows on the neceſſitous is honeſtly come by: he ſheweth favour, and lendeth; not with a view to his own advantage, but of pure charity to aſſiſt the induſtrious poor, hoping for nothing again; he will guide his affairs with diſcretion, or his words with judgment; he is careful of what he ſpeaks, that neither haſtily, falſely, or imprudently, his tongue may offend, but that all he ſaith may be well-weighed, and the reſult of ſound reflection and judgment; and in the management of his affairs he acts with ſuch prudence and œconomy, as both to ſhew piety at home, in the becoming proviſion of his own houſe, and have withal a portion to ſpare for him that needeth.

2. Such an one is truly bleſſed and happy; he is the object of God's care and love, the bleſſings of grace and glory are laid up for him, and in time and eternity God himſelf will be his portion, and exceeding great reward; his poſterity ſhall partake of his bleſſing, exalted in earth, and mighty in the grace that is in Jeſus Chriſt, v. 2. Wealth and riches, as much as God ſees will be profitable for him and them, ſhall be in his houſe; nor ſhall his worldly proſperity turn away his heart from God, as it is too apt to do: his righteouſneſs endureth for ever; God will preſerve him faithful, and enable him to proſper in his ſoul, as his ſubſtance is increaſed, and never ſuffer him to decay or decline, v. 3. If at any time a dark cloud paſſes over him, either of deſertion, or temptation in his ſoul, or of affliction in his body, family, or ſubſtance, God will return and lift up the light of his countenance, and chear his heart with freſh viſits of his love, miniſter new ſtrength and conſolation to his ſoul, and make the moſt afflictive diſpenſations iſſue to his good.

h Prov. x. 7. i Ibid. i. 33. k Pſ. lvii. 7. l 2 Cor. ix. 9. m Pſ. lxxv. 10. n Pſ. xxxvii. 12. o Ibid. lviii. 7, 8. p Prov. x. 28. & xiii. 9.

6. Surely he ſhall not be moved for ever: [h] the righteous ſhall be in everlaſting remembrance. 7. [i] He ſhall not be afraid of evil tidings: [k] his heart is fixed, truſting in the LORD. 8. His heart is eſtabliſhed, he ſhall not be afraid, until he ſee his deſire upon his enemies. 9. [l] He hath diſperſed, he hath given to the poor; his righteouſneſs endureth for ever; [m] his horn ſhall be exalted with honour. 10. The wicked ſhall ſee it, and be grieved; [n] he ſhall gnaſh with his teeth, [o] and melt away: [p] the deſire of the wicked ſhall periſh.

v. 6—10. The pſalmiſt goes on,

1. To inſtance in other particulars the bleſſedneſs of the man that feareth the Lord. [1.] His ſtability is enſured, firm as God's everlaſting love and power can make it. [2.] The memory of his piety ſhall deſcend to lateſt ages, and his righteouſneſs God will to all eternity remember and reward, v. 6. [3.] No dangers ſhall terrify, no evil tidings diſmay him; neither the world with all its ſnares and oppoſition, nor Satan with all his legions, nor corruption with all its indwelling traitors, nor death with all its terrors, ſhall be able to ſhake his confidence or deject his ſpirit; for his heart is fixed, truſting in the Lord. [4.] He ſhall ſee his deſire upon his enemies; expecting in faith the ſalvation of God, he ſhall ſee all his ſpiritual and temporal foes finally ſubdued and deſtroyed, and himſelf made more than conqueror. [5.] He ſhall be exalted to honour, v. 9. the higheſt honour, that which cometh from God, who will remember his labours of love, his charity, liberality, and perſevering continuance in well-doing; and at the reſurrection-day crown him with glory, honour, and immortality.

2. This bleſſedneſs of the righteous will be the envy and torment of the wicked; they ſhall ſee it with grief and bitter anguiſh, and through vexation ſhall pine away in their iniquities; till at laſt they ſhall be cut off from all the good things on which their deſires were placed, and doomed to that place of eternal torment, where there is weeping and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth. Lord, gather not my ſoul with ſinners!

PSALM CXIII.

This pſalm begins and ends with Hallelujah. 1. We are here called upon and urged to praiſe God, ver. 1—3. 2. We are here furniſhed with matter of praiſe, drawn from, (1.) His glory and greatneſs, ver. 4, 5. (2.) The condeſcenſions of his grace and goodneſs, ver. 6—9.

a Pſal. civ. 35. b Pſ. xxxiii. 1. c Dan. ii. 20. Luke i. 68. d Iſa. lix. 19. Mal. i. 11. e Pſal. viii. 1. f Pſ. lxxxix. 6. † Heb. Exalteth himſelf to dwell. g Pſal. cxxxviii. 6. Iſa. lvii. 15. h 1 Sam. ii. 8. Pſ. cvii. 41. i Job xxxvi. 7. k 1 Sam. ii. 5. Pſ. lxviii. 9. l Pſal. civ. 35.

1. [a] PRaiſe ye the LORD. Praiſe, [b] O ye ſervants of the LORD, praiſe the name of the LORD. 2. [c] Bleſſed be the name of the LORD, from this time forth and for evermore. 3. [d] From the riſing of the ſun unto the going down of the ſame, the LORD's name is to be praiſed. 4. The LORD is high above all nations, [e] and his glory above the heavens. 5. [f] Who is like unto the LORD our God, who † dwelleth on high? 6. [g] Who humbleth himſelf to behold the things that are in heaven, and in earth? 7. [h] He raiſeth up the poor out of the duſt, and lifteth the needy out of the dung-hill: 8. That he may [i] ſet him with princes, even with the princes of his people. 9. [k] He maketh the barren woman to keep houſe, and to be a joyful mother of children. [l] Praiſe ye the LORD.

v. 1—9. This pſalm ſeems to refer to goſpel times, and to the great ſalvation accompliſhed by Jeſus our Redeemer.

1. The pſalmiſt, with repeated earneſtneſs, exhorts the ſervants of the Lord to the happy work of praiſe. In all ages redeeming love muſt be celebrated; and from the riſing to the ſetting ſun, whither the tidings of goſpel grace ſhall ſpread, the name of Jeſus ſhould reſound, v. 1—3.

2. He ſuggeſts the matter of their ſongs.

(1.) The glory of the Lord Jeſus, the great King of kings; to whoſe univerſal ſway all nations of the earth muſt bow, and in heaven angels, principalities and powers are made ſubject unto him, tranſcendently great without an equal, and above all compariſon; yea, exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe, v. 4, 5.

(2.) His condeſcenſion. He humbleth himſelf to behold the things that are in heaven and earth; when he vouchſafes to accept the ſervices of archangels, and with his care to preſerve their beings, which he gave, vaſt is his condeſcenſion; yet more amazing is it, that he turns his eye on worms of earth, and ſinful worms withal, upholds them in life, and with his bounteous hand ſupplies their wants: but moſt aſtoniſhing of all, that he ſhould humble himſelf ſo far, as not only to behold us, but to take our nature, yea, humble himſelf for us to death, even the death of the croſs. Loſt in the ſtupenduous thought, the ſoul bows down in ſilent admiration, and can only wonder and adore.

3. The diſpenſations of his providence and grace. [1.] The poor and needy he liberally ſupplies, raiſes them from their low ſtate, and exalts them to honour and dignity, from the dunghill to the throne: ſuch outward changes God ſometimes ſovereignly works; but ſpiritually we ſee it more emphatically fulfilled; the poor in ſpirit, the needy, deſtitute of all righteouſneſs and ſtrength, lying on the dunghill of ſin, and in the duſt of ſpiritual death, by the Almighty power of his Spirit he raiſes from their low eſtate, pardons, and delivers them from guilt and ſin, adopts them into his royal houſe as Sons of God, cloaths them with the princely robes of righteouſneſs and ſalvation, and makes them reign in glory everlaſting, with the princes of his people; with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, and all the ſaints, who are made kings and prieſts unto God. [2.] He maketh the barren woman keep houſe, and be a joyful mother of children: Sarah, Rachel, Hannah, proved this grace, and rejoiced in the precious gift: and this was in a beautiful ſenſe more nobly fulfilled, when the Gentile world, that had long been barren, and brought forth no fruit unto God, teemed with numerous converts, the joy of the church, and whoſe births were celebrated with the ſongs of earth and heaven. Well, therefore, in the view of theſe things, may the pſalmiſt repeat his exhortation, and we echo back the ſound, Hallelujah.

PSALM CXIV.

This pſalm is the celebration of Iſrael's deliverance from Egypt. 1. They were brought out of ſlavery, ver. 1. 2. God ſet up his tabernacle among them, ver. 2. 3. The ſea and Jordan were divided before them, ver. 3, 5. 4. The earth ſhook at the giving the law, when God came down on mount Sinai, ver. 4, 6, 7. 5. God gave them water out of the rock, ver. 8. In ſinging this pſalm we muſt acknowledge God's power and goodneſs in what he did did for Iſrael, applying it to the much greater work of wonder, our redemption by Chriſt, and encouraging ourſelves and others to truſt in God in the greateſt ſtraits.

1. WHEN [a] Iſrael went out of Egypt, the houſe of Jacob from [b] a people of a ſtrange language;
2. [c] Judah was his ſanctuary, and Iſrael his dominion.
3. [d] The ſea ſaw it, and fled; [e] Jordan was driven back.
4. [f] The mountains ſkipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs. 5. [g] What ailed thee, O thou ſea, that thou fleddeſt? thou Jordan, that thou was driven back?
6. Ye mountains, that ye ſkipped like rams; and ye little hills like lambs? 7. Tremble thou earth at the preſence of the LORD, at the preſence of the God of Jacob. 8. [h] Which turned the rock into a ſtanding water, the flint into a fountain of waters.

[a] Ex. xiii. 3.
[b] Pſ. lxxxi. 5.
[c] Ex. vi. 7. & xix. 6. Deut. xxvii. 9.
[d] Ex. xiv. 21. Pſal. lxxvii. 16.
[e] Joſh. iii. 13, 16.
[f] Pſ. xxix. 6. & lxviii. 16.
[g] Hab. iii. 8.
[h] Ex. xvii. 6. Num. xx. 11. Pſ. cvii. 35.

v. 1—8. The wonders of former days deſerve to be kept in everlaſting remembrance, both that God may be glorified for them, and we take encouragement from thence to hope ſtill in his mercy.

1. God brought his Iſrael from Egypt: They went out, with triumph, wealth, and honour, from a people of a ſtrange language, which they underſtood not, or barbarous, as they accounted the Egyptian tongue, compared with their own. The people of God are thus brought up out of ſpiritual Egypt, and called from this ſtrange country the world, to join thoſe who ſpeak the pure language of Canaan.

2. Among them his ſpecial preſence reſted, and he was in a peculiar manner their king. Judah was his ſanctuary; his preſence reſted viſibly in the midſt of them; or, his holineſs, ſeparated from all nations for his ſervice; and Iſrael his dominion, among whom he erected a theocracy, himſelf their lawgiver and judge, and exerciſing the power of civil government among them. Thus doth his preſence dwell in his living temples, the ſouls of his redeemed; holineſs is written upon their hearts, and obedient to all his commands and ordinances, they deſire to approve themſelves his faithful ſubjects.

3. To open a paſſage for them, the ſea affrighted fled, and Jordan backwards rolled his overflowing ſtreams. How was the mighty miracle effected? why fled the ſea? why ſkipped the mountains Horeb and Sinai? Why? They felt the preſent Deity; the powers of nature ſtood controuled before him, and earth to its centre ſhook. Note, (1.) Whatever difficulties are in the way of God's Iſrael, from ſeas of tribulation, and mountains of unbelief and corruption, as eaſily and certainly ſhall they be all removed. (2.) Did rocky Horeb tremble before God? and is thy heart, ſinner, more obdurate and inſenſible?

4. He gave them waters out of the rock, and all the deſert through cauſed the ſalutary ſtreams to follow them. That rock was Chriſt; from him ſtill flow, for every believer's uſe, full ſtreams of grace and conſolation, to chear them in their paſſage through this world's howling wilderneſs; nor will he ever leave or forſake them, till, from drinking at the ſtream below, he ſhall bring them to the fountain-head above, and fill them with eternal conſolations and glory in the heavenly Canaan.

PSALM CXV.

Many ancient tranſlations join this pſalm to that which goes next before it, the Septuagint particularly, and the vulgar Latin; but it is in the Hebrew a diſtinct pſalm. In it we are taught to give glory, 1. To God, and not to ourſelves, ver. 1. 2. To God, and not to idols, ver. 2—8. We muſt give glory to God, (1.) By truſting in him, and in his promiſe and bleſſing, ver. 9—15. (2.) By bleſſing him, ver. 16—18.

1. [a] NOT unto us, O LORD, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's ſake. 2. Wherefore ſhould the heathen ſay, [b] Where is now their God? 3. But [c] our God is in the heavens, he hath done whatſoever he pleaſed.
4. [d] Their idols are ſilver and gold, the work of men's hands. 5. They have mouths, [e] but they ſpeak not; eyes have they, but they ſee not. 6. They have ears, but they hear not; noſes have they, but they ſmell not.
7. They have hands, but they handle not; feet have they, [f] but they walk not; neither ſpeak they through their throat. 8. [g] They that make them, are like unto them; ſo is every one that truſteth in them.

[a] Iſa. xlviii. 11. Ezek. xxxvi. 32.
[b] Pſ. xlii. 3, 10. & lxxix. 10. Joel ii. 17.
[c] 1 Chron. xvi. 26. Pſ. cxxxv. 6. Dan. iv. 35.
[d] Deut. iv. 28. Pſal. cxxxv. 15, &c. Jer. x. 3, &c.
[e] Hab. ii. 18.
[f] Jer. x. 5.
[g] Pſ. cxxxv. 18. Hab. ii. 18, 19.

v. 1—8. The occaſion of this pſalm ſeems to be ſome diſtreſs of God's church and people, under which the pſalmiſt endeavours to comfort their hearts, encouraging them to exerciſe faith in God, ſhewing them the vanity of idols, and engaging them to give him praiſe for their ſure deliverance.

1. He bids the people of God aſcribe not to themſelves, but to him, the glory of their ſalvation, as derived from his boundleſs mercy, and ſecured by his unchangeable faithfulneſs and truth, v. 1. Note, We muſt be ever in our own eyes nothing, and Chriſt all in all: to his grace every good in us, or done by us, muſt be aſcribed, and at his feet our crowns in glory will be for ever laid.

2. He anſwers the taunts of the inſulting heathen, who, puffed up with their ſucceſs, ſpurned at Iſrael's God, as unable to deliver them. But our God is in heaven; and from his throne laughs them to ſcorn; he hath done whatſoever he pleaſed, able to ſave or deſtroy at his ſovereign pleaſure; whoſe will is law, his power omnipotent, and reſiſtance againſt it vain. How unlike their boaſted vanities! their rock is not as our rock; ſenſeleſs idols, the work of man, faſhioned after his form, but deſtitute of his faculties; they can neither hear, nor ſee, nor ſpeak, nor feel, nor walk; unable to help themſelves, much leſs their votaries, whoſe adorations prove them ſtupid, and ſenſeleſs as the ſtock and ſtone they worſhip.

9. [h] O Iſrael, truſt thou in the LORD: [i] he is their help and their ſhield. 10. O houſe of Aaron, truſt in the LORD: he is their help and their ſhield. 11. Ye that fear the LORD, truſt in the LORD: he is their help and their ſhield. 12. The LORD hath been mindful of us, [k] he will bleſs us, he will bleſs the houſe of Iſrael, he will bleſs the houſe of Aaron. 13.
[l] He will bleſs them that fear the LORD, both ſmall and great. 14. The LORD ſhall increaſe you more and more, you and your children. 15. You are bleſſed of the LORD, [m] which made heaven and earth. 16.
The heaven, even the heavens are the LORD's: but the earth hath he given to the children of men. 17.
[n] The dead praiſe not the LORD, neither any that go down into ſilence. 18. [o] But we will bleſs the LORD, from this time forth and for evermore. [p] Praiſe the LORD.

[h] Pſ. cxv. 19, 20.
[i] Pſ. xxxiii. 20. Prov. xxx. 5.
[k] Eph. i. 3.
[l] Pſ. cxxviii. 1, 4.
[m] Pſ. xcvi. 5.
[n] Ibid. vi. 5. & lxxxviii. 10, 11, 12. Iſa. xxxviii. 18.
[o] Dan. ii. 20.
[p] Pſal. civ. 35.

v. 9—18. Having expoſed the vanities of the heathen, the Pſalmiſt,

1. Exhorts God's people to truſt in him. The houſe of Iſrael, however diſtreſſed; the houſe of Aaron, the peculiar ſervants of the ſanctuary, and therefore the eſpecial object of the heathen hatred: yea, all that fear the Lord, ſhall find him their help and ſhield. Their help in every time of need, to deliver them; their ſhield in every hour of danger, to defend them. Note, They cannot fail, whoſe faith doth not; this enſures the final victory.

2. Abundant reaſon there is, why we ſhould truſt in him. He hath been mindful of us, as paſt experience comfortably teſtifies, and which ſhould engage us ſtill to commit ourſelves to him, confident of finding the ſame kind remembrance, protection, and care. He will bleſs us with all needful things of this life, and all the ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt Jeſus. He will bleſs the houſe of Iſrael, the congregation of his church in general, and the houſe of Aaron, his miniſters, who labour in the word and doctrine: yea, all that fear the Lord, both ſmall and great, every individual believer, whatever his circumſtances and condition may be, ſhall find the bleſſings of providence and grace exactly ſuited to his neceſſities. The Lord ſhall increaſe you more and more, ſo far as he ſees fit with worldly goods, and ſucceſs in earthly affairs; but eſpecially with that beſt increaſe of the gifts and graces of his ſpirit, enabling them to bring forth fruit unto God; and the mercy not be theirs alone, but deſcend upon their children: for you are the bleſſed of the Lord, and whom he bleſſeth muſt be bleſſed; he who made heaven and earth having all power to communicate the bleſſings he pronounces on his people.

3. They who truſt him will praiſe him, and find abundant matter for their ſongs. Great is he, and worthy to be praiſed; the heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's, not only the firmament ſpread over us, but all that is within that vail, ſecluded from mortal eye; the heaven of heavens, where the angelic hoſts take up their abode, and glorified ſpirits dwell, all own him their creator, preſerver, and rightful owner. And good as he is great: the earth hath he given to the children of men, appointed it for their uſe, and to be enjoyed to his glory and their comfort: juſtly therefore is the grateful tribute of thankſgiving due, and who ſhall pay it, if we do not? The dead praiſe not the Lord, neither any that go down into ſilence; thoſe who are gone down into the ſilent grave, can no more join the ſacred choir; thoſe who are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, have no heart to praiſe him. But we, who are maintained in life by the bounties of his providence, and are by his ſpirit quickened to a better life of grace in our ſouls; we, as moſt bounden, will bleſs the Lord from this time forth for evermore; whilſt ſojourners below, in this delightful work will we be employed, and when removed to that better world, our ſervice there ſhall be everlaſting praiſe. Hallelujah!

PSALM CXVI.

This is a thankſgiving pſalm, wherein he obſerves, 1. The great diſtreſs and danger that he was in, which almoſt drove him to deſpair, ver. 3, 10, 11. 2. The application he made to God in that diſtreſs, ver. 4. 3. The experience he had of God's goodneſs to him in anſwer to prayer; God heard him, ver. 1, 2. pitied him, ver. 5, 6. delivered him, ver. 8. 4. His care what acknowledgments he ſhould make of the goodneſs of God to him, ver. 12. (1.) He will love God, ver. 1. (2.) He will continue to call upon him, ver. 2, 13, 17. (3.) He will reſt in him, ver. 7. (4.) He will walk before him, ver. 9. (5.) He will pay his vows of thankſgiving, in which he will own the tender regard God had to him, and this publicly, ver. 13—15. and ver. 17—19. Laſtly, He will continue God's faithful ſervant to his life's end, ver. 16. Theſe are ſuch breathings of a holy ſoul as beſpeak it very happy.

1. I Love the LORD, becauſe he hath heard my voice, and my ſupplications. 2. Becauſe he hath inclined his ear unto me, therefore will I call upon him † as long as I live. 3. [a] The ſorrows of death compaſſed me, and the pains of hell gat hold upon me: I found trouble and ſorrow. 4. Then called I upon the name of the LORD; O LORD, I beſeech thee, deliver my ſoul. 5. Gracious is the LORD, and righteous: yea, our God is merciful. 6. The LORD preſerveth the ſimple: I was brought low and he helped me. 7. Return unto thy reſt, O my ſoul, for [b] the LORD hath dealt bountifully with thee. 8. For [c] thou haſt delivered my ſoul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling. 9. I will walk before the LORD [d] in the land of the living.

† Heb. In my days.
[a] Pſ. xviii. 5, 6.
[b] Ibid. xiii. 6.
[c] Ibid. lvi. 13.
[d] Ibid. xxvii. 13.

v. 1—9. We have here,

1. The Pſalmiſt's warm profeſſion of his love to God for the mercies he had taſted, and of his determined dependance upon him. I love the Lord, becauſe, &c. or, as the words ſtand in the original, I love, becauſe the Lord hath heard my voice, and my ſupplications; his gracious condeſcenſions in opening his ear to his requeſts, and ſpeedily anſwering his deſires, affected his ſoul with deepeſt gratitude, and engaged him to make the warmeſt returns of affection, and to perſevere in waiting ſtill upon him, therefore will I call upon him as long as I live. Note, (1.) Every anſwer to our prayers is a freſh obligation, and encouragement to pray without ceaſing. (2.) That ſoul is happy that can with David truly ſay, I love the Lord. (3.) In prayer ſhould our very parting breath expire, and then we ſhall go where all will be praiſe.

2. He mentions the deep diſtreſs from which God delivered him. The ſorrows of death compaſſed me, ſuch as dying men feel in their agony; the pains of hell, ſuch as ariſe in the conſcience from the ſting of guilt, or of the grave, which brought me to its very gates, gat hold upon me, and ſeized me as their prey: I found trouble and miſery; trouble which none but God could aſſuage, and miſery which he alone could remove. Note, (1.) The faithful are ſometimes brought into great diſtreſs; a diſtempered body, and a more afflicted ſoul, make them groan, being burdened. (2.) Death is terrible indeed, when accompanied with the fears and pains of hell: bleſſed be God for Jeſus Chriſt, who hath given us the victory over both.

3. His recourſe was to God, Then, in the midſt of the ſorrows I had in my heart, I called upon the name of the Lord, the Saviour of the miſerable and deſperate, and with importunity pleaded, O Lord, I beſeech thee, deliver my ſoul, that muſt infallibly periſh, unleſs thy power and grace reſcue me from deſtruction. Whenever the ſinner thus flies for refuge to the Divine mercy in Chriſt, he will not be caſt away, as,

4. David by bleſſed experience found. Gracious is the Lord, I have proved him ſo to my unſpeakable comfort, pardoning my guilty, delivering my helpleſs ſoul, and righteous; faithful to his promiſes, and juſt in all the diſpenſations of his providence and grace: yea, our God is merciful, infinite in compaſſions, as all his people muſt acknowledge. The Lord preſerveth the ſimple; thoſe who, without allowed guile, place on him their dependance: I was brought low, to the very brink of ruin; yet he magnified his grace the more in my deliverance, and he helped me: in conſequence of which my ſoul was delivered from death, from temporal, from eternal death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling into ſin, and the pit of death and hell. And cannot every believer witneſs this by his own bleſſed experience? but for theſe compaſſions of our God, long ſince conſigned to the grave, our bodies had ſeen corruption, and our ſouls had dropped into hell, where there is weeping, and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth. Well may we ſay, Our God is merciful.

5. He addreſſes his ſoul, and bids it now reſt in peace, under the guardian care of this gracious God. Return unto thy reſt, O my ſoul; whatever hath troubled thy repoſe, whither affliction, perſecution, temptation, or corruption, ſince all thy burdens are now caſt on the Lord, confidently expect, and quietly wait to ſee the ſalvation of God, for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee in all his paſt diſpenſations, and therefore deſerved to be truſted for all that is to come. Learn, my ſoul, thus to reaſon, and truſt ſtill in God!

6. He reſolves to devote to God's ſervice the life preſerved by his mercy. I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living, ſeeking to glorify him upon earth, by letting his light ſhine before men, and telling of his ſalvation from day to day; or it is expreſſive of his faith, as looking to that better world where life eternal reigns, and in which he truſted to ſtand among the redeemed throng, and join their everlaſting ſongs of praiſe.

10. [e] I believed, therefore have I ſpoken: I was greatly afflicted. 11. [f] I ſaid in my haſte, [g] All men are liars. 12. What ſhall I render unto the LORD, for all his benefits towards me? 13. I will take [h] the cup of ſalvation, and call upon the name of the LORD, 14. [i] I will pay my vows unto the LORD, now in the preſence of all his people. 15. [k] Precious in the ſight of the LORD, is the death of his ſaints. 16. O LORD, truly [l] I am thy ſervant, I am thy ſervant, and [m] the ſon of thy handmaid: thou haſt looſed my bonds. 17. I will offer to thee [n] the ſacrifice of thankſgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD. 18. [o] I will pay my vows unto the LORD, now in the preſence of all his people: 19. In the courts of the LORD's houſe, in the midſt of thee, O Jeruſalem. [p] Praiſe ye the LORD.

[e] 2 Cor. iv. 13.
[f] Pſal. xxxi. 22.
[g] Rom. iii. 4.
[h] Luke xxii. 17.
[i] Pſal. xxii. 25. Ver. 18.
[k] Num. xxiii. 10. Pſ. lxxii. 14. Rev. xiv. 13.
[l] Pſal. cxliii. 12.
[m] Pſ. lxxxvi. 16.
[n] Lev. vii. 12.
[o] Ver. 14.
[p] Pſ. civ. 35.

v. 10—19. The Septuagint, and other antient verſions, here begin a new pſalm, but the authority of the original, as well as the connection, ſhews it to be a part of the ſame.

1. He declares his unſhaken confidence in God. I believed the promiſes of his grace, of protection here, and glory hereafter, therefore have I ſpoken, to God in prayer, aſſured of being heard, to men with boldneſs, knowing the truth of what he declared. Note, Faith inſpires the heart with freedom of ſpeech, and no danger can diſcourage the faithful miniſter from proclaiming the goſpel truths, nor the faithful chriſtian from the profeſſion of them. See 2 Cor. iv. 13.

2. He owns the diſcouragements he was under. I was greatly afflicted; perſecuted by Saul, reviled, and reduced to the greateſt diſtreſs: and this is in a meaſure the lot of all the faithful. I ſaid in my haſte, raſhly, through the provocation I had received, or in my flight, when purſued by Saul or Abſalom, All men are liars, as having baſely forſaken and betrayed him. Note, (1.) In ſore provocations, and deep afflictions, the faith of God's ſtrongeſt ſaints have been ſometimes ſhaken, and they have ſpoken unadviſedly with their lips. (2.) There is a great difference between a ſurprize of temptation, and wilful and premeditate ſin. The words alſo will bear a different ſenſe, and ſpeak the language of his triumphant faith in his greateſt afflictions, yea, even when an exile, and all deſpaired of ever ſeeing him return, he could truſt God; and though all men concluded it was impoſſible he ſhould ever come to the throne, he could reſt on the promiſe. Compare Rom. iii. 4.

3. Overwhelmed with the ſenſe of the goodneſs of God, he ſeems at a loſs how to expreſs the infinite gratitude he owes, v. 12. and reſolves in his lips and life for ever to proclaim and exalt his great and glorious name. I will take the cup of ſalvation; the drink-offerings that ſhould attend his ſacrifice of thankſgiving, v. 17. and call upon the name of the Lord, praying to him; and praiſing him for all his mercies; in public, in the preſence of all the people, and the courts of the Lord's houſe, paying the vows he made in trouble, glorying in the profeſſion of his deep obligations to the God of his mercies, and encouraging others to the like open profeſſions of his ſervice; nor ſhould his lips only be employed in thankſgiving, his life ſhould be for ever devoted to his ſervice. O Lord, truly I am thy ſervant, in all fidelity and zeal; he repeats it to ſhew the heartineſs of his ſurrender, I am thy ſervant, and the ſon of thy handmaid, born of pious parents, and from early youth brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord: thou haſt looſed my bonds; the bonds of ſin, corruption, affliction, had bound him; but now ſet free, he became the ſervant of God, and his ſervice is the moſt perfect freedom. Note, (1.) The ſacrifice of thankſgiving is the tribute we are ever bound to pay. (2.) To be the ſervant of God is the moſt honourable of all titles; ſo thought Iſrael's king. (3.) When grace hath looſed the bands of ſin, the powerful pleaſing cords of love ſhall for ever bind our hearts to God.

4. He can look forward without fear, or meet death with ſatisfaction. Precious in the ſight of the Lord, is the death of his ſaints; he will not ſuffer the wicked to deſtroy them, preſerves them when there ſeemed to be but a ſtep between them and death; and when in his appointed time the hour arrives of their diſſolution, their laſt moments ſhall tell how dear they are to him who fall aſleep in Jeſus; yea, even in their graves they ſhall be remembered by him, and brought forth with glory at a reſurrection-day.

PSALM CXVII.

This pſalm contains a prophecy of goſpel grace to the Gentiles. 1. They are called to praiſe God, ver. 1. 2. Proper matter for that praiſe ſuggeſted, ver. 2.

1.[a] O Praiſe the LORD, all ye nations: praiſe him, [b] all ye people. 2. For his merciful kindneſs is great towards us: and the truth of the LORD endureth for ever. [c] Praiſe ye the LORD.

a Rom. xv. 11.
b Luke ii. 10.
c Pſ. civ. 35.

v. 1, 2. This ſhort pſalm is full of the moſt bleſſed tidings to the Gentile world, who in the fulneſs of time ſhould be called into the fellowſhip of the goſpel, and with the converted Jews become one fold under one ſhepherd.

1. The redeemed out of all nations are called upon to praiſe the Lord: to them the goſpel was to be preached, and in conſequence of their obedience to the faith, they would be admitted into the aſſembly of the church, and join in the ſongs of redeeming love.

2. Rich matter for their praiſes is ſuggeſted, v. 2. For his merciful kindneſs is great towards us, or hath abounded over us; kindneſs and mercy, vaſt as the waters of the deluge, abounding to the chief of ſinners, extending to millions of loſt ſouls, ſecuring to them pardon, ſtrength, comfort, glory, and this eternally, becauſe the truth of the Lord endureth for ever, and his faithfulneſs is engaged to make good to all believers, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles alſo, the promiſes of the everlaſting covenant; therefore praiſe ye the Lord.

PSALM CXVIII.

Though David's peaceable poſſeſſion of the kingdom, after all his ſufferings, might give immediate occaſion to this pſalm, we are taught by him, who is truth itſelf, Matth. xxi. 42. to ſee the more glorious accompliſhment of it in Jeſus our exalted Lord. In it, 1. David calls upon all about him to give to God the glory of his goodneſs, ver. 1—4 2. He encourageth himſelf and others to truſt in God from the experience he had had of God's power and pity in the great and kind things he had done for him, ver. 5—18. 3. He gives thanks for his advancement to the throne, as it was a figure of the exaltation of Chriſt, ver. 19—23. 4. The people, the prieſts, and the pſalmiſt himſelf, triumph in the proſpect of the Redeemer's kingdom, ver. 24—29. In ſinging this pſalm we muſt glorify God for his goodneſs, his goodneſs to us, and eſpecially his goodneſs to us in Jeſus Chriſt.

1. [a] O Give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: becauſe his mercy endureth for ever. 2. [b] Let Iſrael now ſay, that his mercy endureth for ever. 3. Let the houſe of Aaron now ſay, that his mercy endureth for ever. 4. Let them now that fear the LORD ſay, that his mercy endureth for ever. 5. [c] I called upon the LORD † in diſtreſs: the LORD anſwered me, [d] and ſet me in a large place. 6. [e] The LORD is ‡ on my ſide, I will not fear: what can man do unto me? 7. [f] The LORD taketh my part with them that help me: therefore ſhall I ſee my deſire upon them that hate me. 8. [g] It is better to truſt in the LORD, than to put confidence in man. 9. [h] It is better to truſt in the LORD, than to put confidence in princes. 10. All nations compaſſed me about: but in the name of the LORD will I § deſtroy them. 11. [i] They compaſſed me about, yea, they compaſſed me about: but in the name of the LORD I will deſtroy them. 12. They compaſſed me about [k] like bees, they are quenched [l] as the fire of thorns: for in the name of the LORD I will ‖ deſtroy them. 13. Thou haſt thruſt ſore at me that I might fall: but the LORD helped me. 14. [m] The LORD is my ſtrength and ſong, and is become my ſalvation. 15. The voice of rejoicing and ſalvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous: the right hand of the LORD doth valiantly. 16. The right hand of the LORD is exalted: the right hand of the LORD doth valiantly. 17. [n] I ſhall not die but live, and declare the works of the LORD. 18. The LORD hath chaſtned me ſore: [o] but he hath not given me over unto death.

a 1 Chron. xvi. 8. Pſ. cvi. 1. & cvii. 1. & cxxxvi. 1.
b Pſ. cxv. 9, &c.
c Ibid. cxx. 1.
† Heb. Out of diſtreſs.
d Pſ. xviii. 19.
e Ibid. xxvii. 1. & lvi. 4, 11. Iſa. li. 12. Heb. xiii. 6.
‡ Heb. For me.
f Pſ. liv. 4.
g Ibid. xl. 4. & lxii. 8, 9. Jer. xvii. 5, 7.
h Pſ. cxlvi. 3.
§ Heb. Cut them off.
i 1 Sam. xxiii. 26.
k Deut. i. 44.
l Eccleſ. vii. 6. Nat. i. 10.
‖ Heb. Cut them down.
m Ex. xv. 2. Iſa. xii. 2.
n Hab. i. 12.
o 2 Cor. i. 10.

v. 1—18. How great is the goodneſs of our God!

1. The pſalmiſt calls on all to give thanks unto him, Iſrael in general, the miniſters of the ſanctuary in particular, and thoſe that fear the Lord in every place, Jew or Gentile, muſt adore him the fountain of all good, and own his mercy everlaſting, v. 1—4.

2. He gives inſtances of this mercy in his own caſe. I called upon the Lord in diſtreſs, or out of that ſtrait, when compaſſed by Saul, or at the court of Achiſh, or Ziklag: and the Lord anſwered me, and ſet me in a large place, enabled me to riſe ſuperior to my foes, and brought me to the throne of Iſrael in ſpite of all oppoſition. Thus did Jeſus in the garden, and on the croſs cry out, and was anſwered in his reſurrection and aſcenſion to the right hand of God, to reign till his foes ſhould be made his footſtool.

3. He encourages his heart ſtill to truſt, and fear not; God eſpouſed his righteous cauſe, and therefore, though princes and people concurred with bitter hatred to perſecute him, he could confidently lean on his almighty arm, and doubted not but to ſee his deſire accompliſhed in their defeat and diſappointment: ſo much better is it to truſt in the Lord, than to put confidence in man, even the greateſt, v. 5—9. The Son of David in faith thus met the combined hatred of earth and hell, and more than conqueror triumphed over them; and every believer, dependant on his almighty ſtrength, need never fear what the world without, or corruption within, can do againſt him; he may boldly ſay, Heb. xiii. 6. The Lord is my helper, I will not fear what man can do unto me.

4. The number, violence, and inveteracy of his foes but ſerved to magnify the glory of the victory, which by Divine power he had obtained. All nations around him, Philiſtines, Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Syrians, ſeverally or confederate, attacked him, but fell before his conquering arm, as the fire among thorns, which, though for a moment furiouſly blazing, is preſently extinguiſhed; yea, though one domeſtic enemy, more implacable and dangerous than the reſt, even Saul ſore thruſt at him, or Abſalom the ſon of his boſom; yet the Lord helped him, and he was ſtrengthened. The faithful ſoul is thus compaſſed with legions of temptations, from ſin, the world, and his own heart; and in a more dangerous manner thruſt at by the ſin that doth moſt eaſily beſet him; but almighty grace ſupports him, and then he can never faint nor fail.

5. He rejoices in this ſalvation of God. The Lord is my ſtrength, to uphold me, on him alone my ſoul truſteth, and is holpen, and my ſong; for ever am I bound to praiſe him for the power he hath beſtowed, and the comforts I have received; and aſſured I am now of never-failing ſupport, for he is become my ſalvation, undertakes for me, and then, temporally, ſpiritually, and eternally, all my intereſts are ſecure: therefore the voice of rejoicing and ſalvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous, in mine for the mercies I have received, whilſt others rejoice in theſe mercies conferred upon me, and by their own experience alſo have the ſame cauſe of joy; for every righteous ſoul, accepted in Jeſus, juſtified by his righteouſneſs, and renewed by his grace, hath ſalvation begun, and may reſt aſſured it ſhall be compleated; for which, therefore, he is called upon to rejoice with joy unſpeakable, and full of glory.

6. He aſcribes the glory of all to God; it was not his own power or policy, but the right hand of the Lord which ſaved him, and was exalted in the victory wrought on his behalf. Note, Whatever conqueſts we win over corruption, or ſucceſs attends our labours, we muſt remember that it is not I, but the grace of God that was with me; to him therefore be given the everlaſting praiſe.

7. Paſt experience emboldens his hope, that he ſhall not die, but live, notwithſtanding the perſevering malice of his foes, and declare the works of the Lord, ſtanding a living monument of his power, grace, and faithfulneſs: yea, though the Lord hath chaſtned me ſore, with the rod of parental correction; yet he hath not given me over unto death, but I live, and reign triumphant over all my foes. The Son of David lives, and death hath no more dominion over him; though for a moment, under the chaſtiſement of our peace, his ſoul was put to grief, and the humanity bruiſed to the duſt for our iniquities; yet he is now alive for evermore, to declare the great ſalvation of God accompliſhed; and in him every believer may ſay, I ſhall not die eternally; becauſe he liveth, I ſhall live alſo.

19. [p] Open to me the gates of righteouſneſs: I will go into them, and I will praiſe the LORD: 20. [q] This gate of the LORD, [r] into which the righteous ſhall enter. 21. [s] I will praiſe thee, for thou haſt heard me, and art become my ſalvation. 22. [t] The ſtone which the builders refuſed, is become the head ſtone of the corner. 23. This is † the LORD's doing, it is marvellous in our eyes. 24. This is the day which the LORD hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it. 25. Save now, I beſeech thee, O LORD: O LORD, I beſeech thee, ſend now proſperity. 26. [u] Bleſſed be he that cometh in the name of the LORD: we have p Iſa. xxvi. 2.

q Pſal. xxiv. 7.
r Iſa. xxxv. 8. Rev. xxi. 27. & xxii. 14, 15.
s Pſal. xviii. 48, 49.
t Mat. xxi. 42. Mark xii. 10. Luke xx. 17. Acts iv. 11. Eph. ii. 20. 1 Pet. ii. 4, 7.
† Heb. From the Lord.
u Mat. xxi. 9. & xxiii. 39. Mark xi. 9. Luke xix. 38.

bleſſed you out of the houſe of the LORD. 27. God is the LORD, which hath ſhewed us [x] light: bind the ſacrifice with cords, even unto [y] the horns of the altar. 28. Thou art my God, and I will praiſe thee; thou art my God, I will exalt thee. 29. O give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

x Eſth. viii. 16.
y Ex. xxvii.

v. 12—29. That the pſalmiſt here is ſpeaking not of himſelf, but of his more glorious Son, is evident, Math. xxi. 42. Acts iv. 11, 12.

1. The gates of righteouſneſs are required to be thrown open. The gate of heaven, now, through the Redeemer's blood and righteouſneſs, is opened for himſelf and all believers: he is entered into it to praiſe the Lord for his great ſalvation, and all his righteous ones muſt follow him; of which David's return to the temporal ſanctuary, in anſwer to his prayer, after he had been ſo long an exile, was a type and figure.

2. His humiliation and exaltation are foretold; The ſtone which the builders refuſed, is become the head ſtone of the corner; David the outcaſt, is exalted to Iſrael's throne; and what is better far, Jeſus, though rejected by the Jewiſh rulers and people, as the Meſſiah, and crucified on a tree, is become the headſtone of the corner; angels, principalities, and powers, are made ſubject unto him, and he is made head over all things to his church, uniting both Jew and Gentile in one glorious temple, and the everlaſting object of his people's praiſe. This is the Lord's doing, the contrivance of his infinite wiſdom and love, and executed by his Divine power, in order for the ſalvation of his people, and it is marvellous in our eyes; angels with admiration behold the undertaking of an incarnate Saviour; and men, for whom this great ſalvation is wrought, are more peculiarly called upon to wonder and adore. This is the day the Lord has made, the glorious day of goſpel grace, wherein the ſun of righteouſneſs, riſing from the grave, ſhines with brighteſt beams of light and love on his choſen, and all his redeemed cannot but ſay, We will rejoice and be glad in it.

3. Our praiſes muſt now be directed to him exalted at the right hand of God, and become the Prince and Saviour of his people. Save now, I beſeech thee, O Lord, Hoſanna! let the King of glory live for ever, cry all his loyal ſubjects: O Lord, I beſeech thee, ſend now proſperity: let our exalted Jeſus have the hearts of his people, and the necks of his enemies; be the conqueror of death, hell, and ſin, and his kingdom be extended from pole to pole. Or this may alſo be the prayer of the faithful, in virtue of the exaltation of their King Jeſus; who, having all power in heaven and earth, is able to ſave them to the uttermoſt, to pardon, ſtrengthen, comfort, ſanctify, and glorify them eternally. Bleſſed be he that cometh in the name of the Lord, ordained of God to be the Mediator, appointed and enabled to execute the glorious work of redemption, and coming in the fulneſs of time to accompliſh it. Thus, Luke xix. 38. the people met him with praiſes; and thus with delight doth the ſinner welcome him to his ſoul, in all the riches of his love and grace, and cry with a tranſport of affection, "Come in, dear Lord, to me." We have bleſſed you out of the houſe of the Lord; we, the miniſters of the goſpel of Jeſus, declare to you, who believe in and praiſe him, that ye are bleſſed of him; we congratulate your happy lot, and ceaſeleſs add our prayers to yours, that every day ye may abound yet more and more, and receive increaſingly, out of his fulneſs, all bleſſings in time and in eternity: in anſwer to this prayer and ſacred benediction, the people, acknowledging their infinite obligations, reply, God is the Lord, the faithful, gracious, ever-living, and ever-loving God, which hath ſhewed us light, and hath ſhined on the face of his anointed Jeſus, and on us through him, with beams of mercy and grace; therefore are we bound to render the returns of gratitude: bind the ſacrifice with cords, even unto the horns of the altar; the bodies of ſlain beaſts indeed are no more needful, now the body of Jeſus hath been once offered, but the ſpiritual ſacrifices of prayer and praiſe are the well-pleaſing oblation God now accepts; and the devoted heart, offered up a living ſacrifice, ſhall pleaſe him better than the bullock that hath horns and hoofs.

4. David cloſes with his own profeſſions of his confidence in God, and his thankfulneſs for ſuch an intereſt in his favour, exhorting every faithful ſoul to join his grateful praiſes. Thou art my God, my covenant God, and therefore, in heart, lip, and life, I will praiſe and exalt thee: and moſt bounden are we to follow his example. O give thanks unto the Lord, ſo worthy to be praiſed, for he is good beyond all we can conceive, for his mercy endureth for ever, from eternity it was, and to eternity will endure; therefore praiſe the Lord, O my ſoul!

PSALM CXIX.

This pſalm ſeems to be a collection of David's pious and devout ejaculations, the ſhort and ſudden breathings and elevations of his ſoul to God, which he wrote down as they occurred, and towards the latter end of his time gathered them out of his day-book, where they lay ſcattered, added to them many like words, and digeſted them into this order. 1. The compoſure of it is ſingular. It is divided into twenty-two parts, according to the number of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet, and each part conſiſts of eight verſes; all the verſes of the firſt part beginning with Aleph, all the verſes of the ſecond with Beth, and ſo on, without any flaw, throughout the whole pſalm. This might prove of uſe to the memory, and young people would the eaſier learn it by heart, and retain it the better even in old age. 2. The general ſcope and deſign of it is to magnify the law, and make it honourable; to ſet forth the excellency and uſefulneſs of divine revelation, and to recommend it to us, not only for the entertainment, but for the government of ourſelves, by the pſalmiſt's own example, who ſpeaks by experience of the benefit of it, and of the good impreſſions made upon him by it; for which he praiſeth God, and earneſtly prays, from firſt to laſt, for the continuance of God's grace with him, to direct and quicken him in the way of his duty. There are ten ſeveral words by which divine revelation is called in this pſalm; and they are expreſſive of the whole compaſs of it, informing us both what God expects from us, and telling us what we may expect from him. The things contained in the ſcripture, and drawn from it, are here called, (1.) God's law, becauſe they are enacted by him as our ſovereign. (2.) His way, becauſe they are the rule of our obedience. (3.) His teſtimonies, becauſe they are ſolemnly declared to the world, and atteſted beyond contradiction. (4.) His commandments, becauſe given with authority, and (as the word ſignifies) lodged with us as a truſt. (5.) His precepts, becauſe preſcribed to us, and not left indifferent. (6.) His word, or ſaying, becauſe it is the declaration of his mind, and Chriſt the eſſential eternal Word is all in all in it. (7.) His judgments, becauſe framed in infinite wiſdom, and becauſe by them we muſt both judge and be judged. (8.) His righteouſneſs, becauſe it is all holy, juſt, and good, and the rule and ſtandard of righteouſneſs. (9.) His ſtatutes, becauſe they are fixed and determined, and of perpetual obligation. (10.) His truth or faithfulneſs, becauſe the principles upon which the divine law is built, are eternal truths. And I think there is but one verſe (it is ver. 122.) in all this long pſalm, in which there is not one or other of theſe ten words; only in three or four they are uſed concerning God's providence, or David's practice, as ver. 75, 84, 121. and ver. 132, they are called God's name. The whole expreſſes the affection David bore to God's word, and is deſigned to ſtir up our affection towards it, who enjoy ſo much more of divine revelation than ever he was favoured with.

1. ALEPH.

1. BLeſſed are [a] the † undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the LORD. 2. Bleſſed are they that keep his teſtimonies, and [b] that ſeek him with the whole heart. 3. [c] They alſo do no iniquity: they walk in his ways. 4. Thou haſt commanded us to keep thy precepts diligently. 5. [d] O that my ways were directed to keep thy ſtatutes! 6. [e] Then ſhall I not be aſhamed, when I [f] have reſpect unto all thy commandments. 7. [g] I will praiſe thee with uprightneſs of heart, when I ſhall have learned † thy righteous judgments. 8. I will keep thy ſtatutes: O forſake me not utterly.

a Ezek. xxviii. 15.
† Or, ſincere.
b Deut. iv. 29. Jer. xxix. 13.
c 1 John iii. 9. & v. 18.
d 2 Cor. iii. 5.
e Job xxii. 26.
f Luke i. 6.
g Ver. 171.
† Heb. The judgments of thy righteouſneſs.

א Aleph. The Firſt Part.

v. 1—8. Whilſt happineſs is the univerſal purſuit, we might wonder to hear the general murmur of diſappointment, and to ſee thoſe who have moſt earneſtly engaged in the ſearch as far removed from it as at the beginning: the reaſon is, men miſtake eſſentially; and not knowing where the true joy is to be found, continue ſeeking reſt and finding none. The pſalmiſt here therefore points out the way, and they who are wiſe to follow him, will find therein happineſs preſent and eternal.

1. He deſcribes the truly happy. They are undefiled in the way; found in Chriſt the way to glory, waſhed in his blood from every ſpot of ſin, perfect and compleat in his righteouſneſs, and ſincere in their deſire to pleaſe God in all things; and walk in the law of the Lord, guided by it as their rule of duty: they keep his teſtimonies, his revealed will as a ſacred depoſit, ſolicitous to obey the commands, and obſerve the inſtituted ordinances, without daring to add thereto, or diminiſh therefrom, and ſeek him with their whole heart, in ceaſeleſs prayer looking for ſtrength and help from him; cleaving to him with undivided affection, and deſiring daily to love him more, and ſerve him better. They alſo do no iniquity, not that they are without a corrupted nature, or in their temper and conduct able to ſtand before the ſpirituality of God's law, but they have no allowed guile, nor make ſin their practice or delight; and their new man, the Divine nature of which they have partaken, doth not commit ſin: they walk in his ways, whatever trials, temptations, and allurements would diſcourage or enſnare them, they make ſtrait paths for their feet, and turn not aſide to the right hand or the left. My ſoul, ſay, is this character thine!

2. He prays, according to God's commands, that he may be able to approve himſelf faithful. Thou haſt commanded us, and thy authority is ſovereign, thy title to our obedience unqueſtionable, as, the Creator, Preſerver, and above all the Redeemer of man, and therefore we are bound to keep thy commandments diligently, with that ardor, perſeverance, and fidelity, which is ſo much our duty. O then that my ways were made ſo direct, will every true hearted believer ſay with the pſalmiſt, to keep thy ſtatutes! More than human ſtrength is neceſſary to enable us to walk and pleaſe God, and therefore to him muſt our prayer be directed, that he may lead us in the way he commands, and write on our hearts the law he enjoins.

3. He promiſes himſelf the comfort of ſuch a conduct. Then ſhall I not be aſhamed, either of my hope towards God, as deluſive, or of appearing before him in his worſhip, or of my profeſſion before men, when I have reſpect unto all thy commandments, look at them as my directory, eſteem them all to be right, and, without reſerve or exception, deſire to have my will and ways conformed thereunto; for this is our rejoicing, the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſimplicity, and godly ſincerity, we have our converſation in the world.

4. He reſolves to praiſe God with uprightneſs of heart, when he ſhall have learned his righteous judgments, or the judgments of his righteouſneſs, his commandments, which are altogether righteous, or the diſpenſations of his providence, which are conformable to the ſtricteſt juſtice. Much he had known, more he had yet to learn, and all would ſerve to miniſter matter for his praiſes.

5. He purpoſes, through God's grace, to approve his fidelity unſhaken. I will keep thy ſtatutes; ſuch is my fixed deſire and deſign: O forſake me not utterly; if but a moment left of thee, I cannot ſtand upright; if forſaken by thee, I inſtantly muſt prove an apoſtate; but leave me not, Lord, and then I ſhall walk and not be weary, and run and not be faint. May my ſoul thus ever purpoſe and pray!

2. BETH.

9. [h] Wherewith ſhall a young man cleanſe his way?
by taking heed thereto [i] according to thy word. 10.
With my whole heart have I ſought thee: O let me not wander from thy commandments. 11. [k] Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not ſin againſt thee. 12. Bleſſed art thou, O LORD: [l] teach me thy ſtatutes. 13. With my lips have I declared all the judgments of thy mouth. 14. I have rejoiced in the way of thy teſtimonies, as much as in all riches. 15. [m] I will meditate in thy precepts, and have reſpect unto thy ways. 16. I will delight myſelf in thy ſtatutes: I will not forget thy word.

[h] Mic. vi. 6.
[i] John xvii. 17.
[k] Pſ. xxxvii. 31. Luke ii. 19, 51.
[l] Ver. 26, 33, 64, 68, 108, 124, 135.
[m] Pſ. i. 2.

ב Beth. The Second Part.

v. 9—16. Youth is the time to ſerve the Lord, and happy they who ſeek him early.

1. The queſtion is put. Wherewith ſhall a young man cleanſe his way? the way of all fleſh is corrupt and polluted, and young perſons expoſed to eſpecial temptations from fleſhly luſts, that war againſt the ſoul, defile the conſcience, and plunge them into perdition and deſtruction; great need therefore have they to enquire how they may be preſerved from the pollutions of the world.

2. The anſwer is given. By taking heed thereto according to thy word, or by obſerving what is according to thy word; this chart will enable him to ſteer clear of the rocks, on which others make ſhipwreck of faith and a good conſcience.

3. David profeſſes his own attachment to God, and prays for wiſdom, direction, and ſupport. With my whole heart have I ſought thee; thy word to teach, thy grace to guide me: O let me not wander, as my poor ſinful heart is too prone to do, from thy commandments. A child of God is ever jealous, knowing his weakneſs and corruption, leaſt his falſe heart ſhould err from the way; and therefore to prevent it, he deſires to ſay with David, Thy word have I hid within my heart, mixed with faith, fixed in my memory, and treaſured up as the moſt valuable poſſeſſion, and the grand preſervative, that I might not ſin againſt thee; having an anſwer ready to every temptation, and a conſtant warning from it of the evil, danger, and baſeneſs of ſin. Bleſſed art thou, O Lord! for all thou haſt done for me; infinitely bleſſed in thyſelf, thou doſt delight to bleſs thy people: teach me thy ſtatutes, all I yet know is very imperfect, my own reſearches are weak and poor; thou, Lord, muſt teach me, or I ſhall never know as I ought to know, or be truly wiſe unto ſalvation.

4. He reflects with ſatisfaction on the paſt. With my lips have I declared all the judgments of thy mouth; telling of God's word, its doctrines and precepts; exhorting others to all holy obedience, and ſpeaking his own experience of the excellence of the good ways of God. I have rejoiced in the way of thy teſtimonies, as my ſupreme happineſs and delight, as much as any worldling doth in all his riches, or above all riches, counting them but dung and loſs, compared with a ſenſe of God's love, the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, the ineſtimably precious promiſes, and the joy ariſing from a faithful adherence to him.

5. He reſolves from the paſt experience of the bleſſedneſs of God's ways to perſevere in them. I will meditate in thy precepts, with them ſhall my thoughts be occupied riſing up and lying down; and inwardly digeſted, they ſhall not only be ſtored up in the memory, but afford the moſt ſweet refreſhment to my ſoul; and have reſpect unto thy ways, or look unto them, as the traveller eyes the path before him, careful not to deviate from the right way. I will delight myſelf in thy ſtatutes; they have been my joy, and every day the more I know of them, the farther I walk in them, the greater my delight ſhall be: I will not forget thy word, ever upon my heart I will keep it, ready to anſwer every emergence, to warn me when I err, to direct me when I doubt, to ſtrengthen me when I am tempted, to comfort me when I am dejected, to recover me when I am fallen, and to preſerve me when I ſtand. Reader, with ſelf-application enquire into thy experience, and ſee how far it correſponds with the bleſſed pſalmiſt.

3. GIMEL.

17. [n] Deal bountifully with thy ſervant, that I may live, and keep thy word. 18. † Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.
19. [o] I am a ſtranger in the earth, hide not thy commandments from me. 20. [p] My ſoul breaketh for the longing that it hath unto thy judgments at all times. 21.
Thou haſt rebuked the proud that are curſed, which do err from thy commandments. 22. Remove from me [q] reproach and contempt, for I have kept thy teſtimonies.
23. [r] Princes alſo did ſit, and [s] ſpeak againſt me: but thy ſervant did meditate in thy ſtatutes. 24. [t] Thy teſtimonies alſo are my delight, and ‡ my counſellors.

[n] Ibid. cxvi. 7.
† Heb. Reveal,
[o] Gen. xlvii. 9. 1 Chron. xxix. 15. Pſ. xxxix. 12. 2 Cor. v. 6. Heb. xi. 13.
[p] Pſ. xlii. 1. & lxiii. 1. & lxxxiv. 2.
[q] Pſ. xxxix. 8.
[r] Ibid. ii. 2.
[s] Ezek. xxxiii. 30.
[t] Ver. 77, 92.
‡ Heb. Men of my counſel.

ג Gimel. The Third Part.

v. 17—24. We have here,

1. The pſalmiſt's prayer. Deal bountifully with thy ſervant; every bleſſing we can hope for, comes from the mere bounty of God, who giveth liberally to thoſe who aſk him, and upbraideth not; as his ſervants we muſt depend upon him, and ſhall be directed and ſupported by him; that I may live; by ſin our natural life is forfeited, our ſouls ſunk in ſpiritual death, and liable to eternal death; well may we therefore cry, That I may live, ſpiritually by the quickning power of Jeſus, eternally through the free gift of God, and temporally as long as it ſhall be for God's glory; this being the only purpoſe for which a good man wiſhes to be here: that I may keep thy word, faithful myſelf, zealous to ſpread the knowledge of it, and to preſerve it pure and incorrupt from every adulteration: and that I may do ſo, Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law; we are by nature blind to ſpiritual objects; the wonders of God's word are far beyond the keeneſt eye of unenlightned reaſon, 1 Cor. xi. 14. till Jeſus opens our underſtandings, we cannot underſtand the ſcriptures aright, Luke xxiv. 4, 5. but in his light we ſhall ſee light, behold the myſtery unfolded, a righteous God juſt in pardoning, a holy law magnified to the uttermoſt, Chriſt the end of it, for righteouſneſs to the ſinner, and the guilty and helpleſs pardoned and ſaved, both from the condemnation and the bondage of the law. Lord, may I ſee daily more diſtinctly and clearly theſe wondrous things!

2. He pleads with God. I am a ſtranger upon earth, my abode is ſhort here, and quickly I am to paſs from this changing ſcene, having here no abiding city, therefore hide not thy commandments from me, but ſhew me how to act in this land of my pilgrimage, guide me ſafely through it, and teach me the neareſt road to that eternal home whither I deſire to go. Note, (1.) It is a reflection we ſhould often make, that we are ſtrangers and pilgrims on the earth, that as ſuch our affections may be diſengaged from it. (2.) They who are moſt habitually living under the influence of this truth, will be moſt importunate to obtain ſtrength and ſupport from God in their journey through time into eternity, that they may never think of taking up their reſt in this ſtrange and polluted land.

3. He profeſſes his eager longings after God's word, v. 20. to know it more fully, to obey it more zealouſly: his ſoul breaks with the vehemence of the deſire, and at all times; it was not a ſudden fit of devotion, but his habitual temper. Ah! how unlike him are we!

4. He gives the character, and denounces the condemnation of the wicked, v. 21. They are proud, impiouſly rejecting God's government, deſpiſing his law, and contemning his threatnings; or they are vainly puffed up with the conceit of their own goodneſs and excellency above other men, of all ſins in God's ſight the moſt abominable. They err from thy commandments; whether openly profane, or proudly ſelf-righteous, they alike fatally err, and the wrath of God abideth on them; they are curſed, the rebukes of God purſue them, as the rebellious and proud of old have felt, whether angels or men, and as to eternity will be proved, when the Judge of quick and dead ſhall finally determine the ſinner's everlaſting doom.

5. He begs to be preſerved from the reproach and revilings of men, for ſuch have ever been the lot of the beſt and greateſt ſaints of God; let us then never think it ſtrange to ſhare with them. Remove it, or, roll it from me, as a heavy load; for I have kept thy teſtimonies: this is the cauſe for which I ſuffer, for my fidelity; and ſuffer what I may, to them will I ſtill adhere, in ſpite of all the ſcorn and oppoſition even of the greateſt. Princes alſo did ſit and ſpeak againſt me; the great men of Saul's court againſt David, and the rulers againſt Chriſt, 1 Cor. xi. 8. And thus the mighty and noble will generally ſtill be found to do againſt the poor and deſpiſed followers of Jeſus; but may we ever be enabled to ſay with him, Thy ſervant did meditate in thy ſtatutes; inattentive to their revilings, undiſturbed in his meditations, and ſteadily perſevering in the path of duty. Nay,

6. He found in them ſtill his ſupreme delight. Thy teſtimonies alſo are my delight; in them I find a joy the world can neither give nor take away: nay, as our tribulations abound, our conſolations will uſually abound alſo; ſo that the world's enmity contributes but the more to our comfort; and my counſellors, or the men of my counſel. He conſulted not with fleſh and blood, but with better adviſers, the ſcriptures of truth; and we are then ſure we are right, when God's word is thus our conſtant guide and rule, and ſhall ever find the comfort of following its bleſſed directions.

4. DALETH.

25. [u] My ſoul cleaveth unto the duſt: [x] quicken thou me according to thy word. 26. I have declared my ways, and thou heardeſt me: [y] teach me thy ſtatutes. 27. Make me to underſtand the way of thy precepts: ſo ſhall I talk of thy wondrous works. 28. My ſoul † melteth for heavineſs: ſtrengthen thou me according unto thy word. 29. Remove from me the way of lying: and grant me thy law graciouſly. 30. I have choſen the way of truth: thy judgments have I laid before me. 31. I have ſtuck unto thy teſtimonies: O LORD, put me not to ſhame. 32. I will run the way of thy commandments, when thou ſhalt [a] enlarge my heart.

[u] Pſ. xliv. 25.
[x] Ver. 40, 88, 107, 149, 156, 159. Pſal. cxliii. 11.
[y] Ver. 12. Pſ. xxv. 4. & xxvii. 11. & lxxxvi. 11.
[z] Pſ. cvii. 26.
† Heb. Droppeth.
[a] Iſa. lx. 5.

ד Daleth. The Fourth Part.

v. 25—32. This portion begins,

1. With his complaint, and humble plea; for every redeemed ſoul muſt expect to meet with trials, and ſometimes to groan, being burdened. My ſoul cleaveth to the duſt; ſunk under diſeaſe of body, or dejection of mind, and ready to drop into the grave; or feeling the vile affections of a fallen nature, attached to ſome earthly good, light, vain, and unſatisfactory, as the duſt the wind ſcattereth. Ah, Lord! how often doth this fooliſh heart of mine thus cleave to the duſt! Quicken thou me; reſtore my body to health, raiſe up my drooping ſpirits, and eſpecially enliven my dead heart, that in warm affections it may aſcend to thee, and leave this vile earth, and all things in it, far behind; according to thy word, on the promiſes of which I place my dependance, and thence draw my encouragement to pray, and expect an anſwer of peace.

2. He caſts his care upon God, proved by paſt experience ſo kind to hear and help him, for which he reſolves to render continual praiſe. I have declared my ways; either his ſinful ways, which he lamented; or his diſtreſſes, which he ſpread before the Lord; or the holy purpoſes of his heart, which in prayer he had uttered to him; and thou heardeſt me, pardoning, pitying, relieving, confirming, ſtrengthening me. A gracious ſoul hath thus ever one to go to, who is as able to relieve all his wants, as he is ever ready to hear his prayer. What an unſpeakable comfort! Teach me thy ſtatutes, how I may walk and pleaſe thee, in gratitude for the mercy I have received. Make me to underſtand the way of thy precepts; I want no higher teaching than thy word, opened by thy ſpirit: ſo ſhall I talk of thy wondrous works; thus inſtructed I ſhall be able to ſpeak of them with underſtanding, with boldneſs, with delight. Note, We ſhall then ſpeak of the things of God feelingly, and with effect, when we ſpeak experimentally, from what we have known in our own ſouls.

3. He prays for help in his diſtreſs, and preſervation of his ſoul from error and ſin. My ſoul melteth, or drops, for heavineſs; either through the preſſures of affliction, temptation, deſertion, or corruption; and feeling his own weakneſs, he turns his eyes to one mighty to ſave; Strengthen thou me, according to thy word, with ſuch might in the inner man, that I may be able to conflict with, and overcome the trials I meet; and this according to the promiſes which thou haſt given me, to engage my dependance, and be my ſupport. Remove from me the way of lying; for David had felt himſelf thus ſurprized, 1 Sam. xxi. 2, 13. xxvii. 10. or rather, the way of falſhood; keep me from all errors in principle and practice, that I may not deviate from the doctrines of truth, or inſtituted ordinances of worſhip. Grant me thy law graciouſly, which is the great preſervative; and matter of infinite favour it is, that this bleſſed word is ſo fully made known to us, ſo kindly vouchſafed to us. Moſt inexcuſable are thoſe, who go to hell with Bibles in their hands.

4. He declares what hath been his choice, and what is ſtill his purpoſe, and truſts in this way he ſhall know no ſhame. I have choſen the way of truth, Chriſt, who is eminently the way and the truth; and his word, this he choſe, convinced of the excellence of the way, and renouncing every other. Thy judgments have I laid before me, as the pattern after which I fain would fairly copy. I have ſtuck to thy teſtimonies, with unſhaken ſteadineſs, in ſpite of every effort of temptation to make me quit this hold. O Lord, put me not to ſhame; let me never be aſhamed of my confidence, as diſappointed of my hope; or a ſhame to my profeſſion, as unfaithful; and hereunto will every believer heartily ſay, Amen. I will run the way of thy commandments, with chearfulneſs, diligence, and delight, when thou ſhalt enlarge my heart; for from him all the ability is derived. It is his love ſhed abroad can alone give wings to our ſoul, and his quickening Spirit make our feet to move ſwift and ſteady in the way to glory.

5. HE.

33. [b] Teach me, O LORD, the way of thy ſtatutes, and I ſhall keep it unto the end. 34. Give me underſtanding, and I ſhall keep thy law, yea, I ſhall obſerve it with my whole heart. 35. Make me to go in the path of thy commandments, for therein do I delight. 36. Incline my heart unto thy teſtimonies, [c] and not to covetouſneſs. 37. [d] Turn away mine eyes from [e] beholding vanity: and [f] quicken thou me in thy way. 38. [g] Stabliſh thy word unto thy ſervant, who is devoted to thy fear. 39. [h] Turn away my reproach which I fear: for thy judgments are good. 40. Behold, I have longed after thy precepts: [i] quicken me in thy righteouſneſs.

[b] Ver. 12, 26.
[c] 1 Tim. vi. 10.
[d] Iſa. xxxiii. 15.
[e] Prov. xxiii. 5.
[f] Ver. 25.
[g] 2 Sam. vii. 25.
[h] Ver. 22.
[i] Ver. 25.

ה He. The Fifth Part.

v. 33—40. A wiſe and gracious man was the pſalmiſt; but he was ſenſible his attainments, both in knowledge and grace, were very low; and he earneſtly longed to increaſe in both with the increaſe of God. We have here,

1. What he prays for, v. 33—35. (1.) To be taught God's way, and bleſt with ſpiritual underſtanding. (2.) To be inclined and diſpoſed, yea, drawn with the cords of love, and made to go in the way of God's commandments; for unleſs a gracious violence were uſed with our ſtubborn hearts, we ſhould neither be willing nor able to walk before God.

2. What he promiſes. I will keep thy law, in the ſtrength of the grace thou doſt miniſter, unto the end, conſtantly and perſeveringly; and with my whole heart, cordially, ſincerely, and univerſally; for therein do I delight. Note, When our duty becomes our delight, then our ſoul truly proſpers.

3. What he prays againſt. (1.) Covetouſneſs, ver. 36. one of the moſt rooted and moſt dangerous of all evils; the love of gold, and the love of God, being utterly incompatible, and no man capable of ſerving two maſters. (2.) Vanity, the vain pomp and glory of the world; the honours, profits, and pleaſures, ſo tempting and enſnaring to the ſoul. He deſires he may be not only kept from the love of them in his heart, but removed from the beholding them: for they who would abſtain from evil, muſt turn away their eyes from the temptation; for by looking, concupiſcence is kindled as with a fire. (3.) Reproach, that God would turn it away, v. 39. He feared it, for ſometimes he had given ſad occaſion for it; and, among his bittereſt burdens, felt the diſhonour he had brought upon God thereby; and he feared leſt he ſhould again return unto folly, and give new occaſion to the adverſaries to ſpeak reproachfully. For thy judgments are good, and therefore it would be grievous to hear theſe good ways of the Lord blaſphemed, as they too often are through the falls of profeſſors.

4. What he truſts to; the faithful promiſes of God, v. 38. Quicken thou me in thy way; whilſt ten thouſand objects would divert me from it, and manifold temptations retard my courſe, let thy grace hold up my goings, and enable me to perſevere vigorouſly and ſteadily. Stabliſh thy word; enable me to truſt confidently upon it, and make me ſee the bleſſed fulfilment of it in the ſtrength, comfort, and ſalvation miniſtered unto thy ſervant, my moſt honoured title, higher than that of Iſrael's king, who is devoted to thy fear, to ſerve thee with filial awe, or which leads to thy fear, this being the bleſſed effect of that word, that it makes us jealous of offending.

5. What he longed for, v. 40. Thou ſeeſt my heart, and to thee I can appeal. Behold, and ſee, I have longed after thy precepts, that I may know them more diſtinctly, feel them graven upon my heart more deeply, and walk in the way of them more perfectly than I have ever yet done. Quicken me in thy righteouſneſs, in thy righteous ways, according to thy faithful promiſes; and as thou haſt given me to will, give me to do alſo of thy good pleaſure.

6. VAU.

41. Let thy mercies come alſo unto me, O LORD; even thy ſalvation according to thy word. 42. † So ſhall I have wherewith to anſwer him that reproacheth me; for I truſt in thy word. 43. And take not the word of truth utterly out of my mouth; for I have hoped in thy judgments. 44. So ſhall I keep thy law continually, for ever and ever. 45. And I will walk ‡ at liberty: for I ſeek thy precepts. 46. I will ſpeak of thy teſtimonies alſo [k] before kings, and will not be aſhamed. 47. And I will delight myſelf in thy commandments, which I have loved. 48. My hands alſo will I lift up unto thy commandments, which I have loved: and [l] I will meditate in thy ſtatutes.

† Or, So ſhall I anſwer him that reproacheth me in any thing.
‡ Heb. At large.
k Dan. iii. 13, 16. Mat. x. 18, 19.
l Ver. 15.

ו Vau. The Sixth Part.

v. 41—48. We have here,

1. The prayer he offered. [1.] Let thy mercies come alſo unto me; the ſure mercies of David, flowing from the everlaſting covenant, and comprehending every bleſſing of pardon, grace, comfort, glory; even thy ſalvation, the fulneſs and perfection of it, according to thy word, which hath promiſed it, and therefore is the beſt plea to urge for the fulfilment of it. [2.] Take not the word of thy truth utterly out of my mouth. He deſired ever to feed on its ſweet contents; to be ſpeaking of the things contained therein without fear or ſhame; and to have an anſwer ready from it for every one who ſhould aſk him a reaſon of the hope that was in him.

2. The graces he exerciſed. [1.] Faith. So ſhall I have wherewith to anſwer him that reproacheth me; for I truſt in thy word; in the word of promiſe, which being ſure in its accompliſhment, he doubted not but he ſhould be able to anſwer the cavils of thoſe who ſuggeſted there was no help for him in his God; and they beholding his ſalvation ſo unlike what they looked for, would be confounded and aſhamed. [2.] Hope. I have hoped in thy judgments; either to ſee thine arm made bare in vindicating my wrongs, and avenging me of mine enemies; or, as expreſſive of his unſhaken hope in God's word, amidſt every diſcouragement. [3.] Love, v. 47. I have loved thy commandments, not only looked on them as my duty, but approved them as excellent, and delighted in them in the inner man as my richeſt treaſure. My ſoul, is ſuch thy ſtate!

3. The practice he propoſed to himſelf, and which, happy will it be for us if we follow. So ſhall I keep thy word continually; affected with a ſenſe of divine mercies, and exerciſing faith, hope, and love, in the ſure promiſes of God, I ſhall obey with conſtancy and perſeverance for ever and ever. I will walk at liberty, with readineſs and delight, delivered from the bondage of corruption, and engaged in that bleſſed ſervice which is perfect freedom. Note, No ſlavery like ſin; no liberty ſo invaluable as deliverance from it. Or, I will walk at large, in all the extent of God's holy will; for I ſeek thy precepts; I have done ſo, and through grace continue ſo to do. Nor will he only himſelf walk thus, but deſires to make all men know, and invite all to partake of his mercies. I will ſpeak of thy teſtimonies alſo before kings; and, though too frequently theſe great ones deſpiſe and ridicule religion, I will not be aſhamed. Note, (1.) If we are not a ſhame to our religion, we never need be aſhamed of it. (2.) God's word is the beſt topic of converſation; and though the world calls it cant to introduce that ſubject, the people of God muſt ſpeak what they have known and believed, and what they delight in, and makes them happy. I will delight myſelf in thy commandments, as my chief joy, and lift up my hands to them, eager to climb the ſummit of perfection, embracing them with cordial affection, and praying for power and grace to walk more conformably thereunto: and I will meditate in thy ſtatutes, that I may gain a more thorough acquaintance with them, and conſider how I may beſt fulfil them. Behold, and imitate! This is the way; walk ye in it!

7. ZAIN.

49. Remember the word unto thy ſervant, [m] upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope. 50. This is my comfort in my affliction: for thy word hath quickned me. 51. The proud have had me greatly in deriſion: yet have I not declined from thy law. 52. I remembred thy judgments of old, O LORD; and have comforted myſelf. 53. [n] Horror hath taken hold upon me, becauſe of the wicked that forſake thy law. 54. Thy ſtatutes have been my ſongs in the houſe of my pilgrimage. 55. [o] I have remembred thy name, O LORD, in the night, and have kept thy law. 56. This I had, becauſe I kept thy precepts.

m Ver. 74, 81, 147.
n Ezra ix. 3.
o Pſ. lxiii. 6.

ז Zain. The Seventh Part.

v. 49—56. The eyes of the ſervant are to the hand of his maſter.

1. He pleads, Remember the word upon which thou haſt cauſed me to hope: not that God ever can or doth forget, but he will be enquired of by us, and is well-pleaſed to have his promiſes urged by us in prayer.

2. He profeſſes the comfort he found in this word, even in his afflictions, v. 50. David had a full cup of them, and every believer has his portion: but this word is a cordial for every fear, a balm for every wound. For thy word hath quickned me: it called me at firſt from death to life, and ever ſince it hath revived my fainting heart, and rouſed me up to freſh vigour, when my graces languiſhed.

3. The ſcorn he met with was one of his troubles, in which he found conſolation from this word. The proud have had me greatly in deriſion; for no eminence of ſtation, or purity of manners, can preſerve us from the revilings of men. They who live according to God's word, may expect the laugh of fools, and the ridicule of the ſcorners, who think contempt of godlineſs to be a mark of wit and wiſdom. Yet have I not declined from thy law: none of theſe things ever moved him a ſtep out of the way of duty: he knew the value of it too well to be laughed out of his religion; and indeed they can have very little love for Chriſt and his ways, who cannot bear for him the ſmile of contempt, or the ſcoff of folly. I remembred thy judgments of old, O Lord; thoſe executed on the proud, and the interpoſitions of his providence in behalf of his people; and have comforted myſelf, both in the conſciouſneſs of his ſimplicity, and God's regard, which infinitely overpaid the world's ſcorn; and in the expectation, that he who had formerly ſcattered the proud, and ſupported his people, would again appear for his help.

4. He expreſſes his dread on foreſeeing the deſtruction of the ungodly, ſo terrible would it prove, v. 53. Little as the wicked think of their danger, and trivial as they count their offences againſt God's law, a faithful ſoul trembles for them, ſhocked at their impiety, grieved for the miſchief they do, and with horror beholding the precipice of eternal ruin, to the brink of which ſo careleſly they are ruſhing.

5. In his loweſt eſtate he would ſtill rejoice. Thy ſtatutes have been my ſongs in the days of my pilgrimage. This world is the ſtrange land, through which, as pilgrims, the faithful travel, neither expecting nor ſeeking their reſt below: they uſe it as their inn, and ſtill haſten to their wiſhed-for home; while with ſongs of praiſe they beguile the tedious hours, and from God's word encourage each other in the way.

6. By night, as well as day, God's law was the ſubject of his thoughts. I have remembred thy name, O Lord, in the night: when waking on his bed, his heart went up to heaven, and ſtill maintained communion with God; and have kept thy law, in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity, though not in perfection. This I had, this comfort in the days of his pilgrimage, or this remembrance of God in the night, becauſe I kept thy precepts; for in keeping them there is great reward. Or it may be rendered, This was given unto me, that I have kept thy precepts; it being wholly from God's grace that we are able to obey him, and to be acknowledged to his glory, not our own; for we have nothing we have not received, and can render to him but of his own.

8. CHETH.

57. [p] Thou art my portion, O LORD: I have ſaid, that I would keep thy words. 58. I intreated thy † favour with my whole heart: be merciful unto me according to thy word. 59. [q] I thought on my ways, and turned my feet unto thy teſtimonies. 60. [r] I made haſte, and delayed not to keep thy commandments. 61. The ‡ bands of the wicked have robbed me: but I have not forgotten thy law. 62. [s] At midnight I will riſe to give thanks unto thee: becauſe of thy righteous judgments. 63. [t] I am a companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts. 64. [u] The earth, O LORD, is full of thy mercy: [x] teach me thy ſtatutes.

p Pſ. xvi. 5. & cxlii. 5. Jer. x. 16. Lam. iii. 24.
† Heb. Face.
q Lam. iii. 40.
r Gal. i. 16.
‡ Or, companies.
s Acts xvi. 25.
t Pſ. xvi. 3.
u Pſ. xxxiii. 5.
x Ver. 12, 26.

ח Cheth. The Eighth Part.

v. 59—64. We have here,

1. Every good man's portion. Thou art my portion, O Lord: not wealth, not honours, not pleaſures, not any ſublunary good: no; theſe are huſks, incapable of filling the boundleſs deſires of his ſoul, which God alone with his love and favour can ſatisfy.

2. His purpoſe. I have ſaid, that I would keep thy words, thy grace enabling me. All who have Chriſt for their portion to enjoy, cannot but yield themſelves to him as their maſter to ſerve him.

3. His prayer. I intreated thy favour with my whole heart; or thy face, the light of thy countenance, which is better than life itſelf. Be merciful unto me; for every day we need cry for mercy, ſo much ſin cleaves to us; and for grace, ſo much indwelling corruption remains. Bleſſed be his name, there is, through Jeſus, mercy for the moſt miſerable, and help for the deſperate; and this according to thy word, the promiſes of God being ever the moſt prevalent plea.

4. His diligence to obey. I thought on my ways, reflected on the paſt, conſidered the path of preſent duty, and turned my feet unto thy teſtimonies, wherein he had ſwerved: he rectified his walk, and with full purpoſe of heart, through grace, reſolved to make ſtrait paths for his feet, and that inſtantly, for delay is dangerous, and our good intentions ſhould not be ſuffered to cool, but be put into immediate execution. I made haſte, and delayed not to keep thy commandments. Note, The ſinner that for a moment refuſes to comply with his convictions, and procraſtinates, is in great danger of being undone: the devil aſks for no more.

5. His complaint. The bands of the wicked have robbed me: United for his deſtruction, his enemies, who hated his good converſation, robbed him of his reputation by reproaches, of his goods by violence, and would have robbed him of life itſelf; but in the midſt of all he could ſay, I have not forgotten thy law; ſo as to be moved from the hope of its promiſes, or diſcouraged from obedience to its precepts. We may expect to ſhare with the pſalmiſt in his ſufferings; God grant we may be able to ſhew alſo our fidelity.

6. His thankſgiving. He not only prayed much, but praiſed too. At midnight I will riſe to give thanks unto thee. He not only darted up a warm ejaculation, but ſhook off ſleep, and even at midnight aroſe for the happy work of praiſe. How few have hearts ſo warm, as to leave their bed for ſuch divine employment! and the matter of his ſong was God's righteous judgments; either thoſe of his providence, executed on ſinners, or manifeſted for his people's ſalvation; or thoſe commands of his word, which are altogether righteous and true.

7. His company. He affected not the great, but the good; ſought not the worldly wiſe, but the truly gracious. I am a companion of all them that fear thee, and of them that keep thy precepts. He loved them for what he ſaw of God in them, delighted in their converſe, joined with them in religious exerciſes, communicated his own experience, enquired theirs, nor, though much his inferiors, withheld from them the hand of fellowſhip, or the heart of affection; grace, like the grave, in a meaſure making all diſtinctions void among thoſe who are one in Chriſt Jeſus.

8. He aſcribes glory to God, and directs his prayer to him. The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy, or goodneſs; his providential kindneſs and care extending to all his works, and his ſpecial regard to the children of his grace. Teach me thy ſtatutes, that in me another freſh inſtance may be given of thy mercy towards the ſons of men. Note, Whatever will redound to God's glory, we may warmly urge as an argument for the granting our petitions.

9. TETH.

65. Thou haſt dealt well with thy ſervant, O LORD, according unto thy word. 66. Teach me good judgment and knowledge: for I have believed thy commandments.
67. [y] Before I was afflicted, I went aſtray:
but now have I kept thy word. 68. [z] Thou art good, and doſt good: [a] teach me thy ſtatutes. 69. The proud have forged a lie againſt me: but I will keep thy precepts with my whole heart. 70. [b] Their heart is as fat as greaſe, but I delight in thy law. 71. [c] It is good for me that I have been afflicted: that I might learn thy ſtatutes. 72. [d] The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thouſands of gold and ſilver.

[y] Ver. 71. Jer. xxxi. 18, 19.
[z] Mat. xix. 17.
[a] Ver. 12, 26.
[b] Pſ. xvii. 10. Iſa. vi. 10.
[c] Ver. 67. Heb. xii. 10, 11.
[d] Ver. 127. Pſ. xix. 10. Prov. viii. 11.

ט Teth. The Ninth Part.

v. 65—72. We have,

1. David's grateful acknowledgment. Thou haſt dealt well with thy ſervant, O Lord, according unto thy word. His promiſes never fail; and they who truſt them will own, that God doth all things well; not only above what we deſerve, but exceeding all our deſires.

2. His prayer and plea. Teach me good judgment and knowledge, or, a good taſte, that as the tongue diſtinguiſhes ſavours, ſo his heart might diſcern between good and evil, and approve the things that are excellent: for I have believed thy commandments; receiving them not as the word of man, but as they are indeed the word of God; and therefore he deſired to have a deeper and more experimental acquaintance with them, which only God can teach.

3. He confeſſes his departure from God, and the bleſſing of affliction that brought him back again. Before I was afflicted, I went aſtray. Eaſe, affluence, and proſperity, are ſtrangely apt to ſteal away the heart from God, to make us forget this is not our reſt, and fooliſhly to attach our affections to the things that ſollicit our ſenſes. This David found to his coſt; but God will not ſuffer his people to lie down the ſervants of ſin; he viſits their iniquities with the rod; kind ſcourge of paternal tenderneſs! How deeply are we indebted for it! However grievous for the time, we ſhall own it the beſt of bleſſings in diſguiſe, when its effects are anſwered, and we can, by grace reſtored, ſay with the pſalmiſt, But now have I kept thy law: humbled into the duſt, and brought back to the boſom of that Father of Mercies, from whom we had ſo greatly departed.

4. He aſcribes glory to God. Thou art good, eſſentially in thyſelf, and the fountain of goodneſs to thy creatures; and doſt good to all, even to the evil and unthankful; ſo boundleſs is the emanation of his kindneſs. Teach me thy ſtatutes, that in this experience of thy goodneſs I may have freſh cauſe to praiſe thee.

5. He lodges a complaint againſt the proud, and profeſſes his own integrity. The proud have forged a lie againſt me; and againſt a lying tongue the pureſt innocence is no protection. Let it not ſeem ſtrange, if the groſſeſt falſhoods are ſpoken of us, or the moſt malignant interpretations made of our words and actions: it was ever ſo of old, and the enmity of the world againſt God's ſervants ſtill abideth. But I will keep thy precepts with my whole heart; not diſcouraged from the path of duty; not vindicating himſelf from their calumnies, ſo much as living them down; whilſt the holineſs and unblameableneſs of his conduct might be a confutation of their falſhood, who ſpake evil of his good converſation in Chriſt. Their heart is as fat as greaſe, wallowing in wealth and luxury, and by indulgence of every appetite ſtupifying their conſcience, making even their bodies lethargic, and their ſenſes blunted. But I delight in thy law; know no pleaſure equal to communion with thee; and find greater ſatisfaction in denying the perverſe cravings of concupiſcence, as that law enjoins, than they in the lawleſs indulgence of them.

6. In the ſchool of affliction he had learnt wiſdom, (as before, v. 6, 7.) and the diſcipline he had there undergone, was more than amply repaid in the benefits he received from an increaſed acquaintance with God, his word, his grace, his providences.

7. A high value did he ſet on God's word. The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thouſands of gold and ſilver. Vaſt poſſeſſions he enjoyed, vaſt riches he had acquired; but one page of God's book was better to him than theſe ſhining millions; one promiſe more valuable than the wealth of all the eaſt. Faith, that realized to him an eternal world, and the glories there, made him count every thing beſides comparatively to be dung and loſs. O that ſuch a mind were in us alſo!

10. JOD.

73. [e] Thy hands have made me, and faſhioned me:
give me underſtanding, that I may learn thy commandments.
74. They that fear thee, [f] will be glad when they ſee me: becauſe I have hoped in thy word. 75.
I know, O LORD, that thy judgments are † right, and that [g] thou in faithfulneſs haſt afflicted me. 76.
Let, I pray thee, thy merciful kindneſs be ‡ for my comfort, according to thy word unto thy ſervant. 77.
Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live:
for [h] thy law is my delight. 78. Let the proud be aſhamed, for [i] they dealt perverſely with me, without a cauſe; but [k] I will meditate in thy precepts. 79. Let thoſe that fear thee turn unto me, and thoſe that have known thy teſtimonies. 80. Let my heart be ſound in thy ſtatutes; [l] that I be not aſhamed.

[e] Job x. 8. Pſ. c. 3. & cxxxix. 13—16.
[f] Pſ. xxxiv. 2.
† Heb. righteouſneſs.
[g] Heb. xii. 10.
‡ Heb. to comfort me.
[h] Ver. 24, 47, 174.
[i] Ver. 86.
[k] Ver. 15.
[l] Ver. 6.

י Jod. The Tenth Part.

v. 73—80.

1. The pſalmiſt gives God the glory of his creation. Thy hands have made me, and faſhioned me; the formation of our bodies in the womb being as much the work of Divine power, as the making the firſt man out of the duſt. Give me underſtanding, that I may learn thy commandments. It is not ſo much our being, as our well-being, which is matter of praiſe. A creature apoſtate from God, as fallen man is become, might curſe the day of his birth, unleſs by Divine Grace he was renewed in the ſpirit of his mind, and his ſoul reſtored to the ſervice of God here, and made capable of the enjoyment of him for ever.

2. Others would join his praiſes, when they beheld God's grace ſhown to him. They that fear thee, the character of thoſe who are God's dear children, will be glad when they ſee me; partaking in my proſperity, whether temporal or ſpiritual, as their own, and as members of the ſame body rejoicing with me, becauſe I have hoped in thy word, which hath not failed; and this they ſee, and are encouraged to truſt on the ſame promiſes.

3. He owns, whatever afflictions he ſuffered, they were no more than he deſerved; and that God therein had the moſt gracious deſigns towards him. I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are right; all the commands of thy word, and all the diſpenſations of thy providence, particularly the afflictive ones he had undergone; and that thou in very faithfulneſs haſt afflicted me; in conſequence of his unchangeable love and favour, and his covenant, wherein he had engaged to viſit the iniquities of his people with the rod, but never to take his loving-kindneſs from them, nor ſuffer his truth to fail. Note, The darkeſt diſpenſations of providence are but the frowns of paternal tenderneſs; and when moſt he appears diſpleaſed, he but corrects becauſe he loves.

4. He prays for a freſh diſcovery of God's merciful kindneſs, as a comfort to him in every affliction; a ſenſe of this would make every burden light: and he pleads the word of truth, v. 76. as an argument for being heard and anſwered. Yea, he redoubles his prayer; Let thy tender mercies come unto me, that I may live: only for mercy can a ſinner plead; only on mercy can his hope be ſtayed; and there is mercy, tender mercy, abounding mercy with God, for all who ſeek it in Jeſus Chriſt. They ſhall live the life of grace on earth, and come to the eternal life of glory in heaven. For thy law is my delight, or delights; what I approve as moſt excellent, and fain would exerciſe myſelf in it day and night.

5. He prays for the confuſion of his enemies, and the company of his friends. [1.] For the confuſion of his enemies. Vile was their character; proud and arrogant, inſolent and overbearing. They dealt perverſely with me; by lies ſought to blacken his character, or by their ſnares to move him from his ſtedfaſtneſs: and this without a cauſe. It was unprovoked malice, and left them inexcuſable in their iniquity. Such enemies may every faithful ſoul expect to meet; but they will be diſappointed of their ends, and covered with ſhame preſent and eternal; whilſt, for himſelf unmoved, he can ſay, I will meditate on thy precepts; no more diverted by their clamour and perverſeneſs from his contemplations, than by the whiſtling of the winds. [2.] For the company of his friends. Their character is excellent; they fear thee, with filial reverential fear of his word and judgments, and have known thy teſtimonies, wiſe unto ſalvation; their underſtandings clear in the knowledge of the truth, and their hearts ſound in the practice of it; and therefore he cannot but wiſh that they would turn unto him. Perhaps, on his unfaithfulneſs in the matter of Uriah, they had ſhunned his acquaintance, to teſtify their abhorrence of his ſin; but now, on his repentance, he hoped with God's returning favour again to enjoy the pleaſure of their converſe and ſociety. Note, Though a good man may well abhor the ſin, and be grieved for the diſhonour brought upon God by his brother, he muſt not be implacable, but receive and comfort thoſe whoſe ſpitits are wounded, leſt they be ſwallowed up with overmuch ſorrow, and ſink into deſpair.

6. He prays, Let my heart be ſound, or perfect, ſincere in thy ſtatutes; in obedience to God's commands, and obſervance of the inſtituted ordinances of his worſhip; that I be not aſhamed; for when we are unfaithful, we are aſhamed to look men in the face, aſhamed to appear before God, and ſhocked at ourſelves; whilſt conſcious ſimplicity enables us to approach a throne of grace boldly, and our faces know no ſhame.

11. CAPH.

81. [m] My ſoul fainteth for thy ſalvation: but I hope in thy word. 82. [n] Mine eyes fail for thy word, ſaying, When wilt thou comfort me? 83. For [o] I am become like a bottle in the ſmoke: yet do I not forget thy ſta-tutes. 84. [p] How many are the days of thy ſervant?
when wilt thou execute judgment on them that perſecute me? 85. [q] The proud have digged pits for me, which are not after thy law. 86. All thy commandments are † faithful: [r] they perſecute me wrongfully; help thou me. 87. They had almoſt conſumed me upon earth:
but I forſook not thy precepts. 88. [s] Quicken me after thy loving kindneſs, ſo ſhall I keep the teſtimony of thy mouth.

m Pſ. lxxiii. 26. & lxxxiv. 2. n Pſ. lxix. 3. Ver. 123.
o Job xxx. 30.
p Pſ. xxxix. 4.
q Ibid. xxxv. 7.
† Heb. Faithfulneſs.
r Ver. 78.
s Ver. 25, 40.

כ CAPH. The Eleventh Part.

v. 81—88. We have here,

1. His diſtreſs, and recourſe to God. My ſoul fainteth for thy ſalvation, when ready to ſink under the preſſures of affliction, or looking forward to the coming of the Meſſiah, ſo earneſtly longed for by every faithful ſoul: but I hope in thy word, to be delivered from all my threatning dangers, and to ſee the promiſe accompliſhed in the fulneſs of time. Mine eyes fail for thy word, weary with ſtraining, to deſcry the approach of the incarnate word, or as ready to give up the proſpect of relief, ſaying, when wilt thou comfort me? thus diſcouraged, tempted, and diſtreſſed was he; for I am become like a bottle in the ſmoke, which being made of the ſkins of beaſts, grew ſhrivelled; and ſo emaciated and wrinkled was his once ruddy viſage grown, worn down with the anguiſh and ſorrow which preyed upon him within; yet notwithſtanding all he ſuffered, I do not forget thy ſtatutes; but though thou ſlay me, yet will I truſt in thee. Note, (1.) A ſickly body, and a mind ſorely harraſſed with temptations, and afflictions, are often the lot of God's deareſt children. (2.) We are apt to count every moment of trial long, and to be impatient of relief; but if we wait for it, we ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God. (3.) The faireſt countenance, by diſeaſe becomes quickly haggered and wrinkled: what a folly to ſet a high value on ſo fading and uncertain a poſſeſſion!

2. He pleads with God the length of his trials, the wickedneſs of his enemies, and his own fidelity, as arguments for preſent help, and for juſtice to be done him on his perſecutors. How many are the days of thy ſervant? few, very few, and muſt they be all ſpent in the furnace of affliction? Lord, ſhorten the hour of temptation: when wilt thou execute judgment on them that perſecute me? the judgment of the ſinner is near, is terrible; yet a moment, and the righteous ſhall waſh their footſteps in the blood of their perſecutors: and this according to the higheſt equity, for the proud have digged pits for me, which are not after thy law, See Exod. xxi. 33, 34. They purſued him as if a wild beaſt, and with the moſt miſchievous deſign ſought to entrap him. All thy commandments are faithful, truſting thereon, I fear not their malice; they perſecute me wrongfully, without the leaſt provocation, with inveterate hatred, and unrelenting cruelty, and I have no power to reſiſt them. Help thou me! all other help is vain, all other hope I diſclaim, on thy everlaſting arms I hang; Lord, ſave; I periſh. They had almoſt conſumed me upon earth, ſo near they brought him to the brink of the grave; but I forſook not thy precepts; till death, determined never to quit my hold, and in death to make them my ſupport. Note, (1.) Faithful adherence to God is our grand ſecurity; from his hands none can pluck us. (2.) Terrible will be the end of the ungodly, when God, the judge of all, ariſes to execute vengeance.

3. He prays for quickening grace. Quicken me after thy loving kindneſs, let me experience the enlivening influence of thy grace, and that ſhall ſtrengthen me under all my difficulties; ſo ſhall I keep the teſtimonies of thy mouth, though in myſelf weaker than the bruiſed reed, yet able to do all things, thou ſtrengthening me. Note, All is of grace: it is as much an act of God's unmerited favour to quicken our ſouls for the performance of duty, as to pardon our ſins.

12. LAMED.

89. [t] For ever, O LORD, thy word is ſettled in heaven. 90. Thy faithfulneſs is unto all generations: thou haſt eſtabliſhed the earth, and it † abideth. 91. They continue this day according to thine ordinances: for all are thy ſervants. 92. Unleſs [u] thy law had been my delights, I ſhould then have periſhed in mine affliction.
93. I will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou haſt quickned me. 94. I am thine, ſave me: for I have ſought thy precepts. 95. The wicked have waited for me to deſtroy me: but I will conſider thy teſtimonies.
96. I have ſeen [x] an end of all perfection: [y] but thy commandment is exceeding broad.

t Pſ. lxxxix. 2. Mat. xxiv. 34.
† Heb. Standeth.
u Ver. 24.
x Iſa. xl. 8.
y Mat. v. 18. & xxiv. 35.

ל LAMED. The Twelfth Part.

89—96. We have here,

1. The eternity and immutability of God's word and works. For ever, O Lord, thy word is ſettled in heaven, or thou art for ever, O Lord: from everlaſting to everlaſting, the ſame unchangeable Jehovah, and thy word ſtands, or is firm in heaven, the decrees of it immutable, and the execution of them ſure. Thy faithfulneſs is unto all generations; thy promiſes never fail, are like Jeſus, their author, the ſame yeſterday, to-day, and for ever; and every believer to the lateſt ages ſhall experience their ſtability. Thou haſt eſtabliſhed the earth, and it abideth, ſupported and preſerved by the hand that formed it; they continue this day, the heavens and the earth, with all the vaſt orbs that roll in the immenſity of ſpace, according to thine ordinances, obſerving with exacteſt regularity the track marked out for them, and running with uninterrupted and abiding perſeverance their appointed courſe: for all are thy ſervants, the creatures of thy hands, and obedient to thy will. Note, Men and devils are the only rebels in the whole creation of God.

2. The delight the Pſalmiſt took in God's law, and the ſupport he derived from it. Unleſs thy law had been my delight, I ſhould then have periſhed in mine affliction; the ſtorm ran high, he was ready to deſpair of life, and in his ſpirit dejected, but in God's word a well of living waters ſprung up; this revived him when fainting, ſtrengthened him when weak, comforted him when afflicted; and may not every believer ſay this by experience? but for the word of goſpel-grace he had ſunk under his trials, and periſhed in deſpair. Abundant reaſon hath he therefore to ſay, I will never forget thy precepts, for with them thou haſt quickened me; not the precepts of the law, for they are a miniſtration of death, but the powerful word of the goſpel a ſavour of life unto life, through the miniſtration of the ſpirit, to as many as the Lord our God ſhall call.

3. He pleads the intereſt God had in him, as a reaſon why he ſhould ſhew him his ſalvation. I am thine, thine by creation, thine by redemption, thine by adoption and grace, thine by choice, wholly thine, only thine. Save me from every evil of ſin, or ſuffering, to which from the malice of earth or hell he might be expoſed; for I have ſought thy precepts, deſired to know them, delighted to obey them, and therein approve my fidelity to thee.

4. He complains of the wicked. The wicked have waited for me to deſtroy me, laid ſnares to entangle him, waited for his halting, and purpoſed to kill the body; or more terribly by ſeducing him into ſin, to ruin his ſoul; but I will conſider thy teſtimonies, ſteadfaſt in adhering to them, notwithſtanding all oppoſition, and by them preſerved from all the ſnares of the ungodly.

5. He mentions his own obſervations confirming the excellence of God's law. I have ſeen an end of all perfection, all the greatneſs, glory, and wiſdom of the world is limited, tranſitory and paſſing away, and all the perfection that man can arrive at is infinitely ſhort of the purity of God's law; but thy commandments are exceeding broad, beyond what created underſtanding ever fathomed, and proportionate and adequate to which, no works and righteouſneſs merely human were ever found: only by Jeſus Chriſt was it ever fully obſerved, and in him alone can we be compleat and perfect, lacking nothing, which this law requires. May my ſoul be found in him!

13. MEM.

97. O how I love thy law! [z] it is my meditation all the day. 98. Thou through thy commandments [a] haſt made me wiſer than mine enemies: for † they are ever with me. 99. I have more underſtanding than all my teachers: for thy teſtimonies are my meditation. 100. I underſtand more than the ancients: becauſe I keep thy precepts. 101. I have refrained my feet from every evil way: that I might keep thy word. 102. I have not departed from thy judgments; for thou haſt taught me. 103. [b] How ſweet are thy words unto my ‡ taſte! yea, ſweeter than honey to my mouth. 104. Through thy precepts I get underſtanding; therefore [c] I hate every falſe way.

[z] Pſ. i. 2.
[a] Deut. iv. 6.
† Heb. It is ever with me.
[b] Pſ. xix. 10. Prov. viii. 11.
‡ Heb. Palate.
[c] Ver. 128.

מ Mem. The Thirteenth Part.

v. 97—103. David had often ſpoken of his delight in God's word, and now in a rapture breaks forth, O how I love thy law, more than I am able to expreſs; ſo rich are the promiſes contained in it, ſo excellent the rule preſcribed by it: it is my meditation all the day, and nothing could be a ſtronger proof how greatly he delighted in it, than this. Several reaſons he gives why he was bound thus to love and meditate in God's law.

1. Becauſe of the wiſdom he had thereby attained, v. 104. God had taught him, and no marvel his proficiency was great; he was wiſer than his enemies, enabled to defeat their ſtratagems, and countermine their crafty deſigns. He had more underſtanding than his teachers, either thoſe who ſat in Moſes' ſeat; but were, as the Scribes and Phariſees in our Lord's day, very defectively verſed in thoſe ſcriptures they profeſſed to teach; or thoſe who had in youth inſtructed him, whoſe attainments he had far outſtripped. Nay, he underſtood more than the ancients, either the ſages of his own day, or thoſe of the preceding, and all this through God's commandments being ever with him; he conſulted them in every circumſtance, on every emergence; his meditation on them was ſweet and frequent, and his adherence to them faithful and ſincere. Note, (1.) To practice what we know, is the ſpeedieſt way to the higheſt attainments of ſpiritual wiſdom. (2.) The written word of God contains more treaſures of knowledge and a ſurer guide to glory, than all the volumes of philoſophers, the decrees of counſels, the deciſions of the fathers, or traditions of the church; theſe are fallible, and may deceive, that is the voice of truth itſelf.

2. Becauſe God's precepts made him refrain from, and hate every evil way, v. 101—104. The paths of ſin are ſtrewed with roſes, and tempt us to turn aſide, and taſte thoſe ſpecious delights, but God's word diſcovers the deluſion, the lurking ſerpent is pointed out, and the thorn that pierces at every ſtep, and we are warned to eſcape from the ways of the deſtroyer.

3. Becauſe by them he was kept ſteady in the path of duty. I have not departed from thy judgments, from the doctrines of truth, the ordinances of worſhip, or obedience to the commands; for thou haſt taught me, and none but God can teach effectually, ſo as to make wiſe unto ſalvation.

4. Becauſe of the comfort he found in God's word. How ſweet are thy words unto my taſte, yea, ſweeter than honey to my mouth, ſuch conſolation he ſucked in from thoſe breaſts of goſpel-grace, and every promiſe was as the flowers of ſpring, which afford ſweetneſs to the induſtrious bee. And if we have but the Pſalmiſt's ſpirit, we ſhall find the ſame delight in God's word, and confirm his experience by our own.

14. NUN.

105. [d] Thy word is a † lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. 106. [e] I have ſworn, and I will perform it, that I will keep thy righteous judgments. 107. I am afflicted very much: [f] quicken me, O LORD, according unto thy word. 108. Accept, I beſeech thee, the free-will-offerings of my mouth, O LORD, and [g] teach me thy judgments. 109. My ſoul is continually [h] in my hand: yet do I not forget thy law. 110. [i] The wicked have laid a ſnare for me: yet I erred not from thy precepts. 111. [k] Thy teſtimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever: for [l] they are the rejoicing of my heart. 112. I have inclined my heart to ‡ perform thy ſtatutes alway, even unto the end.

[d] Prov. vi. 23.
† Or candle.
[e] Neh. x. 29.
[f] Ver. 25.
[g] Ibid. 12, 26.
[h] Judg. xii. 3. 1 Sam. xix. 5. & xxviii. 21. Job xiii. 14.
[i] Pſ. cxl. 5. & cxli. 9.
[k] Deut. xxxiii. 4.
[l] Ver. 77.
‡ Heb. Do.

נ Nun. The Fourteenth Part.

v. 105—112. We have here,

1. The uſe of God's word. It is a lamp unto our feet, and a light unto our path. The law diſcovers the path of duty, points out the perfection of righteouſneſs God requires, convinces us of ſin, and opens the corruption and deceitfulneſs of our hearts. The goſpel holds forth Jeſus, the ſon of righteouſneſs; reveals the grace, mercy, and love of God manifeſted to ſinners in their Redeemer; points to him the way, the truth, and the life; and ſhews us how by faith to walk in him, ſo as to reach at laſt the eternal kingdom.

2. David's ſolemn dedication of himſelf to God's ſervice. I have ſworn, and I will perform it, through divine grace, that I will keep thy righteous judgments; the promiſes, vows, and reſolutions indeed made in our own ſtrength, are vain and deluſive; but the engagements we enter into, drawn by the cords of love, ſupported by the Lord's power, and under a ſenſe of our deep obligations, we ſhall be enabled to perform.

3. His afflicted ſtate, and recourſe to God therein. I am afflicted very much, either in body, under diſeaſe; in his circumſtances, through oppreſſion; or in his ſoul, under temptation or deſertion: quicken me, O Lord, according to thy word, but for the ſupports of which, I muſt have periſhed in my trouble.

4. His prayer for the acceptance of his ſervices, and direction in the way. Accept, I beſeech thee, the free-will-offerings of my mouth, O Lord, not the offering of ſlain beaſts, but the more pleaſing oblations of the calves of the lips, the ſpiritual ſacrifices of a grateful heart; and teach me thy judgments, for without divine teaching, we can offer no acceptable ſervice.

5. The danger to which he was expoſed, and the practice he perſevered in. My ſoul is continually in my hand, in jeopardy every hour, and ready to be killed all the day long; for the wicked have laid a ſnare for me, crafty, as well as powerful, they uſe every method to deſtroy me: yet do I not forget thy law, nor err from thy precepts; neither intimidated out of his profeſſions, nor diverted from the path of duty, nor through anxious care for his ſafety forgetful of God's law; nor, by any ſinful contrivances to extricate himſelf from his difficulties, erring from the way of truth. Note, (1.) Perſecution and ſuffering are every chriſtian's lot in this wicked world. (2.) Patient perſeverance will finally be crowned with ſucceſs.

6. He profeſſes his deliberate choice of God's word, as his abiding portion and joy. Thy teſtimonies have I taken as an heritage for ever, for the moſt invaluable poſſeſſions are thoſe which are held by promiſe from God; they are the preſent rejoicing of my heart, affording a ſatisfaction infinitely beyond what all the things on earth can give, and not ceaſing with our preſent tranſitory life, but abiding to the days of eternity. I have inclined my heart to perform thy ſtatutes alway, unto the end; not that it was of himſelf, but of divine grace, that he was thus diſpoſed and enabled; and he truſted he who had begun, would perfect what was lacking, and ſtrengthen him to perſevere even to the end.

15. SAMECH.

113. I hate vain thoughts: but thy law do I love. 114. [m] Thou art my hiding place, and my ſhield: I hope in thy word. 115. [n] Depart from me, ye evil doers; for I will keep the commandments of my God. 116. Uphold me according unto thy word, that I may live: and [o] let me not be aſhamed of my hope. 117. Hold thou me up, and I ſhall be ſafe: and I will have reſpect unto thy ſtatutes continually. 118. Thou haſt troden down all them that err from thy ſtatutes: for their deceit is falſhood. 119. Thou † putteſt away all the wicked of the earth [p] like droſs: therefore I love thy teſtimonies. 120. [q] My fleſh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgments.

[m] Pſ. xxxii. 7. & xci. 1.
[n] Ibid. vi. 8. & cxxxix. 19. Mat. vii. 23.
[o] Rom. v. 5.
† Heb. Cauſeſt to ceaſe.
[p] Ezek. xxii. 18.
[q] Hab. iii. 16.

ס Samech. The Fifteenth Part.

v. 113—120. We have in theſe verſes,

1. David's hatred of ſin, and love of God's law, v. 113. He hated the very thoughts of evil, which he found riſing from the fountain of a corrupted heart. God who ſeeth them afar off, abhors them, and we muſt do ſo to, and ſeek to ſmother them in the birth, before they are quickned into deſire, or perfected in the act. Note, If we watch not over our thoughts, we ſhall not long walk in God's ways.

2. He profeſſes his dependance on God. Thou art my hiding-place, whither I flee, when purſued by the malice of earth or hell, and find a ſure retreat; and my ſhield, to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one, and cover my head in the day of battle. I hope in thy word, and having this anchor of my ſoul ſure and ſteadfaſt, am enabled to ride out every ſtorm.

3. He bids the evil doers depart, reſolute to reject their enticements, and adhere to the commandments of his God, v. 115. Note, (1.) It requires great courage to deny the ſollicitations of ſinners. (2.) They who do not ſhun the company of evil doers, will not long keep from their ways. (3.) They who can truly ſay my God, cannot but ſay alſo, I will keep thy commandments.

4. He prays for ſupport from God. He felt his own weakneſs; he knew, left to himſelf, he could not but fall, and therefore cries, Uphold me; and again, hold thou me up, as one ſinking, unleſs the everlaſting arms were under him: he grounds his prayer upon the promiſe, according unto thy word, and confidently truſts that thus he ſhall be ſafe, ſhall live the life of grace amidſt manifold temptations, and not be aſhamed of his hope, ſo as to be diſappointed in time or eternity; and thus ſtrengthened, he promiſes for himſelf, I will have reſpect unto thy ſtatutes continually, ſtrong in the Lord, and in the power of his might, to perſevere in the path of duty, till he ſhould enter into the reſt of glory. Lord, evermore thus hold thou up my ſoul!

5. He foreſees, and trembles at the ruin coming on the ungodly. Their character is evil: they err from thy ſtatutes, deſire not the knowledge of the truth, and wilfully turn aſide. Their deceit is falſehood, they are hypocritical in their profeſſions to God and man: they are the wicked of the earth; in their tempers and practices earthly, ſenſual, deviliſh; and their end will be according to their works. God will tread them down in his wrath, and trample them in his fury; will put them away like droſs, proved vile and refuſe, ſeparated for deſtruction, and caſt into the fiery furnace of everlaſting burnings: ſuch judgments on the ungodly affected the Pſalmiſt's heart in a double reſpect, as it ſhould ours alſo. (1.) To fear before this holy God, trembling at the terrible caſe of the ungodly, and careful to avoid every occaſion that would kindle this wrath, which who for a moment can abide? (2.) To love God's teſtimonies the better, for in them only is the way of life, and in the path-way thereof there is no death.

16. AIN.

121. I have done judgment and juſtice: leave me not r Heb. vii. 22. to mine oppreſſors. 122. [r] Be ſurety for thy ſervant for s Ver. 81, 82. good: let not the proud oppreſs me. 123. [s] Mine eyes fail for thy ſalvation, and for the word of thy righteouſneſs. 124. Deal with thy ſervant according unto thy t Ver. 12. mercy, and [t] teach me thy ſtatutes. 125. I am thy ſervant, give me underſtanding, that I may know thy teſtimonies. 126. It is time for thee, LORD, to work:
u Pſ. xix. 10. Ver. 72. Prov. viii. 11. for they have made void thy law. 127. Therefore [u] I love thy commandments above gold, yea, above fine gold. 128. Therefore I eſteem all thy precepts concerning x Ver. 104. all things to be right; [x] and I hate every falſe way.

ע Ain. The Sixteenth Part.

v. 121—128. David, in theſe verſes,

1. Appeals to God for his integrity, and begs him to be his protector from wrong. I have done judgment and juſtice, whether in his private capacity acting ever uprightly, or as the king of Iſrael, miniſtring true judgment unto the people. Leave me not to my oppreſſors, for the moſt wicked and the moſt powerful can go not one ſtep farther to hurt us, than God permits. Be ſurety for thy ſervant for good, eſpouſe my quarrel, vindicate my innocence againſt my accuſers, and reſcue me out of their hands; let not the proud oppreſs me. Note, (1.) The more we are conſcious of our own weakneſs, and flee to God for help, the ſurer ſhall we ſtand. (2.) Jeſus is his people's ſurety; no arreſts of ſin can ſeize them, no accuſations of Satan ſtand againſt them; in him they are juſtified from all things.

3. He counts it long ere help arrives. Mine eyes fail for thy ſalvation, and for the word of thy righteouſneſs, for the fulfilment of the promiſe which aſſured him of ſalvation, but it now ſeemed ſo long deferred, that he was ready to deſpair; and this hath been the infirmity of many a faithful ſoul. Bleſſed be God, his truth and promiſes are not changeable as our faith.

3. He prays for divine teaching. Deal with thy ſervant according unto thy mercy, for that is the only thing we can reſt our hopes upon, and teach me thy ſtatutes, direct me in my doubts, ſupport me under my diſcouragements. I am thy ſervant, and deſire to approve my fidelity, if I knew the way; therefore give me underſtanding, that I may know thy teſtimonies, and obey them.

4. He begs God would ariſe for his own glory. It is time for thee, O Lord, to work, to ſtop the torrent of ungodlineſs, and ſilence the blaſphemies of the profane: for they have made void thy law, impiouſly caſting off the cords, and bidding defiance to the Almighty; or proudly ſetting up a righteouſneſs of their own, ſo little proportionate to its demands. Note, They who truſt on their own works for juſtification, as much make void the law, as thoſe who daringly caſt off every reſtraint, and indulge every lawleſs appetite.

5. He profeſſes his love to God's law, and proves it in the moſt effectual manner, v. 127, 128. no gold ſo precious in his eyes. All God's precepts, concerning all things he approved as juſt and good, the moſt difficult, to be obeyed without heſitation, and none ſo little as to be forgotten or ſlighted. And he hated every falſe way, whether falſe doctrine, falſe worſhip, or falſe practices, he utterly abhorred them. Would to God our ſouls gave each day ſuch proof of the ſincerity of our love.

17. PE.

129. Thy teſtimonies are wonderful: therefore doth my ſoul keep them. 130. [y] The entrance of thy words y 2 Pet. i. 19.
giveth light: [z] it giveth underſtanding unto the ſimple. z Pſ. xix. 7.
131. I opened my mouth, [a] and panted: for I longed for a Ibid. xlii. 1.
thy commandments. 132. Look thou upon me, and [b] b Ibid. cvi. 4.
be merciful unto me, as thou uſeſt to do unto thoſe that love thy name. 133. [c] Order my ſteps in thy word: c Ibid. xvii. 5.
and [d] let not any iniquity have dominion over me. 134. d Ibid. xix. 13. Rom. vi 12.
Deliver me from the oppreſſion of man: [e] ſo will I keep e Luke i. 74.
thy precepts. 135. [f] Make thy face to ſhine upon thy f Pſ. iv. 6.
ſervant: and [g] teach me thy ſtatutes. 136. [h] Rivers of g Ver. 12, 26.
waters run down mine eyes: becauſe they keep not thy h Jer. ix. 1. & xiv. 17. Ezek. ix. 4.
law.

פ Pe. The Seventeenth Part.

v. 129—136. The Pſalmiſt here,

1. Expreſſes his admiration of God's teſtimonies, and his purpoſe to obſerve them. They are wonderful, contain aſtoniſhing diſcoveries of inviſible things, of the myſtery of God and of Chriſt, of the covenant of grace, of the way of godlineſs, and of the joys and miſeries of the eternal world: therefore doth my ſoul keep them, locked up in my heart as the richeſt treaſure, and with unreſerved devotedneſs obeyed. Note, It is not commending God's word, but doing the work it enjoins, which can ſhew our real eſteem for it.

2. The benefit of God's word. The entrance of thy words giveth light; the firſt three chapters of the Bible teach us more of God's works, and man's true condition, what he was, and what he is, than all the books in the world; and when by the Spirit of God our underſtandings are enlightned, we immediately, on the very entrance of divine light, know more of God's grace and love, than all human teaching ever could inform us. It giveth underſtanding to the ſimple, makes even fools in the eyes of men wiſe unto ſalvation; and thoſe who come to it with ſimplicity, and a child-like ſpirit, find from every peruſal, increaſing underſtanding in the things of God.

3. Like one gaſping for breath, or as a perſon famiſhed with hunger, the Pſalmiſt could ſay, I opened my mouth, and panted; for I longed for thy commandments, ſo intenſe were his deſires, ſo fervent the breathings of his ſoul after God, and his holy ways, and ſo eagerly he longed for the courts of his houſe, and the ordinances of his worſhip. Have we any thing of this ſacred fervor?

4. He cries for mercy. Look upon me, not as I am in myſelf, a polluted ſinner, but in Jeſus, my complete Saviour, and be merciful unto me, forgive my tranſgreſſions, and let me not meet the face of an angry, but a reconciled and pardoning God, as thou uſeſt to do unto thoſe that love thy name, ſuch looks of kind regard, ſuch favours and mercies beſtow upon me, for I am of that number, and hope to ſhare with them in their bleſſedneſs. Note, If we love God in truth, we can aſk for nothing a God of love will not beſtow.

5. He prays for direction and preſervation. 1. Direction; order my ſteps in thy word, for we ſhall be able to take no ſtep aright, unleſs God teach us by his ſpirit, and guide us by his grace. 2. Preſervation; Let not any iniquity, not the leaſt known and allowed ſin, have dominion over me, that I ſhould obey it in the luſts thereof. Note, Nothing is ſo terrible in the eye of an awakened conſcience, as to be brought again under the bondage of corruption, and the power of ſin.

6. He begs deliverance from his oppreſſors. Deliver me from the oppreſſion of man, whoſe power he feared, and whoſe malice he had experienced: ſo will I keep thy precepts with greater freedom and liberty, being reſcued out of the hands of his oppreſſors.

7. He ſeeks the light of God's countenance to chear him. Make thy face to ſhine upon thy ſervant with thy bright beams of love, make me to feel their enlivening influence, and to rejoice in the aſſurance of thy favour: and teach me thy ſtatutes, that I may know them, and do them, and have joy in beholding the powerful effects of thy grace therein manifeſted. Note, (1.) If God ſmiles, no matter who frowns upon us. (2.) When we are found in the path of duty, God will meet us with the viſits of his love.

8. He teſtifies his deep concern for the diſhonour done to God, and the ruin brought on themſelves by the ſins of men. It was not a ſmall meaſure of grief that oppreſſed him; no: Rivers of waters run down mine eyes: becauſe they keep not thy law. Note, Every good man is a mourner in Zion; not only for his own ſins, but he weeps over thoſe that never drop a tear for themſelves.

18. TSADDI.

137. [i] Righteous art thou, O LORD, and upright are thy judgments. 138. Thy teſtimonies that thou haſt commanded, are † righteous, and very faithful. 139. [k] My zeal hath ‡ conſumed me: becauſe mine enemies have forgotten thy words. 140. [l] Thy word is very ‖ pure: therefore thy ſervant loveth it. 141. I am ſmall and deſpiſed: yet do not I forget thy precepts. 142. Thy righteouſneſs is an everlaſting righteouſneſs, [m] and thy law is the truth. 143. Trouble and anguiſh have § taken hold on me: yet thy commandments are my delights. 144. The righteouſneſs of thy teſtimonies is everlaſting: give me underſtanding, and I ſhall live.

[i] Dan. ix. 7.
† Heb. Righteouſneſs and very faithfulneſs.
[k] Pſ. lxix. 9. John ii. 17.
‡ Heb. Cut me off.
[l] Pſ. xii. 6. & xviii. 30. Prov. xxx. 5.
‖ Heb. Tried or refined.
[m] John xvii, 17.
§ Heb. Found me.

צ TZADDE. The Eighteenth Part.

v. 137—144. David here,

1. Gives glory to God. Righteous art thou, O Lord, eſſentially ſo in himſelf, and in all the diſpenſations of his providence and grace; and upright are thy judgments, the afflictive viſitations he ſends on his own people, or the vengeance he executes on his enemies, all which are done with the higheſt equity. The teſtimonies that thou haſt commanded, are righteous and very faithful, his precepts flowing from the rectitude of his nature moſt fit for him to enjoin, for us to obey; and all his promiſes are yea and amen in Chriſt Jeſus, ſure, eternally ſure, to every believer.

2. Great was his zeal for God. My zeal hath even conſumed me, becauſe mine enemies have forgotten thy word; he could not be an unconcerned ſpectator, and calmly behold God's authority diſregarded, his word deſpiſed. That they were his enemies, he was leaſt affected with; that they were God's enemies, he could not bear, and therefore ſo zealouſly intereſted himſelf, that it preyed upon his ſpirits, and emaciated his body. Note, It is a good thing to be ever zealouſly affected in a good cauſe.

3. He highly commends God's word. Thy word is very pure, without any human mixture, holy men of old delivering it as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt, and its tendency being to promote purity in heart and life: therefore thy ſervant loveth it; for though a child of God finds much, very much of that evil in him which this word condemns, he never wiſhes the commandment leſs holy, but his own heart more conformed thereunto.

4. He complains. I am ſmall and deſpiſed, little in my own eyes, and ſuffering much contempt and ſcorn from men, as will ever be the portion of the faithful here below: yet do not I forget thy precepts, nothing moved him from his ſteadfaſt adherence to God's word and ways.

5. He exalts God's righteouſneſs and truth. Thy righteouſneſs is an everlaſting righteouſneſs; God is the ſame in all his glorious perfections for ever and ever; and in all his works and word he will eternally appear to be righteous; and that righteouſneſs of his Son, which he hath provided for the juſtification of the ſinner, is to everlaſting ages the ſame; their hope in time, their title in eternity. And thy law is the truth, like himſelf, who is the God of Truth, one jot or tittle of whoſe word can never fail, until the whole be fulfilled.

6. In his trouble God's word comforted him. Trouble and anguiſh have taken hold on me; outward afflictions and inward grief ſeemed to ſeize him as their prey, and every gracious ſoul may expect his portion in this bitter cup: yet thy commandments are my delights, delights that in the midſt of ſorrow can be enjoyed, and which as the world cannot give, neither can it take them away.

7. He acknowledges, as before, God's everlaſting righteouſneſs, and adds thereto his fervent prayer; give me underſtanding, and I ſhall live; they who know the Lord Jeſus, and his everlaſting righteouſneſs, and are acquainted with his eternal truths, live to and for God here, and will ſhortly live with him for ever in glory. For this is eternal life, to know thee, the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt, whom thou haſt ſent.

19. KOPH.

145. I cried with my whole heart, hear me, O LORD: I will keep thy ſtatutes. 146. I cried unto thee, ſave me, † and I ſhall keep thy teſtimonies. 147. [n] I prevented the dawning of the morning, and cried: I hoped in thy word. 148. [o] Mine eyes prevent the night watches, that I might meditate in thy word. 149. Hear my voice according unto thy loving kindneſs: O LORD, [p] quicken me according to thy judgment. 150. They draw nigh, that follow after miſchief: they are far from thy law. 151. [q] Thou art near, O LORD: and all thy commandments are truth. 152. Concerning thy teſtimonies, I have known of old, that thou haſt founded them for ever.

† Or that I may keep.
[n] Pſ. v. 3. & lxxxviii. 13. & cxxx. 6.
[o] Pſ. lxiii. 1, 6.
[p] Ver. 25, 40.
[q] Pſ. cxlv. 18.

ק KOPH. The Nineteenth Part.

v. 145—152. We have,

1. David's prayer and purpoſe. His prayer was earneſt and importunate, and the object was ſalvation from the guilt, the power, the puniſhment of ſin, and from the oppreſſion, malice, and ſnares of his enemies: and in the ſtrength of God enabled, he reſolves to keep his ſtatutes and teſtimonies. Note, (1.) Cold prayers only beg denials; a few fervent words are better than a volume of lip labour. (2.) We may be aſſured our prayers are heard and anſwered, when our hearts are quickened to greater diligence in walking before God.

2. Early and late his mind was occupied in God's word. Before the dawn of day he was upon his knees, and in the night awake upon his bed, his heart went up to God, and his word was the pleaſing ſubject of his meditations, and the reviving hope of his ſoul, v. 147, 148. Note, (1.) A ſleepy body is uſually the proof of a ſleepy ſoul; vigorous chriſtians riſe early, and waking, redeem thoſe hours that others doſe away in uſeleſs ſloth. (2.) When we begin the morning with God, we ſhall be enabled to ſee him at our right hand all the day long. (3.) The more we read, mark, learn, and inwardly digeſt God's word, the more confirmed will be our faith, and the more enlivened our hope.

3. He begs for quickening grace. Hear my voice according unto thy loving kindneſs, for not our deſerts, but his grace can alone embolden our requeſts. O Lord, quicken me according to thy judgment, revive my ſoul from its decays, its deadneſs and lifeleſsneſs, and according to thy promiſes reſtore me to a more enlivened temper of mind. Note, It is a heavy burden to a faithful ſoul, when he perceives his heart heavy and backward in the ways of God, and he cries aloud for quickening grace.

4. In his danger David flies to God, and from his nearneſs to him, from the fidelity and immutability of his counſels, draws conſolation to his ſoul. They draw nigh that follow after miſchief, their reſtleſs hearts are ever bent on evil, and they preſſed hard upon him, ready to deſtroy him; reſtrained by no fear of God, they are far from thy law, caſting off all obedience to it, and careleſs about its threatnings: but however ſore thruſt at, David had a friend near, and able to help him. Thou art near, O Lord, ever at my right hand to ſave me, and all thy commandments are truth; the fulfilment of God's word his enemies ſought in vain to defeat, but it is inviolably true, and infallibly ſure; and this to eternity, concerning, or from thy teſtimonies, I have known of old, that thou haſt founded them for ever; from earlieſt youth acquainted with the ſcripture, he knew the truths were eternal, of perpetual obligation, and everlaſting endurance; not one tittle of the promiſe can fail until the whole be fulfilled. Note, (1.) We may meet with much enmity in the world, and God may permit the danger to be very threatning, but it is to drive us cloſer to his bleſſed ſelf, and engage our dependance more entirely upon him. (2.) In every trial he is near, and they who truſt him, ſhall find his promiſes for ever ſure: he never hath, never will, never can diſappoint his people's hopes, for he cannot deny himſelf.

20. RESH.

153. Conſider mine affliction, and deliver me: for I do not forget thy law. 154. [r] Plead my cauſe, and deliver me: [s] quicken me according to thy word. 155. [t] Salvation is far from the wicked: for they ſeek not thy ſtatutes. 156. † Great are thy tender mercies, O LORD: [u] quicken me according to thy judgments. 157. Many are my perſecutors, and mine enemies: [x] yet do I not decline from thy teſtimonies. 158. I beheld the tranſgreſſors, and was grieved: becauſe they kept not thy word. 159. Conſider how I love thy precepts: [y] quicken me, O LORD, according to thy loving kindneſs. 160. ‡ Thy word is true from the beginning: and every one of thy righteous judgments endureth for ever.

[r] Pſ. xxxv. 1. & xliii. 1. Mic. vii. 9.
[s] Ver. 25.
[t] Job v. 4.
† Or many.
[u] Ver. 40.
[x] Pſ. xliv. 17.
[y] Ver. 25.
‡ Heb. The beginning of thy word is true.

ר RESH. The Twentieth Part.

v. 153—160. Theſe verſes contain,

1. David's cry for help from God in his afflictions, particularly againſt the malice of his perſecutors. Conſider mine affliction, how great it is, and how weak I am to ſtand under it, and deliver me, for thou art able to ſave to the uttermoſt; and on thee I depend, for I do not forget thy law, neither moved by my troubles to forſake it, nor unmindful of the ſtrength promiſed therein for my ſupport. Plead my cauſe, as the avenger of my wrongs, and the advocate of injured innocence, and deliver me; let my accuſers be put to ſhame, and quicken me with freſh ſtrength and courage, to ariſe to walk before thee, according to thy word, my hope, and never-failing refuge. Many are my perſecutors, and mine enemies, ſore thruſt at that I ſhould fall, yet do I not decline from thy teſtimonies, not aſhamed to make public profeſſion of the religion that expoſes me to their malice, nor diverted from the path of duty by their oppoſition. Note, (1.) In every affliction it is an ineſtimable privilege, that we have a God to go to, into whoſe boſom we may pour out our complaints, with aſſurance of a gracious hearing and help. (2.) All that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, muſt ſuffer perſecution: the Lord enable us neither to be aſhamed nor afraid. (3.) However for a while the enemies of Chriſt and his people may prevail, he will ariſe ſhortly to plead his own cauſe, and render tribulation to thoſe that trouble us.

2. He deſcribes the character, and declares the hopeleſs ſtate of the ungodly. Salvation is far from the wicked, they have no part nor lot in the matter, continuing obſtinately impenitent; Chriſt, reſpecting them, hath died in vain; and however they may flatter themſelves with hopes of heaven, they will be terribly undeceived, when they come to lift up their eyes in torment: for they ſeek not thy ſtatutes, they neither know, nor deſire to know them; but wilfully and obſtinately perſevere and periſh in their iniquities. Note, The day will come, when the ſalvation ſinners deſpiſed, ſhall indeed be far from them, and the great gulph fixed for ever and ever.

3. He admires the riches of God's grace. Great are thy tender mercies, temporal mercies, great and numberleſs, but ſpiritual mercies in Chriſt ſtill infinitely ſurpaſſing, and more ineſtimably great and glorious: pardon, grace, eternal life flowing from boundleſs love, and ſovereign and unmerited favour: quicken me according to thy judgments, and add this to all thy other mercies. Note, The more we contemplate the tender mercies of our God, the more ſhall we be overwhelmed with wonder, love, and praiſe.

4. He declares the pain he felt for ſinners. I beheld the tranſgreſſors with a mixture of pity and indignation, and was grieved for them, that they were ſo inſenſible of their baſeneſs, hardened againſt fear, careleſs about the miſeries they were bringing upon themſelves: for the diſhonour done to God by their rebellious conduct, becauſe they kept not thy word: a gracious heart thus bleeds for human miſery; a zealous heart cannot, unmoved, look round on a world lying in wickedneſs. Bleſſed be God the day is near, when all this cauſe of grief and pain ſhall end.

5. Conſcious of the ſimplicity of his heart, the Pſalmiſt looks up to God. Conſider how I love thy precepts, how ardently, and therefore could not but grieve to ſee them violated: quicken me, O Lord, according to thy loving kindneſs, that I may be enabled to prove my love to them, by the enlivened diligence uſed in obſerving them. Note, The keeping God's commandments is the only ſolid proof of loving them.

6. He encourages his heart in the everlaſting faithfulneſs of God in his word. From the firſt promiſe given to Adam, one tittle hath not failed of being accompliſhed; and to eternity all who truſt in him ſhall find the word of promiſe ſure, and thoſe who impenitently provoke him, ſhall feel his judgments inexorable and eternal.

21. SCHIN.

[z] Ver. 23. 161. [z] Princes have perſecuted me without a cauſe:
but my heart ſtandeth in awe of thy word. 162. I rejoice at thy word, as one that findeth great ſpoil. 163.
I hate and abhor lying: but thy law do I love. 164.
Seven times a day do I praiſe thee, becauſe of thy righte[a] Prov. iii. 2. ous judgments. 165. [a] Great peace have they which Iſa. xxxii. 17. love thy law: and † nothing ſhall offend them. 166.
† Heb. They ſhall have no [b] LORD, I have hoped for thy ſalvation, and done thy ſtumbling-block. commandments. 167. My ſoul hath kept thy teſtimo-[b] Gen. xlix. nies: and [c] I love them exceedingly. 168. I have kept 18. Ver. 174. thy precepts and thy teſtimonies: for [d] all my ways are [c] Rom. vii. 22. before thee.
[d] Job xxxiv. 21. Prov. v. 21.

ש Schin. The Twenty-firſt Part.

v. 161—168. David here,

1. Complains to God. Princes have perſecuted me without a cauſe, the princes of Iſrael, under Saul and Abſalom, or of the Philiſtines at the court of Achiſh. Thus was the Son of David alſo perſecuted by the Jewiſh rulers; and thus have his people formerly been, and to this hour are, oppreſſed by the great men of the world, and the power of magiſtracy often employed to cruſh, or trouble them, though they are the quiet of the land: but my heart ſtandeth in awe of thy word, unmoved with their perſecution, and taught alone to fear him, who, when he hath killed, can caſt both ſoul and body into hell.

2. He profeſſes his delight in God's word. I rejoice in thy word, as one that findeth great ſpoil; in this field are hid the ineſtimable treaſures of grace, pardon, peace, righteouſneſs, ſalvation; and he who findeth theſe, hath indeed everlaſting cauſe for joy. This was his happy caſe, and therefore he could ſay, Seven times a day do I praiſe thee, frequently, every day, not only on his knees, but at his meals, in his buſineſs, becauſe of thy righteous judgments, the doctrines and precepts of his word, the providential mercies vouchſafed to his people, and the puniſhment executed on his foes, all which afforded matter for praiſe and joy. Note, If we do not want a heart, we never need want matter for God's praiſes.

3. He declares his deteſtation of lying or falſehood, v. 163. either in his ordinary converſation, his dealings in the world, his profeſſions before God; or he hated every thing contrary to the truth and word of God, whether falſe doctrine, worſhip, or ways. Note, There is but one thing we are permitted to hate, and that is ſin, and there we need not fear exceſs.

4. He profeſſes his love to God's law. Thy law do I love, in oppoſition to all doctrines of lies, and practiſes of falſehood; and great is the bleſſedneſs thence accruing, for great peace have they which love thy law, peace with God, peace in their conſcience, peace which the world can neither give nor take away; great peace, paſſing all underſtanding, and enduring uninterrupted to eternity: and nothing ſhall offend them, ſo that they ſhould finally ſtumble and fall, but their heavieſt afflictions ſhall work for good; the unfaithfulneſs of others ſhall not ſtagger them, and as they would not willingly offend themſelves, neither are the captious to take offence againſt their brethren, or rigid cenſurers of their conduct.

5. He profeſſes his hope in God's ſalvation; a good hope, through grace, which had the moſt bleſſed influence, engaging him to purify himſelf as he is pure. Lord, I have hoped for thy ſalvation, temporal, ſpiritual, eternal, and this hope hath been, and continues to be, the anchor of my ſoul, and enables me to ride out every ſtorm: and done thy commandments, if not in perfection, with ſimplicity and godly ſincerity. Note, Chriſtian hope will ever produce holy walking.

6. He appeals to God for his ſimplicity. My ſoul hath kept thy teſtimonies, embraced the doctrines, obeyed the precepts, and I love them exceedingly, out of a pure heart, fervently. I have kept thy precepts and thy teſtimonies, and this I ſhould not dare to repeat, if conſcious of known guile, in ſentiment or practice: for all my ways are before thee, thine eye is upon me, thou knoweſt the ſecrets of my heart, thou knoweſt that I love thee, and delight and deſire to pleaſe thee in all things. O that there were ſuch a heart in us! O that with confidence we could thus approach unto God in Chriſt!

22. TAU.

169. Let [e] my cry come near before thee, O LORD: [e] Luke xi. 8.
give me underſtanding according to thy word. 170.
Let my ſupplication come before thee: deliver me according to thy word. 171. My lips ſhall utter praiſe, [f] Ver. 7.
when thou haſt taught me thy ſtatutes. 172. My tongue ſhall ſpeak of thy word: for all thy commandments are righteouſneſs. 173. Let thine hand help me: for [g] I [g] Joſh. xxiv.
have choſen thy precepts. 174. [h] I have longed for thy 22. Prov. i. 29.
ſalvation, O LORD: and [i] thy law is my delight. 175. [h] Ver. 166.
Let my ſoul live, and it ſhall praiſe thee: and let thy [i] Ver. 16, 24.
judgments help me. 176. [k] I have gone aſtray like a loſt [k] Iſa. liii. 6.
ſheep, ſeek thy ſervant: for I do not forget thy com- Luke xv. 4, &c. mandments.

ת Tau. The Twenty-ſecond Part.

v. 169—176. We have here,

1. The Pſalmiſt's prayer. Let my cry come near before thee, O Lord, a poor ſupplicant at the footſtool of thy grace, unworthy notice, yet periſhing without thy kind regard: give me underſtanding according to thy word, to know thy will, that I may obey it. Let my ſupplication come before thee: deliver me according to thy word of promiſe, which emboldened his prayer, and which he pleaded as the ground of his confidence in God, and the argument for preſent help, that God's faithfulneſs might be magnified. Note, What we aſk according to God's word, believing, we ſhall receive.

2. His reſolution to render his grateful returns for God's mercies. My lips ſhall utter thy praiſe, as a copious ſtream guſhing from a heart overflowing with gratitude, when thou haſt taught me thy ſtatutes, which will, the more I know them, enlarge my ſoul with love, and fill my lips with thankſgiving. My tongue ſhall ſpeak of thy word, commending from experience its excellence to others, and eager to ſpread the knowledge of it on every ſide; for all thy commandments are righteouſneſs, perfectly righteous in themſelves, the evangelical righteouſneſs of thoſe who obſerve them in love, and our righteouſneſs in Jeſus Chriſt, who hath fulfilled the law for us, and is the end thereof for righteouſneſs to every believer.

3. He pleads for help from God. Let thine hand help me againſt mine enemies of every kind, within and without, for I cannot help myſelf, and all human help is vain. Note, When we are in our own eyes moſt weak and helpleſs, God's ſtrength will be made perfect in our weakneſs.

4. He declares what hath been his choice, his hope, and joy. I have choſen thy precepts, as my heritage for ever, approve them as moſt excellent, and wiſh to conform to them without reſerve. I have longed for thy ſalvation, for temporal deliverance from his foes, for the coming of the expected Meſſiah, who ſhould bring eternal redemption to his people, for the ſalvation of body and ſoul in the day of final recompence: and thy law is my delight; he took the right way, and therefore might well hope for a bleſſed iſſue. The Lord Chriſt will be aſſuredly the author of ſalvation to all that obey him.

5. He prays that he may live for God's glory. Let my ſoul live, my natural life be prolonged, or my ſpirit enlivened by divine grace, and put in tune for God's preſent and everlaſting praiſes, and it ſhall praiſe thee, this ſhall be my conſtant employment: and let thy judgments help me, teach me matter for my ſongs, and direct me in the acceptable manner. Note, Life is only deſirable to a good man, that he may employ it in God's praiſe and ſervice.

6. He concludes with a humbling confeſſion, a gracious prayer, and holy profeſſion. I have gone aſtray like a loſt ſheep, an animal ſtupid and fooliſh, the eaſieſt to err, the laſt to find his way back again; ſuch is the fit emblem of the ſinner's folly, ſo eaſily turned aſide, ſo unable to return to the God from whom he hath departed. May we not well adopt the Pſalmiſt's acknowledgment, with grief and ſhame lament our ſad departures from the God of our mercies, and cry with him, ſeek thy ſervant, for every departure from God doth not cut us off from our relation to him; nor doth he caſt us away, but, like a tender ſhepherd, ſeeks that which was loſt, bringing us back into the way, and reſtoring us again to the joys of his ſalvation, for I do not forget thy commandments. However, for a moment he ſeemed to be moved from his ſteadfaſtneſs, through the power of his enemies, or the deceitfulneſs of ſin, he ſtill remembered God's good ways, approved of them, and deſired to walk in them as the only ways of pleaſantneſs, and paths of peace.

PSALM CXX.

This and the fourteen following pſalms are entitled Songs of Degrees, but why ſo called, is uncertain; a variety of conjectures have been advanced, but they are mere conjectures. This pſalm, from its affinity to the Fifty-ſecond, is ſuppoſed to refer to Doeg the Edomite. And herein, 1. He prays to God to deliver him from the miſchiefs deſigned him by falſe and malicious tongues, ver. 1, 2. 2. He threatens the judgments of God againſt ſuch, ver. 3, 4. 3. He complains of his ill neighbours that were quarrelſome and vexatious, ver. 5—7. In ſinging this pſalm we may comfort ourſelves, in reference to the ſcourge of the tongue, when at any time we fall unjuſtly under the laſh of it, that better than we have ſmarted by it.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

1.[a] IN my diſtreſs I cried unto the LORD, and he heard me. 2. Deliver my ſoul, O LORD, from lying lips, and from a deceitful tongue. 3. † What ſhall be given unto thee? or what ſhall be done unto thee, thou falſe tongue? 4. [b] ‡ Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper. 5. Wo is me, that I ſojourn in [c] Meſech, that I dwell in the tents of [d] Kedar. 6. My ſoul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace. 7. I am ‖ for peace: [e] but when I ſpeak, they are for war.

[a] Pſ. cxviii. 5. Jonah ii. 2. Luke xxii. 44.
† Or what ſhall the deceitful tongue give unto thee? or what ſhall it profit thee?
[b] Deut. xxxii. 23. Pſ. cxl. 10.
‡ Or, it is as the ſharp arrows, &c. Pſ. lxiv. 3.
[c] Gen. x. 2.
[d] Ibid. xxv. 13.
‖ Or a man of peace.
[e] Pſ. xxxv. 20.

v. 1—7. David was now an exile from his native country, fleeing from the malice of his enemies.

1. He complains of his ſad eſtate, which in prayer he ſpreads before God, v. 1. In my diſtreſs I cried unto the Lord; driven from his home, a ſtranger in a ſtrange land; and, as his prayer imports, v. 2. maligned, reproached, belied, betrayed. Deliver my ſoul, O Lord, from lying lips and a deceitful tongue: not his own, for he abhorred the ſin, but from other's, ſuch as Doeg and Saul's courtiers, who by flattery, falſehood, and miſrepreſentation, ſought his ruin. Thus was the innocent Lamb of God perſecuted, reviled, and falſe witneſſes laid to his charge things that he knew not of. Let it not ſeem a ſtrange thing to us if our characters, for his name's ſake, ſuffer under the falſeſt and moſt cruel aſperſions; the day of detection for lying lips will come.

2. He acknowledges God's kind attention to his prayer. He heard me, and diſappointed the malice of his enemies; with him we may ever contentedly leave our caſe.

3. He foreſees the miſerable end of theſe men. What ſhall be given unto thee, or what will it give unto thee? or what ſhall be done unto thee, thou falſe tongue? Did ſinners for a moment conſider the end of their ways, terrors would take hold of them, for their decreed portion is Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper; the wrath of an Almighty God, ſharper than arrows in the conſcience, and ſcorching with fiercer and more enduring torment than coals of juniper. Note, The everlaſting burnings are the deſtined place of abode for all who love or make a lie, Rev. xxii. 15.

4. He bemoans his preſent wretched abode. Wo is me, that I ſojourn in Meſech, that I dwell in the tents of Kedar? among whom he was forced to take refuge, 1 Sam. xxv. 1. or among rude and idolatrous nations, like theſe deſcendants of Japhet and Iſhmael; or even in the court of Saul, he found his abode among the wicked courtiers there as irkſome as if he had dwelt among the heathen. My ſoul hath long dwelt with him that hateth peace; either with Saul, whom no kindneſs could bend to friendly thoughts of him, or thoſe ſtrangers among whom he ſojourned, enemies to the God of peace, and to religion, the only true path of peace. I am for peace, or, I peace; a man of peace, purſuing it by every means, ready to bear and forbear any thing for the ſake of it, and however offended, the firſt to ſeek reconciliation: but when I ſpeak, they are for war, reject every kind overture, and implacable in their malice, fly to arms. Note, (1.) It is a grief to thoſe who love God to be removed from the public ordinances, and they cannot but ſigh for the courts of the Lord's houſe. (2.) Bad company, into which by neceſſity we may be forced, is a burden to the gracious ſoul. (3.) Every man of God muſt be a man of peace; envy, diſpute, and ſtrife, are all from hell. (4.) Though others continue inveterate, that muſt not reſtrain us from the exerciſe of Divine charity: this is truly Godlike.

PSALM CXXI.

This pſalm directs and encourageth us to repoſe ourſelves and our confidence in God, and by faith to put ourſelves under his protection, and commit ourſelves to his care. 1. David here aſſures himſelf of help from God, ver. 1, 2. 2. He aſſures others of it, ver. 3—8.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

1.† I Will [a] lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help. 2. [b] My help cometh from the LORD, which made heaven and earth. 3. [c] He will not ſuffer thy foot to be moved: [d] he that keepeth thee will not ſlumber. 4. Behold, he that keepeth Iſrael, ſhall neither ſlumber nor ſleep. 5. The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is [e] thy ſhade [f] upon thy right hand. 6. [g] The ſun ſhall not ſmite thee by day; nor the moon by night. 7. The LORD ſhall preſerve thee from all evil: he ſhall preſerve thy ſoul. 8. The LORD [h] ſhall preſerve thy going out, and thy coming in, from this time forth and even for evermore.

† Or ſhall I lift up mine eyes unto the hills? whence ſhall my help come? Jer. iii. 23.
[a] Pſ. cxxiii. 1.
[b] Ibid. cxxiv. 8.
[c] 1 Sam. ii. 9.
[d] Pſ. cxxvii. 1. Iſa. xxvii. 3.
[e] Iſa. xxv. 4.
[f] Pſ. xvi. 8. & cix. 31.
[g] Pſ. xci. 5. Iſa. xlix. 10. Rev. vii. 16.
[h] Deut. xxviii. 6. Prov. iii. 6.

v. 1—8. In every diſtreſs David fled to a covenant God. We have,

1. His prayer. I will lift up mine eyes to the hills, the place of God's tabernacle, or to the heavenly hills, the place where his honour dwelleth, from whence cometh my help; or it may be read interrogatively, Shall I lift mine eyes to the hills? to idols, or the mighty men of the earth, from whence ſhall my help come? from theſe? No; in vain is ſalvation hoped for from theſe hills, Jer. iii. 23. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth, his arm is my dependance, his grace my alone ſupport, and his power almighty; he who created all things, can and will preſerve me from the power of my enemies. Note, (1.) God is a ſure refuge to thoſe who fly to him. (2.) When human help is deſpaired of, with God nothing is impoſſible.

2. The anſwer. Either thus the Pſalmiſt replied to himſelf, or he ſpeaks to every humble petitioner in his circumſtances: He will not ſuffer thy foot to be moved; though earth and hell aſſail the believer's ſoul, and corruption within, like a traitor, is ever ready to betray our hearts to theſe enemies, God's power and grace are engaged to keep our ſouls from falling, at leaſt from final and fatal apoſtacy. He that keepth thee will not ſlumber, watchful over the choſen remnant of his grace, their ſure protector, and well and ſafely kept muſt they be, whom he keeps. Behold, he that keepeth Iſrael, his redeemed people, ſhall neither ſlumber nor ſleep, but ever attentive to their concerns, and careful for their good, ſhall preſerve them from the power of evil. The Lord is thy keeper, the Lord Jeſus, the great, the good ſhepherd of the ſheep, whoſe infinite love engages him to watch them with tendereſt care, and his power almighty enables him to lead and guide them ſafe to his eternal kingdom; and the leaſt lamb of his flock may confidently expect his conſtant kind regard. The Lord is thy ſhade, as the thick cloud which ſhelters from the ſcorching beams of day, ſo God will cover them with his wings from danger, and refreſh them, as under the ſhadow of a great rock in a weary land, Iſa. xxxii. 2. and ever near to flee unto, even upon thy right hand, a very preſent ſent help in trouble. Thus hid in God, the ſun ſhall not ſmite thee by day, nor the moon by night; the fierceſt blaſts of perſecution ſhall not ſcorch us up, as the ſeed on the rock, nor the cold and nipping froſts, or inclement dews of temptation blaſt, or cauſe us to wither. The Lord ſhall preſerve thee from all evil, whether of ſin or ſuffering, at leaſt ſo as not to be mortally hurt by it; ſin ſhall not have dominion, and Satan ſhall not be able finally to prevail. He ſhall preſerve thy ſoul, either the life from death; or if he gives the enemy power over the body, the ſoul ſhall be precious in his ſight, and the glorious crown of martyrdom amply recompence all the pains this fleſh can ſuffer. The Lord ſhall preſerve thy going out and thy coming in; in all our travels by land or water, in our traffick and buſineſs, and in all our affairs, this divine protection is over us, and God will proſper the work of our hands: from this time forth, and even for evermore, not only our guard through life, but our guide to death, in death our ſtay, and after death our everlaſting portion. Lord Jeſus, fulfil theſe thy promiſes to my ſoul, I beſeech thee!

PSALM CXXII.

This pſalm ſeems to have been penned by David for the uſe of the people of Iſrael, when they came up to Jeruſalem to worſhip at the three ſolemn feaſts. Obſerve, 1. The joy with which they were to go up to Jeruſalem, ver. 1, 2. 2. The great eſteem they were to have of Jeruſalem, ver. 3—5. 3. The great concern they were to have for Jeruſalem, and the prayers they were to put up for its welfare, ver. 6—9. And in ſinging this pſalm we muſt have an eye to the Goſpel church, which is called the Jeruſalem that is from above.

¶ A ſong of degrees of David.

1. I Was glad when they ſaid unto me, [a] Let us go into the houſe of the LORD. 2. Our feet ſhall ſtand within thy gates, O Jeruſalem. 3. Jeruſalem is [b] builded as a city, that is compact together: 4. [c] Whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the LORD, unto [d] the teſtimony of Iſrael, to give thanks unto the name of the LORD. 5. For [e] there † are ſet thrones of judgment: the thrones of the houſe of David.

[a] Iſa. ii. 3. Zech. viii. 21.
[b] Eph. ii. 21.
[c] Exod. xxiii. 17. Deut. xvi. 16.
[d] Exod. xvi. 34.
[e] Deut. xvii. 8.
† Heb. Do ſit.

v. 1—5. They who love God, cannot but delight to draw near unto him in the ordinances of his worſhip.

1. The Pſalmiſt expreſſes his joy at the invitation given by other gracious ſouls like his own. I was glad when they ſaid unto me, Let us go into the houſe of the Lord, the earthly ſanctuary, typical of the church of God; where believers with gladneſs continue to aſſemble themſelves for public worſhip, ſtirring up each other to greater diligence and livelineſs in the bleſſed work. Our feet ſhall ſtand within thy gates, O Jeruſalem, and find there a happy reſt after our travels; but how much more delightful when we ſhall enter the ſtreets of the new Jeruſalem, and find the eternal reſt which there remaineth for the people of God.

2. He deſcribes this happy place. Jeruſalem is builded as a city, that is compact together, firm the foundation, the houſes regularly built, by art and nature ſtrongly defended. Thus is the church of God built on the rock of ages, the members cloſely united in love, and protected by the arms of Omnipotence: whither the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, obedient to his commands, and thrice a year appearing before him at the temple, to the teſtimony of Iſrael, to the ark, the ſymbol of the divine preſence, to conſult his mind and will, and to give thanks unto the name of the Lord, offering their ſacrifices and praiſes before him. For there are ſet thrones of judgment, the courts of judicature, and the royal reſidence of Iſrael's kings, the thrones of the houſe of David. In the goſpel-church, Jeſus places his word, and promiſes his ſpirit, as the ark of the teſtimony, to direct and guide us; there he erects his throne alſo, reigning as king in the hearts of his people; preſcribing the rule of their conduct, and the ordinances of his worſhip; and with him their thrones will ſhortly be placed; when brought to the heavenly Zion, they ſhall reign with him in glory everlaſting.

6. [f] Pray for the peace of Jeruſalem: they ſhall proſper that love thee. 7. Peace be within thy walls, and proſperity within thy palaces. 8. For my brethren and companions ſakes, I will now ſay, Peace be within thee. 9. Becauſe of the houſe of the LORD our God, [g] I will ſeek thy good.

[f] Pſ. ii. 18.
[g] Neh. ii. 10.

v. 6—9. David calls upon every faithful Iſraelite,

1. To pray for the peace of Jeruſalem, for the proſperity of all who dwelt therein, and for the nation who reſorted thither. Note, (1.) We are bound to pray for our place and nation, for in the peace thereof we ſhall have peace. (2.) The proſperity and peace of God's church will be the firſt concern and prayer of all the friends of David's ſon.

2. The bleſſing of ſuch prayers will return on thoſe who offer them. They ſhall proſper that love thee, their ſouls ſhall be refreſhed with the graces they beg for others, and ſpiritually they ſhall increaſe with the increaſe of God.

3. The proper prayers are ſuggeſted; for a good form of ſound words is a moſt profitable way of worſhip for thoſe who ſtand in Zion's courts. Peace be within thy walls, outward peace from enemies, the peace of God which paſſeth all underſtanding, and mutual peace and love, which no diſpute, diſcord, or diviſions may ever interrupt: oh when ſhall it yet be! and proſperity within thy palaces, for it will then go well with the church of God, when they, who by eminence of ſtation are moſt exalted, abound with gifts and graces, for the government and edification of the body.

4. He reſolves this ſhall be his own prayer and practice; I will ſay, peace be within thee, and not only with heart deſire it, but with hand labour for it; I will ſeek thy good. Note, To pray one way, and act another, is to be errant hypocrites. Two reaſons he ſuggeſts why he ſhould thus do, (1.) For my brethren and companions ſake; the ſaints of God, high or low, rich or poor; David counted them as brethren, delighted in their company, and ſought their happineſs, and ſo ſhould we. (2.) Becauſe of the houſe of the Lord our God; God's glory was ever his firſt purſuit, the enlargement of his church his great deſire, and therefore he could not but pray for it, and labour to promote it. The Lord help us to go and do likewiſe.

PSALM CXXIII.

This pſalm was penned at a time when the church of God was brought low and trampled upon; ſome think it was when the Jews were captives in Babylon; though that was not the only time that they were inſulted over by the proud. The pſalmiſt begins as if he ſpoke for himſelf only, ver. 1. but preſently ſpeaks in the name of the church. Here is, 1. Their expectation of mercy from God, ver. 1, 2. 2. Their plea for mercy with God, ver. 3, 4.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

1. [a] UNTO thee lift I up mine eyes, O thou that dwelleſt in the heavens. 2. Behold, as the eyes of ſervants look unto the hand of their maſters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her miſtreſs: ſo our eyes wait upon the LORD our God, [b] until that he have mercy upon us. 3. Have mercy upon us, O LORD, have mercy upon us: for [c] we are exceedingly filled with contempt. 4. Our ſoul is exceedingly filled with the ſcorning of thoſe that are at eaſe, and with the contempt of the proud.

[a] Pſ. xxv. 1. & cxxi. 1.
[b] Gen. xxxii. 26. Luke xviii. 1, &c.
[c] Pſ. lxxxviii. 3.

v. 1—4. We have here,

1. The Pſalmiſt's approach unto God. Unto thee lift I up mine eyes, O thou that dwelleſt in the heavens, the place of his glorious abode, whither our prayer muſt be directed, and where with the eye of faith we muſt behold him, ready to hear and anſwer us.

2. The temper in which he approached God, he illuſtrates by the ſimilitude of a ſervant looking to their maſter or miſtreſs for direction, ſuſtenance, protection, chaſtiſement, wages; ſo our eyes wait upon the Lord our God, for his divine teaching how to walk and pleaſe him; for his continual ſupplies of living bread to nouriſh our ſouls; for ſupport againſt all thoſe who would obſtruct us in our bleſſed maſter's ſervice; for the wages of the eternal inheritance which God hath promiſed, not of debt indeed, but of grace; or for ſuch kind correction as he ſees we need, and under which we chearfully and patiently ſubmit, until that he have mercy upon us, which he infallibly will ſhow in time and eternity, to all thoſe who wait on him as their only refuge.

3. The plea he urges. Have mercy upon us, O Lord, have mercy upon us; on this alone we muſt found our hope, for merit we have none; in one word it comprehends all our wants, which God knows better than we do ourſelves; and it is repeated to ſhew the fervent importunity which thoſe who are endued with the ſpirit of prayer uſe, when deeply ſenſible of the want of that mercy they ſeek; for we are exceedingly filled with contempt, the common lot of God's people, who are deſpiſed as poor, ignorant, deluded; their holy peculiarities in ſentiment and practice ridiculed, and their perſons treated as the ſcum and offſcouring of all things, by a ſenſual, proud, and adulterous generation. Our ſoul is exceedingly filled with the ſcorning of thoſe that are at eaſe, and with the contempt of the proud; the ſcorners who ſet God at defiance, live after the indulgence of their luſts, careleſs and ſecure about futurity, puffed up with affluence and honour, taking pleaſure in vilifying and inſulting the deſpiſed people of God. But let ſuch know there is one who reſents theſe indignities, and will return them; the tables will quickly change at the prayer of the faithful, the deſpiſed followers of Jeſus be exalted to the throne of glory, and thoſe proud ſenſualiſts thruſt down into the pit, an abhorring to all fleſh, and covered with everlaſting ſhame and contempt.

PSALM CXXIV.

Whatever was the particular occaſion wherein David penned this pſalm, it is highly applicable to every deliverance, which God vouchſafes to his church and people out of their diſtreſſes, and eſpecially to the great redemption obtained for them by Jeſus Chriſt. 1. He here magnifies the greatneſs of the danger they were in, ver. 1—5. 2. He gives God the glory of their eſcape, ver. 6, 7. compared with ver. 1, 2. 3. He takes encouragement from thence to truſt in God, ver. 8.

¶ A ſong of degrees of David.

1. IF it had not been the LORD who was on our ſide, now may Iſrael ſay: 2. If it had not been the LORD who was on our ſide, when men roſe up againſt us: 3. Then they had ſwallowed us up quick, when a Pſ. lxix. 2. their wrath was kindled againſt us. 4. Then [a] the waters had overwhelmed us, the ſtream had gone over our ſoul. 5. Then the proud waters had gone over ſoul. 6. Bleſſed be the LORD, who hath not given us b Ibid. xci. as a prey to their teeth. 7. [b] Our ſoul is eſcaped as a 3. Prov. bird out of the ſnare of the fowlers; the ſnare is broken, vi. 5. c Pſ. cxxi. 2. and we are eſcaped. 8. [c] Our help is in the name of LORD, who made heaven and earth.

v. 1—8. The greater the danger is to which we are expoſed, the greater doth the power and grace of our God appear in our reſcue, and the more are we indebted to him in love and praiſe.

1. The enemies of God's church and people are many and mighty; riſing up fierce as a lion, and ready to devour them, quick and eager in the purſuit, and raging in their wrath to deſtroy them. Then in that day of trial we may truly ſay, the waters had overwhelmed us, and the ſtream had gone over our ſoul; then the proud waters had gone over our ſoul, the floods of perſecution, affliction, temptation had prevailed, and we had ſunk as a ſtone in the mighty waters, if, and a bleſſed if it is—

2. If it had not been the Lord, who was on our ſide, or with us, for our ſtrength is weakneſs, and we have no power to ſtand, either againſt our foes without or within; but having a friend cloſe to our ſide, one ſo faithful to ſtand by us, ſo almighty to ſave us, even Jehovah, we cannot ſink under theſe mighty waters; fixed, as upon a munition of rocks, we may look down ſecure, and mock their impotent rage.

3. The Pſalmiſt, in the perſon of the faithful, bleſſed God for their ſupport and deliverance. Bleſſed be the Lord, who hath not given us as a prey to their teeth, he hath broken the teeth of the lions, our perſecutors; and as a bird from the fowler's ſnare, are we eſcaped from our wily foes, v. 7. Note, (1.) Power and policy in vain unite to deſtroy the ſoul which God will ſave. (2.) When we are neareſt in appearance to be overcome, and periſh, then ſhall we be made more eminently to experience the ſalvation of God.

4. Paſt experience encourages the faithful to ſtay themſelves ſtill upon God. Our help is in the name of the Lord; we have no other able or willing to ſave us, but he who made heaven and earth, and he can aſſuredly ſave to the uttermoſt, and preſerve the work of his own hands. Let Iſrael therefore truſt in the Lord.

PSALM CXXV.

This ſhort pſalm may be ſummed up in thoſe words of the prophet, Iſa. iii. 10, 11. Say ye to the righteous, It ſhall be well with him. Wo to the wicked, it ſhall be ill with him. 1. It is certainly well with the people of God; for, (1.) They have the promiſes of a good God, that they ſhall be fixed, ver. 1. and ſafe, ver. 2. and not always under hatches, ver. 3. (2.) They have the prayers of a good man, which ſhall be heard for them, ver. 4. 2. It is certainly ill with the wicked, and particularly with the apoſtates, ver. 5.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

a Mat, xvi. 1. THEY that truſt in the LORD ſhall be as mount 18. Zion, [a] which cannot be removed, but abideth b Zech. ii. 5. for ever. 2. As the mountains are round about Jeruſac Prov. xxii. lem, ſo [b] the LORD is round about his people, from 8. Iſa. xiv. 5. henceforth even for ever. 3. For [c] the rod of † the † Heb. Wickedneſs. wicked ſhall not reſt upon the lot of the righteous: leſt the righteous put forth their hands unto iniquity. 4.
[d] Do good, O LORD, unto thoſe that be good, and to d Pſ. lxxiii.
them that are upright in their hearts. 5. As for ſuch as 1.
turn aſide unto [e] their crooked ways, the LORD ſhall e Prov. ii. 15.
lead them forth with the workers of iniquity: but [f] peace f Pſ. cxxviii.
ſhall be upon Iſrael. 6. Gal. vi. 16.

v. 1—5. They who have an almighty God to flee to, have nothing to fear, and his great and precious promiſes are a ſure ſupport to every faithful ſoul.

1. Their character. They are his people, choſen by his grace, redeemed by the Saviour, called by the Spirit, and ſeparated for his ſervice. They truſt in the Lord, on his blood, righteouſneſs and ſtrength, for pardon, acceptance, ſupport, and comfort, under every trial and difficulty. They are righteous in him; God regards them as ſuch in their exalted head, and their hearts and ways are ſanctified and renewed. Bleſſed are the people who are in ſuch a caſe, for to them all the promiſes of God are yea and amen in Chriſt Jeſus; which,

2. The Pſalmiſt enlarges upon, (1.) They ſhall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever; firm as that mountain they are rooted, immoveable as the rock of ages, their everlaſting ſtability ſecured, all the powers of ſin and corruption can never ſeparate them from the love of God, and their abidance with God to eternity is as ſure as everlaſting promiſes and almighty power can make it. (2.) God is himſelf their everlaſting guard, a ſurer defence than the mountains which ſtood about Jeruſalem, and rendered it ſo difficult of acceſs. Her palaces indeed and walls are laid in the duſt, but God's people are encompaſſed with ſalvation for walls and bulwarks; walls of everlaſting love, which no enemy can climb over, and bulwarks of impregnable defence, againſt which no power can prevail, from henceforth even for ever, for till God ceaſes to be, we cannot fail: our life is bound up with his own, becauſe he lives, we ſhall live alſo. (3.) The Lord will protect them from the power of oppreſſors: The rod of the wicked ſhall not reſt upon the lot of the righteous; afflicted they may be for a time, and ſuffering under the power of wicked men, but they ſhall not be left in their hands, God will open a way for them to eſcape, or preſerve them through their troubles: leaſt the righteous put their hands unto iniquity, as they might be tempted to do, if under too ſevere, or long continued afflictions or temptations; but God conſiders what is their feeble frame, will preſerve them from all iniquity, and under his keeping they muſt be ſafe.

3. He prays that God would fulfill what he promiſes. Do good, O Lord, unto thoſe that be good, and to them that are upright in their hearts; ſuch they are by his grace, and ſuch he truſts they will continue, the God of all grace continuing to vouchſafe to them a continual rich ſupply of his ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt Jeſus.

4. He foreſees and foretells the end of the ungodly. As for ſuch as turn aſide to their crooked ways, either the ſinners, who ruſh into the paths of error and immorality, or the falſe profeſſors, who in time of trial apoſtatize, and fly to ſinful expedients to extricate themſelves from their ſufferings, the Lord ſhall lead them forth with the workers of iniquity, to the place of terrible execution, and caſt them into that eternal pit, where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched: but peace ſhall be upon Iſrael; it is either a prayer that it may be, or a promiſe that it ſhall be ſo. The end of the righteous is as bleſſed as the end of the wicked is miſerable; peace, preſent and eternal, is their happy portion, and when the ſmoke of their torment, who have no reſt night nor day, aſcendeth, the ſaints in glory ſhall rejoice and ſing.

PSALM CXXVI.

It was with reference to ſome great and ſurpriſing deliverance of the people of God out of bondage and diſtreſs, that this pſalm was penned; moſt likely their return out of Babylon in Ezra's time. 1. Thoſe that were returned out of captivity are here called upon to be thankful, ver. 1, 2, 3. 2. Thoſe that were yet remaining in captivity are here prayed for, ver. 4. and encouraged, ver. 5, 6.

A ſong of degrees.

1. WHEN the LORD turned again the captivity of Zion, [a] we were like them that dream. 2. Then a Acts xii.
was [b] our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue 9.
with ſinging: then ſaid they among the heathen, The b Job viii.
LORD hath † done great things for them. 3. The 21.
LORD hath done great things for us: whereof we are † Heb. Magnified to do with glad. 4. Turn again our captivity, O LORD, as the them.
ſtreams in the ſouth. 5. [c] They that ſow in tears ſhall c Jer. xxxi.
reap in ‡ joy. 6. He that goeth forth and weepeth, 9, &c. bearing precious ſeed, ſhall doubtleſs come again with ‡ Or ſinging.
rejoicing, bringing his ſheaves with him.

v. 1—6. Great was the joy when, looſed from the Babyloniſh yoke, the captive Jews returned to Zion; greater will it be, when from their preſent diſperſion they ſhall turn unto the Lord; but greateſt will be the joy of God's Iſrael, when, by the redemption of Jeſus finally and eternally delivered from the bondage of corruption and the grave, they ſhall meet at the heavenly hill, and all become one fold, under one ſhepherd. We have,

1. The pleaſing ſurprize which ſeized them, on hearing liberty proclaimed by Cyrus, the inſtrument God employed to execute his purpoſes. Scarce they could believe the glad tidings true; and like men awaking from ſome pleaſing dream, heſitated whether it were fancy or reality; but ſoon convinced that God had remembered them, and turned their captivity, with ſongs of exultation they hailed the happy day, v. 2. Thus when the awakened conſcience, that poring over its guilt and miſery hath been ready to ſink into deſpair, hears the good news of pardon, grace, and glory, ſovereignly, richly, eternally beſtowed on the vileſt of ſinners, ſcarce can the heart receive the meſſage, it appears ſo much too great and good to be true, till, by divine faith aſſured of the veracity of the promiſes, the ſoul triumphs in God our Saviour, and is filled with joy and peace in believing.

2. Their neighbours admiration, and their own acknowledgments. Then ſaid they among the heathen, the Lord hath done great things for them; they who had before deſpiſed them, Pſal. cxxxvii. 7. beheld with wonder and conviction God's peculiar care over his choſen: and when divine grace converts the ſinner's heart, the bleſſed change will often extort conviction even from the enemies of the truth, and force them to acknowledge that it is the finger of God. The Lord hath done great things for us: whereof we are glad; gladly they echo back the heathen's confeſſion, and aſcribe to their dear Lord the praiſe of his wondrous work, the gracious inſtance of his love, the glorious matter of their joy; or perhaps this may be the ſpeech of the heathen, looking forward to the great redemption of Jeſus, wherein they were to partake, and ſhare in the gladneſs of his people.

3. The church's prayer. Turn again our captivity, O Lord, as the ſtreams in the ſouth, which may be conſidered as their prayer, for their expected deliverance, or as the requeſt of thoſe who were returned, and deſired to have their brethren come up, who remained in Babylon: or as looking forward to their recovery from their preſent long captivity; or as the requeſt of the church of Chriſt, for deliverance from the antichriſtian yoke; or of every faithful ſoul for himſelf, deſiring deliverance from his in-dwelling corruptions, which would be more welcome than rivers of water in the parched deſerts of Arabia to the fainting traveller.

4. The promiſe in anſwer to their prayer. They that ſow in tears, ſhall reap in joy, which is enlarged upon, v. 6. and may be applied, 1. To every believing ſoul, who, with tears of penitential ſorrow, returns unto God, a precious ſeed which God regards, and will give his bleſſing upon it, cauſing a plenteous harveſt of peace and joy to ſpring up, and ripen into an eternity of glory. 2. To every faithful miniſter who goes forth, bearing the precious ſeed of the goſpel word, and weeps over poor ſinners, who continue diſobedient, for whoſe immortal ſouls he prays and labours, and God gives him to ſee the travail of his ſoul in many ſeals given to his miniſtry, his joy now, and to be his crown of rejoicing in the day of the appearing of the great God and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

PSALM CXXVII.

Whether this pſalm was compoſed by David for Solomon, or was his ſon's compoſition, as it may be rendered of Solomon, it is of general uſe, to teach us conſtant dependance on the providence of God, particularly in our families; who gives, 1. Wealth, ver. 1, 2. 2. Heirs to poſſeſs it, ver. 3—5.

¶ A ſong of degrees † for Solomon.

1. EXcept the LORD [a] build the houſe, they labour in vain that build it: except [b] the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain. 2. It is vain for you to riſe up early, to ſit up late, to eat the bread of ſorrows: for ſo he giveth his beloved ſleep. 3. Lo, [c] children are an heritage of the LORD: and [d] the fruit of the womb is his reward. 4. As his arrows are in the hand of a mighty man: ſo are children of the youth. 5. Happy is the man that ‡ hath his quiver full of them: [e] they ſhall not be aſhamed, but they ſhall ‖ ſpeak with the enemies [f] in the gate.

† Or of Solomon. Pſ. lxxii. Title.
[a] Exod. i. 21.
[b] Ibid. cxxi. 3—5.
[c] Gen. xxxiii. 5. & xlviii. 4. Joſh. xxiv. 3, 4.
[d] Deut. xxv. 4.
‡ Heb. Has filled his quiver with them.
[e] Prov. xxvii. 11.
‖ Or ſubdue. Pſ. xviii. 47.
[f] Job v. 4.

v. 1—5. The leſs we depend on our own ſchemes, or lean to our own underſtanding, and the more we look up to God, and ſeek help and direction from him, the ſurer will be the proſperity of every work of our hands.

1. Except the Lord build the houſe, they labour in vain that build it. Whatever projects we may conceive for the advancement of ourſelves or families; whatever plans we may draw, for rearing up ſome noble pile for our abode, it is a Babel tower, and will be the family of an Hiel, unleſs the Lord give his bleſſing and ſucceſs. And if in temporals, much more in ſpirituals are we bound to depend upon him; the wiſeſt of miniſters, and the beſt of men, cannot ſquare one of the living ſtones to raiſe the church of God, unleſs his power and grace work effectually with them.

2. As vain is the watchman's care. It is not the multitude of guards, or their wakeful vigilance, but a greater Guardian who can preſerve the city. The moſt vigilant and active watchmen upon the walls of Zion, cannot prevent the irruption of hereſies, and the breaches of ungodlineſs; this muſt come from above.

3. Vain are all our anxious labours, without God's bleſſing. It is vain for you to riſe up early, to ſit up late, to eat the bread of ſorrows earned by hard toil; all this care, aſſiduity, and diligence is fruitleſs; if God be not regarded, he will diſappoint the hopes of the worldly-minded, and mar all their labours. But where honeſt induſtry is employed in dependance upon him, ſo he giveth his beloved ſleep, no carking cares diſturb his repoſe, he ſleeps in peace, in the arms of the divine love, and riſes refreſhed and happy, to enjoy the new mercies which, with the returning day, are ſhowered upon him.

4. Children are God's gifts, v. 3. He that formed the firſt man from the clay, muſt form each embrio in the womb; and when they are given, from him alone it comes that theſe children are our bleſſings and reward: the moſt pious parent ſees a corrupted offspring, till God, by his grace, taking them for his own, makes them doubly our comfort and joy.

5. They are happy who have theſe gifts of God. As arrows are in the hand of the mighty man, ſo are children of youth, thoſe ſprung from parents in the prime of their youth; or who are themſelves grown up healthy and ſtrong, able to aſſiſt their parents in their declining age. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them; they ſhall not be aſhamed, their ill conduct ſhall never reflect upon, or grieve their parents, but they ſhall ſpeak with the enemies in the gate; their children will be their advocates, and their number and ſtrength their ſupport and defence. Happy the parent bleſt with ſuch children! Happy ſuch children, as learn thus to ſhew piety at home, and to requite their parents.

PSALM CXXVIII.

The fear of God in it is the happineſs of every family, ver. 1, 2, 4. They who live in it will prove it ſo. 1. God will proſper them, ver. 2. 2. Make their relations agreeable, ver. 3. 3. They ſhall live to ſee their families brought up, ver. 6. 4. They ſhall have the ſatisfaction of ſeeing the church of God in a flouriſhing condition, ver. 5, 6. This is a wedding pſalm; it were well if all who heard it read, pondered its contents: then would there be fewer unhappy marriages.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

1. [a] BLeſſed is every one that feareth the LORD: that walketh in his ways. 2. For thou ſhalt eat the labour of thine hands: happy ſhalt thou be, and [b] it ſhall be well with thee. 3. Thy wife ſhalt be as a fruitful vine by the ſides of thine houſe: thy children like olive-plants round about thy table. 4. Behold, that thus ſhall the man be bleſſed, that feareth the LORD. 5. [c] The LORD ſhall bleſs thee out of Zion: and thou ſhalt ſee the good of Jeruſalem all the days of thy life. 6. Yea, thou ſhalt [d] ſee thy children's children, and [e] peace upon Iſrael.

[a] Pſ. cxii. 1. & cxv. 13. & cxix. 1.
[b] Iſa. iii. 10.
[c] Pſ. cxxxiv. 3.
[d] Job xlii. 16.
[e] Pſ. cxxv. 5.

v. 1—6. We have here,

1. The truly bleſſed character, v. 1 He that feareth the Lord, and walketh in his ways, making his will the rule of duty, deſiring to be obedient in all things, and fearing nothing ſo much as to offend him.

2. The happineſs promiſed. In general all the felicity of God's choſen ſhall be the portion of that ſoul. Happy ſhalt thou be, and it ſhall be well with thee; all needful bleſſings in time and eternity ſhall be thine: in particular, (1.) Thou ſhalt eat the labour of thine hands; he ſhall have ſtrength to labour, a bleſſing upon his honeſt induſtry, and a heart to enjoy the good things God beſtows. (2.) Thy wife ſhall be as the fruitful vine by the ſides of thine houſe; of earthly bleſſings, this is the chief; a wife, that adorns the houſe of her abode; a keeper at home, as a vine fixed to the walls, leaning for ſupport on him, to whom her deſire is, and fruitful in thoſe tendereſt pledges and cements of connubial love. (3.) Thy children like olive-plants round about thy table, a flouriſhing offspring, riſing by ſteps like plants of different years; and round a table, which mercy plentifully ſpreads for their proviſion. If they but grow up trees of righteouſneſs, the planting of the Lord, that he may be glorified, then ſhall that father hang over them with delight, and pour forth his warmeſt benedictions upon them. (4.) The Lord ſhall bleſs thee out of Zion, the bleſſing of the baſket, the ſtore, and the family are great, but infinitely more valuable are the ſpiritual bleſſings in Chriſt Jeſus; thoſe laſt but the paſſing days of time, theſe endure to the ages of eternity. (5.) Thou ſhalt ſee thy children's children, the crown of old age, Prov. xvii. 6. a riſing generation tranſmitting down from age to age, not only the reſemblance of the perſons, but alſo the piety of their fathers, who ſeem ſtill to live in them. (6.) Thou ſhalt ſee the good of Jeruſalem all the days of thy life, national proſperity, and peace upon Iſrael, or the flouriſhing ſtate of the church of God, and the abundance of ſpiritual peace and joy ſhed abroad upon the aſſemblies, and in the hearts of the Iſrael of God. Amen! So be it!

PSALM CXXIX.

This pſalm relates to the public concerns of God's Iſrael: It is not certain when it was penned, probably when they were in captivity in Babylon, or about the time of their return. 1. They look back with thankfulneſs on the former deliverances God had wrought for them and their fathers, ver. 1—4. 2. They look forward with a believing prayer for, and proſpect of the deſtruction of all the enemies of Zion, ver. 5, 8. And we may apply it both ways to the goſpel Iſrael, which like the Old Teſtament Iſrael, has weathered many a ſtorm, and is ſtill threatned by many enemies.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

[a] Hoſ. ii. 15. & xi. 1. 1. MAny a time have they afflicted me from [a] my youth, may Iſrael now ſay: 2. Many a time have they afflicted me from my youth: yet they have [b] Iſa. li. 23. not prevailed againſt me. 3. [b] The plowers plowed upon [c] 1 Theſ. i. 6, 7. my back: they made long their furrows. 4. [c] The LORD is righteous: he hath cut aſunder the cords of the wicked.
[d] Iſa. xxxvii. 37. 5. Let them all be confounded [d] and turned back that [e] Pſ. xxxvii. 2. & lxxiii. 19. hate Zion. 6. Let them be [e] as the graſs upon the houſe tops, which withereth afore it groweth up: 7. Wherewith the mower filleth not his hand; nor he that bind-eth ſheaves his boſom. 8. Neither do they which go [f] Ruth ii. 4. by, ſay, [f] the bleſſing of the LORD be upon you: we bleſs you in the name of the LORD.

v. 1—8. Afflictions are deſigned to prove the faith and patience of the ſaints. We have here,

1. The Pſalmiſt reflecting upon the paſt diſtreſſes of Iſrael: many a time had they been a prey to Philiſtines, Ammonites, Egyptians; yea, even now Iſrael, after the fleſh, lies under its ſaddeſt ſtate of captivity. From the days of their being firſt formed into a people, by their tranſgreſſions they often provoked God to leave them for a while under oppreſſion, when ploughers plowed their backs, and like the furrows of the field they were laid waſte and deſolate. This may alſo refer to Chriſt Jeſus, whoſe name is Iſrael, Iſa. xlix. 3. from the days of youth perſecuted and afflicted, and his back with ſcourges furrowed deep. And with him, every member of his body myſtical may expect to ſhare; for through much tribulation, we muſt enter into the kingdom of God.

2. He gratefully acknowledges, They have not prevailed againſt me; whatever perſecutions the church hath ſuffered, it hath riſen fairer for the floods which paſſed over it; and every faithful ſoul, though ſore troubled and tempted, by experience is enabled to ſay, they have not prevailed againſt me, ſo as that I ſhould fatally or finally periſh: and the reaſon is given, the Lord is righteous, hath compaſſion on his people, is faithful to his promiſes, and juſt to avenge their quarrels. He hath cut aſunder the cords of the wicked, the cords with which they enſlaved his people; or their traces, with which they ploughed up their backs, and their treacherous devices, which are diſappointed.

3. He prays that the enemies of Zion, of God's church and people, who hate and perſecute them, may be confounded and turned back, withering like graſs on the houſe top, deſtitute of moiſture, and expoſed to the ſcorching ſun, uſeleſs and fruitleſs: the mower filleth not his hand therewith, nor he that bindeth up the ſheaves his boſom; thus may all their deſigns be abortive, and their ſchemes be fruſtrated, and never ripen into execution: nor will any pious paſſenger pray for God's bleſſing upon them, as was uſually done to the reapers, Ruth ii. 4. but rather curſe their habitation, Job v. 3. and beg of God to defeat their malicious contrivances; that their harveſt may be a heap in the day of grief, Iſa. xvii. 11.

PSALM CXXX.

This pſalm relates not to any temporal concern, either perſonal or public, but it is wholly taken up in the affairs of the ſoul. The Pſalmiſt here expreſſeth, 1. His deſire towards God, ver. 1, 2. 2. His repentance before God, ver. 3, 4. 3. His attendance upon God, ver. 5, 6, 4. His expectations from God, ver. 7, 8. And as in water face anſwers to face, ſo doth the heart of one humble penitent to another.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

1. [a] OUT of the depths have I cried unto thee, O [a] Lam. iii. 55. Jonah ii 2.
LORD. 2. Lord, hear my voice: let thine ears be attentive to the voice of my ſupplications. 3. [b] [b] Pſ. cxliii. 2.
If thou, LORD, ſhouldſt mark iniquities: O LORD, who ſhall ſtand? 4. But there is † forgiveneſs with † Or a propitiation.
thee: [c] that thou mayſt be feared. 5. [d] I wait for the [c] 1 Kings viii. 40. Pſ. ii. 11. Jer. xxxiii. 9.
LORD, my ſoul doth wait, and in his word do I hope.
6. [e] My ſoul waiteth for the LORD, more than they that watch for the morning: ‡ I ſay more than they that [d] Pſ. xxvii. 14. & xxxiii. 20. & xl. 1. Iſa. viii. 17. & xxx. 18.
watch for the morning. 7. Let Iſrael hope in the LORD: for [f] with the LORD there is mercy, and with him is plenteous redemption. 8. And [g] he ſhall redeem [e] Pſ. lxiii. 6. & cxix. 147.
Iſrael from all his iniquities. ‡ Or which watch for the morning. [f] Pſ. lxxxv. 5, 15. Iſa. lv. 7. [g] Pſ. ciii. 3, 4.

v. 1—8. This is reckoned among the ſeven penitential pſalms, and indeed it is a moſt expreſſive deſcription of the humbled ſinner's return to God: deep laden with iniquity, his complaints are bitter. Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O Lord; an awakened ſinner, brought to a ſenſe of his guilt, feels ſuch a load upon his conſcience, as ſeems to preſs him down into the belly of hell. He is ſunk under the floods of corruption; and but a ſtep from deſpair, periſhing he cries, Save Lord! hear my voice, let thine ears be attentive to the voice of my ſupplications; as long as a ſinner is out of hell, the door of hope is yet open, and the voice of prayer may be heard: it is never too late; if God ſtirs up our ſouls to cry importunately after him, it is becauſe he intends to be found by us in mercy: but it muſt only be hoped for in a way of mercy, and with ſelf-renunciation, and deepeſt confeſſions of our own vileneſs. If thou, Lord, ſhouldſt mark iniquities: O Lord, who ſhall ſtand? not that our moſt ſecret thoughts paſs unobſerved by him; no, he ſees them afar off: and ſhould he in ſtrict juſtice call us to his bar, we cannot anſwer him for one of a thouſand of our days; we muſt lay our hands on our mouths, and our mouths in the duſt, plead utterly guilty, juſtify him in his judgments, and can only caſt our ſouls on the mercy of our judge. Thus deſperate is the caſe of every ſinner, and there is no difference; we are all in the ſame condemnation, unable either to bear the ſcrutiny of his law, or to endure the dreadful ſentence of his judgment. But there is forgiveneſs with thee, God hath himſelf contrived and accompliſhed that myſterious method of ſaving ſinners, in which, without impeachment of his juſtice, he might, to the uttermoſt, exerciſe his mercy: through the propitiation of Jeſus, a ranſom is found, and for his ſake God will be merciful to our unrighteouſneſs: that thou mayeſt be feared; nothing ſteels the heart againſt God like deſpair; men then ruſh into ſin with determined waywardneſs, as the horſe ruſheth into the battle; but a ſenſe of his forgiving love engages the heart to fear the Lord and his goodneſs, and bids us never again wilfully tranſgreſs againſt a God ſo gracious. I wait for the Lord at mercy's door, unworthy of notice, yet hoping for his kind regard; my ſoul doth wait, not with feigned profeſſions, but with heart-felt deſires, and in his word do I hope; emboldened by his promiſes, even when I can ſee nothing in myſelf, but what preaches deſpair. My ſoul waiteth for the Lord, more than they that watch for the morning, I ſay more than they that watch for the morning; as the Levites in the temple, who, with ſleepleſs eyes, had ſtood at their ſeveral poſts, longed for the morning to break, that they might be relieved; ſo eagerly did his ſoul long for the beams of God's reconciled countenance to ariſe upon him, and his ſad diſtreſs to be removed, by a ſenſe of pardoning love; nor was ever ſoul, who thus truſted in him, and waited on him, confounded. Let Iſrael hope in the Lord, the Iſrael of God, to the end of time, under all their guilt, fears, falls, backſlidings, and dejection: for with the Lord there is mercy for every miſerable ſinner that through Jeſus Chriſt draws near a throne of grace; and with him there is plenteous redemption, grace abounding to the chief of ſinners, for millions of the fallen race of Adam, comprehending the removal of every miſery, and including the gift of all conceivable bleſſedneſs; yea, more than eye hath ſeen, or ear heard, or it hath entered into the heart of man to conceive. And he ſhall redeem Iſrael from all his iniquities, from the guilt, the power, the conſequences of them, preſent and eternal. Lord, may my ſoul be found among thy Iſrael, and partake of this rich, ſovereign, plenteous, eternal redemption!

PSALM CXXXI.

This pſalm is David's profeſſion of humility; but humbly made with thankfulneſs to God for his grace, and not in vain-glory. It is probable enough, that David made this proteſtation in anſwer to the calumnies of Saul and his courtiers, who repreſented David as an ambitious, aſpiring man, who under pretence of a divine appointment, ſought the kingdom in the pride of his heart. But he appeals to God, that on the contrary, 1. He aimed at nothing high or great, ver. 1. 2. He was very eaſy in every condition which God allotted him, ver. 2. and therefore, 3. He encourageth all good people to truſt in God as he did, ver. 3. Some have made it an objection againſt ſinging David's pſalms, that there are many who cannot ſay, Their heart is not haughty, &c. It is true there are; but we may ſing it for the ſame purpoſe that we read it, to teach and admoniſh ourſelves, and one another, what we ought to be; with repentance that we have come ſhort of being ſo, and humble prayer to God for his grace to make us ſo.

¶ A ſong of degrees of David.

1. LORD, my heart is not haughty, nor mine eyes lofty: [a] neither do I † exerciſe myſelf in great matters, or in things too ‡ high for me. 2. Surely I have behaved and quieted myſelf [b] as a child that is weaned of his mother: my ſoul is even as a weaned child. 3. Let Iſrael hope in the LORD from henceforth, and for ever.

[a] Rom. xii. 16.
† Heb. Walk.
‡ Heb. Wonderful.
[b] Mat. xviii. 3. 1 Cor. xiv. 20.

v. 1—3. We have here,

1. David's profeſſion of his integrity. Lord, my heart is not haughty; naturally it is ſo in every man, but by Divine grace he had been brought to entertain humble apprehenſions of himſelf, ſince a diſcovery of his ſin, helpleſſneſs, and corruption had, by the word and ſpirit of God, been made to him; nor mine eyes lofty, ſuperciliouſly looking down upon inferiors with diſdain, or looking up to ſuperiors with envy: he bowed before God, as the publican, in deep humility; and far from aſpiring thoughts, could have been content, if God ſo pleaſed, to have continued among the ſheep-folds: neither do I exerciſe myſelf in great matters, or in things too high for me; no ambitious projects filled his mind, nor did he affect to be wiſe above what is written, deſiring to pry into the ſecrets of providence and grace, which are too deep for our ſhallow line to fathom. Surely I have behaved and quieted myſelf as a child that is weaned of his mother: my ſoul is even as a weaned child; ſo far from proudly aſſuming ſtate, or being of a turbulent ſpirit, he had at Saul's court ever ſhewed the greateſt meekneſs, and harmleſs behaviour, and no more ſought the honours, wealth, and greatneſs of the world, than a child the breaſt from which it hath been weaned. Note, (1.) Humility is the great ornament of every ſtation. (2.) Proud looks ſhew a proud heart. (3.) To wade out of our depth, either in religion or learning, is dangerous. It is wiſdom enough to know the way to heaven, without intruding into the arcana of God's counſels. (4.) A child-like ſpirit is the beſt ſymptom of a gracious heart.

2. He encourages others from his example to truſt in the Lord. Let Iſrael hope in the Lord from henceforth, and for ever. The people many of them might be impatient of Saul's government, and eager to ſee him on the throne; but he exhorts them to leave the matter to God, who in his own time would fulfil all his deſigns. Note, They who hope in Jeſus, and wait for his ſalvation, may confidently expect to partake of it, not only in time but in eternity.

PSALM CXXXII.

Some think this pſalm was penned by Solomon, at the dedication of the temple, ver. 8—10. being nearly the words with which he concludes his prayer, 2 Chron. vi. 41, 42. others that it was written by David, on his bringing up the ark from Kirjath-jearim, or when he had purpoſed to build the temple. We have here, 1. David's piety, ver. 1—7. 2. God's promiſe, ver. 11—18.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

1004.

1. LORD, remember David, and all his afflictions: 2. How he ſware unto the LORD, and vowed unto [a] the mighty God of Jacob. 3. Surely [b] I will not come into the tabernacle of my houſe, nor go up into my bed: 4. [c] I will not give ſleep to mine eyes, or ſlumber to mine eye-lids, 5. [d] Until I find out a place for the LORD, an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob. 6. Lo, we heard of it [e] at Ephratah: [f] we found it in the fields of the wood. 7. We will go into his tabernacles: [g] we will worſhip at his footſtool. 8. [h] Ariſe, O LORD, into thy reſt: thou, and [i] the ark of thy ſtrength. 9. Let thy prieſts be [k] clothed with righteouſneſs: and let thy ſaints ſhout for joy. 10. For thy ſervant David's ſake, turn not away the face of thine anointed.

[a] Gen. lxix. 24.
[b] Hag. i. 4.
[c] Prov. vi. 4.
[d] Acts vii. 46
[e] Judge xviii. 31.
[f] 1 Sam. vii. 1. 1 Chron. xiii. 5.
[g] Pſ. v. 7. & cxix. 5.
[h] Num. x. 35. 2 Chron. vi. 41, 42.
[i] Pſ. lxxviii. 61.
[k] Job xxix. 14. Iſa. lxi. 10.

v. 1—10. The pſalm opens with a prayer to God. Lord, remember David, and all his afflictions; which may be the words of David himſelf, pleading God's faithfulneſs, and looking for ſupport under all his troubles; or of Solomon pleading the covenant eſtabliſhed with his father, and his afflictions, his ſufferings, or the toil and trouble he underwent in making preparations for the building of the temple; or his humility, which he ſo ſtrongly expreſſed, 2 Sam. vii. 2, 18. It may refer alſo to the Meſſiah, as the church's prayer, that God would remember the covenant of grace eſtabliſhed with him, and accept his ſufferings and humiliation in his people's ſtead.

1. The pſalmiſt recites David's ſolemn vow; ſo earneſtly bent was he on erecting a temple for the Lord, the mighty God of Jacob, whoſe protection he had ſo greatly experienced, that by an oath he bound his ſoul, either literally not to enter his houſe, or ſleep on his bed, till he had fixed on the place where the temple of God ſhould be erected; or figuratively, as others interpret it, that he ſhould enjoy no peace and ſatisfaction in any of his worldly comforts, till this grand affair was determined. At Ephratah, or Shiloh, the tabernacle had been heard of, for there formerly it had been placed, but now it was found in the fields of the wood at Kirjath-jearim: or this may be applied to the Meſſiah, the true tabernacle of God with men, who ſhould be born at Bethlehem Ephratah, and be found in the fields of the wood, in a low and abject condition, Ezek. xvi. 5. and wherever he is found, all true believers will take up their word and ſay, We will go into his tabernacles, the places of public worſhip, where this incarnate Lord manifeſts his preſence, grace, and love, towards his people: we will worſhip at his footſtool, as humble ſupplicants and dutiful ſubjects.

2. The pſalmiſt prays, [1.] That God would vouchſafe to take up his reſidence in the place erected for his honour. Ariſe, O Lord, into thy reſt, where he might fix his ſettled abode, and no more remove from place to place, as when in the tabernacle in the wilderneſs: thou, and the ark of thy ſtrength; the figure of him who is mighty to ſave his people, and their everlaſting help and hope. [2.] That God's prieſts might be clothed with righteouſneſs; in their preaching and practice adorning their high vocation and calling; and without this, their ſacred function ſerves but to aggravate the guilt of their unfaithfulneſs. [3.] That all God's ſaints may ſhout for joy, as they did, 2 Sam. vi. 15. and as all true believers continue to do, whilſt they behold the glory of the Lord Jeſus, and hear his goſpel diſpenſed by a faithful, zealous, and exemplary miniſtry. [4.] For himſelf he prays. For thy ſervant David's ſake, in conſequence of the covenant eſtabliſhed with him, turn not away the face of thine anointed; be gracious to Solomon, anointed to ſit on his throne. This may be regarded alſo as the believer's prayer in general, who is anointed with an unction from the holy One; and for Jeſus' ſake, the ſpiritual David, expects and prays for the light of God's countenance and regard.

11. [l] The LORD, hath ſworn in truth unto David, he will not turn from it, [m] Of the fruit of thy body will I ſet upon thy throne. 12. If thy children will keep my covenant and my teſtimony, that I ſhall teach them; their children alſo ſhall ſit upon thy throne for evermore. 13. For [n] the LORD hath choſen Zion: he hath deſired it for his habitation. 14. [o] This is my reſt for ever: here will I dwell, for I have deſired it. 15. [p] I will abundantly bleſs her proviſion: I will ſatisfy her poor with bread. 16. [q] I will alſo clothe her prieſts with ſalvation: and [r] her ſaints ſhall ſhout aloud for joy. 17. [s] There will I make the horn of David to bud: [t] I have ordained a † lamp for mine anointed. 18. His enemies will I clothe with ſhame: but upon himſelf ſhall his crown flouriſh.

[l] Pſ. lxxxix. 3, 35.
[m] 2 Sam. vii. 12. 1 Kings viii. 25. 2 Chron. vi. 16. Luke i. 69. Acts ii. 30.
[n] Pſ. xlviii. 1.
[o] Ibid. lxviii. 16.
[p] Ibid. cxlvii. 14.
[q] 2 Chron. vi. 41. Pſ. clxix. 4.
[r] Hoſ. xi. 12.
[s] Ezek. xxix. 21. Luke i. 69.
[t] 1 Kings xi. 36. & xv. 4. 2 Chron. xxi. 7.
† Or, candle.

v. 11—18. The great and precious promiſes here delivered, were not deſigned for the men of that generation only, but are equally applicable to us, with whom, in Chriſt, God's covenant ſtands faſt. We have,

1. The unchangeable oath of God, confirming to David the kingdom of Iſrael, and to his ſucceſſors. Of the fruit of thy body will I ſet upon thy throne; not only Solomon, but that glorious ſucceſſor the Lord Jeſus, Acts xi. 30. whoſe kingdom ſhould be an everlaſting kingdom.

2. The condition on which David's poſterity ſhall poſſeſs the throne of Iſrael is their fidelity: whilſt they continue true to God's law, he will ſhew them the faithfulneſs of his promiſe, v. 12. This they ſoon violated, and conſequently loſt the earthly throne; but he who fulfilled all righteouſneſs, in behalf of his people, has ſecured for them the eternal kingdom, and his children, all believers, ſhall reign with him in glory everlaſting.

3. God's choice of Zion for his abode, v. 13, 14. There he fixed his reſidence in the temple, the figure of the goſpel church, where he continues to dwell; and in every believer's heart, in the moſt bleſſed ſenſe, is this verified, This is my reſt for ever: here will I dwell, for I have deſired it. Lord, in my heart thus take up thy bleſt abode!

4. The rich promiſes he makes to his Zion, [1.] Plenty ſhall bleſs the land; ſo abundant the proviſion, that even the poor ſhall eat and be ſatisfied, v. 15. but richer far the proviſion of his grace in his church, where all who hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs may come and be filled, and the pooreſt and moſt miſerable ſinner ſhall not go empty away, but find pardon, grace, and ſalvation, liberally provided for and beſtowed upon him in Jeſus Chriſt. [2.] He engages fully to anſwer the prayer which was made, v. 9. to clothe the prieſts with ſalvation, and to give joy to all his ſaints: and this he doth ſtill, when he ſends forth into the miniſtry men full of faith and of the Holy Ghoſt, by whoſe labours the knowledge of ſalvation is diffuſed, and the children of God, enlightned by their preaching, rejoice in Chriſt Jeſus, and the glorious goſpel of his grace. [3.] He promiſes to ſtrengthen the houſe of David. There will I make the horn of David to bud; a ſucceſſor ſhall be given him, whoſe throne ſhall be greater than his father's: I have ordained a lamp for mine anointed, that his light may never be extinguiſhed, but his poſterity continue. His enemies will I clothe with ſhame, their devices diſappointed, and themſelves vanquiſhed: but upon himſelf ſhall his crown flouriſh: all which, in the moſt eminent ſenſe, is true, and applicable to that Son of David, who ſhould be the horn of ſalvation to his people, Luke i. 69. ſaving them with a mighty and everlaſting ſalvation: a lamp ever burning, the light of the world, the ſun of righteouſneſs ſhining for ever and ever in the firmament of grace, according to God's eternal purpoſe. All his enemies muſt ſooner or later be clothed with ſhame; either the ſhame of penitents, returning to him in deep humiliation; or the ſhame of criminals, led forth to execution, ſuffering the vengeance of eternal fire: his crown muſt for ever flouriſh, he ſhall reign not only till all his enemies are fallen, but to the days of eternity; and what is our joy, he will make us kings with himſelf, and we ſhall reign with him in glory.

PSALM CXXXIII.

This pſalm is ſuppoſed to be penned on the union of the tribes, at making David king, 2 Sam. v. 1—3. or on his reſtoration, 2 Sam. xix. 9—14. It teaches us the bleſſing of peace and unity, which in church, in ſtate, and in private, we are called upon by all means to cultivate and promote. Here is, 1. The doctrine laid down of the happineſs of brotherly love, ver. 1. 2. The illuſtration of that doctrine in two ſimilitudes, ver. 2, 3. 3. The proof of it in a good reaſon given for it, ver. 3.

¶ A ſong of degrees of David.

1. BEhold how good and how pleaſant it is, [a] for brethren to dwell † together in unity. 2. It is like [b] the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard, that went down to the ſkirts of his garments. 3. As the dew of [c] Hermon, and as the dew that deſcended upon the mountains of Zion, for [d] there the LORD commanded the bleſſing, even life for evermore.

[a] Gen. xiii. 8. Heb. xiii. 1.
† Heb. Even together.
[b] Ex. xxx. 25, 30.
[c] Deut. iv. 48.
[d] Lev. xxv. 21. Deut. xxviii. 8. Pſ. xlii. 8.

v. 1—3. Among the deadlieſt evils which have befallen the church of God, we may juſtly reckon the diviſions, diſputes, and animoſities, which have from time to time ſo grievous rent it, disfigured its beauty, deſtroyed its peace. Oh that we had paſſed at laſt the waters of ſtrife, and begun to taſte the bleſſedneſs of loving one another out of a pure heart fervently. We have firſt,

1. The practiſe recommended, as brethren to dwell together in unity; for all God's children have one father, one inheritance, one intereſt, one purſuit, one home, and therefore ſhould have one heart and one mind, united in the ſame worſhip, affectionate in their regards, bearing and forbearing, forgiving and forgetting, and only jealous who ſhall ſhew the moſt abundant meekneſs, charity, and kindneſs to each other.

2. The bleſſedneſs of this conduct. Behold how good, God approves and delights in it, and how pleaſant, it is its own reward. It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron's beard, that went down to the ſkirts of his garments, which was compoſed of the ſweeteſt ſpices, diffuſed the moſt grateful fragance, and cauſed the countenance to ſhine in beauty. Such an unction from the Holy One have they who have this brotherly love ſhed abroad in their hearts; in the eyes of God and men they ſhine; this ſweet ſavour of Chriſt in them is moſt pleaſing, and without it all our doings in God's ſight are nothing worth, 1 Cor. xiii. 1, 2. It is as the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that deſcended upon the mountains of Zion, that allays the heat of the ſcorching ſun, and fertilizes the ſoil: thus doth charity ſeek to cool the heat of bigotry and angry diſpute, diffuſeth its gentle influences, and ſweetly inſinuates into the minds of the exaſperated, producing the happy fruits of peace and union; and wherever this temper dwells, there God's bleſſing abides, for there the Lord commanded the bleſſing; every bleſſing the ſoul can need, and which at his command inſtantly deſcends, even life for evermore, with God and in God; that life of love begun on earth, the earneſt and the foretaſte of eternal bleſſedneſs. Lord ſhed abroad this love in our hearts!

PSALM CXXXIV.

This is the laſt of the fifteen ſongs of degrees, penned probably when David appointed the Levites in their courſes, 1 Chron. xiii. 26—30.

¶ A ſong of degrees.

1. BEhold, [a] bleſs ye the LORD, all ye ſervants of the LORD, [b] which by night ſtand in the houſe of the LORD. 2. [c] Lift up your hands † in the ſanctuary: and bleſs the LORD. 3. [d] The LORD, that made heaven and earth, bleſs thee out of Zion.

[a] Pſ. cxxxv. 1, 2.
[b] 1 Chron. ix. 33.
[c] 1 Tim. ii. 8.
† Or, in holineſs.
[d] Pſ. cxxviii. 5.

v. 1—3. In the courts of the tabernacle the Levites kept conſtant watch and ward night and day; and in theſe hours of their attendance the pſalmiſt directs them,

1. How to employ their time in bleſſing, praiſes, and prayer to God, v. 1, 2. the happy occupation of all God's faithful ones who delight in the courts of his ſanctuary, ceaſeleſs watch unto prayer, and in every thing give thanks.

2. They thank and pray for him, who gives them this good advice, The Lord, that made heaven and earth, bleſs thee out of Zion. Or theſe words may be conſidered as an encouragement to engage their praiſes, becauſe the Lord out of Zion ſhall bleſs thee, returning in bleſſings upon themſelves the praiſes they offered up to him. Note, They who wait upon God ſhall find the bleſſedneſs of his ſervice; he will bleſs us, and we need nothing more to make us happy, now and for evermore.

PSALM CXXXV.

This is one of the Hallelujah pſalms. 1. It begins with a call to praiſe God, particularly a call to the ſervants of the Lord to praiſe him, as in the foregoing pſalm, ver. 1—3. 2. It goes on to furniſh us with matter for praiſe. God is to be praiſed, (1.) As the God of Jacob, ver. 4. (2.) As the God of gods, ver. 5. (3.) As the God of the whole world, ver. 6, 7. (4.) As a terrible God to the enemies of Iſrael, ver. 8—11. (5.) As a gracious God to Iſrael, both in what he had done for them, and what he would do, ver. 12—14. (6.) As the only living God, all other gods being vanity and a lie, ver. 15—18. 3. It concludes with another exhortation to all perſons concerned to praiſe God, ver. 19—21.

1. PRaiſe ye the LORD, praiſe ye the name of the LORD, [a] praiſe him, O ye ſervants of the LORD. 2. [b] Ye that ſtand in the houſe of the LORD, in the courts of the houſe of our God. 3. Praiſe ye the LORD, for [c] the LORD is good: ſing praiſes unto his name, [d] for it is pleaſant. 4. For [e] the LORD hath choſen Jacob unto himſelf, and Iſrael for his peculiar treaſure.

[a] Pſ. cxxxiv. 1.
[b] Luke ii. 37.
[c] Pſal. cxix. 68.
[d] Pſ. cxlvii. 1.
[e] Ex. xix. 5. Deut. vii. 6, 7. & x. 15.

v. 1—4. This pſalm is full of praiſe: and that the ſervants of God may never want matter for their ſongs, David ſuggeſts,

1. His great goodneſs. He is good in himſelf to all his creatures, eſpecially to the veſſels of mercy, who are peculiarly bound to praiſe him for the riches of his grace manifeſted to their ſouls.

2. The delightfulneſs of the ſervice. It is pleaſant: no pleaſure indeed can equal a ſenſe of the Divine love, warm upon the ſoul, and burſting forth in grateful acknowledgments to him who hath ſhed it abroad in our hearts.

3. The diſtinguiſhing privileges of God's Iſrael, and the obligations thence ariſing. For the Lord hath choſen Jacob unto himſelf, and Iſrael for his peculiar treaſure. God's people are his choſen, which in his ſovereign grace he ſeparated for his own, and in whom he delights, as men do in their treaſures; moſt bounden therefore are they in love and duty to adore him for his mercy.

5. For I know that [f] the LORD is great, and that our LORD is above all gods. 6. [g] Whatſoever the LORD pleaſed, that did he in heaven and in earth, in the ſeas, and all deep places. 7. [h] He cauſeth the vapours to aſcend from the ends of the earth, [i] he maketh lightnings for the rain: he bringeth the wind out of his treaſuries. 8. [k] Who ſmote the firſt-born of Egypt, both of man and beaſt. 9. [l] Who ſent tokens and wonders into the midſt of thee, O Egypt, upon Pharoah, and upon all his ſervants. 10.[m] Who ſmote great nations, and ſlew mighty kings: 11. Sihon king of the Amorites, and Og king of Baſhan, and [n] all the kingdoms of Canaan: 12. [o] And gave their land for an heritage, an heritage unto Iſrael his people. 13. [p] Thy name, O LORD, endureth for ever, and thy memorial, O LORD, throughout all generations. 14. For [q] the LORD will judge his people, and he will repent himſelf concerning his ſervants.

f Pſ. xcv. 3. & xcvii. 9.
g Ibid. cxv. 3.
h Jer. x. 13. & li. 16.
i Job xxviii. 25, 26. & xxxviii. 24, &c. Zech. x. 1.
k Ex. xii. 29. Pſal. lxxviii. 51. & cxxxvi. 10.
l Ex. vii. & viii. & ix. & x. & xiv. Pſ. cxxxvi. 15.
m Num. xxi. 24, 25, 26, 34, 35. Pſ. cxxxvi. 17, &c.
n Joſh. xii. 7.
o Pſ. lxxviii. 55. & cxxxvi. 21, 22.
p Ex. iii. 15. Pſ. cii. 12.
q Deut. xxxii. 36.

v. 5—14. The greatneſs, as well as the goodneſs of God, opens a large field for his people's praiſes: this is here inſiſted upon;

1. In general. I know that he is great in his adorable perfections, and all the wonders of his power, manifeſted in the works of creation and providence; yea, there is neither meaſure nor end of his greatneſs, it ſurpaſſes all created underſtanding; our Lord is above all gods, whether the idols of the heathen, the kings of the earth, or the mighty angels, none can compare with him, leſs than nothing and vanity before him; his power is univerſal, what he wills he doth in heaven or earth, without controul, and with abſolute ſovereignty, v. 6.

2. In particular inſtances, [1.] The rain, lightning, and winds own his government. By his eſtabliſhed order in the courſe of nature, the heat of the ſun cauſes the exhalations to aſcend, and float in clouds; according to their different natures theſe kindle in the air and flaſh in lightning, and thoſe becoming too ponderous, fall in drops of rain: out of his treaſuries the winds iſſue, commanded by him when and where to blow, from what point, how long, how violently; all are his creatures, and wait and obey his orders. [2.] His people ſaw his greatneſs marvellouſly manifeſted to them in the plagues of Egypt, the death of the firſt-born, the ruin of Pharoah, the defeat of the Amorites, their conqueſt of Canaan, and peaceable poſſeſſion of that good land. Note, Greater conqueſts, and a nobler poſſeſſion, are enſured to God's ſpiritual Iſrael, and therefore they are bound to praiſe their mighty Lord and Saviour.

3. God's people will feel the everlaſting effects of his goodneſs and greatneſs: he is for ever the ſame, v. 13. to lateſt ages his people ſhall prove his power and his love, the memorial of which will be tranſmitted from one generation to another, and confirmed ſtill by the experience of the preceding. For the Lord will judge his people, rule over them, preſerve, protect them, plead their cauſe againſt their enemies, and at the laſt day crown them with glory, and will repent himſelf concerning his ſervants; if he chaſtiſes them for a while, he will change his method of procedure with them, and turn their mourning into joy; or, he will be intreated for his ſervants, being gracious to hear, and grant their prayer; or, he will comfort himſelf concerning his ſervants, delighting in their proſperity, and watching over them for good: and happy the people who are in ſuch a caſe!

15. [r] The idols of the heathen are ſilver and gold, the work of mens hands. 16. They have mouths, [s] but they ſpeak not; eyes have they, [t] but they ſee not. 17. They have ears, but they hear not; neither is there any breath in their mouths. 18. They that make them are like unto them: ſo is every one that truſteth in them. 19. [u] Bleſs the LORD, O houſe of Iſrael: bleſs the LORD, O houſe of Aaron. 20. Bleſs the LORD, O houſe of Levi: ye that fear the LORD, bleſs the LORD. 21. Bleſſed be the LORD out of Zion, which dwelleth at Jeruſalem. [x] Praiſe ye the LORD.

r Pſ. cxv. 4—11.
s Hab. ii. 18.
t Deut. iv. 28.
u Pſ. cxv. 9, &c.
x Ibid. civ. 35.

v. 15—21. The pſalmiſt here,

1. Pours contempt on the vanities of the heathen, and on their worſhippers: their idols, though made of the moſt precious metals, were the creatures of their own hands, ſenſeleſs, and unable to hear or anſwer the prayers of their ſtupid votaries, who truſted in them, and thereby proved themſelves as void of underſtanding as the ſtock they adored.

2. He encourages the houſe of Iſrael to praiſe and truſt in their God, the only living and true God, who deſerved their higheſt thankſgivings, and was able to ſave them to the uttermoſt: the people in general, the miniſters of the ſanctuary in particular, and all that fear the Lord, Jews and proſelytes, aſſembled in Zion, muſt join to bleſs his name, ſo good, ſo great, and render him that tribute which they ſo deeply owed. Note, The greatneſs and goodneſs of our God will be the ſaints everlaſting ſong, and eternity ſhall never be able to exhauſt the ſubject.

PSALM CXXXVI.

The ſcope of this pſalm is the ſame with that of the foregoing, but there is ſomething very ſingular in the compoſure of it; for the latter half of each verſe is the ſame repeated throughout the pſalm, for his mercy endureth for ever, and yet no vain repetition; all we enjoy in time, and hope for in eternity, flowing purely from this inexhauſted ſource. How ſignally God owned the ſinging of this pſalm we ſee 2 Chron. v. 13. 2 Chron. xx. 21, 22. and it ſhould encourage us to repeat the praiſes of his everlaſting mercy. We muſt praiſe God, 1. As great and good in himſelf, ver. 1—3. 2. As the Creator of the world, ver. 5—9. 3. As Iſrael's God and Saviour, ver. 10—22. 4. As our Redeemer, ver. 23, 24. 5. As the great Benefactor of the whole creation, and God over all bleſſed for evermore, ver. 25, 26.

1.[a] O Give thanks unto the LORD, for he is good: [b] for his mercy endureth for ever. 2. O give thanks unto [c] the God of gods: for his mercy endureth for ever. 3. O give thanks to [d] the LORD of lords: for his mercy endureth for ever. 4. To him [e] who alone doth great wonders: for his mercy endureth for ever. 5. To him [f] that by wiſdom made the heavens: for his mercy endureth for ever. 6. To him [g] that ſtretched out the earth above the waters: for his mercy endureth for ever. 7. To him [h] that made great lights: for his mercy endureth for ever. 8. [i] The ſun to rule by day: for his mercy endureth for ever. 9. The moon and ſtars to rule by night: for his mercy endureth for ever.

a Pſ. cvi. 1. & cvii. 1. & cxviii. 1.
b 1 Chron. xvi. 41.
c Deut. x. 17.
d Rev. xix. 16.
e Pſ. lxxii. 18.
f Gen. i. 1. Prov. iii. 19. Jer. li. 15.
g Gen. i. 9. Pſ. xxiv. 2. Jer. x. 12.
h Gen. i. 14.
i Ibid. i. 16.

v. 1—9. Repeated calls are needful for us, who are ſo backward to the work of praiſe. The object of our praiſe is Jehovah, the God of gods, the Lord of lords, tranſcendently great and glorious, whom angels and men adore: and moſt worthy is he to be praiſed,

1. Becauſe he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever. This is his moſt delightful attribute; mercy in an ever-flowing, overflowing ſtream, deſcends from him the fountain, and all his people to eternity will prove his love unchangeable, and his covenant of promiſe ſure.

2. Becauſe he alone doth great wonders: in heaven above, v. 5. his wiſdom appears, vaſt the work, ſtupendous the contrivance, amazing the execution, in order, beauty, proportion, formed with exacteſt harmony, the ſun to rule the day, the moon and ſtars the night, in regular ſucceſſion: and in earth beneath his wonder-working hand is ſeen, riſing above the waters, and garniſhed with every neceſſary for man and beaſt, and this becauſe his mercy endureth for ever, as in his works of creation and providence abundantly appears, and therefore claims from all continual adoration, love, and praiſe.

10. To him [k] that ſmote Egypt in their firſt-born: for his mercy endureth for ever. 11. [l] And brought out Iſrael from among them: for his mercy endureth for ever. 12. [m] With a ſtrong hand, and with a ſtretched out arm: for his mercy endureth for ever. 13. To him [n] which divided the Red ſea into parts: for his mercy endureth for ever. 14. And made Iſrael to paſs through the midſt of it: for his mercy endureth for ever. 15. [o] But † overthrew Pharaoh and his hoſt in the Red ſea: for his mercy endureth for ever. 16. To him [p] which led his people through the wilderneſs: for his mercy endureth for ever. 17. To him [q] which ſmote great kings: for his mercy endureth for ever. 18. [r] And ſlew famous kings: for his mercy endureth for ever. 19. [s] Sihon, king of the Amorites: for his mercy endureth for ever. 20. [t] And Og, the king of Baſhan: for his mercy endureth for ever. 21. [u] And gave their land for an heritage: for his mercy endureth for ever. 22. Even an heritage unto Iſrael his ſervant: for his mercy endureth for ever.

k Ex. xii. 29. Pſal. cxxxv. 8.
l Ex. xii. 51. & xiii. 17.
m Ibid. vi. 6.
n Ibid. xiv. 21, 22. Pſ. lxxviii. 13.
o Ex. xiv. 28.
† Heb. Shook off.
p Ex. xv. 22.
q Pſ. cxxxv. 10, 11.
r Deut. xxix. 7.
s Num. xxi. 23.
t Ibid. xxi. 33.
u Joſh. xii. 1, &c. Pſ. cxxxv. 12.

v. 10—22. From general mercies, of which all alike partake, the pſalmiſt paſſes on to the peculiar inſtances of God's regard to his own people, from whom he expects a peculiar tribute of praiſe, for ſpecial mercies beſtowed, as well as for the enduring mercy he hath yet in ſtore for them: various inſtances of theſe are here mentioned:

1. Their deliverance from Egypt, wrought with a ſtretched-out arm, after the moſt awful plagues executed on their oppreſſors; preſſors; which cloſed with that moſt terrible judgment the death of their firſt-born. Yet more enduring are his mercies ſtill towards all his choſen, who have in Jeſus Chriſt a greater deliverance from the bondage of ſin and Satan, and eternal redemption from all the powers of evil.

2. Their paſſage through the Red ſea, divided by miraculous power, to let them ſafely through, then cloſing with tremendous roar on their purſuers, and overwhelming them under its mighty waters: and ſuch mercy for ever ſhall the redeemed find; in all their trials he will open them a way through a ſtormy world, bring them ſafe to the ſhore of eternal reſt, and from thence enable them to look back on all their enemies, deſtroyed for ever, as theſe Egyptians on the ſhore.

3. Forty years he led them through the wilderneſs, and fed them by repeated miracles; nor did repeated provocations ſtop the current of his favours, for his mercy endureth for ever, and he will never caſt away his people.

4. He brought them ſafe to the land of Canaan, after ſubduing mighty kings and their armies before them, according to the promiſe made unto their fathers, that they might ſee how ſure and enduring his mercies were, and be engaged to truſt on them for ever. A better land is prepared for God's choſen, and through grace, amidſt all the oppoſition of their ſpiritual enemies, they ſhall be preſerved to this everlaſting kingdom, where to eternity they will acknowledge that his mercy endureth for ever.

23. Who remembred us in our low eſtate: for his mercy endureth for ever. 24. And [x] hath redeemed us from our enemies: for his mercy endureth for ever. 25. [y] Who giveth food to all fleſh: for his mercy endureth for ever. 26. O give thanks unto the God of heaven: for his mercy endureth for ever.

[x] Luke i. 74.
[y] Pſ. civ. 27. & cxlv. 15. & cxlvii. 9. Mat. vi. 26.

v. 23—26. The more we reflect, the more cauſe we ſhall find to praiſe God's everlaſting mercy.

1. For his grace in redemption. He remembred us in our low eſtate, and redeemed us from our enemies; many a time he reſcued the Jewiſh people from their bonds when moſt oppreſſed; but he hath done infinitely more for his ſpiritual Iſrael, when ſunk under guilt, corruption, miſery, at the gate of the grave, and ready to ſink into the belly of hell, he hath ranſomed us by his blood, raiſed us from our ſtate of ſin and death, and ſaved us with an everlaſting ſalvation. Praiſe the Lord, O my ſoul!

2. For his kind proviſion. He giveth food to all fleſh; the meaneſt reptile partakes of his care in common with the greateſt of his creatures; he openeth his hand, and they are filled with good; for his mercy is over all his works.

3. For all this are we moſt deeply obliged to give thanks unto the God of heaven; all other creatures on earth want the power to ſpeak his praiſe, from man alone that tribute is expected, as the tongue of this lower world, and as the peculiar object of that mercy which endureth for ever.

PSALM CXXXVII.

This pſalm was penned in the proſpect of the Babyloniſh captivity, or perhaps during its continuance. We have, 1. The melancholy ſtate of the captives, ver. 1, 2. 2. The taunts of their oppreſſors, ver. 3, 4. 3. Their tender remembrance of Jeruſalem, ver. 5, 6. 4. Their prayer and prophetic declaration concerning the doom of Edom and Babylon, ver. 7—9.

1. BY the rivers of Babylon, there we ſat down, yea we wept, [a] when we remembred Zion. 2. We hanged our harps upon the willows, in the midſt thereof. 3. For there they that carried us away captive, required of us a ſong; and they that † waſted us, required of us mirth, ſaying, ſing us one of the ſongs of Zion. 4. How ſhall we ſing [b] the LORD's ſong in ‡ a ſtrange land? 5. If I forget thee, O Jeruſalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. 6. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jeruſalem [c] above my chief joy.

[a] Pſ. xlii. 4.
† Heb. Laid us on heaps, Pſal. lxxix. 1.
[b] Am. viii. 3.
‡ Heb. The land of a ſtranger.
[c] Neh. ii. 3.

v. 1—6. This pſalm is the compoſition of a mournful muſe, and whilſt we meditate thereon, ſcarce can the ſympathetic heart forbear to mingle her tears with thoſe of the afflicted captives. We have,

1. Their mournful condition. By the waters of Babylon, far from the gates of Zion, under a heavy yoke, employed in ſervile labours near theſe ſtreams, or ſtealing thither ſadly to muſe on their wretched ſtate, we ſet down, yea we wept, indulging their melancholy reflections, and ſwelling the torrent with their tears, when we remembred thee, O Zion; Zion, Zion, aroſe before their eyes, her palaces in ſmoky ruins lay, her temple in heaps, her altars overturned, her ſacrifices ceaſed, and ſullen ſilence reigned in the once thronged gates: ſuch deſolations pierced their hearts with anguiſh, whilſt deep reflection on their ſins, the cauſe of all, called forth ſtill bitterer ſorrows; their inſtruments of muſic on willows hung neglected by, their hearts untuned, their harps unſtrung, and all their ſongs turned into ſighs and groans.

2. Their oppreſſors inſulted over them; not content with plundering their ſubſtance, and enſlaving their perſons; they required ſongs from their heavy hearts, and ſcoffing at the ſongs of Zion, would turn theſe ſacred ſervices into profane mirth. Note, (1.) It is doubly cruel to inſult the afflicted. (2.) The ſongs of Zion have often been the butt of ſcoffers wit; but God is not mocked, he is jealous and avengeth.

3. Their reply. How ſhall we ſing the Lord's ſong in a ſtrange land. Theſe ſacred ſongs ill-ſuited the company of the profane; nor ought theſe holy things to be given to dogs; better exaſperate their maſters by a refuſal, than anger their God by ſinful compliance.

4. Their rooted affection to Jeruſalem. Deep engraven on their hearts, nor time, nor diſtance, baniſhed the loved image from their thoughts; they longed to be there, they hoped the time was near, and ceaſeleſs thitherward directed their faces and their prayers; they preferred it to their chief joy; all perſonal proſperity and comfort was nothing ſo near or dear to them as the intereſt of Zion: much rather therefore did they wiſh to forget their ſkill in muſic, or that their withered arm might ſhrink, and their tongue cleave to the roof of their mouth, than forget the city of their ſolemnities, ceaſe to remember her with honour and delight, or dare by baſe compliances to entertain the ſons of Babylon, or ſerve their gods, with Zion's ſacred muſic. Note, (1.) The intereſts of Chriſt's church and kingdom will be ever dearer to his people than their own. (2.) When the path of duty is clear, however dangerous, we are called to ſteadfaſt adherence to it; better loſe our limbs or life than loſe our ſouls.

7. Remember, O LORD, [d] the children of Edom, in the day of Jeruſalem; who ſaid, † Raſe it, raſe it, even to the foundation thereof. 8. O daughter of Babylon, [e] who art to be deſtroyed; happy ſhall he be ‡ that rewardeth thee as thou haſt ſerved us. 9. Happy ſhall he be that taketh and [f] daſheth thy little ones againſt the ‖ ſtones.

[d] Jer. xlix. 7. Ezek. xxv. 12. Lam. iv. 22. Obad. x. &c.
† Heb. Make bare.
[e] Iſa. xiii. 1. & xlvii. 1. Jer. xxv. 12. & l. 2.
‡ Heb. That recompenſeth unto thee thy deed which thou didſt to us. Jer. l. 15, 29. Rev. xviii. 6.
[f] Iſa. xiii. 16.
‖ Heb. Rock.

v. 7—9. Not revenge, but zeal for God's glory dictates theſe deſires.

1. Edom's malice in the day of Jeruſalem's affliction was cruel; they ſharpned the Chaldeans fury, and wiſhed them to raſe the city and temple to its foundations: for this, a complaint is lodged againſt them with that God, who is the avenger of his people's wrongs, and they ſhall not go unpuniſhed. The perſecutors of God's people will aſſuredly be reckoned with, and every hard ſpeech againſt them be remembered in the day of recompence.

2. The doom of Babylon is read. O daughter of Babylon, who art to be deſtroyed, ſuch is the divine decree, and nothing can prevent its execution: happy ſhall he be that rewardeth thee as thou haſt ſerved us, as Cyrus did, when executing the counſels of God, he entered that devoted city, and retaliated on them the cruelty they had ſhewn their captives. Happy ſhall he be that taketh and daſheth thy little ones againſt the ſtones; and as Babylon thus fell of old, Babylon myſtical ſhall meet the ſame deſtruction from the righteous judgment of God, and all antichriſtian oppreſſors of God's church and people ſink as a millſtone caſt into the ſea, and never riſe up again.

PSALM CXXXVIII.

It is ſuppoſed that David penned this pſalm on his advancement to the throne. 1. He looks with thankfulneſs upon the experiences he had had of God's goodneſs to him, ver. 1—3. 2. He looks forward with comfort, in hopes, (1.) That others would go on to praiſe God like him, ver. 4, 5. (2.) That God would go on to do good to him, ver. 6, 7, 8.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. I Will praiſe thee with my whole heart, [a] before the gods will I ſing praiſe unto thee. 2. I will worſhip [b] towards thy holy temple, and praiſe thy name, for thy loving kindneſs, and for thy truth: for thou haſt magnified thy word above all thy name. 3. In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me: and ſtrengthnedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul. 4. [c] All the kings of the earth ſhall praiſe thee, O LORD: when they hear the words of thy mouth. 5. Yea, they ſhall ſing in the ways of the LORD: for great is the glory of the LORD.

[a] Pſ. cxix. 46. or 1 Cor. xi. 10.
[b] 1 Kings viii. 29. Pſ. xxviii. 2.
[c] Pſ. lxxii. 11. & cii. 15. Rev. xxi. 24.

v. 1—5. David's harp is continually in tune.

1. He reſolves, with warm affection and ſimplicity of heart, to praiſe God, before the gods, in the preſence of kings or magiſtrates, or the angels, with boldneſs, not aſhamed to glory in his dependance upon God. I will worſhip towards thy holy temple, to the place of the ark did they always direct their faces, when aſſembled in the courts of the ſanctuary, or worſhipping in private. For the only prayers or praiſes which aſcend with acceptance, are thoſe which are offered with our eyes to him, who is the true tabernacle Jeſus Chriſt, by whom we have acceſs unto God.

2. Abundant cauſe he had for thankſgiving. For thy loving kindneſs, manifeſted in all the temporal and ſpiritual bleſſings beſtowed, and for thy truth, having experienced the faithfulneſs of his promiſes: for thou haſt magnified thy word above all thy name; great hath God's name appeared in the works of creation and providence, but greater in his word of grace, wherein the moſt tranſcendent diſplays of his glory are made: or this may refer to Chriſt, the eſſential word, who is exalted above every name, and in whom God's name is magnified, beyond all other revelations formerly made to his church. In the day when I cried, thou anſweredſt me, attentive to my prayer, and giving all I aſked, and ſtrengthenedſt me with ſtrength in my ſoul, that he was enabled to ſtand under the preſſures of affliction and temptation, and to overcome all his enemies; for which ineſtimable mercies, he juſtly owed the grateful return of praiſe. Note, (1.) They who truſt God's truth, will prove his faithfulneſs. (2.) When we fly to God in prayer, he will not leave us deſtitute. (3.) In all our trials, if God ſtrengthen us in our ſouls, we ſhall gain by our afflictions.

3. Others, even all the kings of the earth, ſhall join his ſongs, when, hearing the words of his mouth in the preaching of the goſpel, the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall come in, and their kings become nurſing fathers, ſinging in the church of the good ways of the Lord, his mercy, grace, and love in a Redeemer, and aſcribing to him the great glory which is his due. Haſten it, O Lord, in its ſeaſon.

6. [d] Though the LORD be high, yet hath he reſpect unto the lowly: [e] but the proud he knoweth afar off. 7. [f] Though I walk in the mids of trouble, thou wilt revive me, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thine hand againſt the wrath of mine enemies, and thy right hand ſhall ſave me. 8. [g] The LORD will perfect that which concerneth me: thy mercy, O LORD, endureth for ever: [h] forſake not the works of thine own hands.

[d] Pſ. cxiii. 5, 6. Iſa. lvii. 15.
[e] Prov. iii. 34. Jam. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5.
[f] Pſ. xxiii. 3, 4.
[g] Ibid. lvii. 2. Phil. i. 6.
[h] Job x. 8.

v. 6—8. This is either the ſong the kings of the earth ſing, or the Pſalmiſt's profeſſion of his confidence in God.

1. The humble he will regard, the proud he will deſtroy. Though the Lord be high in glory, exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe, yet hath he reſpect unto the lowly, vile in their own eyes, conſcious of their ſin, weakneſs, and wretchedneſs, and caſting themſelves wholly on the riches of God's grace in the Redeemer; theſe God regards with love, and delights to bleſs: but the proud, who are puffed up with worldly advantages, or vain of their attainments in wiſdom, or highly elated with the conceit of their own righteouſneſs; ſuch doth God abhor: he knoweth them afar off, ſees their inmoſt ſoul, and will viſit them in his diſpleaſure.

2. The experience the Pſalmiſt had of God's care, encourages his confidence to truſt him at all times. Though I walk in the midſt of trouble, and that is often the bitter portion of the deareſt ſaints of God, whom he is pleaſed to exerciſe with afflictions, thou ſhalt revive me when ready to ſink under the burden, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thine hand againſt the wrath of mine enemies, to reſtrain or deſtroy them, and thy right hand ſhall ſave me, thy power and grace, or Chriſt, the right hand of the Lord, the Saviour of all who truſt in him. The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me; in his hands all our concerns for time and eternity are ſafe; and he who hath begun the good work of his grace in our hearts, will perfect it until the day of his appearing and glory. Thy mercy, O Lord, endureth for ever, and cannot fail me, nor any faithful ſoul that ever truſts thereon: forſake not the works of thine own hands, perfect the ſalvation of thy people; and as my ſoul is thine by creation, redemption, and grace, forſake me not, but love me to the end, that I may be thine for ever.

PSALM CXXXIX.

David under his calumnies looks to the heart-ſearching God, his approbation can over-balance the world's reviling. 1. He aſſerts God's omniſcience, ver. 1—6. 2. He confirms it by two arguments. (1.) God is every where preſent, therefore he knows all, ver. 7—12. (2.) He made us, therefore he knows us, ver. 13—16. 3. Some inferences are drawn from this doctrine. [1.] It may fill us with pleaſing admiration of God, ver. 17, 18. [2.] With a holy dread and deteſtation of ſin and ſinners, ver. 19—22. [3.] With a holy ſatisfaction in our own integrity, concerning which we may appeal to God, ver. 23, 24. This great and ſelf-evident truth, that God knows our hearts, and the hearts of all the children of men, if we did but mix faith with it, and ſeriouſly conſider it, and apply it, would have a great influence upon our holineſs, and upon our comfort.

¶ To the chief muſician,

A pſalm of David.

1. O LORD, [a] thou haſt ſearched me, and known me. 2. [b] Thou knoweſt my down-ſitting, and mine up-riſing, [c] thou underſtandeſt my thought afar off. 3. [d] Thou † compaſſeſt my path, and my lying down, and art acquainted with all my ways. 4. For [e] there is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O LORD, thou knoweſt it altogether. 5. Thou haſt beſet me behind and before, and laid thine hand upon me. 6. [f] Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it.

[a] Pſ. xvii. 3. Jer. xii. 3.
[b] 2 Kings xix. 27.
[c] John ii. 25.
[d] Job xxxi. 4.
† Or winnoweſt.
[e] Heb. iv. 13.
[f] Job xlii. 3. Pſ. xl. 5.

v. 1—6. Naked and open are all things to him with whom we have to do. This truth the pſalmiſt here, as deeply affected with it, acknowledges. O Lord, thou haſt ſearched me, and known me. When I ſit in my houſe, or walk by the way; lye down on my bed, or riſe to my labour; every ſtep and motion thou ſeeſt, and my riſing thoughts are underſtood by thee, v. 2, 3. Not a word is in my tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knoweſt it altogether; whether uttered, or only formed ready for ſpeech. He is compaſſed around with God's preſence and providence, and his hand is ever near to help him if in danger, or hold him up if falling, v. 5. Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high; I cannot attain unto it. We cannot know ourſelves in any meaſure as God doth; much leſs can we by ſearching find out the Almighty to perfection, whoſe omnipreſence and omniſcience are myſteries to us unfathomable. But a practical ſenſe of theſe upon our hearts we ſhould labour to maintain: ſince God ſees our very thoughts, they ſhould be under reſtraint; ſince God hears, not an idle word ſhould drop from our tongues; ſince God is with us in company, or alone, on our beds, at our tables, in our buſineſs, and his eye on all our works and ways, how careful, how circumſpect ſhould we be before him, and how fearful of offending!

7. [g] Whither ſhall I go from thy ſpirit? or whither ſhall I flee from thy preſence? 8. [h] If I aſcend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there. 9. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the ſea: 10. Even there ſhall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand ſhall hold me. 11. If I ſay, Surely the darkneſs ſhall cover me: even the night ſhall be light about me. 12. Yea, [h] the darkneſs hideth not from thee; but the night ſhineth as the day: the darkneſs and the light are both alike to thee. 13. For thou haſt poſſeſſed my reins: [i] thou haſt covered me in my mother's womb. 14. I will praiſe thee, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made; marvellous are thy works, and that my ſoul knoweth right well. 15. [k] My † ſubſtance was not hid from thee, when I was made in ſecret; and curiouſly wrought in the loweſt parts of the earth. 16. Thine eyes did ſee my ſubſtance yet being unperfect, and in thy book all my members were written, ‡ which in continuance were faſhioned, when as yet there was none of them.

[g] Jer. xxiii. 24.
[h] Amos ix. 2—4.
[h] Job xxvi. 6. & xxxiv. 22. Dan. ii. 22. Heb. iv. 13.
[i] Job x. 11.
[k] Ibid. x. 8, 10. Eccleſ. xi. 5.
† Or body.
‡ Or what days they ſhould be faſhioned.

v. 7—16. Nothing can be conceived more ſublime and affecting, than the deſcription here given of God's univerſal preſence.

1. He filleth all things. There is no eſcaping his eye by flight, or concealment by darkneſs. Should we attempt by flight to elude his ſearch, whither ſhall we go? If I climb up to heaven, God is there, and filleth it with his preſence; if I make my bed in hell, hid in the ſilent grave, or even lying down in the everlaſting burnings, he is there, watching over the duſt of his people, and preſent in his wrath, even in the place of torment. If I take the wings of the morning, and meet the riſing ſun in the moſt diſtant eaſt, or dwell in the uttermoſt parts of the ſea, or of the weſt, where the deſcending beam of day ſeems extinguiſhed in the waters of the ocean, even there ſhall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand ſhall hold me; far from eſcaping, thou muſt ſupport my ſteps; and there, as much as ever, I am in thy power, and under thine eye, nor can darkneſs conceal me from thee. If I am fool enough to ſay, Surely the darkneſs ſhall cover me, vain would be my hope; even the night ſhall be light about me; yea, the darkneſs hideth not from thee, but the night ſhineth ſhineth as the day; the darkneſs and light to thee are both alike. Let the workers of iniquity then tremble at the thought; God's eye is upon them, nor is there any darkneſs, or ſhadow of death, where they can hide themſelves.

2. He made all things, and muſt needs therefore be acquainted with the work of his own hands. Thou haſt poſſeſſed my reins; acquainted with all that paſſeth in my inmoſt ſoul; for thou haſt covered me in the womb; when there an embrio, concealed as in the loweſt parts of the earth, thine eye beheld the unformed maſs, and by thy plaſtic hand curiouſly wrought, each limb reı ceived its nice proportion, and every veſſel diſcharged its ſeveral office. A miracle to ourſelves! ſo fearfully and wonderfully are we made: a myſtery inexplicable; all we know, (and that is glaringly evident) is this, that Marvellous are thy works! deſerving our higheſt praiſe and adoration, and worthy to be had in everlaſting remembrance.

17. [l] How precious alſo are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the ſum of them! 18. If I ſhould count them, they are more in number than the ſand: when I wake, I am ſtill with thee. 19. Surely thou wilt ſlay the wicked, O God: [m] depart from me therefore, ye bloody men. 20. For [n] they ſpeak againſt thee wickedly, and thine enemies take thy name in vain. 21. [o] Do not I hate them, O LORD, that hate thee? and am not I grieved with thoſe that riſe up againſt thee? 22. I hate them with perfect hatred, I count them mine enemies. 23. [p] Search me, O God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts. 24. And [q] ſee if there be any † wicked way in me, and [r] lead me in the way everlaſting.

l Pſ. xl. 5.
m Ibid. cxix. 115.
n Jude xv.
o 2 Chron. xix. 2. Pſ. cxix. 158. Prov. xix. 27.
p Job xxxi. 6. Pſ. xxvi. 2.
q Pſ. vii. 3.
† Heb. Way of pain or grief.
r Pſ. v. 8. & cxliii. 10.

v. 17—23. We have here,

1. The Pſalmiſt's grateful acknowledgment of God's care over him. How precious are thy thoughts unto me, O God, thoughts of mercy, peace, and grace, which David with great delight meditated upon. How great is the ſum of them! ſo innumerable, that the ſand of the ſea might be eaſier counted, and ſo continual, that every morning increaſed the ſum: when I wake, I am ſtill with thee, enjoy thy conſtant protection, and am happy in a ſenſe of thy reviving preſence. Note, A heart enlightened to know God's grace in Jeſus Chriſt, is loſt in wonder on the contemplation, and can only cry, O the depth!

2. He foreſees the deſtruction of the wicked. Surely thou wilt ſlay the wicked, O God: they are deſcribed as bloody men, they ſpeak againſt thee wickedly, proud and blaſphemers, and thine enemies in heart and practice, ſhewing their enmity againſt God's government and law; they take thy name in vain, perjured or profane; and juſt therefore it is, that their end ſhould be according to their works.

3. He profeſſes his own abhorrence of their practices and ways. Depart from me, I will have no fellowſhip with theſe unfruitful works of darkneſs, nor keep company with ſuch evil doers. Do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate thee? not their perſons, but their ſins; and am not I grieved with thoſe that riſe up againſt thee? grieved at the diſhonour brought on God by their rebellion, grieved at the miſery which they bring on themſelves by their ſins. I hate them with a perfect hatred, ſincerely deteſt their evil ways; I count them mine enemies, they muſt be enemies to me, becauſe enemies to thee. Note, (1.) The ways of ſinners we may hate, whilſt we have the trueſt love and pity to their ſouls. (2.) They who hate God, muſt hate his image, whereever it appears.

4. He appeals to God for his own ſimplicity, and a great rejoicing it is to have the teſtimony of a good conſcience. Search me, O God, for ſincerity ſtarts not at enquiry, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts, for I deſire to conceal nothing from thee, and ſee if there be any wicked way in me; I wiſh allowedly to be found in none, but who can underſtand his errors? diſcover it to me if I err, and ſhew me the evil, that it may be lamented and renounced; and lead me in the way everlaſting, lead me in the paths of holineſs, to the kingdom of everlaſting glory; guided by thy word, upheld by thy ſpirit, and enabled to perſevere faithfully unto the end. And to this every faithful ſoul will add his hearty Amen!

PSALM CXL.

This pſalm appears to have been penned during Saul's perſecution of David. In it, 1. David complains of the malice of his enemies, and prays to God to preſerve him from them, ver. 1—5. 2. He encourageth himſelf in God, as his God, ver. 6, 7. 3. He prays for, and propheſies the deſtruction of his perſecutors, ver. 8—11. 4. He aſſures all God's afflicted people that their troubles would in due time end well, ver. 12, 13.

¶ To the chief muſician,
A pſalm of David.

1. [a] DEliver me, O LORD, from the evil man: preſerve me from the † violent man. 2. [b] Which imagine miſchiefs in their heart; [c] continually are they gathered together for war. 3. They have ſharpned their tongues like a ſerpent: [d] adders poiſon is under their lips. Selah. 4. [e] Keep me, O LORD, from the hands of the wicked, preſerve me from the violent man, who have purpoſed to overthrow my goings. 5. [f] The proud have hid a ſnare for me, and cords, they have ſpread a net by the way-ſide: they have ſet gins for me. Selah. 6. I ſaid unto the LORD, Thou art my God: hear the voice of my ſupplications, O LORD. 7. O God the LORD, the ſtrength of my ſalvation; thou haſt covered my head in the day of battle.

a Pſ. lxxi. 4. Ver. 4.
† Heb. Man of violence.
b Pſ. xxxviii. 12.
c Ibid. lvi. 6. & cxx. 7.
d Ibid. lviii. 4. Rom. iii. 13.
e Ver. 1.
f Pſ. xxxv. 7. & lvii. 6. & cxix. 110. & cxli. 9. Jer. xviii. 22.

v. 1—7. The way to glory lies through much tribulation; thus David came to the throne of Iſrael, and we may expect to meet with our portion of temptation, to ſuffer for Chriſt, before we reign with him. We have here,

1. The Pſalmiſt's complaints; many, mighty, and inveterate were his enemies; they were evil in their diſpoſitions, and violent in their rage againſt him, crafty and miſchievous, inceſſantly ſtudying his ruin, and united in ſtrict confederacy againſt him, v. 2. With tongues of malignant venom they aſperſed his character, v. 3. Hardned in wickedneſs, they ſtuck at no violence; and with full purpoſe of heart, determined his deſtruction, v. 4. Proud, and confident of ſucceſs, they laid their ſnares for him in all his paths, and expected quickly to ſee him their prey. Thus was Chriſt alſo beſet with the malice and perſecution of men, aſperſed by their envenomed tongues, and ſnares laid to deſtroy him; whilſt Herod and Pilate, prieſts and people, confederate againſt him, with ceaſeleſs enmity purſued him to the croſs. Let none of his ſervants count it ſtrange, if they meet with the like enmity, ſlander, and oppoſition. The diſciple is not above his maſter.

2. His prayer and confidence in God. Deliver me from their hands, preſerve me from their ſnares, keep me, for I cannot keep myſelf; Thou art my God, my rock, my refuge, on whom I depend, the ſtrength of my ſalvation, able to ſave to the uttermoſt, engaged to do it in that covenant that ſeals thee mine. Hear the voice of my ſupplications, and anſwer me in peace, according to the protection I have hitherto experienced; for thou haſt covered my head in the day of battle, and warded off every mortal blow, aimed at me by my enraged foes. In the conflict with the powers of darkneſs, the Son of David thus offered up prayers and ſupplications, and was heard in the day of trouble, made triumphant in his reſurrection, and his head exalted over all his foes. Behold here alſo every believer's warfare and ſtrength, 1. His recourſe is by prayer to God, for ſtrengthening and upholding grace. 2. He is enabled to exerciſe faith in God, as his God, and to find in him the ſtrength of his ſalvation. 3. Thus is he protected in every dangerous conflict, and though his ſpiritual foes thruſt ſore at him, that he ſhould fall, his head is covered, his ſoul preſerved, and all his foes at laſt ſhall be made his footſtool.

8. Grant, not, O LORD, the deſires of the wicked, further not his wicked device, † [g] leſt they exalt themſelves. Selah. 9. As for the head of thoſe that compaſs me about, [h] let the miſchief of their own lips cover them. 10. [i] Let burning coals fall upon them, let them be caſt into the fire; into deep pits, that they riſe not up again. 11. Let not ‡ an evil ſpeaker be eſtabliſhed in the earth: evil ſhall hunt the violent man to ‖ overthrow him. 12. I know that the LORD will maintain the cauſe of the afflicted, and the right of the poor. 13. Surely the righteous ſhall give thanks unto thy name, the upright ſhall dwell in thy preſence.

† Or let them not be exalted.
g Deut. xxxii. 27.
h Pſ. vii. 16. & xciv. 23. Prov. xii. 13. & xviii. 7.
i Pſ. xi. 6.
‡ Heb. A man of tongue.
‖ Heb. Deſtructions.

v. 8—13. However prevalent for a time the wicked may ſeem, their triumphing is but for a moment.

1. David prays for the diſappointment of his enemies. Grant not, O Lord, the deſires of the wicked, further not his wicked devices, or let them not come forth: however deep laid, or eagerly purſued, diſconcert the enterpriſe when ready to be carried into execution, leaſt they exalt themſelves, and grow inſolent with ſucceſs.

2. He foreſees their ruin approaching. For as let may be rendered ſhall, what appears a prayer may be tranſlated as a prophecy; though that God ſhould be glorified in the deſtruction of the obſtinately impenitent, may, without any private enmity, be the ſubject of a believer's prayer. Their curſing and lies ſhall return upon their own heads, and their own miſchief cover them with confuſion, v. 9. The wrath of God ſhall fall on them, as the fire that devoured the cities of Sodom; and, ſunk into the pit of torment, they ſhall never riſe again from the everlaſting burnings, v. 10. All lying tongues are but for a moment, and the gains of falſehood ſhall never be eſtabliſhed in the earth: like a beaſt of prey, evil ſhall hunt the violent man, till, at the laſt, deſtruction final and eternal ſhall overtake him, v. 11. And this might be particularly levelled againſt Saul, or Doeg, but it is univerſally true of all the enemies of Chriſt and his people, whoſe end ſhall be, that they ſhall be rooted out at the laſt.

3. He expreſſes his confidence in God's care over his own people. I know that the Lord will maintain the cauſe of the afflicted; he had experienced this himſelf, and was ſure it would be ſtill the caſe, reſpecting his ſuffering-ſervants, whoſe innocence he would vindicate, and whoſe quarrel he would eſpouſe; and the right of the poor, becauſe ſuch are liable to be oppreſſed; but God is the poor man's friend, to do him that juſtice, which on earth may be denied him. Surely the righteous ſhall give thanks unto thy name, acknowledging with gratitude his kind interpoſition on their behalf, and the upright ſhall dwell in thy preſence, as children under their father's care protected and preſerved, as ſervants in their maſter's houſe, to wait his orders, or as ſaints around his throne in glory, to follow him with their everlaſting praiſes.

PSALM CXLI.

David was in diſtreſs when he penned this pſalm; it is moſt likely purſued by Saul, that violent man. Is any diſtreſſed? Let him pray; David did ſo, and had the comfort of it. 1. He prays for God's favourable acceptance, ver. 1, 2. 2. For his powerful aſſiſtance, ver. 3, 4. 3. That others might be inſtrumental of good to his ſoul, as he hoped to be to the ſouls of others, ver. 5, 6. 4. That he and his friends being now brought to the laſt extremity, God would graciouſly appear for their relief and reſcue, ver. 7—10.

A pſalm of David.

1. LORD, I cry unto thee, [a] make haſte unto me; give ear unto my voice, when I cry unto thee. 2. Let [b] my prayer be † ſet forth before thee [c] as incenſe; and [d] the lifting up of my hands as the evening ſacrifice. 3. Set a watch, O LORD, before my mouth, keep the door of my lips. 4. Incline not my heart to any evil thing, to practiſe wicked works with men that work iniquity: and [e] let me not eat of their dainties.

[a] Pſ. lxx. 1.
[b] Rev. v. 8. & viii. 3, 4.
† Heb. Directed.
[c] Rev. viii. 3, 4.
[d] Pſ. cxxxiv. 2.
[e] Prov. xxiii. 6.

v. 1—4. David was a man of ſorrows, and therefore a man of prayer. We have him here very importunate with God,

1. For ſpeedy help. Make haſte unto me, as one ready to be overwhelmed, unleſs God appeared for his ſalvation. Note, They who have a lively ſenſe of their wants and danger, will be importunate in their ſupplications.

2. For gracious acceptance. Give ear unto my voice, as willing to grant my petitions; let my prayer be ſet before thee as incenſe, and the lifting up of my hands as the evening ſacrifice, which being offered on God's altar, were accepted before him. The incenſe of prayer muſt thus be offered on Chriſt our altar; and when, with our hands lifted up, our heart aſcends in a flame of holy love, then is it a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmell, acceptable and well-pleaſing to God.

3. For direction what and how to ſpeak. Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth in prayer, that I may not raſhly, unadviſedly, or negligently, utter what my heart doth not feel. In trials, that I may not drop a word of murmuring, complaint, or impatience; among men, that I may neither ſpeak falſely, fooliſhly, or paſſionately. Keep the door of my lips, which need continually a divine reſtraint, and without it can never be effectually bridled.

4. For preſervation from all evil. Incline not my heart to any evil thing: not that God ever tempts men to ſin, or inclines them to evil; but only leaves them to their own corrupted hearts, naturally inclined to evil; therefore we have need of his preventing and reſtraining grace to keep us, that we practiſe not wicked works with men that work iniquity, who make it their buſineſs and delight to ſin, and draw in others; and unleſs the Lord preſerve us, we are in danger of falling into their ſnares.

5. For a reſtraint from their luxuries. Let me not eat of their dainties; feaſting as an epicure at their tables, or partaking with them in their ſins; which, however to the corrupt appetite pleaſing, and ſweet in the mouth, in the belly are bitter as gall, and poiſonous as the viper's ſting. Keep me, Lord, from theſe deadly dainties!

5. [f] † Let the righteous ſmite me, it ſhall be a kindneſs; and let him reprove me, it ſhall be an excellent oil, which ſhall not break my head; for yet [g] my prayer alſo ſhall be in their calamities. 6. When their judges are overthrown in ſtony places, they ſhall hear my words, for they are ſweet. 7. Our bones are ſcattered at the grave's mouth, as when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth. 8. But [h] mine eyes are unto thee, O God the LORD: in thee is my truſt, leave not my ſoul deſtitute. 9. Keep me from [i] the ſnare which they have laid for me, and the gins of the workers of iniquity. 10. [k] Let the wicked fall into their own nets, whilſt that I withal ‡ eſcape.

[f] Prov. ix. 8. & xix. 25. & xxv. 12.
† Or, Let the righteous ſmite me kindly, and reprove me; let not their precious oil break my head.
[g] Mat. v. 44.
[h] 2 Chron. xx. 12. Pſ. cxxiii. 1, 2.
[i] Pſ. cxix. 110. & cxl. 5. & cxlii. 3.
[k] Pſ. vii. 16. & xxxv. 8.
‡ Heb. Paſs over.

v. 5—10. Though David heartily prays againſt the malignity of his enemies, yet,

1. He earneſtly deſires the rebukes of the faithful. Let the righteous ſmite me, it ſhall be a kindneſs; I ſhall eſteem it the beſt proof of real friendſhip: and let him reprove me, it ſhall be an excellent oil, which ſhall not break my head, but ſerve to heal the wounds of ſin; and, far from reſenting the correction, it would engage his affections and prayers in their behalf: for yet my prayer alſo ſhall be in their calamities; that God, in return for their kindneſs to him, may deliver them from their troubles. Note, (1.) Reproof is the moſt needful and kindeſt office of real friendſhip. (2.) To love reproof, and to be thankful for it, is among the ſureſt ſymptoms of a gracious ſpirit. (3.) That reproof will be moſt effectual, which comes from thoſe whoſe unſuſpected piety gives weight to their words, and whoſe tender manner of applying it, ſoft as oil, makes it more penetrating. (4.) They who pray to be right, and yet are diſpleaſed to be rebuked for what is wrong, prove their hypocriſy.

2. He hopes, when his wicked enemies are deſtroyed, the people will receive him, and hear him with pleaſure. When their judges are overthrown in ſtony places; as when Saul fell on the mountains of Gilboa, which he might foreſee; or the deſtruction of all his other foes, who would be puniſhed, as men caſt down by the ſides of a rock, as was ſometimes done by criminals; then they ſhall hear my words, for they are ſweet; either the words of his pathetic ſong, 2 Sam. i. 17—27. or thoſe divine compoſitions which would be publiſhed on his return from his exile, and which contained in them ſuch a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt.

3. He complains of his preſent wretched ſtate. Our bones are ſcattered at the grave's mouth: either literally ſo, ſuch of David's friends as fell into Saul's hand might be ſlain and left unburied, or their bones dug up as traitors; or, figuratively they ſeemed as at the brink of the grave, and their condition hopeleſs as that of dry bones. As when one cutteth and cleaveth wood upon the earth, like chips that fly off from the blow of the axe, ſo were they driven to and fro, and perſecuted by their enemies.

4. He in prayer commits his ſoul to God. But mine eyes are unto thee, O God the Lord, the mighty Saviour and hope of my ſoul; in thee is my truſt, in thee alone: leave not my ſoul deſtitute; forſaken of thee I muſt needs periſh: but keep me from the ſnare which they have laid for me, and the gins of the workers of iniquity: though never ſo craftily concealed, preſerve me from the danger. Let the wicked fall into their own nets, the righteous retaliation for their iniquity; whilſt that I withal eſcape, unhurt by their miſchievous deſigns. Note, (1.) Whilſt our eye is to God, our feet ſhall not ſlip. (2.) The deſtruction of the wicked is determined, and their devices to hurt others ſhall only haſten their own deſtruction.

PSALM CXLII.

This pſalm is a prayer, the ſubſtance of which David offered up to God, when he was forced by Saul to take ſhelter in a cave, and afterwards penned it in this form. Here is, 1. The complaint he makes to God, ver. 1, 2. of the ſubtilty, ſtrength, and malice of his enemies, ver. 3—6. and the coldneſs and indifferencey of his friends, ver. 4. 2. The comfort he takes in God, that he knew his caſe, ver. 3. and was his refuge, ver. 5. 3. His expectation from God, that he would hear and deliver him, ver. 6, 7. 4. His expectation from the righteous, that they would join with him in praiſes, ver. 7.

[a] Maſchil of David; a prayer [b] when he was in the cave.

1. I [c] Cried unto the LORD with my voice: with my voice unto the LORD did I make my ſupplication. 2. [d] I poured out my complaint before him; I ſhewed before him my trouble. 3. When [e] my ſpirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou kneweſt my path: [f] in the way wherein I walked, have they privily laid a ſnare for me. 4. [g] I looked on my right hand, and beheld, but [h] there was no man that would know me; refuge failed me; no man † cared for my ſoul. 5. I cried unto thee, O LORD, I ſaid, [i] thou art my refuge,

[a] Pſ. xxxii. tit.
[b] 1 Sam. xxii. 1. or xxiv. 3.
[c] Exod. xiv. 15.
[d] Pſ. cii. tit.
[e] Ibid. cxliii. 4.
[f] Ibid. cxl. 5.
[g] Pſ. lxix. 20.
[h] Ibid. xxxi. 11. & lxxxviii. 8, 18.
† Heb. Sought after.
[i] Pſ. xlvi. 1. & xci. 2.

fuge, and [k] my portion in the land of the living. 6. Attend unto my cry, for [l] I am brought very low : deliver me from my perſecutors, for they are ſtronger than I. 7. Bring my ſoul out of priſon, that I may praiſe thy name : [m] the righteous ſhall compaſs me about ; for [n] thou ſhalt deal bountifully with me.

k Pſ. xvi. 5. & lxxiii. 26. & cxix. 57. Lam. iii. 24.
l Pſ. cxvi. 6.
m Pſ. xxxiv. 2.
n Pſ. xiii. 6. & cxix. 17.

v. 1—7. No place or time is unſeaſonable for prayer. When Engedi, or Adullam was his oratory, David ſtill found ſweet communion with God, threatning as his danger ſeemed. We have,

1. His complaints, which out of the fulneſs of his heart he poured forth before the Lord. I cried unto the Lord with my voice, and ſhewed him all my trouble, to which from Saul his bloody perſecutor he was expoſed. It was enough to ſpread it before the Lord, whoſe tender mercies knew how to pity him, and his power to relieve him. Note, They who have a God of all grace to fly to, may ſafely leave in his hand all their troubles.

2. He appeals to God for his own ſimplicity. When my ſpirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou kneweſt my path : when reduced to the deepeſt diſtreſs, I ſtill fled to no wrong methods to extricate myſelf. In the way wherein I walked have they privily laid a ſnare for me, ſeeking to entrap me every ſtep I take. Note, When our conſciences condemn us not, then have we confidence towards God.

3. He was without help from man, v. 4. His friends grew ſhy, were aſhamed to own him, none opened their hoſpitable door ; and, abandoned as it were to ruin, refuge failed me ; no man cared for my ſoul. Thus was Jeſus forſaken, rejected, denied, when alone he trod the wine-preſs of the wrath of God.

4. When human help failed him, ſtill God was his refuge, and portion in the land of the living, and to him he directed his prayer, v. 5. and if God be our refuge, we need fear no danger ; if he be our portion, we need wiſh for nothing more in the land of the living. Attend unto my cry, for I am brought very low, under affliction and diſtreſs : deliver me from my perſecutors, for they are ſtronger than I, and without divine help muſt be ſwallowed up by them utterly. Bring my ſoul out of priſon, out of my ſtraits and difficulties ; that I may praiſe thy name. The righteous ſhall compaſs me about, admiring the mercy ſhown in his deliverance, and joining with him in his praiſes ; for thou ſhalt deal bountifully with me ; ſaving him from his enemies, fixing him on the throne, and fulfilling all the deſires of his heart. Note, (1.) We cannot be brought ſo low, but God can help us ; and, though fettered in the bonds of corruption or temptation, he can open our priſon-doors. Let us never deſpair. (2.) The mercies our brethren enjoy ſhould excite our praiſes, as members of the ſame body.

PSALM CXLIII.

This pſalm ſeems penned during Abſalom's rebellion. 1. David complains of his troubles, ver. 3, 4, 5. 2. He prays, and prays earneſtly, ver. 6. 1. That God would hear him, ver. 1, 7. 2. That he would not deal with him according to his ſins, ver. 2. 3. That he would not hide his face from him, ver. 7. but manifeſt his favour to him, ver. 8. 4. That he would guide and direct him in the way of his duty, ver. 8—10. and quicken him in it, ver. 11. 5. That he would deliver him out of his troubles, ver. 9, 11. 6. That he would in due time reckon with his perſecutors, ver. 12. We may the eaſier accommodate this pſalm to ourſelves in the ſinging of it, becauſe moſt of the petitions in it are for ſpiritual bleſſings, which we all need at all times, mercy and grace.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. HEAR my prayer, O LORD, Give ear to my ſupplications : [a] in thy faithfulneſs anſwer me, and in thy righteouſneſs. 2. And enter not into judgment with thy ſervant : for [b] in thy ſight ſhall no man living be juſtified. 3. For the enemy hath perſecuted my ſoul, he hath ſmitten my life down to the ground ; he hath made me to dwell in darkneſs, as thoſe that have been long dead. 4. Therefore [c] is my ſpirit overwhelmed within me : my heart within me is deſolate. 5. [d] I remember the days of old, I meditate on all thy works : I muſe on the work of thy hands. 6. [e] I ſtretch forth my hands unto thee : [f] my ſoul thirſteth after thee, as a thirſty land. Selah.

a Pſ. xxxi. 1.
b Exod. xxxiv. 7. Job iv. 17. & ix. 2. & xv. 14. & xxv. 4. Eccleſ. vii. 20. Rom. iii. 20. Gal. ii. 16.
c Pſ. cxlii. 3.
d Ib. lxxvii. 5, 10, 11.
e Ib. lxxxviii. 9.
f Ib. lxiii. 1.

v. 1—6. When we are in trouble, God permits us to pour our ſorrows into his boſom.

1. The pſalmiſt begs an audience to his prayers, and pleads, as the ground of his hope, God's faithfulneſs to his promiſes, and his righteouſneſs ; either his grace, or the divine righteouſneſs of Jeſus, the purchaſe of all our bleſſings. Note, If ever we hope for God's acceptance of us, it muſt be not for any thing in us, but purely of grace for his dear Son's ſake, according to the promiſes of his word.

2. He humbly prays, Enter not into judgment with thy ſervant : for in thy ſight ſhall no man living be juſtified. Note, (1.) The moſt righteous man alive cannot bear the ſeverity of God's juſtice. (2.) They who beſt know their own hearts, will ever be the firſt to condemn themſelves, and cry for mercy at God's hand. (3.) They who plead guilty before the law, and fly to the grace of the goſpel in Jeſus Chriſt, ſhall be juſtified from all things.

3. He complains of his afflicted ſtate. Perſecuted by his bitter foe ; brought to the gates of the grave ; compelled to hide himſelf in ſolitary caves, as if driven from the light, and already a companion of the dead, v. 3. his ſpirit melancholy as his circumſtances ; and his heart within him deſolate, dejected, and ready to ſink into deſpair. Note, (1.) When our own diſtreſs is greateſt, God's power and grace ſhall be the more magnified in our deliverance. (2.) The beſt of men have had their faith ſore ſhaken, perplexed, but not in deſpair.

4. Meditation and prayer are his chief recourſe. I remember the days of old ; the wonders God had wrought for his church and people, and for himſelf alſo, in former days. I meditate on all thy works ; on the power and goodneſs of God therein diſplayed, and draw from thence encouragement for my ſoul. I muſe on the work of thy hands, and ſpeak thereof to others, as the moſt pleaſing ſubject of diſcourſe. I ſtretch forth my hands to thee, in eager and importunate prayer : My ſoul thirſteth after thee, as a thirſty land. Selah. with ſuch longings as the parched ground, whoſe fiſſures ſeem to gape for the refreſhing ſhowers. Note, (1.) Remembrance of God's dealings with his people of old, and with ourſelves in time paſt, is moſt encouraging in our diſtreſſes. (2.) They who are athirſt for God, his love, and favour, ſhall never be ſent from a throne of grace empty away.

7. Hear me ſpeedily, O LORD, my ſpirit faileth : hide not thy face from me [g] † leſt I be like unto them that go down into the pit. 8. [h] Cauſe me to hear thy loving-kindneſs in the morning, for in thee do I truſt : [i] cauſe me to know the way wherein I ſhould walk, for [k] I lift up my ſoul unto thee. 9. Deliver me, O LORD, from mine enemies : I flee unto thee to hide me. 10. [l] Teach me to do thy will, for thou art my God : thy ſpirit is good, lead me into [m] the land of uprightneſs. 11. [n] Quicken me, O LORD, for thy name's ſake : for thy righteouſneſs ſake bring my ſoul out of trouble. 12. And of thy mercy cut off mine enemies, and deſtroy all them that afflict my ſoul : for [o] I am thy ſervant.

g Pſ. xxviii. 1. & lxxxviii. 3.
† Or, For I am become like, &c. h Pſ. xc. 14.
i Ib. v. 8.
k Ib. xxv. 1.
l Ib. xxv. 4, 5. & cxxxix. 24.
m Iſa. xxvi. 10.
n Pſ. cxix. 25, 37, 40.
o Pſ. cxvi. 16.

v. 7—12. Oppreſſed, and ready to faint under his trials, we have his fervent cries. My ſpirit faileth ; ſwooning with the weight of his affliction, or with the ſenſe of his ſins ; but a ſtep from the pit of death, or perhaps in his own apprehenſion from the belly of hell ; therefore, Hear me ſpeedily, or I am paſt recovery. His particular requeſts are,

1. Hide not thy face from me ; for the ſenſe of God's diſpleaſure to a gracious ſoul is more bitter than death, and the hidings of his countenance the foreſt affliction.

2. Cauſe me to hear thy loving-kindneſs in the morning ; for God hath kindneſs ſtill in ſtore for his people in their deepeſt ſtate of anguiſh, and faith embraces it ; for in thee do I truſt ; and they who do ſo, can never periſh.

3. Cauſe me to know the way wherein I ſhould walk ; for in our afflictions our eyes are often ſo filled with tears, that we cannot ſee the path of duty ; but the faithful heart is conſcious that he hath but one deſire, and that is, to pleaſe God ; and therefore I lift up my ſoul unto thee for guidance and direction.

4. Deliver me, O Lord, from mine enemies : they are many ; they are mighty ; too mighty for me to oppoſe ; but I flee unto thee to hide me ; and they are ſafe from every foe, ſpiritual or temporal, who are covered with the ſhadow of his wings. My ſoul, flee ever thither for thy refuge !

5. Teach me to do thy will ; for we have neither underſtanding to know what it is, nor ability to follow it, till God inſtruct and guide us : for thou art my God ; I give myſelf up to thee as my covenant God, to be made ſuch as thou wouldſt have me to be.

6. Thy ſpirit is good ; or, Let thy good ſpirit lead me into the land of uprightneſs. It is not only the eſſential perfection of this Spirit to be good, but his office it is to ſanctify our ſouls, and lead us in the right way, that we may come through the paths of holineſs to the land of eternal purity and bleſſedneſs ; and hitherto every gracious ſoul longs to come.

7. Quicken me, O Lord, from my low and dejected ſtate, and revive my fainting ſoul, for thy name's ſake, for the glory of thy grace and faithfulneſs. For thy righteouſneſs ſake bring my ſoul out of trouble ; not only deliver my body from death, but my ſpirit from the ſorer temptations which beſet me; for if our ſoul is ſafe, then our all is ſafe.

8. And of thy mercy cut off mine enemies, and deſtroy all them that afflict my ſoul; my perſecutors, who will meet juſt judgment from an avenging God, who eſpouſeth the quarrel of his oppreſſed people; for I am thy ſervant, who, engaged in thy ſervice, may hope for thy protection. And thus ſhall all the enemies of Chriſt and his people be cut off at the laſt, and tribulation in full meaſure be given to thoſe who troubled us.

PSALM CXLIV.

When David was come to the throne he had ſtill enemies to encounter. 1. He acknowledgeth the great goodneſs of God to him in advancing him to the throne, ver. 1—4. 2. He prays to God to help him againſt the enemies that threatned him, ver. 5—8. and again, ver. 11. 3. He rejoiceth in the aſſurance of victory over them. ver. 9, 10. 4. He prays for the proſperity of his own kingdom, and pleaſeth himſelf with the hopes of it, ver. 12—15.

¶ A pſalm of David.

1. BLeſſed be the LORD my † ſtrength, [a] which teacheth my hands to war, and my fingers to fight. 2. [b] My ‡ goodneſs and my fortreſs, my high tower and my deliverer, my ſhield, and he in whom I truſt: who ſubdueth my people under me. 3. [c] LORD, what is man, that thou takeſt knowledge of him? or the ſon of man, that thou makeſt account of him? 4. [d] Man is like to vanity: [e] his days are as a ſhadow that paſſeth away. 5. [f] Bow thy heavens, O LORD, and come down: [g] touch the mountains, and they ſhall ſmoke. 6. [h] Caſt forth lightning, and ſcatter them: ſhoot out thine arrows, and deſtroy them. 7. [i] Send thine hand from above, [k] rid me, and deliver me out of great waters, from the hand of [l] ſtrange children; 8. [m] Whoſe mouth ſpeaketh vanity; and their right hand is a right hand of falſhood.

† Heb. Rock. Pſal. xviii. 2, 31.
[a] 2 Sam. xxii. 35. Pſ. xviii. 34.
[b] 2 Sam. xxii. 2, 3, 40, 48.
‡ Or, mercy.
[c] Job vii. 17. Pſ. viii. 4. Heb. ii. 6.
[d] Job iv. 19. & xiv. 2. Pſ. xxxix. 5. & lxii. 9.
[e] Ib. cii. 11.
[f] Ib. xviii. 9. Iſa. lxiv. 1.
[g] Pſ. civ. 32.
[h] Ib. xviii. 13, 14.
[i] Ibid. 16.
[k] Ver. 11. Pſ. lxix. 2, 14.
[l] Ib. liv. 3. Mal. ii. 11.
[m] Pſ. xii. 2.

v. 1—8. All the returns for mercies we can pay, are bleſſing and praiſe aſcribed to the gracious giver of all good. Of this the pſalmiſt ſets us the example.

1. He bleſſes God for all the goodneſs he had experienced. Bleſſed be the Lord my ſtrength, by whoſe power I have been upheld, and by his providence protected; which teacheth my hands to war, and my fingers to fight; and from a ſhepherd's crook enabled him to wield Goliah's ſword. My goodneſs, the author of all grace, and engaged to be mine, to bleſs me in a covenant of everlaſting love; and my fortreſs, where I am ſafe from the attacks of my enemies: my high tower, above the reach of human or Satanical malice; and my deliverer out of every danger: my ſhield, to guard me in the day of battle; and he in whom I truſt, who neither can nor will ever fail me, or diſappoint my confidence: who ſubdueth my people under me; bringing me, after all my wanderings, to the peaceable poſſeſſion of Iſrael's throne. Note, (1.) The perfections of an everlaſting God, and the ſtability of everlaſting promiſes, are every believer's ſecurity. (2.) The Lord Jeſus is now exalted to the throne, and God will give him the hearts of his people, and the necks of his enemies.

2. He expreſſes his admiration of God's condeſcenſion and kindneſs. Lord, what is man, ſo low in his original, and now become ſo vile by ſin, that thou takeſt knowledge of him? or the ſon of man, that thou makeſt account of him? ſhewing ſuch poor and wretched creatures ſuch kindneſs and regard; eſpecially ſending his Son to be incarnate to redeem them. Man is like to vanity; an empty nothing, or a vapour. His days are as a ſhadow that paſſeth away; ſo ſwift, ſo tranſitory. O that men were wiſe, that they pondered theſe things, that they conſidered their latter end. If their moment be ſo ſhort, and eternity depends on it, how diligently ſhould they redeem each hour!

3. He looks up to God for ſupport againſt all his remaining enemies; and calls on him to manifeſt his preſence in ſome tremendous diſplays of his power, as when he deſcended on Sinai's hoary top, v. 5. to ſcorch them with his lightnings, and ſhoot forth thoſe arrows of his vengeance, which no human powers can for a moment withſtand, v. 6. By this divine interpoſition he hopes for deliverance out of the deep waters of trouble, and the hoſts of enemies which ſurrounded him, v. 7. And their character called for ſuch righteous judgment againſt them: their mouth ſpeaketh vanity, falſe and deceitful; and their right hand is a right hand of falſhood; whether lifted up in prayer, or in a ſolemn oath; the one is hypocritical, the other faithleſs. Note, (1.) There is a terrible day approaching, when vengeance will overtake the enemies of God. (2.) The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of the deepeſt waters of affliction; and they who call upon him will find him near to ſave them. (3.) Falſhood and lies may for a moment proſper, but in the end will iſſue in men's everlaſting confuſion.

9. I will [n] ſing a new ſong unto thee, O God: upon a pſaltery, and an inſtrument of ten ſtrings will I ſing praiſes unto thee. 10. [o] It is he that giveth † ſalvation unto kings: who delivereth David his ſervant from the hurtful ſword. 11. [p] Rid me, and deliver me from the hand of ſtrange children; whoſe mouth ſpeaketh vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of falſhood. 12. That our ſons may be [q] as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner-ſtones, ‡ poliſhed after the ſimilitude of a palace: 13. That our garners may be full, affording all manner of ſtore; that our ſheep may bring forth thouſands, and ten thouſands in our ſtreets: 14. That our oxen may be § ſtrong to labour; that there be no breaking in, nor going out; that there be no complaining in our ſtreets. 15. [r] Happy is that people that is in ſuch a caſe: yea, happy is that people, whoſe God is the LORD.

[n] Pſ. xxxiii. 3. & xl. 3.
[o] Pſ. xviii. 50.
† Or, victory.
[p] Ver. 7, 8.
[q] Pſ. cxxviii. 3.
‡ Heb. Cut.
§ Heb. Able to bear burdens, or, loaden with fleſh.
[r] Pſ. xxxiii. 12. & lxv. 4. & cxlvi. 5.

v. 9—15. We have here,

1. David's praiſes for his deliverances in anſwer to his prayer. I will ſing a new ſong unto thee, O God, and join his muſic with his voice, to raiſe the ſound: Upon a pſaltery, and an inſtrument of ten ſtrings, will I ſing praiſes unto thee. And abundant reaſon he had; for it is he that giveth ſalvation unto kings, whoſe armies are not their ſafety, but the power of God giving ſucceſs to their enterprizes; who delivereth David his ſervant from the hurtful ſword of Saul, and all his ſecret and open enemies. The Son of David was thus enabled alſo to triumph, when God raiſed him from the dead, and exalted him to the throne, ſin, Satan, death, and every enemy of his people, being bruiſed under his feet.

2. The pſalmiſt prays for the continuance of the ſame care over himſelf; many enemies of the ſame ill character remained, from whom he deſires to be delivered, v. 11. and for his ſubjects, that proſperity, plenty, and peace, might reign among them; their families be increaſed; their ſons and daughters endowed with every corporal and mental accompliſhment, v. 12. their garners full with every kind of ſtore; their flocks multiplied exceedingly; their oxen ſtrong; no irruptions from an enemy; no leading out to captivity; no complaints of faction, famine, ſickneſs, or the ſword, ever heard; but all peaceful without, and quiet within, v. 13, 14. Such a ſtate cannot but denote a happy people: not that happineſs conſiſts in theſe outward bleſſings merely, but where beſtowed are marks of God's favour, which is the ſupreme felicity. Happy therefore, now and eternally ſo, are the people who have the Lord for their God. Note, (1.) The bleſſings of the baſket and the ſtore, ſo far as they come from God in a way of love, are doubly ſweet; and they twice enjoy this world's good things, who ſee and gratefully bleſs the hand which beſtows them. (2.) All that earth can give is but ſhadow, without God. He alone can truly ſatisfy the deſires of the ſoul. (3.) They who have God for their Lord, bound to them in a covenant of everlaſting love and peace, muſt needs be happy; for all his things are theirs, and to eternity his unchangeable regard ſecures their unchangeable bleſſedneſs.

PSALM CXLV.

In this pſalm, 1. David engageth himſelf and others to praiſe God, ver. 1, 2, 4—7, 10—12. 2. He faſtens upon thoſe things that are proper matter for praiſe; God's greatneſs, ver. 3. His goodneſs, ver. 8, 9. The proofs of both in the adminiſtration of his kingdom, ver. 13. The kingdom of providence, ver. 14—16. The kingdom of grace, ver. 17—20. And then he concludes with a reſolution to continue praiſing God, ver. 21. with which reſolution our hearts muſt be filled and fixed in ſinging this pſalm.

¶ David's [a] pſalm of praiſe.

[a] Pſ. c. tit.

1. I Will extol thee, my God, O King, and I will bleſs thy name for ever and ever. 2. Every day will I bleſs thee, and I will praiſe thy name for ever and ever. 3. [b] Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praiſed; and [c] his greatneſs is unſearchable. 4. [d] One generation ſhall praiſe thy works to another, and ſhall declare thy mighty acts. 5. I will ſpeak of the glorious honour of thy majeſty, and of thy wondrous † works. 6. And men ſhall ſpeak of the might of thy terrible acts: and I will declare thy greatneſs. 7. They ſhall ‡ abundantly utter the memory of thy great goodneſs, and ſhall ſing of thy righteouſneſs. 8. [e] The LORD is gracious, and full of compaſſion; ſlow to anger, and

[b] Pſ. xcvi. 4.
[c] Job. v. 9. & ix. 10.
[d] Pſ. lxxviii. 4. Iſa. xxxviii. 19.
† Heb. Things, or words.
‡ Heb Pour out.
[e] Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7. Num. xiv. 18. Pſal. lxxxvi. 5, 15. & ciii. 8.

§ Heb. Great in mercy.
[f] Mat. v. 45.

§ of great mercy. 9. The LORD is [f] good to all: and his tender mercies are over all his works.

v. 1.—9. This and the following pſalms to the end are full of praiſes: it is called David's Pſalm of Praiſe, as being probably often made uſe of by him.

1. He opens with his holy reſolution, I will extol thee, my God, O King; the glorious Jehovah, the King Meſſiah. Continual and perſevering ſhould be his ſong; every day his tongue ſhould not be ſilent; and not only through the years of time, but to the ages of eternity, he hoped to be engaged in this bleſſed employment. I will bleſs thy name for ever and ever.

3. Excited by his example, others would join his ſongs, v. 6. and from age to age the bleſſed work be tranſmitted to poſterity, and generations yet unborn perpetuate the ſound; for God ſhall never want a people to the end of time, and it ſhould be our deſire and delight to ſee the riſing generation improving on the piety of their forefathers.

2. The ſubject for their praiſes is boundleſs. Great is the Lord, in all his divine perfections, and greatly to be praiſed, tho' our higheſt expreſſions fall infinitely ſhort of his greatneſs, which is unſearchable. Tranſcendently glorious is the honour of his majeſty; whether conſidered as of the One Divine Eſſence, in his perſon the brightneſs of the Father's glory; or as mediator, exalted to be the head over all things, angels, principalities, and powers being made ſubject unto him. Glorious alſo are his wondrous works of creation, providence, but eſpecially of redemption, his incarnation, ſufferings, glory, and the great things he daily doth in behalf of his church and people. Terrible are his acts of judgment againſt his enemies; ſuch as he hath already executed upon his enemies in all the ages paſt, and greater ſtill are reſerved for the day of his appearing and glory. And withal good as he is great, in all his diſpenſations of providence and grace, eſpecially towards his people, becoming incarnate, living, dying, riſing, reigning to bleſs and ſave them. Goodneſs ſo great, that it is more than we are able to expreſs, but the memory of which ſhould ever be warm upon our hearts. Gracious, to pardon all our ſins; full of compaſſion, to pity the ignorant and the tempted; ſlow to anger, notwithſtanding the manifold provocations we daily give him; and of great mercy towards every miſerable ſoul that flies to him for ſuccour. Good to all, in a way of providential kindneſs; and his tender mercies over all his works, particularly over that workmanſhip of his hands, the ſouls of his redeemed people, and all in a way of ſtrict righteouſneſs, v. 7. he having, by his obedience unto death, fully ſatisfied the demands of God's law, and, without any impeachment of his holineſs or truth, he can now exerciſe his mercy and grace to the ſinful ſons of men: and theſe views of the grace and glory of our Immanuel furniſh ſubjects for our praiſe, that eternity can never exhauſt.

[g] Pſ. xix. 1.

10. [g] All thy works ſhall praiſe thee, O LORD: and thy ſaints ſhall bleſs thee. 11. They ſhall ſpeak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power. 12. To make known to the ſons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majeſty of his kingdom. 13. [h] Thy kingdom is † an everlaſting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations. 14. The LORD upholdeth all that fall, and [i] raiſeth up all thoſe that be bowed down. 15. [k] The eyes of all ‡ wait upon thee, and [l] thou giveſt them their meat in due ſeaſon. 16. Thou openeſt thine hand, and [m] ſatisfieſt the deſire of every living thing. 17. The LORD is righteous in all his ways, and § holy in all his works. 18. [n] The LORD is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him [o] in truth. 19. [p] He will fulfil the deſire of them that fear him: he alſo will hear their cry, and will ſave them. 20. The LORD preſerveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he deſtroy. 21. My mouth ſhall ſpeak the praiſe of the LORD: and let [q] all fleſh bleſs his holy name for ever and ever.

[h] Pſ. cxlvi. 10. 1 Tim. i. 17. 2 Pet. i. 11.
† Heb. A kingdom of all ages.
[i] Pſ. cxlvi. 8.
[k] Ib. civ 27.
‡ Or, Look unto thee.
[l] Pſ. cxxxvi. 25.
[m] Ib. civ. 21. & cxlvii. 9.
§ Or, bountiful.
[n] Deut. iv. 7.
[o] John iv. 24.
[p] 1 John v. 14.
[q] Pſ. lxv. 2.

v. 10—21. New matter for our praiſe is here ſuggeſted from the adminiſtration of the divine government among men. All thy works ſhall praiſe thee, O Lord; all bear enſtamped upon them the wiſdom, power, and goodneſs of their Creator. But they ſtand ſilent monuments of his praiſe: man is the tongue of this lower world; and thy ſaints, as many as by divine light have their eyes opened, and their hearts enlarged with divine love, they ſhall bleſs thee, aſcribing to him the honour of all his glorious works.

1. They ſhall ſpeak of the majeſty, glory, and power of his kingdom, quite different from that of the ſons of men, eſtabliſhed in the hearts of his people, and conſiſting in righteouſneſs, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghoſt: his mighty acts, the miracles he hath wrought of old for his church and people, and the wonders of his goſpel-word converting thouſands of ſouls in a day; and the perpetuity of his dominion, which through all generations ſhall endure, and run coeval with the days of eternity, v. 13.

2. His grace is as his power infinite. On him the eyes of all wait, and all their wants, from the leaſt to the greateſt, are liberally ſupplied, v. 15, 16. And with eſpecial care he watches over his people, upholding thoſe who fall into affliction or temptation, that they ſink not under their burdens; and raiſing up thoſe that be bowed down under a ſenſe of ſin and corruption, or groaning under their ſorrows; near to every poor ſinner that calls upon him in truth, really feeling his burdens, and ſighing to be relieved; and thoſe who fear and love him, have every deſire granted that faith can aſk, whether reſpecting the bleſſings of grace or glory, of time or eternity. Salvation preſent and everlaſting is their aſſured portion, and God will preſerve them from falling, and bring them to the reſt provided for his people: but all the wicked will he deſtroy, with everlaſting deſtruction of both body and ſoul in hell. In all which his diſpenſations, both of mercy to his people, and puniſhment of his enemies, the Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works: and he will appear to be ſo at the laſt day, when all will be obliged to own the equity of his procedure, his ſaints adore him, and ſinners be ſpeechleſs before him.

3. The pſalmiſt concludes with his fixed purpoſe to praiſe this great and gracious God, and exhorts all, as many as the Lord ſhall call, to join his praiſes, and to eternity adore his holy name. May my ſoul be ever engaged in this bleſſed work, Amen, and Amen!

P S A L M CXLVI.

This and all the reſt of the pſalms that follow, begin and end with Hallelujah. 1. The pſalmiſt engageth himſelf to praiſe God, ver. 1, 2. 2. He engageth others to truſt in him, which is one neceſſary and acceptable way of praiſing him: And, (1.) He ſhews why we ſhould not truſt in men, ver. 3, 4. (2.) Why we ſhould truſt in God, ver. 5. Becauſe of his power in the kingdom of nature, ver. 6. His dominion in the kingdom of providence, ver. 7. And his grace in the kingdom of the Meſſiah, ver. 8, 9. that everlaſting kingdom, ver. 10. to which many even of the Jewiſh writers refer this pſalm.

1. [a] PRaiſe ye the LORD. [b] Praiſe the LORD, O my ſoul. 2. [c] While I live, will I praiſe the LORD: I will ſing praiſes unto my God, while I have any being. 3. [d] Put not your truſt in princes, nor in the ſon of man, in whom there is no † help. 4. [e] His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth: in that very day his thoughts periſh.

[a] Pſ. civ. 35.
[b] Ib. ciii. 1.
[c] Ib. civ. 33.
[d] Ib. cxviii. 8, 9. Iſa. ii. 22.
† Or, ſalvation.
[e] Pſ. civ. 29. Eccleſ. xii. 7. Iſa. ii. 22.

v. 1—4. David's heart overflowed with gratitude, and therefore his lips were filled with praiſe. He could ſay, with deepeſt ſenſibility of the bleſſing, My God, and could not therefore but add, I will praiſe him whilſt I have any being. Senſible of the vanity of all beſides to help, and the inſignificance of every creature, he bids us put no truſt in any ſon of man, not even in the mightieſt princes. They are changeable, their favour precarious, their promiſes often deluſive: but be they never ſo able to help us, never ſo willing, the greateſt are dying worms, returning to the duſt from whence they came: their breath expires, their projects vaniſh, and all their thoughts of aggrandizing themſelves, or their friends, are at an end. Note, (1.) Whatever a man may poſſeſs in this world, all he can properly call his earth, is that pittance of a grave allotted for his laſt abode. (2.) Hope in man is deluſory; hope in God knows no diſappointment. (3.) Though in man there is no help, there is a Son of Man mighty to ſave; and bleſſed are they that put their truſt in him.

5. [f] Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whoſe hope is in the LORD his God: 6. [g] Which made heaven and earth, the ſea, and all that therein is: which keepeth truth for ever: 7. [h] Which executeth judgment for the oppreſſed, which giveth food to the hungry: [i] the LORD looſeth the priſoners. 8. [k] The LORD openeth the eyes of the blind; [l] the LORD raiſeth them that are bowed down: the LORD loveth the righteous: 9. [m] The LORD preſerveth the ſtrangers; he relieveth the fatherleſs and widow: but the way of the wicked he turneth upſide down. 10. [n] The LORD ſhall reign for ever, even thy God, O Zion, unto all generations. Praiſe ye the LORD.

[f] Pſ. cxliv. 15. Jer. xvii. 7.
[g] Gen. i. 1. Rev. xiv. 7.
[h] Pſ. ciii. 6.
[i] Ib. lxviii. 6. & cvii. 10, 14. Iſa. lxi. 1.
[k] Mat. ix. 30. John ix. 7—32.
[l] Pſ. cxlv. 14. & cxlvii. 6. Luke xiii. 13.
[m] Deut. x. 18. Pſal. lxviii. 5.
[n] Exod. xv. 18. Pſ. x. 16. & cxlv. 13. Rev. xi. 15.

v. 5—10. What is the true happineſs of man? The queſtion is here reſolved. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, in all his trials, temptations, and afflictions; whoſe hope is in the Lord his God, the never-failing refuge of all who fly to him for ſuccour; their Saviour in every diſtreſs, and to the uttermoſt will never leave nor forſake them; for he is,

1. Able to ſave them. He is the creator of all things; heaven, and earth, and ſea, with all their inhabitants, are the work of his hands; and he that is the almighty Author of all, muſt needs be as almighty to preſerve.

2. He hath promiſed to help them. He keepeth truth for ever; he is the Amen, the faithful and true witneſs; and truth itſelf muſt fail, before his word of promiſe can diſappoint us.

3. He is juſt. He executeth judgment for the oppreſſed; vindicates their injured innocence, and brings deſerved vengeance on their enemies, as in the laſt day, if not before, will abundantly appear.

4. His tender mercies are over all his works. He giveth food to the hungry; not only the bread of earth to nouriſh their bodies, but himſelf, the bread of life, which cometh down from heaven, to nouriſh the immortal ſoul.

5. The diſtreſſed have ever found him their ready friend. He looſes the priſoners, bound of Satan with diſeaſe, or by death incloſed in their graves. He opens the eyes of the blind, and raiſes up thoſe that are bowed down with infirmity. Abundant inſtances of which appeared, when in the days of his fleſh he wrought ſuch miraculous cures, Luke xiii. 11, 12. Mat. xi. 5. John ix. 32. But greater works than theſe he doth. The priſoners of ſin are looſed by the preaching of his goſpel, and the power of Satan broken. The eyes of our mind, blinded by corruption, receive divine illumination; and the impotent faculties of our ſouls are delivered from their infirmities. The burdens of ſin, of ſorrow, of temptation, are looſed by him; and with the diſcoveries of his love, the heads bowed down as the bulruſh, under a ſenſe of guilt, are lifted up in praiſe and joy.

6. His love is upon his people, the righteous, completely ſuch in his bleſſed ſelf, by virtue of their union with him, and as ſuch the objects of his high regard; and by his Spirit alſo renewed, and enabled to walk before him and pleaſe him.

7. The deſtitute are relieved by him. The ſtrangers, whom no man careth for; the fatherleſs and widow, whoſe ſituation lays them open to oppreſſion, he preſerves. The Syro-phenician woman, the Samaritans, the widow of Nain, proved the truth of this: and the ſtrangers of the Gentiles, the ſpiritually deſtitute, have found him a merciful God.

8. The wicked will be deſtroyed by him. Their way he turneth upſide down; he will blaſt their deſigns, and break their power; and, if not prevented by a timely and penitent return to him, will turn them into hell, to receive the eternal puniſhment of their ſins.

9. The kingdom of Chriſt ſhall endure for ever. He ſhall reign, and therefore his people may be ſatisfied he will aſſuredly help them: even thy God, whoſe perfections are all engaged for their ſalvation, unto all generations: and ſuch reviving hope cannot but make their ſouls happy, and engage their everlaſting praiſes. Hallelujah!

PSALM CXLVII.

This is another pſalm of praiſe; perhaps on his coming to the kingdom, when thoſe who followed his fortunes, as outcaſts, were reſtored to honour and dignity. 1. We are called upon to praiſe God, ver. 1, 7, 12. 2. We are furniſhed with matter for praiſe, for God is to be glorified, (1.) As the God of nature, and ſo he is very great, ver. 4, 5, 8, 9, 15—18. (2.) As the God of grace, comforting his people, ver. 3, 6—10, 11. (3.) As the God of Iſrael, Jeruſalem, and Zion, ſettling their civil ſtate, ver. 2, 13, 14. and eſpecially ſettling religion among them, ver. 19, 20.

1. [a] PRaiſe ye the LORD: for it is good to ſing praiſes unto our God; [b] for it is pleaſant, and [c] praiſe is comely. 2. The LORD doth build up Jeruſalem:
[d] he gathereth together the out-caſts of Iſrael.
3. [e] He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their † wounds. 4. [f] He telleth the number of the ſtars: he calleth them all by their names. 5. Great is our LORD, and of great power: [g] his underſtanding is infinite. 6.
[h] The LORD lifteth up the meek: [i] he caſteth the wicked down to the ground. 7. Sing unto the LORD with thankſgiving: ‡ ſing praiſe upon the harp unto our God: 8. [k] Who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh graſs to grow upon the mountains. 9. [l] He giveth to the beaſt his food, [m] and to the young ravens which cry. 10.
[n] He delighteth not in the ſtrength of the horſe: he taketh not pleaſure in the legs of a man. 11. The LORD taketh pleaſure in them that fear him, in thoſe that hope in his mercy.

a Pſ. civ. 35.
b Ib. cxxxv. 3.
c Ib. xxxiii. 1.
d Deut. xxx. 3.
e Pſ. li. 17. Iſa. lvii. 15. & lxi. 1.
† Heb. Griefs.
f Gen. xv. 5. Iſa. xl. 26.
g Iſa. xl. 28.
h Pſ. cxlvi. 9.
i Ib. lxxiii. 18.
‡ Heb. anſwer. Exod. xv. 21.
k Pſ. civ. 13, 14.
l Job xxxviii. 41. Pſ. civ. 27, 28. & cxxxvi. 25. & cxlv. 15.
m Job xxxviii. 41. Mat. vi. 26.
n Pſ. xxxiii. 16, 17. Hoſ. i. 7.

v. 1—11. He takes up this pſalm as he concludes the former, with Hallelujah! and abundant cauſe there is, why we ſhould continually ſing and give praiſe unto the Lord. He is our God; we have an intereſt in his favour: It is good to do ſo, our bounden duty, and higheſt intereſt. It is pleaſant, for this ſervice is eſpecially its own reward: it is comely; pleaſing to God, and moſt becoming us as his creatures, eſpecially as his choſen in a covenant of everlaſting love; and particularly we are bound to praiſe him,

1. For his kindneſs and care towards his city and people. The Lord builds up Jeruſalem: he gathereth together the out-caſts of Iſrael: literally, when David repaired the city, and thoſe who had ſuffered with him as out-laws, were reſtored; or ſpiritually, he buildeth up his goſpel-church, and prepares the heavenly Jeruſalem for their abode, who by ſin had made themſelves out-caſts; and whom the world, on their returning to God, rejected as the off-ſcouring of all things.

2. For his compaſſions towards the miſerable. He healeth the broken in heart, whoſe ſouls by ſin were ſore troubled, and, ſhocked at the remembrance of paſt tranſgreſſions, were ready to lie down in deſpair, and periſh. Theſe he healeth, pouring in the oil of his blood, that cleanſeth from all ſin, and with the tender hand of his grace bindeth up their wounds, ſpeaking peace to their conſciences, and filling them with his divine conſolations.

3. For his infinite power and wiſdom, v. 5. Innumerable as the ſtars are, to him they are known; for they are indeed his own workmanſhip, and he calleth them all by their names, appoints them their place, and they as ſervants are obedient to his orders. So great and glorious is the Lord; ſo great his power, ſo infinite his underſtanding. His ſaints are the ſtars in his right hand; he knoweth them, and in his book of life their names are written.

4. For his dealings towards the ſons of men. The Lord lifteth up the meek, who in their own eyes are little, and patiently endure the afflictions of providence, or the provocations of men. Theſe he comforts, and will exalt to the inheritance among the ſaints in light; but he caſteth the wicked down to the ground, with ſtrokes of heavy judgment in this world, by ſudden and untimely death, and at laſt will caſt them down into the pit of everlaſting deſtruction.

5. For his providential regard towards all the creatures. Drawn up in copious exhalations, thick clouds of water cover the ſkies: formed by his power into drops of rain, they empty themſelves on the mountains, cauſing the graſs to ſpring, and providing thereby plenty of food for all animals, the meaneſt and moſt uſeleſs of which are not forgotten or neglected; but even the cry of the young ravens is heard and anſwered. Note, (1.) The clouds of affliction, when darkeſt, ſerve but to prepare us for greater fruitfulneſs in our ſouls. (2.) If the ravens cry is heard, ſurely our prayer ſhall not be diſregarded; he that feedeth them, will much more provide all needful ſupplies for his own people. For,

6. In them is his delight, and therefore they owe him praiſe. God delights not in the ſtrength of the horſe, or in any man's legs: the fineſt cavalry, or the firmeſt infantry, are vain things to ſave a man without God's bleſſing; but the Lord taketh pleaſure in them that fear him, and in thoſe that hope for his mercy; filial fear and holy hope being the diſtinguiſhing characters of God's people; and that mercy, on which in Chriſt they alone depend, ſhall never, never fail them.

12. Praiſe the LORD, O Jeruſalem: praiſe thy God, O Zion. 13. For he hath ſtrengthned the bars of thy gates: he hath bleſſed thy children within thee.
14. † He maketh peace in thy borders: and [o] filleth thee with the ‡ fineſt of the wheat. 15. [p] He ſendeth forth his commandment upon earth: his word runneth very ſwiftly. 16. [q] He giveth ſnow like wool: he ſcattereth the hoar-froſt like aſhes. 17. He caſteth forth his ice like morſels: who can ſtand before his cold? 18. [r] He ſendeth out his § word, and melteth them: he cauſeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow. 19. [s] He ſheweth his word unto Jacob: [t] his ſtatutes and his judgments unto Iſrael. 20. [u] He hath not dealt ſo with any nation:
and as for his judgments, they have not known them. Praiſe ye the LORD.

† Heb. Who maketh thy border peace.
o Pſ. cxxxii. 15.
‡ Heb. Fat of wheat. Deut. xxxii. 14. Pſal. lxxxi. 16.
p Pſ. cvii.
q Job xxxvii. 6.
r Ver. 15. Job xxxvii. 10.
§ Heb. Words.
s Pſ. lxxvi. 1. & lxxviii. 5. & ciii. 7.
t Mal. iv. 4.
u Rom. iii. 1, 2. & ix. 4.

v. 12—20. Jeruſalem and Zion, the figures of the goſpel-church, are called upon to praiſe the Lord their God,

1. For their proſperity under the divine protection. He hath ſtrengthned the bars of thy gates: his ſalvation, his power, and faithfulneſs, ſtronger than walls and bulwarks, ſurround his people. He hath bleſſed thy children within thee; the ſpiritual ſeed of the church, begotten through the miniſtry of the goſpel, and enriched with all the ſpiritual bleſſings of grace and glory in Chriſt Jeſus. He maketh peace in thy borders; quieting all his Zion's enemies without, and beſtowing abundance of peace within; ſpiritual peace in their ſouls, and great union and harmony among the faithful; and filleth thee with the fineſt of the wheat; all needful temporal good, or the bread of life in the goſpel, by which the ſouls of believers are ſupported and ſtrengthened. Mercies ineſtimable! and calling for louder praiſe than any merely temporal good vouchſafed to the inhabitants of Judea.

2. For God's providential government in the kingdom of nature. He ſendeth forth his commandment upon earth, and his will all things obey. His word runneth very ſwiftly: he ſpeaks, and it is done; which may reſpect either the word of his providence directing the rain and the ſnow to fall; or the word of his goſpel, which by the preaching of the apoſtles was quickly ſpread through the world. He giveth ſnow like wool for whiteneſs, and conveys warmth to the earth on which it falls. He ſcattereth his hoar-froſt like aſhes; the dew of night congealing, and covering, as aſhes ſpread abroad, the plants and trees. He caſteth forth his ice like morſels; either in hail-ſtones that fall, or when the iſicles ſhoot in the incruſted waters. Who can ſtand before his cold? the intenſeneſs of which would inſtantly deſtroy us, if God was pleaſed to expoſe us to its extremity. He ſendeth out his word, and melteth them: he cauſeth his wind to blow, and the waters flow, diſſolving the ice and ſnow, and making the verdure and flowers of ſpring ſucceed to the cold and dreary ſcenes of winter. Note, Like the frozen earth is the ſinner's heart, till God's Spirit breathes upon it; then ſoftened into deep contrition, the penitential tears begin to flow, and ſoon the whole ſoul puts on a new aſpect, filled with the bloſſoms of grace, and fruits of righteouſneſs, which are, thro' Jeſus Chriſt, to the praiſe and glory of God.

3. For that divine revelation, with which they were peculiarly favoured. He ſheweth his word unto Jacob, his ſtatutes and his judgments unto Iſrael. Iſrael was peculiarly diſtinguiſhed by thoſe oracles of God committed to them, containing the promiſes and precepts, moral and ceremonial. He hath not dealt ſo with any nation: and as for his judgments they have not known them: as therefore the peculiar favourites of heaven, they of all others were bound to fidelity, bleſſing, and praiſe. Note, The caſe is our own: this happy land enjoys in its purity the goſpel-word: may we know our mercies, improve them, and be thankful; leſt, by neglect of our Bibles, it ſhould be more tolerable in the day of judgment for Sodom and Gomorrah than for us.

PSALM CXLVIII.

This pſalm is a moſt ſolemn and earneſt call to all the creatures, according to their capacity, to praiſe their Creator. 1. He calls upon the creatures that are placed in the upper world, to praiſe the Lord, both thoſe that are intellectual beings, and are capable of doing it actively, ver. 1, 2. and thoſe that are not, and are therefore capable of doing it only objectively, ver. 3—6. 2. He calls upon the creatures of this lower world, both thoſe that can only miniſter matter of praiſe, ver. 7—10. and thoſe that being endued with reaſon, are capable of offering up this ſacrifice, ver. 11—13. eſpecially his own people, who have more cauſe to do it, and are more concerned to do it than any other, ver. 14.

1. [a] PRaiſe ye the LORD. Praiſe ye the LORD [b] from the heavens: praiſe him in the heights. 2. [c] Praiſe ye him, all his angels: praiſe ye him, all his hoſts. 3. [d] Praiſe ye him, ſun and moon: praiſe him, all ye ſtars of light. 4. Praiſe him, [e] ye heavens of heavens, and [f] ye waters that be above the heavens. 5. Let them praiſe the name of the LORD: for [g] he commanded, and they were created. 6. [h] He hath alſo eſtabliſhed them for ever and ever: he hath made a decree which ſhall not paſs.

[a] Pſ. civ. 35.
[b] Rev. v. 13.
[c] Pſ. ciii. 20, 21.
[d] Ibid. xix. 1, &c.
[e] 1 Kings viii. 27.
[f] Gen. i. 7.
[g] Gen. i. 1, 6. Pſ. xxxiii. 6, 9.
[h] Pſ. lxxxix. 37. & cxix. 90, 91. Jer. xxxi. 35, 36. & xxxiii. 25.

v. 1—6. The pſalmiſt calls on heaven to begin the Hallelujah, and earth muſt echo back the ſound.

1. The heavens, and angelic hoſts who them inhabit, the firſt of God's creation, that in the heights of glory neareſt approach his throne of light inacceſſible, are addreſſed, as thoſe who with the moſt exalted praiſes ſhould lead the ſong. Not that theſe bright ſpirits are backward to the work, or ſilent, day or night, in the delightful ſervice; but the pſalmiſt would expreſs the fervency of his own deſires, that God ſhould be glorified by the higheſt and nobleſt of his creatures, and would ſtir up himſelf and others to the work, which is the happineſs and employment of all theſe ſons of God in glory. Note, We in nothing more reſemble angels, than when we ſing the high praiſes of our God.

2. Not only the intellectual beings of the upper world, but the creatures void of reaſon, muſt ſhew forth his praiſe. Thoſe orbs of light, that ſhed on this earth their benign influences; the ſun, the moon, and glittering ſtars, ſhine audibly, and in the ear of enlightened reaſon proclaim aloud the glory of their great Creator. Praiſe him, ye heavens of heavens; the ſtarry firmament, and all within that bright canopy, the radiant ſcene, where angels and the ſpirits of the juſt made perfect have their bleſt abode. And ye waters that be above the heavens, divided by the firmament from the waters beneath, all muſt praiſe the name of the Lord; for by his power they were made, by his providence they are upheld, and their duration fixed by his eternal decree.

7. Praiſe the LORD from the earth, [i] ye dragons and all deeps. 8. Fire and hail, ſnow and vapour, [k] ſtormy wind fulfilling his word. 9. Mountains and all hills, fruitful trees and all cedars. 10. Beaſts and all cattle, creeping things, and † flying fowl. 11. Kings of the earth, and all people; princes, and all judges of the earth. 12. Both young men and maidens, old men and children. 13. Let them praiſe the name of the LORD: for [l] his name alone is ‡ excellent, his glory is above the earth and heaven. 14. [m] He alſo exalteth the horn of his people, [n] the praiſe of all his ſaints; even of the children of Iſrael, [o] a people near unto him. Praiſe ye the LORD.

[i] Iſa. xliii. 20.
[k] Pſ. cxlvii. 15, 16.
† Heb. Birds of wing.
[l] Pſ. viii. 1. Iſa. xii. 4.
‡ Heb. Exalted.
[m] Pſ. lxxv. 10.
[n] Pſ. cxlix. 9.
[o] Eph. ii. 17.

v. 7—14. From the celeſtial world the pſalmiſt deſcends to this terreſtrial globe, from which a tribute of praiſe ſhould aſcend from every creature, whether intelligent, irrational, or inanimate.

1. The ſea and it's inhabitants are called on to praiſe the Lord. The dragons, or whales, and all deeps; the ſhoals of fiſh that ſwim beneath the waters, from the leaſt unto the greateſt, declare their Maker's work.

2. The meteors of the ſky, and exhalations, fire, hail, ſnow, vapour, ſtormy winds, all fulfil his word, go forth at his bidding, are ſtayed at his command.

3. The earth, and all that dwell therein; mountains, hills, trees, and cedars; creatures though inanimate, riſe up to praiſe him; whilſt every beaſt of the foreſt, the lowing herds, the bleating flocks, and every reptile, and every flying fowl, join in their adoration, all admirably ſuited for the ſtation they fill, and correſponding with their maker's great deſign.

4. The rational creatures, endowed with ſpeech, that as the tongue of this lower world they might preſent the tribute of all the creatures, are enjoined to raiſe the ſong. High and low, rich and poor, young and old, of either ſex, muſt unite their praiſes. None ſo great as to be excuſed, none ſo low as to be deſpiſed, from liſping infancy to decrepit age. And reaſon good there is for ſo doing; for his name only is excellent; none like him, none to compare with: his glory is above the earth and heaven, exalted far above all bleſſing and praiſe, which the creatures in both can render.

5. From his Iſrael he hath eſpecial demands of gratitude. They are his people, exalted to the higheſt ſtate of dignity, even to be called ſaints, and brought near unto him, in a covenant of grace through the Redeemer; admitted into a ſtate of communion with him, and enjoying the diſtinguiſhing tokens of his favour; and therefore moſt juſtly doth he deſerve to be their praiſe, the great and glorious object of it in time and in eternity. Amen. Hallelujah.

PSALM CXLIX.

This is a hymn of praiſe to the Redeemer; for whatever victory gave the immediate occaſion, we muſt in it look forward to the kingdom of the Meſſiah, who, in the chariot of the everlaſting goſpel, goes forth conquering and to conquer. Here is, 1. Abundance of joy to all the people of God, ver. 1—5. 2. Abundance of terror to the proudeſt of their enemies, ver. 6—9.

1. [a] PRaiſe ye the LORD. [b] Sing unto the LORD a new ſong, and his praiſe in the congregation of ſaints. 2. Let Iſrael rejoice in [c] him that made him: let the children of Zion be joyful in [d] their King. 3. [e] let them praiſe his name † in the dance: let them ſing praiſes unto him with the timbrel and harp. 4. For [f] the LORD taketh pleaſure in his people: [g] he will beautify the meek with ſalvation. 5. Let the ſaints be joyful in glory: let them [h] ſing aloud upon their beds.

[a] Pſ. civ. 35.
[b] Ib. xxxiii. 3.
[c] Ib. c. 3. Iſa. liv. 5.
[d] Mat. xxi. 5. 1 Tim. vi. 15.
[e] Pſ. lxxxi. 2.
† Or, with the pipe.
[f] Pſ. xxxv. 27. Prov. xi. 20.
[g] Pſ. cxxxii. 16.
[h] Job xxxv. 10.

v. 1—5. The contemplation on new wonders of God's hand calls for a new ſong of praiſe. The place appointed is the congregation of the ſaints; for when we aſſemble for public worſhip, praiſe is the nobleſt part of it, and therein ſhould all join. Let Iſrael rejoice in him that made him, or, in his makers, the eternal Three, whoſe work it is not only to make the perſons, or to form the people of Iſrael into a nation, but to create in righteouſneſs and true holineſs the ſpiritual Iſrael, which is the moſt enlarged matter of our joy; and let the children of Zion, the living members of Chriſt's church, be joyful in their King, Meſſiah, exalted to the throne of glory, and ever-living to bleſs and make his people happy. Let them, theſe redeemed ſouls, praiſe his name in the ſacred dance, which on ſolemn occaſions was uſed ; or with the pipe : let them ſing praiſes unto him with the timbrel and harp, as expreſſive of that ſweeter melody they made unto God in their hearts, and without which the other were but prophanation. For the Lord taketh pleaſure in his people : they are his in the Son of his eternal love ; he admits them into communion with himſelf, accepts their ſervices, delights in their perſons. He will beautify the meek with ſalvation, who, lowly in their own eyes, are led to Jeſus for ſalvation. Theſe he beautifies with the robe of the Redeemer's righteouſneſs, with the graces of his Spirit, and ſhortly will bring them where, perfected in holineſs and happineſs, they ſhall ſhine as the ſtars in the firmament for ever and ever. Therefore let the ſaints, for this is their honoured character, however in the world the name be ridiculed, let the ſaints be joyful in glory ; adorned as they are, and in hope of what they ſhall be ; or gloriouſly, with exceeding great joy. Let them ſing aloud upon their beds, not aſhamed of being heard, but triumphing in the ſalvation of God, when they awake at midnight, when they lie on beds of ſickneſs, or go down to the duſt of death ; and well may they ſing who have nothing to fear, every thing to hope, every foe vanquiſhed, the ſting of death removed, the gates of heaven opened, and glory, honour, and immortality in full proſpect before them. Lord give me to ſhare in this felicity of thy choſen ! Open thou my mouth, and my lips ſhall ſhew forth thy praiſe !

6. Let the high praiſes of God be in their † mouth, and [i] a two-edged ſword in their hand ; 7. To execute vengeance upon the heathen, and puniſhments upon the people ; 8. To bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron ; 9. To execute upon them [k] the judgment written : [l] this honour have all his ſaints.
Praiſe ye the LORD.

† Heb. Throat.
[i] Heb. iv. 12. Rev. i. 16.
[k] Deut. vii. 1, 2.
[l] Pſ. cxlviii. 14.

v. 6—9. The victories of God's Iſrael are great and diſtinguiſhed, and therefore their praiſes are loud and joyful. Let the high praiſes of God be in their mouth, or, the high things, his glorious perfections, which are to be celebrated by them ; and a two-edged ſword in their hand, to execute vengeance upon the heathen, and puniſhments upon the people ; either literally to avenge the wrongs done to God's people by the neighbouring nations, now juſtly ſmitten with the irreſiſtible ſword of David and his army ; or, ſpiritually it may be interpreted of the ſword of the Spirit, Eph. vi. 17. Heb. iv. 12. which is ſharp and piercing, convincing the conſcience of ſin, cutting down all human righteouſneſs, and threatning eternal death to the ſoul. With this word in their mouths the apoſtles and preachers went forth, to fight againſt heathen idolatry and ſuperſtition, and to rebuke the people for their abominations : and the powerful effects of it ſoon appeared in the demolition of the idols and their temples, and the converſion of the Gentiles to God, who turned at their reproof. To bind their kings in chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron, as Joſhua and David had done by their conquered foes : or rather, as Chriſt hath done, and will do, by his enemies, binding Satan in chains from hurting his people, and deſtroying the antichriſtian powers that oppreſs them : or by the effectual power of his grace, drawing the hearts of ſinners, even ſome of higheſt rank, in chains of love to him, ſtronger than fetters of iron. To execute upon them the judgment written ; on the nations of Canaan, (See Deut. vii. 2.) or rather, upon all the enemies of Chriſt and his people, who reject the warnings of his word, and therefore muſt periſh everlaſtingly, Mark xvi. 16. This honour have all the ſaints : all the bleſſings in this pſalm recited are theirs ; they ſhall be glorious in the eyes of God ; rejoice in his ſalvation ; and, ſitting down with Chriſt on his throne, ſee all their enemies at the laſt become their footſtool ; and in the proſpect of that great day they may well cry, Hallelujah !

PSALM CL.

Filled with ſacred rapture, the pſalmiſt here breathes forth his ſoul in praiſes. He ſhews, 1. For what, and upon what account God is to be praiſed, ver. 1, 2. 2. How, and with what expreſſions of joy God is to be praiſed, ver. 3—5. 3. Who muſt praiſe the Lord ; it is every one's buſineſs, ver. 6.

1. † PRaiſe ye the LORD. Praiſe God in his ſanctuary :
praiſe him in the firmament of his power.
2. [a] Praiſe him for his mighty acts : praiſe him according to his excellent greatneſs. 3. Praiſe him with the ſound of the ‡ trumpet : [b] praiſe him with the pſaltery and harp.
4. Praiſe him with the timbrel and § dance : praiſe him with ſtringed inſtruments and organs. 5. Praiſe him upon the loud cymbals : praiſe him upon the highſounding cymbals. 6. Let every thing that hath breath praiſe the LORD. [c] ‖ Praiſe ye the LORD.

† Heb. Hallelujah. Pſ. civ. 35.
[a] Pſ. cxlv. 5, 6.
‡ Or, cornet.
[b] Pſ. lxxxii. 1. & cxlix. 3.
§ Or, pipe.
[c] Eph. v. 19. Col. iii. 16.
‖ Heb. Hallelujah. Pſ. civ. 35.

v. 1—6. Thirteen times in the compaſs of ſix ſhort verſes doth the pſalmiſt repeat the exhortation to praiſe. His own heart glowed with gratitude ; he would inculcate upon us the great and delightful duty of praiſe ; and becauſe our cold hearts are ſo backward, he would rouſe us from our lethargy, and ſtir us up to join his ſongs. Obſerve,

1. Where God's praiſe is to be expected : In his ſanctuary below, where his worſhipping ſervants muſt unite their voices to adore his name ; or, in his holy One, Chriſt Jeſus, for whom, and through whom, all the ſacrifices of his people's praiſes aſcend, and are accepted before God ; and in the firmament of his power above, where angels ceaſeleſs adore him, and all glorified ſaints will ſhortly join them in this happy ſervice.

2. Abundant reaſon there is for praiſing him, becauſe of his mighty acts of creation, providence, redemption, and grace, wherein his excellent greatneſs, or the multitude of his greatneſs, appears. Excellence above conception, and greatneſs ſo ſurpaſſing, that all our praiſes come infinitely ſhort of his glory ; yea, the higheſt angels, after their moſt enlarged adorations, own him far exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe.

3. The manner of our praiſes. With all melody in our hearts, and ſacred joy, of which theſe inſtruments of muſic were typical, that were uſed in the ſervice of the ſanctuary : and as the union of various ſounds and inſtruments heightens the harmony, ſo muſt the people of God united in love, unite their voices, with one mind and one mouth glorifying God.

4. Who muſt praiſe ? Every thing that hath breath. The brute creation, though not with voice articulate, ſpeak his praiſe. The ſons of men throughout the world are called upon to uſe that ſpeech which God hath given them in this beſt employment of it ; eſpecially the living ſouls, quickned by the eternal Spirit, have peculiar cauſe for praiſe, whether conſidering the diſtinguiſhed privileges they enjoy, or the greater glories which are before them. In heaven, whither we are going, all will be praiſe : it is good to begin the happy ſervice here, and antedate our joys ; then, when our moment here below ſhall end, and this faultering tongue, unable longer to ſuſtain the notes, is ſilent on the bed of death, borne upon angels wings our ſouls ſhall take their flight, and with enraptured exultation join the Hallelujahs of the ſky. Amen, and Amen !

The End of the Book of PSALMS.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of PROVERBS.

The author of this volume before us is the wiſe ſon of David, who, under the inſpiration of God's Spirit, was directed to commit to writing, for our admonition, thoſe maxims of heavenly wiſdom, which, whoever is enabled to follow, will be led into paths of everlaſting peace. They are called Proverbs, ſhort and ſententious, the more poignant, and eaſier remembered. They contain a complete body of divine ethics, politics, and œconomics, rebuking every vice, recommending every virtue, and directing how to act in every relation, condition, and circumſtance.

The book conſiſts of five parts. (1.) A preface, exhorting to the ſtudy of true wiſdom, chap. i—ix. (2.) The Proverbs of Solomon, put together by himſelf, chap. x—xxiv. (3.) Another book of his Proverbs, copied by the ſervants of Hezekiah, chap. xxv—xxix. (4.) The words of Agur, chap. xxx. (5.) The inſtructions his mother Bathſheba gave him, chap. xxxi.

CHAP. I.

Before Chriſt 1000.

The Pſalms were full of devotion and rapture ; this book, of inſtruction for our conduct. Both muſt unite ; the fire of devotion, and the grace received in prayer muſt quicken and ſtrengthen us for the practice of duty. In this chapter we have, 1. The title of the book, ſhewing the general ſcope and deſign of it, ver. 1—6. 2. The firſt principle of it recommended to our ſerious conſideration, ver. 7—9. 3. A neceſſary caution againſt bad company, ver. 10—19. 4. A faithful and lively repreſentation of wiſdom's reaſonings with the children of men, and the certain ruin of thoſe that turn a deaf ear to thoſe reaſonings, ver. 20—33.

1. [a] THE proverbs of Solomon the ſon of David, king of Iſrael ; 2. To know wiſdom and inſtruction, to perceive the words of underſtanding ; 3. To receive the inſtruction of wiſdom, juſtice, and judgment, and † equity ; 4. To give ſubtilty to the ſimple, to the young man knowledge and diſcretion. 5. A wiſe man will hear, and [b] will increaſe learning : and a man of underſtanding ſhall attain unto wiſe counſels : 6. To underſtand a proverb, and ‡ the interpretation ; the words of the wiſe, and their dark ſayings.

[a] 1 Kings iv. 32. Chap. x. 1. & xxv. 1. Eccleſ. xii. 9.

† Heb. Equities.

[b] Chap. ix. 9.

‡ Or, eloquent ſpeech.

v. 1—6. The book of Proverbs opens with an introduction, informing us,

1. Who was the author of them : Solomon, the ſon of David, king of Iſrael ; the wiſe ſon of a wiſe father ; a king, who thought it no diſparagement of his dignity to be a teacher of the ignorant ; and the type of him, who in the fulneſs of time ſhould ariſe to reign over the Iſrael of God.

2. What was the author's deſign. He ſought not fame by his works, but to make men wiſe unto ſalvation. To know wiſdom, the ſyſtem of divine truth revealed from God ; and inſtruction, the method of attaining it ourſelves, and communicating it to others. To perceive the words of underſtanding ; to diſtinguiſh truth from error, having this infallible teſt to appeal to. To receive the inſtruction of wiſdom, even the wiſdom of God, the dictates of the ſpirit of truth, teaching us juſtice, judgment, and equity, in all our concerns among men ; to render to all their due, according to the obligations, connections, and relation we ſtand in towards them. To give ſubtilty to the ſimple ; the inſtructions here given are level to the meaneſt capacities ; and the moſt illiterate, who receive them, will become wiſe as ſerpents ; wiſe in the beſt ſenſe, even unto ſalvation. To the young man, whoſe inexperience wants a guide, and his raſhneſs a check, knowledge and diſcretion, or thought ; how to think and act aright, and in theſe dangerous days to demean himſelf according to the rules preſcribed in God's bleſſed word. A wiſe man will hear ; not only the young and ſimple may find inſtruction, but there is here what the wiſe may attend with profit, and their attention hereunto will prove the reality of the wiſdom they profeſs, and will increaſe learning ; for thoſe who have made the higheſt attainments, are at beſt defective. There are treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge in the book of God far, very far beyond all we have yet reached. None may think themſelves too wiſe to learn, and too old to be taught : and a man of underſtanding ſhall attain unto wiſe counſels ; the counſels of God, the myſteries of his goſpel, wherein the wiſdom of God is moſt eminently diſplayed ; and being himſelf inſtructed, he will be enabled to aſſiſt others with his advice : ſhall poſſeſs the helm, as the words may be rendered, whether as a teacher in the church of God, or as the pilot of the ſtate. To underſtand a proverb, and the interpretation, or, the elegance ; both able to reſolve the truth intended to be conveyed, and point out the beauty of the manner and expreſſion in which it is couched : the words of the wiſe, and their dark ſayings. To a natural man, the greateſt truths of ſcripture are enigmatical, and often in his account fooliſhneſs ; yet are they the words of the wiſe, even of the all-wiſe God ; and when he gives an enlightened underſtanding, ſtanding, then, like a mathematical problem ſolved, what ſeemed confuſion and nonſenſe to the unſkilful, appears evident, clear, and ſtriking.

c Job xxviii. 28. Pſ. cxi. 10. Chap. ix. 10. Eccleſ xii. 13.
† Or, principal part.
d Chap. iv. 1. & vi. 20.
e Chap. iii. 22.

7. ¶ [c] The fear of the LORD is the † beginning of knowledge: but fools deſpiſe wiſdom and inſtruction. 8. [d] My ſon, hear the inſtruction of thy father, and forſake not the law of thy mother: 9. For [e] they ſhall be an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck.

v. 7—9. More true wiſdom is contained in one maxim of God's word, than in all the volumes of philoſophers.

1. The fear of the Lord is the beginning, or ſummit, of knowledge. This is the firſt principle to be laid down and received by all who would be truly wiſe. God muſt be the object of our fear; not as dreading his wrath, but with reverential awe affected before him, with holy jealouſy careful not to offend him, and in all his worſhip and ways ſollicitous to pleaſe him. But fools deſpiſe wiſdom and inſtruction. They may profeſs themſelves to be wiſe, but their contempt of God's word, and of divine teaching, ſhews their folly as great as their profaneneſs.

2. Next to the fear of God is the honour and attention due to our parents. My ſon, hear the inſtruction of thy father. That fathers will take pains to inſtruct their children in the good ways of God, is preſumed; for they are unnatural monſters, who can ſuffer their children to grow up in ignorance, and whoſe wicked examples embolden them to ſin. And to the inſtructions of a good father a dutiful ſon will lend an attentive ear: and forſake not the law of thy mother; for we owe the ſame reſpect to both our parents; and he is equally a diſobedient child, who rejects the advice of the one as of the other. For they ſhall be an ornament of grace unto thy head, and chains about thy neck; in God's ſight of great price, in whoſe eyes filial duty and early piety is infinitely more ornamental, than in ours the collar ſtudded with jewels, or the pendant chains of gold.

f Eph. v. 11.
g Jer. v. 26.
h Hab. ii. 9.
i Chap. iv. 14.
k Iſa. lix. 7. Rom. iii. 15.
† Heb. Every thing that hath wing.

10. ¶ My ſon, if ſinners entice thee, [f] conſent thou not. 11. If they ſay, Come with us, let us [g] lay wait for blood, let us lurk privily for the innocent without cauſe: 12. Let us ſwallow them up alive as the grave, and whole, as thoſe that go down into the pit: 13. We ſhall find all precious ſubſtance, [h] we ſhall fill our houſes with ſpoil: 14. Caſt in thy lot among us, let us all have one purſe. 15. My ſon, [i] walk not thou in the way with them; refrain thy foot from their path. 16. For [k] their feet run to evil, and make haſte to ſhed blood. 17. Surely in vain the net is ſpread in the ſight of † any bird. 18. And they lay wait for their own blood, they lurk privily for their own lives. 19. So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain: which taketh away the life of the owners thereof.

v. 10—19. Among the firſt and moſt dangerous ſnares for young perſons is bad company: to ſhun this, they can never enough be cautioned; and as this wicked world is full of tempters, we muſt watch indeed, if we would keep ourſelves unſpotted from them.

1. Their character is ſtrongly drawn. Sinners will entice thee from attending to the advice of aged, whom they call doating parents; will repreſent the paths of vice in every pleaſing colour; and promiſing plenty and impunity, ſollicit thy conſent to join in their deſtructive ways. Come, ſay they, with us; let us lay wait for blood, let us lurk privily for the innocent without cauſe, or, with impunity; to rob the harmleſs traveller, and, if he reſiſt, take his blood as well as his money. Nor ſhould they fear a diſcovery: Let us ſwallow them up alive as the grave, and whole as thoſe that go down into the pit; ſo that no traces of the blood ſhall remain, and in the pit they can tell no tales, ſo that we ſhall be ſafe from accuſation. We ſhall find all precious ſubſtance, earned thus without toil: we ſhall fill our houſes with ſpoil, and riot in the affluence. Come, caſt in thy lot with us, and be happy; or, thou ſhalt caſt thy lot with us, welcome to ſhare all our gains. Let us all have one purſe, or we will, and live jovially together on the prey we have taken. Note, (1.) Evil companions are ever ready to proffer their friendſhip, whilſt the prudent and pious are cautious with whom they are connected. (2.) The hope of ſecreſy is the great emboldening argument to ſin. (3.) Gain appears to be precious ſubſtance in a worldling's eye; but it is dearly bought at the price of the ſoul's eternal ruin. (4.) They who once give way to ſin, never know to what lengths they ſhall run. (5.) The love of money is the root of all evil.

2. The caution given is, Conſent thou not to their ſollicitations. My ſon, walk not thou in the way of them, to aſſociate with them, or follow their dangerous ſteps. Refrain thy foot from their path, when tempted thereunto, and to which corrupt nature is ſo prone; for their feet run to evil, offenſive to God, and hurtful to mankind; and make haſte to ſhed blood, the vengeance due to which will ſhortly bring down the heavieſt judgments upon them. Surely in vain is the net ſpread in the ſight of any bird: they no ſooner perceive the ſnare, than they fly away; but the ſinner, more infatuated, ſees the devil ſpread his toils, knows the end of theft or murder muſt be fatal to his body, and is aſſured, that hell muſt be his portion, yet ruſhes into the toils, and madly courts his ruin. They lay wait for their own blood; they lurk privily for their own lives. Blood will cry in ſpite of all their care to conceal it, and their deeds of darkneſs come to the light, and pull down deſtruction on their heads. So are the ways of every one that is greedy of gain; ſo fatal to him, body and ſoul, which taketh away the life of the owners thereof: either the robber murders the poſſeſſor of it, to obtain his wealth; or the goods he hath ſtolen are found upon him, and produced as evidences to take away his life. Note, (1.) If we would keep from the deeds of the wicked, we muſt ſhun their ſociety. (2.) What is ſaid of robbery or murder is equally true of every other ſin, that it will prove the damnation of the ſinner at laſt. (3.) What folly, what madneſs is in the human heart, that can for a periſhing world deſtroy an immortal ſoul, and for a momentary pleaſure plunge into everlaſting burnings?

† Heb. Wiſdoms. Col. ii. 3.
l Chap. viii. 1. & ix. 3.
m John iii. 37.
n Joel ii. 28.
o Iſa. lxv. 12. & lxvi. 4. Jer. vii. 13. Ezek. viii. 18.
p Pſ. cvii. 11. Ver. 30. Luke vii. 30.
q Pſ. ii. 4.
r Chap. x. 24.
s Job xxvii. 9. & xxxv. 12. Iſa. i. 15. Jer. xi. 11, & xiv. 12. Mic. iii. 4, Zech. vii. 13. Jam. iv. 3.
t Job xxi. 14.
u Ver. 25.
x Job iv. 8. Chap. xiv. 14. & xxii. 8. Jer. vi. 19.
‡ Or, eaſe.
y Pſ. xxv. 12, 13.
z Pſ. cxii. 7.

20. ¶ † [l] Wiſdom crieth without, ſhe uttereth her voice in the ſtreets: 21. She [m] crieth in the chief place of concourſe, in the openings of the gates: in the city ſhe uttereth her words, ſaying, 22. How long, ye ſimple ones, will ye love ſimplicity? and the ſcorners delight in their ſcorning, and fools hate knowledge? 23. Turn you at my reproof: behold, [n] I will pour out my Spirit unto you, I will make known my words unto you. 24. ¶ [o] Becauſe I have called, and ye refuſed, I have ſtretched out my hand, and no man regarded; 25. But ye have [p] ſet at nought all my counſel, and would none of my reproof: 26. [q] I alſo will laugh at your calamity, I will mock when your fear cometh; 27. When [r] your fear cometh as deſolation, and your deſtruction cometh as a whirlwind; when diſtreſs and auguiſh cometh upon you. 28. [s] Then ſhall they call upon me, but I will not anſwer; they ſhall ſeek me early, but they ſhall not find me: 29. For that [t] they hated knowledge, and did not chooſe the fear of the LORD. 30. [u] They would none of my counſel: They deſpiſed all my reproof. 31. Therefore [x] ſhall they eat of the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices. 32. For the ‡ turning away of the ſimple ſhall ſlay them, and the proſperity of fools ſhall deſtroy them. 33. But [y] whoſo hearkneth unto me, ſhall dwell ſafely, and [y] ſhall be quiet from fear of evil.

v. 20—33. As diligently as we are warned to fly the enticements of ſinners, as earneſtly are we admoniſhed to attend the calls and warnings of God.

We have,

1. The voice of wiſdom crying in the ſtreets, in the places of greateſt concourſe, and in the gates, that all who will may hear the divine admonitions. This wiſdom, or wiſdoms in the original, may be interpreted of the divine revelation in general, or rather ſignifies Chriſt Jeſus, who is the perſon here ſpeaking in the words of his everlaſting goſpel; rebuking the wickedneſs of thoſe to whom he preached, and foretelling their dreadful doom. And this voice is ſtill heard in the public miniſtration of the word, and theſe warnings are to us ſtill equally needful, and the danger of neglecting them equally fatal. Note, They that periſh under a preached goſpel, are left peculiarly without excuſe.

2. The words which wiſdom utters. [1.] He expoſtulates, How long, ye ſimple ones, will ye love ſimplicity? indulge your own vain notions, and ſport in your own deceivings, in hopes of mercy unſupported by God's word, and in ways of folly which muſt end in miſery: and ſcorners delight in ſcorning; ſcoffing at ſerious godlineſs, and counting it high humour and wit to turn things ſacred into ridicule; contemning religion as a mean, low thing, as the Scribes and Phariſees did the great Author of it: and fools hate knowledge; averſe to hear the goſpel word, and chuſing darkneſs rather than light. With ſuch, with many ſuch, God bears long. He delighteth not indeed in the death of a ſinner, and therefore, [2.] He exhorts them earneſtly not to weary out his patience, or provoke his wrath. Turn ye at my reproof; attend to the calls of my word; and moſt encouraging is the invitation. Behold, ſinner, and wonder, after all thy provocations, at the grace revealed in Jeſus Chriſt, who hath gifts even for the rebellious; behold, I will pour out my ſpirit unto you, or upon you; upon ſome at leaſt, if others continued impenitent, and would not hear. I will make known my words unto you; in general to all, in the preaching of the goſpel, ſo as to leave them inexcuſable who reject it; and in a ſpecial manner to many, by enabling them to receive the truth in the light and in the love of it. [3.] He upbraids them

Before Chriſt 1000.

them with their impenitence and hardneſs of heart: I have called, and ye refuſed; as the Jews rejected his word, and ſinners continue to do; either by withdrawing from the place of hearing, or by their inattention there, or by their obſtinacy notwithſtanding every warning, perſiſting in their ſins. I have ſtretched out my arm, and no man regarded; as Jeſus did in the temple, John v. 11. and as his zealous miniſters do in their importunate diſcourſes, but to many with ſmall effect; they continue a diſobedient and gainſaying people. Ye have ſet at nought all my counſel; the goſpel of their ſalvation, which the Jews deſpiſed, and which the ſelf-righteous and the careleſs ſinner ſtill reject: and would have none of my reproof; would neither hear nor obey it; nay, they hated knowledge, ver. 29. and did not chooſe the fear of the Lord, but rather preferred the perverſe ways of their own hearts. [4.] He therefore denounces their doom, which had a preſent fulfilment in the deſtruction of the Jewiſh people, and will moſt eminently be accompliſhed in the day of the final perdition of ungodly men. I alſo will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh: come it will; pain and ſickneſs will ſeize on their bodies, and terrors on their guilty ſouls. When your fear cometh as a deſolation, overwhelming as a flood; and your deſtruction cometh as a whirlwind, ſudden and irreſiſtible; when diſtreſs and anguiſh cometh upon you, as was terribly felt in the ſiege of Jeruſalem, and in the day of wrath will more fearfully overtake the impenitent ſinner; then, inſtead of the leaſt compaſſion, God, angels, and ſaints will mock at their torment, and aggravate their wretchedneſs. Too late then it will be to cry for mercy, when the door is ſhut. Now prayer can avail, and God will hear the cries of the miſerable; but then, ſays he, they ſhall call upon me, but I will not anſwer; deaf to their cries, though it were but for a drop of water to cool their flaming tongue. They ſhall ſeek me early, but they ſhall not find me; all their importunity is vain; the ſentence is gone forth, the decree irrevocable, their damnation eternal. And this according to the ſtricteſt juſtice: they choſe their own deluſions, and were impenetrably hardened, v. 29, 30. Therefore they ſhall eat of the fruit of their own way. Sin and ſuffering are inſeparable: they who chuſe the one, muſt expect the other; and be filled with their own devices, in the ruin they have courted. Thus the Jews, who crucified Chriſt, were themſelves miſerably crucified, till trees were wanting to hang them on. For the turning away of the ſimple ſhall ſlay them: they who depart from Chriſt muſt periſh; or, the reſt of the ſimple, &c. whilſt they cry, Peace, peace, ſudden deſtruction cometh upon them; and the proſperity of fools ſhall deſtroy them; their poſſeſſions enabling them to give a looſe to the gratifications of their appetites, and begetting that fatal ſecurity which is the prelude to ruin. Let ſinners read theſe awful lines, and tremble. Reader, whoever thou art, may they never be fulfilled in thee. [5.] He declares the bleſſedneſs of thoſe who hear and obey the reproofs of God's word. Whoſo hearkeneth unto me, to Chriſt and his goſpel, and yields up his heart to him, ſhall dwell ſafely: no enemy ſhall approach to hurt him, neither Satan, ſin, nor death. Sprinkled with the blood, and cloathed in the righteouſneſs of Jeſus, his peace on earth is ſecured, and in heaven ſhall his abode for ever be: and ſhall be quiet from fear of evil; entered into that eternal reſt, which nothing can diſturb, and which remaineth ſure to all the people of God. Lord, may this be my lot and portion!

CHAP. II.

Solomon having foretold the deſtruction of thoſe that are obſtinate in their impiety, in this chapter applies himſelf to thoſe who are willing to be taught: And, 1. He ſhews them, that if they would diligently uſe the means of knowledge and grace, they ſhould obtain of God that knowledge and grace which they ſeek, ver. 1—9. 2. He ſhews them of what unſpeakable advantage it would be to them. (1.) It would preſerve them from the ſnares of evil men, ver. 10—15. and of evil women, ver. 16—19. (2.) It would direct them into, and keep them in the way of good men, ver. 20, 21, 22.

1. MY ſon, if thou wilt receive my words, and [a] hide my commandments with thee: 2. So that thou incline thine ear unto wiſdom, and apply thine heart to underſtanding: 3. Yea, if thou crieſt after knowledge, [b] and lifteſt up thy voice for underſtanding: 4. [c] If thou ſeekeſt her as ſilver, and ſearcheſt for her as for hid treaſures: 5. Then ſhalt thou underſtand the fear of the LORD, and find the knowledge of God. 6. For [d] the LORD giveth wiſdom: out of his mouth cometh knowledge and underſtanding. 7. He layeth up ſound wiſdom for the righteous: [e] he is a buckler to them that walk uprightly. 8. He keepeth the paths of judgment, and [f] preſerveth the way of his ſaints. 9. Then ſhalt thou underſtand righteouſneſs, and judgment, and equity: yea, every good path.

[a] Pſ. cxix. 11. Chap. iv. 21. & vii. 1.

[b] Jam. i. 5.

[c] Chap. iii, 14. Mat. xiii. 44.

[d] 1 Kings iii. 9, 12. Jam. i. 5.

[e] Pſ. lxxxiv. 11. Chap. xxx. 5.

[f] 1 Sam. ii. 9.

v. 1—9. Wiſdom is the principal thing; therefore by all means to be ſought after.

1. The way preſcribed is threefold: (1.) Serious attention to, and meditation upon the word of God. (2.) Fervent and importunate prayer, the beſt guide to the knowledge of the oracles of God. (3.) The diligent uſe of every appointed means, being as eager in the ſearch, as thoſe whoſe hearts are ſet upon riches, are in diſcovering the golden mines, and ranſacking the precious ore, v. 1—4.

2. Succeſs will crown theſe labours, when perſevered in. Then ſhalt thou underſtand that capital point, the fear of the Lord; wherein it conſiſts, and how it is to be evidenced in the converſation: and find the knowledge of God, of his grace and glory, particularly as manifeſted in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, whom to know is everlaſting life: and this is the gift of God, v. 6. not acquired by the exerciſe of our rational faculties, but communicated by the Spirit of truth, out of whoſe mouth cometh knowledge and underſtanding; in the ſcriptures, which he hath cauſed to be written for our learning, in which are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge: not the ſhew of it, but the reality, ſound wiſdom; and laid up there for the righteous, thoſe who by the imputation of the righteouſneſs of Chriſt are ſo accounted of God, and whoſe hearts and ways are by the Spirit renewed in righteouſneſs and true holineſs. He is a buckler to them that walk uprightly, who make God's word their rule, and being under the divine protection, the ſhield of almighty love is ſtretched over them, that ſin, Satan, and the world may not come near to hurt them. He keepeth the path of judgment; doth what is right himſelf in the diſpenſations of his providence and grace; and preſerveth the way of his ſaints, that they may never periſh, but with perſeverance continue in the path of everlaſting glory. Then ſhalt thou underſtand righteouſneſs and judgment; diſtinguiſh truth from error; know how to act with juſtice in all thy dealings, and what is the duty of every ſtation and relation; and equity; yea, every good path, whether reſpecting God or man: and thus the man of God ſhall be perfect, thoroughly furniſhed for every good work.

Before Chriſt 1000.

10. ¶ When wiſdom entreth into thine heart, and knowledge is pleaſant unto thy ſoul; 11. Diſcretion ſhall preſerve thee, [g] underſtanding ſhall keep thee: 12. To deliver thee from the way of the evil man, from the man that ſpeaketh froward things. 13. Who leave the paths of uprightneſs, to walk in the ways of darkneſs: 14. Who [h] rejoice to do evil, and delight in the frowardneſs of the wicked. 15. [i] Whoſe ways are crooked, and they froward in their paths. 16. To deliver thee from [k] the ſtrange woman, [l] even from the ſtranger which flattereth with her words: 17. [m] Which forſaketh the guide of her youth, and forgetteth the covenant of her God. 18. For [n] her houſe inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead. 19. None that go unto her, return again, neither take they hold of the paths of life. 20. That thou mayeſt walk in the way of good men, and keep the paths of the righteous. 21. For [o] the upright ſhall dwell in the land, and the perfect ſhall remain in it. 22. [p] But the wicked ſhall be cut off from the earth, and the tranſgreſſors ſhall be † rooted out of it.

[g] Chap. vi. 22.

[h] Chap. x. 23. Jer. xi. 15.

[i] Pſ. cxxv. 5.

[k] Chap. v. 20.

[l] Chap v. 3. & vi. 24. & vii. 5.

[m] Mal. ii. 14, 15.

[n] Chap. vii. 27.

[o] Pſ. xxxvii. 29.

[p] Job xviii. 17. Pſ. civ. 35.

† Or pluckt up.

v. 10—22. The unſpeakable advantages of wiſdom are here enlarged upon. It is the great preſervative from ſin, the guide into the way of righteouſneſs, and life or death eternal hang upon our choice or neglect of it.

1. Wiſdom will be a preſervative from the ways and miſeries of ſin. When wiſdom entereth into thine heart; when Chriſt takes poſſeſſion of the heart by his grace, and his goſpel effectually influences the conſcience; and knowledge is pleaſant to thy ſoul; the knowledge of God reconciled in Chriſt, and of the great and precious promiſes of the word, ſweeter than honey and the honey-comb; diſcretion ſhall preſerve thee, and underſtanding ſhall keep thee; watchful againſt the ſnares laid for our ſouls, and careful to avoid the temptation and the tempters, whether wicked men, or abandoned women, both of which are here mentioned. To deliver thee from the way of the evil man, whoſe principles are as corrupt, as his practice is abominable; and the character of ſuch is ſtrongly marked, that we may take knowledge of them, and ſhun them. They ſpeak froward things, ridiculing whatever is ſacred; pointing their wit againſt the glorious truths of God; ſeeking with impious blaſphemy to bring religion and its precepts into contempt; and dreſſing up vice in harmleſſneſs and innocence. They leave the paths of uprightneſs; apoſtates from the truths they once profeſſed, and theſe ever grow the moſt abandoned; to walk in the ways of darkneſs; wilfully blind, hating the light, and fleeing from it, and hurrying downward into the regions of eternal darkneſs. Who rejoice in evil, ſinning without remorſe, and glorying in their ſhame; and delight in the frowardneſs of the wicked: they not only love ſin themſelves, but have pleaſure in thoſe who commit it; hear their profaneneſs with ſatisfaction, and laugh at miſchief, eſpecially pleaſed when thoſe who made profeſſion of religion are drawn into iniquity. Whoſe ways are crooked, and they froward in the path; ever turning from the ſtrait path of truth, obſtinately determined in impenitence, and diſpleaſed and impatient under every rebuke or warning they may meet. From ſuch men and ſuch ways good Lord deliver us! Yet greater ſnares remain; ſnares, from which nothing but this divine wiſdom can preſerve the ſoul: to deliver thee from the ſtrange woman, the adultereſs, who flattereth with her words, enticing with ſoft blandiſhments, and pretending warm affection, when meaning nothing but the baſe gratification of lawleſs luſt. Which forſaketh the guide of her youth, treacherouſly leaving the huſband ſhe choſe, and ſacrificing every ſacred tie of duty, honour, and conſcience, to beſtial gratification: and forgetteth the covenant of her God, her plighted vows, which this all-ſeeing and all-righteous God was called to witneſs, and with perjured guilt ruſhing into another's arms. Weak youth, beware! believe not her hypocritical ſmiles, nor hope to find ſweetneſs in theſe ſtolen waters; there is poiſon in the cup, daſh it to the ground. For her houſe inclineth unto death, and her paths unto the dead, or rephaim, the giants of the old world, who periſhed in the flood: for by theſe vile affections and indulgences the ſoul is mortally wounded, the body often diſeaſed, and haſtened hereby to the grave, and both body and ſoul in the high road to eternal perdition, where, for a momentary pleaſure, everlaſting pain muſt be the puniſhment of the damned ſinner. None that go unto her, return again; at leaſt few, very few, recover from this ſnare; the conſcience grows callous, the ſoul is enſlaved, and recovery (if not impoſſible) yet moſt improbable: neither take they hold of the paths of life, returning with ſhame and remorſe to Jeſus Chriſt, who could yet ſave to the uttermoſt; but they continue hardned in ſin, and uſually periſh in their impenitence. Some interpreters have applied this to the great whore, the myſtical Babylon, againſt whoſe idolatries and adulteries, we have ſo many warnings in the book of Revelations.

2. Wiſdom will teach us not only to eſchew the evil, but to chuſe the good. That thou mayeſt walk in the way of good men, ſuch as the ſaints of God have trodden of old, and proved by bleſſed experience to be ways of pleaſantneſs; and keep the paths of the righteous, ſteadily perſevering therein, which will bring a man peace at the laſt.

3. The bleſſedneſs of the good ways of our God will be great. For the upright ſhall dwell in the land, and the perfect ſhall remain in it; the faithful and ſincere ſhall not be cut off as the ſinner, by an untimely death, but have a comfortable and peaceable abode here on earth; or rather ſhall have his eternal reſt in the better land of the heavenly Canaan, and dwell therein for ever.

4. Ruin will overtake the wicked. They ſhall be cut off from the earth, by death, or the ſword of civil juſtice, and the tranſgreſſors ſhall be rooted out of it; neither branch nor root of them ſhall remain in that new earth, wherein dwelleth righteouſneſs, but they ſhall be deſtroyed with an everlaſting deſtruction, and caſt as tares into the fire that never ſhall be quenched.

CHAP. III.

Excellent is the advice here given. May we be enabled to follow it. 1. We muſt be conſtant to our duty, becauſe that is the way to be happy, ver. 1—4. 2. We muſt live a life of dependance upon God, becauſe that is the way to be ſafe, ver. 6, 7. 3. We muſt keep up the fear of God, becauſe that is the way to be healthful, ver. 7, 8. 4. We muſt ſerve God with our eſtates, becauſe that is the way to be rich, ver. 9, 10. 5. We muſt bear afflictions well, becauſe that is the way to get good by them, ver. 11, 12. 6. We muſt take pains to obtain wiſdom, becauſe that is the way to gain her, and to gain by her, ver. 13—20. 7. We muſt always govern ourſelves by the rules of wiſdom, becauſe that is the way to be always eaſy, ver. 21—26. 8. We muſt do all the good we can, and no hurt to our neighbours, becauſe according as men are juſt or unjuſt, charitable or uncharitable, humble or haughty, accordingly they ſhall receive of God, ver. 27—35. By all which it appears what a tendency religion has to make men both bleſſed and bleſſings.

1. MY ſon, forget not my law; but [a] let thine heart keep my commandments: 2. For length of days, and long life, and [b] peace ſhall they add to thee. 3. Let not mercy and truth forſake thee: [c] bind them about thy neck, write them upon the table of thine heart. 4. [d] So ſhalt thou find favour, and good † underſtanding in the ſight of God and man. 5. ¶ [e] Truſt in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own underſtanding. 6. [f] In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he ſhall direct thy paths.

[a] Deut. viii. 1. & xxx. 16, 20.
[b] Pſ. cxix. 165.
[c] Exod. xiii. 9. Deut. vi. 8. Chap. vi. 21. & vii. 3.
[d] Pſ. cxi. 10. 1 Sam. ii. 26. Luke ii. 52. Rom. xiv. 18.
† Or ſucceſs.
[e] Pſ. xxxvii. 3.
[f] 1 Chron. xxviii. 9.

v. 1—6. To be truly religious is not only our bounden duty, but our higheſt intereſt, as appears in the threefold bleſſedneſs here promiſed thereunto.

1. My ſon, forget not my law; but let thine heart keep my commandments, ſtore them up in thy memory, cleave to them with hearty affection, obey them with unreſerved ſurrender, and with that delight and love which ſtamps the obedience genuine, and childlike. For length of days, and long life, and peace ſhall they add to thee: on earth a life of uſefulneſs, continued to old age, with God's peace, and the comfortable enjoyment of his favour; in heaven, a life enduring through the ages of eternity, and perfection of peace and bleſſedneſs ſhall be the everlaſting portion of the faithful ſoul.

2. Let not mercy and truth forſake thee, ſhew every kindneſs to men's bodies and ſouls, compaſſionate their diſtreſſes, and haſten to relieve them. In truth let every word be ſpoken; and to the goſpel-word ſteadfaſtly adhere: bind them, the commandments and doctrines of wiſdom, about thy neck, as the richeſt ornament, write them upon the table of thine heart ſo deep, that the divine impreſſion may never be eraſed. So ſhalt thou find favour, or grace, and good underſtanding, or ſucceſs, in the ſight of God and man; God will approve and delight in the work of his own hands; for all good cometh from him, and the children of God will with pleaſure behold theſe tokens of genuine wiſdom, and give the right hand of fellowſhip, wiſhing thee proſperity in the name of the Lord.

3. Truſt in the Lord, rejecting all other dependance and falſe confidences, truſt him at all times, in every difficulty, for the accompliſhment of all that Father, Son, and Spirit have engaged to do for their redeemed, in the everlaſting covenant of grace; truſt him with all thine heart, unfeignedly and univerſally, and lean not unto thine own underſtanding, but on his wiſdom, grace, and providence, to direct and guide us; without which, all our contrivances will diſappoint us, and our underſtanding be fooliſhneſs. In all thy ways acknowledge him, conſult his word, ſet him ever before thee; by prayer commit thy ways to him, aſcribe to him the ſucceſs of every undertaking, and ſubmit with entire reſignation to his corrections, and he ſhall direct thy path, ſo that the end of it ſhall be peace: he will guide us here by his counſel, and afterwards bring us to his glory.

7. ¶ [g] Be not wiſe in thine own eyes: [h] fear the LORD, and depart from evil. 8. It ſhall be † health to thy navel, and ‡ [i] marrow to thy bones. 9. [k] Honour the LORD with thy ſubſtance, and with the firſt-fruits of all thine increaſe. 10. [l] So ſhall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy preſſes ſhall burſt out with new wine. 11. ¶ [m] My ſon, deſpiſe not the chaſtning of the LORD: neither be weary of his correction. 12. For whom the LORD loveth, he correcteth, [n] even as a father the ſon, in whom he delighteth.

[g] Rom. xii. 16.
[h] Job i. 1. Chap. xvi. 6.
† Heb. Medicine.
‡ Heb. Moiſtening.
[i] Job xxi. 24.
[k] Exod. xxiii. 19. & xxxiv. 26. Deut. xxvi. 2, &c. Mal. iii. 10, &c. Luke xiv. 13.
[l] Deut. xxviii. 8.
[m] Job v. 17. Heb. xii. 5. Rev. iii. 19.
[n] Deut. viii. 5.

v. 7—12. Godlineſs is profitable for all things, having the promiſe of the life which now is, as well as of that which is to come. We have here the beſt counſel, and the ſtrongeſt motives to attend thereto.

1. Be not wiſe in thine own eyes, puffed up with a vain conceit of our own abilities; preſuming to be wiſe above what is written, and ſlighting the advice of others; fear the Lord, in true humility depending upon him, reverencing his word, and ſubmiſſive to his will, and depart from evil, from ſin, from the appearances of it, keep at the greateſt diſtance poſſible, as from the abominable thing which God hates. It ſhall be health to thy navel, and marrow to thy bones; it will contribute to the health of body as well as ſoul, to have God's fear upon our hearts, and ſin far removed; temperance and compoſure of mind being the beſt preſervatives.

2. Honour the Lord with thy ſubſtance, and with the firſt-fruits of all thine increaſe, ſupporting the miniſters of the ſanctuary and the cauſe of truth, aſſiſting the induſtrious, and giving liberally, and according to our abilities, to the poor and needy. The only true enjoyment of worldly wealth is thus to employ it for the glory of God, and the good of mankind. So ſhall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy preſſes ſhall burſt out with new wine; for he that lendeth to the Lord, ſhall never be a loſer; what he layeth out, it ſhall be paid him again, often overpaid in kind, always in comfort.

3. My ſon, deſpiſe not the chaſtening of the Lord, which the Apoſtle quotes, Heb. xii. 5. and intimates that the exhortation is addreſſed to every child of God. Proſperity had been ſpoken of above as their lot, but ſometimes God ſees it for their good, to make them feel the rod of correction; and under all their trials, of whatever kind, his hand muſt be acknowledged. It is the rod of parental tenderneſs, not to be deſpiſed, however light it falls, or to be paſſed over with inſenſibility or inattention: neither be weary of his correction, murmuring under the weight or continuance of the afflictions, deſpairing of their removal, or impatiently led to take undue methods to extricate ourſelves from them. For whom the Lord loveth, he correcteth, and that is the moſt powerful argument for our patient ſubmiſſion. It is love, not wrath, which directs the ſtroke; it is intended purely for our good, it is the proof of God's paternal heart towards us, even as a father the ſon, in whom he delighteth, and wiſhes therefore to remove whatever would render him unamiable, or make him more pleaſing, as thoſe fruits of righteouſneſs do, which grow out of patient ſuffering. Let no child of God therefore diſtreſs himſelf with fears, ariſing from the weight, or ſeverity of his trials; rather let him take comfort from them, as marks of God's regard, and evidences of his adoption.

13. ¶ [o] Happy is the man that findeth wiſdom, and the man that † getteth underſtanding. 14. For [p] the merchandiſe of it is better than the merchandiſe of ſilver, and the gain thereof than fine gold. 15. She is more precious than rubies: and all the things thou canſt deſire, are not to be compared unto her. 16. [q] Length of days is in her right hand: and in her left hand riches and honour. 17. Her ways are ways of pleaſantneſs, and all her paths are peace. 18. She is [r] a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her; and happy is every one that retaineth her. 19. [s] The LORD by wiſdom hath founded the earth; by underſtanding hath he eſtabliſhed the heavens. 20. [t] By his knowledge the depths are broken up, and the clouds drop down the dew.

[o] Chap. viii. 34.
† Heb. Draweth out.
[p] Job xxviii. 15, &c. Pſ. xix. 10. Chap. viii. 11, 19. & xvi. 16.
[q] Chap. viii. 18.
[r] Gen. ii. 9. & iii. 22.
[s] Pſ. civ. 24. & cxxxvi. 5. Chap. viii. 27. Jer. x. 12. & li. 15. or John i. 3.
[t] Gen. i. 9.

v. 13—20. The unſpeakable advantages of true wiſdom are here reſumed, and the happineſs of the man aſſerted who getteth underſtanding, or draweth it out from the well of the ſcriptures, where this living water flows.

1. Wiſdom is the moſt valuable acquiſition; ſilver, gold, yea, even rubies, and all the delights of the ſons of men cannot compare with her: theſe are periſhing, that endures to everlaſting ages. The ſpiritual merchant, who, in the ſcriptures, hath found and embraced by faith the Lord Jeſus, is made partaker of his unſearchable riches of grace and glory; compared with which, the brighteſt jewels are but dung.

2. As a queen, ſhe ſits diſtributing her bounties to her ſubjects. Length of days are in her right hand, and in her left hand riches and honour, temporal bleſſings, ſuch as are generally moſt eſteemed; at leaſt, ſo much of them, as God knows will be good for his people: or eternal bleſſings, a glorious immortality, treaſures in the heaven that never periſh, and the tranſcendent honour of ſitting down with Jeſus on his throne. Her ways are ways of pleaſantneſs, ana all her paths are peace. Gloomy and melancholy as the ways of godlineſs are repreſented by the enemy of ſouls, and his ſervants, who, like the lying ſpies, would bring up an evil report on the good land; they who have made the experiment can teſtify, that in the ſenſe of God's love and favour, is the moſt ſubſtantial delight; in his ſervice, the trueſt freedom; and in the paths of his truth, that peace to be found which paſſeth all underſtanding: and if ſuch be the way, how unutterably excellent then muſt the end be, to which theſe paths of wiſdom conduct us!

3. She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her, alluding to Gen. xi. 9. for as in Adam all die, ſo in Chriſt ſhall all, who believe, be made alive, and be reſtored to the privileges forfeited by one man's diſobedience. Yea, they ſhall eat, and live for ever, and know no ſecond death: and happy is every one that retaineth her, or holds her faſt, who, by faith, cleaves to the Lord Jeſus, and ſteadily perſeveres in the profeſſion and practice of his goſpel, which will iſſue in his eternal bleſſedneſs.

4. The excellence of wiſdom is ſeen in all the creation. The Lord by wiſdom hath founded the earth; by his Son, his eſſential wiſdom; by underſtanding hath he eſtabliſhed the heavens, with the vaſt orbs that roll in the immenſity of ſpace, where all is harmony and order: by his knowledge the depths are broken up, and a place provided for the ſwelling flood, and the clouds drop down the dew, formed by his power, and falling at his command. If we then are partakers of his wiſdom, and joined to this Lord in one ſpirit, then all things are ours, ſince we are Chriſt's, and happineſs preſent and eternal our aſſured portion.

¶ 21. My ſon, let not them depart from thine eyes:
keep ſound wiſdom and diſcretion. 22. So ſhall they be life unto thy ſoul, and [u] grace to thy neck. 23.
[x] Then ſhalt thou walk in thy way ſafely, and thy foot ſhall not ſtumble. 24. [y] When thou lieſt down, thou ſhalt not be afraid: yea, thou ſhalt lie down, and thy ſleep ſhall be ſweet. 25. [z] Be not afraid of ſudden fear, neither of the deſolation of the wicked, when it cometh.
26. For the LORD ſhall be thy confidence, [a] and ſhall keep thy foot from being taken.

[u] Chap. i. 5.
[x] Pſ. xxxvii. 24. & xci. 11, 12.
[y] Pſ. iii. 5. & iv. 8.
[z] Pſ. xci. 5. & cxii. 7.
[a] Pſ. cxxi. 3.

v. 21—26. Solomon had declared thoſe happy who walked in wiſdom's ways And he here,

1. Exhorts us to perſevere in ſo doing. My ſon, let them not depart from thine eyes, keep them ever in thy view, the words of wiſdom, or rather Chriſt and his goſpel, on which our hearts muſt abidingly be fixed: keep ſound wiſdom and diſcretion, maintain ſound principles, and adorn them by a ſuitable practice.

2. Our labour will not be in vain in the Lord. Wiſdom will be the life of our ſouls; when we were dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, by this were we quickned, and hereby in the midſt of every trial are we carried ſafe to the life of glory: it will be grace to our neck, the nobleſt ornament of the ſoul; by this ſecured, we are enabled to walk without ſtumbling in the midſt of ſnares, v. 23. to ſleep undiſturbed with guilt or fear, v. 24. And whatever vengeance overtakes the ungodly, we ſhall be preſerved, as Noah, amidſt the deſolation that ſuddenly ſweeps away the ſinner from the earth; and all this becauſe God is our ſtrength and hope. For the Lord ſhall be thy confidence, and under his wings we ſhall be ſafe from fear of evil, either of ſin, or of ſuffering, and he ſhall keep thy foot from being taken in the traps, which Satan, the world, and ſin lay for us, and from which we never could eſcape, unleſs theſe everlaſting arms were under us, and the power and grace of our covenant God engaged for our ſupport.

27. ¶ Withhold not good from † them to whom it is due, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it.
28. [b] Say not unto thy neighbour, Go, and come again, and to-morrow I will give; when thou haſt it by thee.
29. ‡ Deviſe not evil againſt thy neighbour, ſeeing he dwelleth ſecurely by thee. 30. ¶ Strive not with a man without cauſe, if he have done thee no harm. 31.
¶ [c] Envy thou not ‖ the oppreſſor, and chooſe none of his ways. 32. For the froward is abomination to the LORD: [d] but his ſecret is with the righteous. 33.
¶ [e] The curſe of the LORD is in the houſe of the wicked: but he bleſſeth the habitation of the juſt. 34.
¶ [f] Surely he ſcorneth the ſcorners: but he giveth grace unto the lowly. 35. The wiſe ſhall inherit glory, but ſhame § ſhall be the promotion of fools.

† Heb. The owners thereof.
[b] Lev. xix. 13. Deut. xxiv. 15.
‡ Or practiſe.
[c] Pſ. xxxvii. 1. & lxxiii. 3. Chap. xxiv. 1.
‖ Heb. The man of violence.
[d] Pſ. xxv. 14.
[e] Lev. xxvi. 14, &c. Mal. ii. 2.
[f] Jam. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5.
§ Heb. Exalteth fools.

v. 27—35. The conſcientious diſcharge of our duty towards our neighbour, is among the beſt proofs of our being poſſeſſed of the wiſdom which cometh from above. Many excellent inſtructions in that behalf are here laid down.

1. We muſt do juſtice, and love mercy. Withhold not good from them to whom it is due, tribute to magiſtrates, debts to creditors, wages to ſervants, or alms to the poor, when it is in the power of thine hand to do it, and therefore to withhold it would ſhew abhorred covetouſneſs; nor delay till to-morrow the good that may be done to-day: our time is ſhort and precarious, and need be redeemed: Say not unto thy neighbour, Go, and come again, and to morrow I will give, when thou haſt it by thee; but what thine hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.

2. We muſt do him no evil, in body, name, or goods; deviſe not, or plow not evil againſt thy neighbour, ſeeing he dwells ſecurely by thee, his confidence in us lays freſh obligations upon us to anſwer the good opinion he hath conceived of us, and doubly criminal would it be to take advantage of that, to injure him.

3. Avoid all litigious ſuits. Strive not with a man without cauſe, if he have done thee no harm, never quarrel about trifles; ſuſpect not that affronts or injuries were meant, where none were intended; or if no real harm be done, it is malicious to take any advantage to harraſs others: nay uſually it is better ſit down by ſome conſiderable loſs, than fly to the law for relief: the remedy here is often worſe than the diſeaſe.

4. Envy thou not the oppreſſor, great and proſperous as he may be in his iniquity, and chooſe none of his ways, by covetouſneſs, rapine, or injuſtice, to increaſe thy ſtore; for unnumbered worlds would be dearly earned at the loſs of an immortal ſoul, and the condition of the pooreſt perſecuted ſaint of God is infinitely preferable to that of his proud oppreſſor. For the froward is abomination to the Lord; they who walk thus contrary to him, he will walk contrary to them, and make them feel his vengeance: but his ſecret is with the righteous, he makes them know the deſigns of his grace and love towards them, and the end he purpoſes in his providences; and admits them into ſweet communion with himſelf, as a man talketh with his friend. The curſe of the Lord is in the houſe of the wicked, all he hath is under wrath, his poſſeſſions are embittered by it, and his comforts are turned into gall and wormwood: but he bleſſeth the habitation of the juſt, and that can make a cottage a palace, and a dry cruſt (like the pulſe of the three children) afford a more delicious meal, than all the luxuries of the great; no reaſon, therefore, have they to envy them their deceitful meat. Surely he ſcorneth the ſcorners; thoſe who treat religion with contempt ſhall themſelves meet with bitterer ſcorn, when he that ſitteth on the heavens ſhall have them in deriſion: but he giveth grace unto the lowly; it was by his grace they became ſo, and where this is improved, he increaſeth his gifts, and addeth more grace. The wiſe ſhall inherit glory; it is as ſure to them as an inheritance, and whatever ſhame and diſgrace they may be expoſed to here, this eternal honour God will put upon them, ſhall abundantly recompenſe their ſufferings; but ſhame ſhall be the promotion of fools; they hoped for great things, and flattered themſelves with the fancies of their future honours; but lo! the ſcene is changed, death lays them in the duſt, in order to awake in a judgment day to ſhame, and everlaſting contempt.

CHAP. IV.

When the things of God are to be taught, precept muſt be upon precept, and line upon line. Here is, 1. An earneſt exhortation to the ſtudy of wiſdom, that is, of true religion and godlineſs, borrowed from the good inſtructions which his father gave him, and enforced with many conſiderable arguments, ver. 1—13. 2. A neceſſary caution againſt bad company, and all fellowſhip with the unfruitful works of darkneſs, ver. 14—19. 3. Particular directions for the attaining and preſerving of wiſdom, and bringing forth the fruits of it, ver. 20—27. So plainly, ſo preſſingly, is the caſe laid before us, that we ſhall be for ever inexcuſable, if we periſh in our folly.

a Chap. i. 8. 1.[a] HEAR, ye children, the inſtruction of a father, and attend to know underſtanding. 2. For I give you good doctrine, forſake you not my law. 3.
b 1 Chron. xxix. 1. For I was my father's ſon, [b] tender and only beloved in c Ibid. xxviii. 9. Eph. vi. 4. the ſight of my mother. 4. [c] He taught me alſo, and ſaid unto me, Let thine heart retain my words: [d] keep d Chap. vii. 2. my commandments, and live. 5. Get wiſdom, get underſtanding:
forget it not, neither decline from the words of my mouth. 6. Forſake her not, and ſhe ſhall preſerve thee: love her, and ſhe ſhall keep thee. 7.
Wiſdom is the principal thing, therefore get wiſdom:
e 1 Sam. ii. 30. and with all thy getting get underſtanding. 8. [e] Exalt her, and ſhe ſhall promote thee: ſhe ſhall bring thee to honour, when thou doſt embrace her. 9. She ſhall give f Chap. i. 9. to thine head [f] an ornament of grace: † a crown of glory † Or ſhe ſhall compaſs thee with a crown of glory. ſhall ſhe deliver to thee. 10. Hear, O my ſon, and receive my ſayings: and [g] the years of thy life ſhall be many. 11. I have taught thee in the way of wiſdom:
g Chap. iii. 2. I have led thee in right paths. 12. When thou goeſt, h Pſ. xviii. 36. [h] thy ſteps ſhall not be ſtraitned, and [i] when thou runneſt, i Ibid. xci. 11, 12. thou ſhalt not ſtumble. 13. Take faſt hold of inſtruction, let her not go; keep her, for ſhe is thy life.

v. 1—13. Nothing too great can be ſaid in the commendation of divine wiſdom.

1. Solomon earneſtly exhorts his children, and all like them of a teachable ſpirit, to attend the leſſons of inſtruction he was about to deliver. Hear, ye children, the inſtruction of a father, and attend to know underſtanding; fathers are bound to uſe every method to inculcate on their children the knowledge of divine things, and they are in duty bound to pay all deference and attention to their advice; but whether they hear, or forbear, it will be a parent's comfort to have done his beſt: for I give you good doctrine, which, if received, will make you both wiſe and holy; forſake you not my law.

2. He communicated to them what he had received from his father, and by experience had proved to be excellent. For I was my father's ſon, tender and only beloved in the ſight of my mother, the darling ſon, Jedediah, beloved of the Lord, and therefore beloved of them; for in this caſe, parental partiality may be admitted without a crime. He taught me alſo; though a king, not too great to be a teacher, and the impreſſion of his inſtructions, we find, was deep and abiding: and ſaid unto me, let thine heart retain my words, treaſure them up in thy memory, as the moſt invaluable riches; keep my commandments, and live, his obedience to them would, according to the promiſe, prolong his days on earth, or his fidelity to the inſpired inſtructions of his father, would lead him to life eternal. His pſalms were full of Chriſt, whom to know is everlaſting life. Get wiſdom, Chriſt the ſum and ſubſtance of it, and the knowledge of his grace, revealed in the word of truth; get underſtanding, in the diligent uſe of all inſtituted means; for though it is the gift of God, that doth not make our diligence the leſs needful, but rather engages us to exert it, in confidence of ſucceſs from God: forget it not, whatever meaſure is attained, neither decline from the words of my mouth, for when once we deviate but a ſtep from the paths of righteouſneſs, we know not where we ſhall ſtop. Principiis obſta, reſtrain the firſt wandrings, is the grand maxim and only ſecurity. Forſake her not, and ſhe ſhall preſerve thee from the ſnares and temptations that ſurround us; love her, as the moſt deſirable object, and ſhe ſhall keep thee from ſin, from ſorrow, from every evil way. Wiſdom is the principal thing; either Chriſt, who is the head of all principalities and power, and the prince of the kings of the earth; or his word, the knowledge of which is the higheſt wiſdom; and with all thy getting, get underſtanding; for this, of all gain, will moſt amply recompence our toils. An intereſt in Chriſt, and acquaintance with his truth, are the grand acquiſitions. Exalt her, aſcribe to Jeſus the honour due unto his excellent name, and highly value and eſteem the glorious truths of God, and ſhe ſhall promote thee, ſhe ſhall bring thee to honour, when thou doſt embrace her, the higheſt honour and promotion, even that of being ſons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, to which all, who by faith apprehend Chriſt, ſhall be advanced. She ſhall give to thine head an ornament of grace, a crown of glory ſhall ſhe deliver to thee; not like earth's fading ornaments, or corruptible crowns, but ornaments that age will never tarniſh, and crowns of glory incorruptible, eternal in the heavens.

3. Solomon himſelf ſeconds the inſtructions his father had given him with his own. Hear, O my ſon, and receive my ſayings, and the years of thy life ſhall be many, often here, at leaſt hereafter life eternal will be the reward. I have taught thee in the way of wiſdom, I have led thee in right paths, and therefore if he turned aſide from them, he muſt be inexcuſable: ſins againſt light and conſcience, are doubly ſinful. When thou goeſt, thy ſteps ſhall not be ſtraitned, but in the glorious liberty of the ſons of God, thine heart ſhall be enlarged with love, and every obſtruction removed; and when thou runneſt, thou ſhalt not ſtumble, ſo as to fall or periſh, through any ſnares laid by the enemy of ſouls. Take faſt hold of inſtruction, let her not go, hang upon her as thy guide and ſupport, and let nothing ſeparate thee from Chriſt and his ways; keep her, by faith maintain a ſure intereſt in him, for ſhe is thy life, the author of the life of grace now, and the beſtower of the eternal life of glory, which all who are faithful to him will ſhortly enjoy with him.

14. ¶ [k] Enter not into the path of the wicked, and go k Pſ. i. 1. Chap. i. 10, 15.
not in the way of evil men. 15. Avoid it, paſs not by it, turn from it, and paſs away. 16. For [l] they ſleep l Pſ. xxxvi. 4. Iſa. lvii. 20.
not except they have done miſchief: and their ſleep is taken away unleſs they cauſe ſome to fall. 17. For they eat the bread of wickedneſs, and drink the wine of violence.
18. But [m] the path of the juſt is [n] as the ſhining m Mat. v. 14. Phil. ii. 15.
light, that ſhineth more and more unto the perfect day. n 2 Sam. xxiii. 4.
19. [o] The way of the wicked is as darkneſs: They know o Iſa. lix. 9. Jer. xxiii. 12.
not at what they ſtumble.

v. 14—19. The way to keep from evil, is to ſhun temptation.

1. The caution here given is weighty, and ſtrongly urged. Enter not into the path of the wicked, the leaſt familiarity or compliance with them is dangerous; when we take one wrong ſtep, we know not where to ſtop: and go not in the path of evil men; if for a moment thou haſt yielded to their ſollicitations, haſten to retire from the deadly way. Avoid it, as you would the plague, paſs not by it, as you would ſhun an infected houſe, turn from it, and paſs away, keep at the greateſt poſſible diſtance: we can never be too far from ſin.

2. He enforces the warning, by pointing out,

(1.) The ſin and danger of the way of the wicked. For they ſleep not, unleſs they have done miſchief; it is their buſineſs, their delight, to lead others into ſin or ſuffering, and are uneaſy and reſtleſs, if their malicious deſigns are fruſtrated: and their ſleep is taken away, unleſs they cauſe ſome to fall into their ſnares, for they eat the bread of wickedneſs, and drink the wine of violence, the ſpoils of fraud or oppreſſion, on which they regale themſelves, rejoicing in the fruits of their iniquities. Such as theſe how carefully ſhould we ſhun? for their end will be according to their works. The way of the wicked is as darkneſs; they walk in darkneſs, in ignorance, in error, in unbelief, and the iſſue of it will be outer darkneſs, where there is weeping and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth. They know not at what they ſtumble, they are ignorant of their wretched ſtate, and when ſtumbling into the dreadful pit of ruin, ſee not their danger, till too late in torments they lift up their eyes.

2. The comfort and bleſſedneſs of the way of righteouſneſs, as much as the one is miſerable and to be avoided, the other is deſirable, and to be ſought. But the path of the juſt is as the ſhining light, that ſhineth more and more unto the perfect day; their character is the juſt, or juſtified, who, by faith in Chriſt Jeſus, are righteous before God. Their path is Chriſt himſelf, they walk in him, ſupported by his grace, and led by his word and ſpirit, their ſhining light; and as the beams of day firſt break through the darkneſs, then in the horizon deep the riſing ſun appears, till at the laſt, aſcending to his meridian heighth, his brighteſt glories are diſplayed, ſo increaſing with the increaſe of God, the awakened ſoul grows more and more enlightened with divine truth, enlivened with divine warmth, till perfected in holineſs, the full blaze of glory comes, and in eternity, without a cloud, we ſhall enjoy the tranſforming and beatific viſion of our God. Bleſſed therefore, and happy are they, who walk in this way.

20. ¶ My ſon, attend to my words, incline thine ear unto my ſayings. 21. [p] Let them not depart from thine eyes: [q] keep them in the midſt of thine heart. 22. For they are life unto thoſe that find them, [r] and health to all their fleſh. 23. ¶ Keep thy heart † with all diligence: for out of it are the iſſues of life. 24. Put away from thee a froward mouth, and perverſe lips put far from thee. 25. Let thine eyes look right on, and let thine eye-lids look ſtraight before thee. 26. Ponder the path of thy feet, and ‡ let all thy ways be eſtabliſhed. 27. [s] Turn not to the right hand nor to the left: remove thy foot from evil.

[p] Chap. iii. 3, 21.
[q] Ibid. ii. 1.
[r] Ibid. iii. 8.
† Heb. With, or above all keepings.
‡ Or all thy ways ſhall be ordered aright.
[s] Deut. v. 32. & xxviii. 14. Joſh. i. 7.

v. 20—27. The way of the juſt being ſo excellent, we are here exhorted and directed to walk in it.

1. He exhorts us to diligent attention, v. 20. for unleſs we are heartily engaged, we ſhall never make any conſiderable proficiency in whatever we take in hand. We muſt keep the path of duty ever in our eye, and the love of wiſdom warm upon our hearts, v. 21.

2. He gives a weighty reaſon to ſecond his advice. For they are life unto thoſe that find them, and health to all their fleſh; they are the means of ſpiritual life, the way to eternal life; by them the corrupt affections of our ſouls are mortified, and the deep diſeaſes of our fallen nature cured.

3. He gives full directions for our conduct, and begins,

(1.) With the heart, the fountain head, from whence good or evil flows. Keep thy heart with all diligence, deceitful it is above all things, and by nature deſperately wicked, and all our watchfulneſs and care will be little enough; yea, inſufficient, unleſs we are looking up to God for greater ſtrength than our own, to preſerve our underſtanding from error, our affections from concupiſcence, our conſcience from guilt: or, keep thine heart above all keepings, whatever care other things deſerve, this is the one thing needful, and demands the chief ſollicitude; for as that is kept or neglected, all goes well or ill; for out of it are the iſſues of life, it is the ſeat of ſpiritual life, from thence all our actions ſpring, as ſtreams from the fountain; and if the heart be kept in the love of God, then it will be a well of living waters, ſpringing up into everlaſting life. Lord, do thou keep it for me, and then it ſhall be well kept!

(2.) Our lips muſt be under reſtraint. Put away from thee a froward mouth, and perverſe lips put far from thee, let no profane, paſſionate, proud, falſe, raſh, corrupt communication proceed from them, but take heed to every ſentence that drops, knowing that there is not ſo much as an idle word, but we muſt give an account for it in the day of judgment.

(3.) Our eyes muſt be kept from wandring; fixed on the one object Chriſt and glory; on the ſtrait path of truth, never to be diverted from it, though this world's vanities, the pomp, the pleaſures, the glittering toys and viſionary beauties around ſollicit our attention. The eye is the neareſt inlet to the heart; they who would preſerve the caſtle from the enemy, muſt bar the gate againſt intruders.

(4.) We muſt ponder the path of our feet, weigh it in the balances of the ſanctuary; conſider the paſt, examine the preſent path of duty; and proving all things, hold faſt that which is good, determining ſedately, and purſuing it ſteadily: let all thy ways be eſtabliſhed in one uniform tenor of fidelity, according to the pattern of the divine word. Turn not to the right hand nor to the left, to formality or profaneneſs, to ſuperſtition or infidelity; remove thy foot from evil, from the evil of ſin, which leads to the evil of ſuffering; yea, abſtain from all appearances of evil, the farther removed from it, the ſafer: our care here can never be exceſſive.

CHAP. V.

The ſcope of this chapter is much the ſame with that of chap. ii. To write the ſame things in other words ought not to be grievous, for it is ſafe, Phil. iii. 1. Here is, 1. An exhortation to get acquaintance with, and ſubmit to the laws of wiſdom in general, ver. 2. 2. A particular caution againſt the ſin of whoredom, ver. 3—14. 3. Remedies preſcribed againſt that ſin. (1.) Conjugal love, ver. 15—20. (2.) A regard to God's omniſcience, ver. 21. (3.) A dread of the miſerable end of wicked people, ver. 22, 23. And all little enough to arm young people againſt thoſe fleſhly luſts, which war againſt the ſoul.

1. MY ſon, attend unto my wiſdom, and bow thine ear to my underſtanding. 2. That thou mayeſt regard diſcretion, and that thy lips may keep knowledge. 3. ¶ For [a] the lips of a ſtrange woman drop as an honey-comb, and her † mouth is [b] ſmoother than oil. 4. But her end is [c] bitter as wormwood, ſharp as a two-edged ſword. 5. [d] Her feet go down to death: her ſteps take hold on hell. 6. Leſt thou ſhouldſt ponder the path of life, her ways are moveable, that thou canſt not know them. 7. [e] Hear me now therefore, O ye children, and depart not from the words of my mouth. 8. Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her houſe: 9. Leſt thou give thine honour unto others, and thy years unto the cruel. 10. Leſt ſtrangers be filled with thy ‡ wealth, and thy labours be in the houſe of a ſtranger, 11. And thou mourn at the laſt, when thy fleſh and thy body are conſumed, 12. And ſay, How have I hated inſtruction, and my heart deſpiſed reproof? 13. And have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor inclined mine ear to them that inſtructed me? 14. I was almoſt in all evil, in the midſt of the congregation and aſſembly.

[a] Chap. i. 16. & vi. 24.
† Heb. Palate.
[b] Pſal. lv. 21.
[c] Eccleſ. vii. 26.
[d] Chap. vii. 27.
[e] Pſ. xxxiv. 11.
‡ Heb. Strength.

v. 1—14. Among the moſt dangerous and fatal ſnares that lie in the way of the ſons of men, muſt be reckoned the inordinate love of women. Solomon, to his coſt, proved it by bitter experience; and wiſe are they who learn from his example and falls, that they may not bitterly be convinced of the truth of it by their own.

1. He gives a general exhortation to his ſon, and all whoſe youthful blood beats high, to curb their paſſions with the bridle of enlightned reaſon, and divine underſtanding; for which purpoſe, he exhorts them duly to attend, and deeply meditate upon the leſſons of inſtruction he read, that their conduct might be diſcreet, and their words flow tinctured with wiſdom and grace, from a heart well principled in the ſchool of Chriſt.

2. He draws a lively picture of a wicked and abandoned woman, the danger of yielding to her ſollicitations, and the miſery that muſt enſue.

(1.) Her character is drawn. Her lips drop as an honeycomb; ſoft blandiſhments, filled with every endearing word of ſoft addreſs; her careſſes fatally inſinuating, and from her kiſſes, unperceived, the ſweet poiſon deep infects the ſoul: and her mouth is ſmoother than oil, promiſing every joy in her embraces, and with the guiſe of innocence varniſhing the ſhocking guilt. Her ways are moveable, cunning to deſcry the method to pleaſe, and artful to perſonate the temper, manners, ways, the moſt engaging; that thou canſt not know them, diſcover the cheat, or extricate thyſelf from the winding mazes of her wiles: leaſt thou ſhouldſt ponder the way of life, and firm reſiſt her ſnares, or break from her fatal chain, ſenſible of the danger, and wiſely taught to reject a momentary pleaſure, bought at the loſs of eternal bliſs, and the pain of everlaſting burnings.

(2.) The iſſue of her ways is dreadful. Her end is bitter as wormwood, infamy, poverty, and often diſeaſe attack the body; bitter remorſe, horror, and dread ſeize the ſoul, and, ſharp as a two-edged ſword, every reflection pierces. Her feet go down to death, temporal and eternal; her ſteps take hold on hell, all who follow them are in the broad road thither, and the breath in their noſtrils only ſeparates them from exchanging the bed of whoredom and adultery, for a bed in flames unquenchable.

3. A ſolemn caution is given to abſtain from theſe fleſhly luſts, which war againſt the ſoul, and happy they who ponder theſe words of wiſdom. Hear me now therefore, O ye children, eſpecially ye children of God, who would be kept from the ways of the deſtroyer, and depart not from the words of my mouth, call them not grave leſſons, or moroſe reſtraints, but hear and cleave to them, as the only means of ſolid comfort. Remove thy way far from her, avoid the ſorcereſs, reſtrain the moſt diſtant approaches, never be alone with her, or admit the leaſt familiarities; fly for thy life, for flight is often the only ſafety, and reſolute abſence the only method of deliverance: and come not nigh the door of her houſe; our hearts are vile and corrupt, they are tinder that eaſily kindles with the ſpark of impure deſire, ſtruck from the eyes of wanton beauty; no reſolutions are to be truſted, nor can we ſtop, if but one ſtep is taken, one deſire entertained, deviating from the path of purity. Shun, therefore, the place of her abode, as the infected houſe, the diſtant approach to which may prove fatal.

4. He ſupports his warning with weighty arguments. Leſt thou give thine honour unto others, truſting it with a wretch that will betray thee; or, as a courſe of lewdneſs ſeldom is concealed, thy name will become contemptible, and branded with infamy; and thy years unto the cruel, the harlot, whoſe cruelty is often raging as her luſts, and having plundered the ſubſtance, hunts for the precious life, or the cruel ſin, that murders the immortal ſoul. Strangers ſhall riot on thy wealth, and the fruit of thy labours, v. 10. whilſt in poverty ſteeped to the lips, thou ſhalt feel, with bitterneſs, the loſs of that wealth ſo profuſely ſquandered on the covetouſneſs of ſuch an extravagant, more inſatiate than the grave. The conſequence of which will be, that thou wilt mourn at laſt, when it is too late, or roar as a lion, in pangs of diſtreſs, and horrors of guilt unutterable, in the rage of deſpair, not of repentance, for the ſufferings, not for the ſins. When thy fleſh and thy body are conſumed by the indulgence of theſe hurtful luſts, the conſtitution broken, the body emaciated, and diſeaſe rendering thee loathſome to others, and a burden to thyſelf. Then the bitter reflections and upbraidings of conſcience for deſpiſed reproof will return, and thou wilt curſe thy folly, and ſay, How have I hated inſtruction, and my heart deſpiſed reproof, when warned ſo often, and ſo earneſtly, by God's word, by his miniſters, by my own convictions of the ruin of theſe ways; and yet obſtinately and wilfully bent on deſtruction, I have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor inclined mine ear to them that inſtructed me, deaf to their advice, and inſenſible to their admonitions. I was almoſt in all evil, nothing reſtrained my abandoned heart; for diſobedience to parents, and indulged lewdneſs, are two ſins which moſt effectually ſear the conſcience: even in the midſt of the congregation and the aſſembly; the moſt ſacred place, or the ſolemn ſervice of the houſe of God, excluded not the impure deſire, nor reſtrained the eyes full of adultery, that could not ceaſe from ſin; or it may refer to the evil of ſuffering. He was afflicted with a variety of miſeries, made a public example of, and his puniſhment infamous and notorious. Strange to think, that with ſuch warning and ſuch examples, others ſhould, notwithſtanding, follow theſe deſtructive ways.

Before Chriſt 1000.

15. ¶ [f] Drink waters out of thine own ciſtern; and running waters out of thine own well. 16. Let thy fountains be diſperſed abroad, and rivers of waters in the ſtreets. 17. Let them be only thine own, and not ſtrangers with thee. 18. Let thy fountain be bleſſed: and rejoice with [g] the wife of thy youth. 19. [h] Let her be as the loving hind, and pleaſant roe, let her breaſts † ſatisfy thee at all times, and ‡ be thou raviſhed always with her love. 20. And why wilt thou, my ſon, be raviſhed with [i] a ſtrange woman, and embrace the boſom of a ſtranger? 21. For [k] the ways of a man are before the eyes of the LORD, and he pondereth all his goings. 22. ¶ [l] His own iniquities ſhall take the wicked himſelf, and he ſhall be holden with the cords of his ſins. 23. [m] He ſhall die without inſtruction, and in the greatneſs of his folly he ſhall go aſtray.

[f] Ver. 19.
[g] Mal. ii. 14.
[h] Cant. iv. 5. & vii. 3.
† Heb. Water thee.
‡ Heb. Err thou always in her love.
[i] Chap. ii. 16. & vii. 4.
[k] Job xxxi. 4. & xxxiv. 21. Chap. xv. 3. Jer. xvi. 17. & xxxii. 19. Hoſ. vii. 2. Heb. iv. 13.
[l] Pſ. ix. 16.
[m] Job iv. 21. & xxxvi. 12.

v. 15—23. Though God forbids the gratification of lawleſs luſt, he hath ordained and inſtituted the ordinance of marriage. The chaſte and innocent pleaſures and comforts of which, when the choice is made under the divine bleſſing, and the hearts united in genuine love, as far exceed all the beſtial pleaſures of lewdneſs, as the limpid ſtream the dirty puddle. Therefore,

1. He adviſes to chuſe a wife of youth, as the divinely appointed remedy againſt fornication, and as the ſtate wherein the purity of our ſouls may be beſt maintained; with her to enjoy the delights of connubial love, and ſee with joy our offſpring, as fountains diſperſed abroad, and rivers of water in the ſtreet. Let them be only thine own, not a ſpurious brood, ſuch as a harlot, or a wife of whoredoms brings, v. 17. Let thy fountain, thy wife, be bleſſed, ſtudy to make her happy, count thyſelf happy in her, and by prayer ſeek to engage the divine benediction; and rejoice with the wife of thy youth, for God wills we ſhould enjoy richly the comforts he beſtows. Let her be as the loving hind, and pleaſant roe, fondled with tendereſt affection; let her breaſts ſatisfy thee at all times, nor wiſh for any boſom but hers, on which to recline thy head: and be thou raviſhed always with her love, delighting in her company, and always happier to be with her than any where beſide; or err in her love, exceſs of affection here is ſcarcely to be feared. And why wilt thou, my ſon, be raviſhed, or ERR with a ſtrange woman, and embrace the boſom of a ſtranger, when ſo much purer joys, and more ſubſtantial bliſs, are to be found in the enjoyment of connubial love?

2. The ſenſe of God's all-ſeeing eye, and the wrath revealed againſt tranſgreſſors, muſt reſtrain us from evil. For the ways of a man are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings; he ſees and approves thoſe, who in ſanctification and honour, poſſeſs their own veſſel, and from him are not hid the deeds of darkneſs: in vain the lewd wait for the twilight, or ſeek the covert of the night; no darkneſs, or ſhadow of death, can hide from him the workers of iniquity. His own iniquities ſhall take the wicked himſelf; he promiſed himſelf ſecreſy, but ſhall be detected; he hoped for impunity, but vengeance will overtake him, and he ſhall be holden in the cords of his ſins; he promiſed himſelf, perhaps, that he would leave them off ſoon, or hoped in time they would loſe their power, but every freſh indulgence rivets the chain the faſter, and renders him more the ſlave of vile affections. The terrible conſequence of which will be, he ſhall die without inſtruction, hardned, impenitent, and reprobate; and in the greatneſs of his folly he ſhall go aſtray, given up to his own heart, blinded by his luſt, and ruſhing into everlaſting perdition of body and ſoul in hell. The Lord grant we may never be thus given up to follow our own devices, for then our end muſt be miſery!

Before Chriſt 1000.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter we have, 1. A caution againſt raſh ſuretiſhip, ver. 1—5. 2. A rebuke to ſlothfulneſs, ver. 6—11. 3. The character and fate of a malicious miſchievous man, ver. 12—15. 4. An account of ſeven things which God hates, ver. 16—19. 5. An exhortation to make the word of God familiar to us, ver. 20—23. 6. A repeated warning of the pernicious conſequences of the ſin of whoredom, ver. 24—35. And we are here diſſuaded from ſin, very much by arguments borrowed from our ſecular intereſts, for it is not only repreſented as damning in the other world, but as impoveriſhing in this.

1. MY ſon, [a] if thou be ſurety for thy friend, if thou haſt ſtricken thy hand with a ſtranger, 2. Thou art ſnared with the words of thy mouth, thou art taken with the words of thy mouth. 3. Do this now, my ſon, and deliver thyſelf, when thou art come into the hand of thy friend: go humble thyſelf, † and make ſure thy friend. 4. [b] Give not ſleep to thine eyes, nor ſlumber to thine eye-lids. 5. Deliver thyſelf as a roe from the hand of the hunter, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler.

[a] Chap. xi. 15. & xvii. 18. & xx. 16. & xxii. 26.
† Or ſo ſhalt thou prevail with thy friend.
[b] Pſ. cxxxii. 4.

v. 1—5. God's word teaches us wiſdom in our temporal, as well as our eternal concerns. Nothing is more dangerous than ſuretiſhip; againſt this therefore, we are here admoniſhed: To engage for a ſtranger, were madneſs; to be bound, even for a friend, is dangerous; if therefore at any time over-perſuaded, or thoughtleſs, we have fallen into the ſnare, we cannot be in too great haſte to get out of it. Go humble thyſelf, ſpeak the creditor fair, and if poſſible obtain a releaſe, and make ſure thy friend, haſten him to diſcharge the debt, or to give thee an indemnification, and this without delay; for delays are dangerous, v. 4. Struggle as the roe in the hunter's ſnare, or the bird in the fowler's net, to get free, v. 5. not indeed but there may be circumſtances, in which it would be our duty to aſſiſt our friends, but it never ſhould be done inconſiderately, or for thoſe, whoſe neceſſitous circumſtances render their caſe deſperate, and never for more than we are able or willing to pay, without hurting our family, or diſabling us from the diſcharge of thoſe duties we owe to others.

6. ¶ [c] Go to the ant, thou ſluggard, conſider her ways, and be wiſe: 7. Which having no guide, overſeer, or ruler, 8. [d] Provideth her meat in the ſummer, and gathereth her food in the harveſt. 9. [e] How long wilt thou ſleep, O ſluggard? when wilt thou ariſe out of thy ſleep? 10. Yet a little ſleep, a little ſlumber, a little folding of the hands to ſleep. 11. [f] So ſhall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man.

[c] Job xii. 7.
[d] 1 Tim. vi. 19.
[e] Chap. xxiv. 33, 34.
[f] Chap. x. 4. & xiii. 4. & xx. 4.

v. 6—11. Solomon is here the ſluggard's monitor; raſh engagements may undo a man at once, ſloth operates as a ſlow poiſon, and ruins by degrees.

1. He ſends the idler to the buſy ants for inſtruction, that with ſuch ceaſeleſs diligence, without an overſeer, improve the days of harveſt, aſſiſt each other in their toil, lay up the needful proviſion againſt the winter; and in their cells enjoy, in that bleak ſeaſon, the fruits of their ſummer's toil. Taught by their example in our worldly concerns, we are called upon with prudent foreſight to provide for the days of old age, to labour diligently in our vocation and calling, and with wiſdom to improve the opportunities Providence affords us. And eſpecially in the concerns of our ſouls, to look to the approaching eternity, and give diligence to make our election ſure, working whilſt it is day, and obeying the exhortations of God's miniſters our overſeers. Should we, with all our peculiar advantages, be found idle, how inexcuſable ſhould we be!

2. He calls upon the ſluggard to awake. How long wilt thou ſleep, when wilt thou ariſe out of thy ſleep? beds of ſloth are fatal ſnares; there time is ſquandered, opportunities loſt; whilſt early riſing is profitable for health, wealth, and godlineſs. Sinner, how long wilt thou ſleep in ſin? awake! leſt the flames of hell ſurround thee, and too late thou open thine eyes in torment.

3. The ſluggard pleads for a little indulgence. To quit his warm bed he is very loth, he will riſe by and by, it is time enough yet; a little more ſleep, or at leaſt a little ſlumber, to doze awhile, or, if no more, a little folding of the hands to ſleep, to ſtretch, and turn, and loiter, to prolong the time. Thus ſinners, when diſturbed and awakened, plead for a little reſpite or delay, then fall aſleep again in the arms of ſin, and wake no more.

4. The iſſue of this ſloth will be poverty, haſtening on like a traveller, and ruſhing upon the ſluggard, terrible and irreſiſtable, as an armed man; and but juſt it is, that they who will not work, ſhould want.

Before Chriſt
1000.

12. ¶ A naughty perſon, a wicked man walketh with a froward mouth. 13. [g] He winketh with his eyes, he ſpeaketh with his feet, he teacheth with his fingers.
14. Frowardneſs is in his heart, [h] he deviſeth miſchief continually, [i] he † ſoweth diſcord. 15. Therefore ſhall his calamity come ſuddenly; ſuddenly ſhall he be [k] broken without remedy. 16. ¶ Theſe ſix things doth the LORD hate; yea, ſeven are an abomination ‡ unto him: 17. [l] || A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that ſhed innocent blood, 18. An heart that deviſeth wicked imaginations, [m] feet that be ſwift in running to miſchief; 19. [n] A falſe witneſs that ſpeaketh lies, and him [o] that ſoweth diſcord among brethren.

g Job xv. 12. Pſ. xxxv. 19. Chap. x. 10.
h Mic. ii. 1.
i Ver. 19.
† Heb. Caſteth forth.
k Jer. xix. 11.
‡ Heb. Of his ſoul.
l Pſ. xviii. 27. & ci. 5.
|| Heb. Haughty eyes.
m Rom. iii. 15.
n Pſ. xxvii. 12. Chap. xix. 5.
o Ver. 14.

v. 12—19. The character of the ſlothful is bad, but here is one that exceeds him in wickedneſs.

1. We have his deſcription. A naughty perſon, a man of Belial, of his father the devil, a wicked perſon, a man of iniquity, whoſe habitual temper and conſtant practice is ſin; frowardneſs is in his heart, and out of the abundance of that his mouth ſpeaketh; he tips the wink, when miſchief is to be done, or ſlily ſneering, ridicules the infirmities of others. His very feet ſpeak, gently preſſing to give a hint, or furiouſly ſtamping to expreſs his rage; and his fingers communicate his thoughts: artful, deſigning; others ſuſpect not the plot which is formed againſt them: he deviſeth miſchief continually, it is his buſineſs, his delight; he ſoweth diſcord, ſeeking to ſeparate very friends, and blow the coals of ſtrife into a flame.

2. His end ſhall be according to his works. Therefore, as the righteous puniſhment of his iniquity, ſhall his calamity come ſuddenly; ſuddenly ſhall he be broken without remedy; unexpected, terrible, eternal, irreparable, will be his deſtruction; for the damnation of ſuch ſlumbereth not.

3. From the evil of this ſon of Belial, warning is given us of ſeven ſins that are God's abomination; and which, making us like the wicked, muſt expoſe us to the wrath denounced againſt them. Theſe ſix things doth the Lord hate; yea, ſeven are an abomination unto him: ſin of every kind is odious in the ſight of God, his very nature abhors it, and all who practice it muſt be the objects of his deteſtation. But ſome iniquities have in them greater aggravations than others, (1.) A proud look; pride is at the root of all ſin: by pride, the angels fell from heaven; by pride, man loſt his happy ſtate; by pride elated, in high conceit of our own importance or righteouſneſs, we provoke God's wrath againſt us, and aſſuredly theſe high looks of the proud will be brought low. (2.) A lying tongue, hateful to God, and moſt injurious to man. (3.) Hands that ſhed innocent blood in paſſion, revenge, or through falſe notions of honour, the name given to Satanical pride. (4.) An heart that deviſeth wicked imaginations, ſubtle and crafty in the contrivance of wickedneſs, as daring or cruel in the execution of it: and the more art is uſed to compaſs evil, the more malignity is in the ſin. (5.) Feet that be ſwift in running to miſchief, the eagerneſs to accompliſh which, ſhews how the heart is bent upon it. (6.) A falſe witneſs that ſpeaketh lies, either perjured in judgment, or that invents and propagates calumnies, to the hurt of his neighbour, againſt which, no innocence is a protection. (7.) And him that ſoweth diſcord among brethren; the mark of the ſon of Belial before deſcribed, who encourages factions in the ſtate; ſeeks to widen the breaches of eccleſiaſtical diſſention, or to make miſchief between the neareſt relations and friendly neighbours. It is amazing there ſhould be ſuch a character, and yet dire experience daily teaches us what abominations dwell in this fallen nature.

20. ¶ [p] My ſon, keep thy father's commandment, and forſake not the law of thy mother. 21. [q] Bind them continually upon thine heart, and tie them about thy neck. 22. [r] When thou goeſt, it ſhall lead thee; when thou ſleepeſt, [s] it ſhall keep thee; and when thou awakeſt, it ſhall talk with thee. 23. For [t] the commandment is a † lamp; and the law is light; and reproofs of inſtruction are the way of life: 24. [u] To keep thee from the evil woman, from the flattery ‡ of the tongue of a ſtrange woman. 25. [x] Luſt not after her beauty in thine heart; neither let her take thee with her eye-lids.
26. For [y] by means of a whoriſh woman a man is brought to a piece of bread: and || the adultereſs [z] will hunt for the precious life. 27. Can a man take fire in his boſom, and his clothes not be burnt? 28. Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burnt? 29. So he that goeth in to his neighbour's wife: whoſoever toucheth her, ſhall not be innocent. 30. Men do not deſpiſe a thief, if he ſteal to ſatisfy his ſoul when he is hungry: 31. But if he be found, [a] he ſhall reſtore ſeven fold, he ſhall give all the ſubſtance of his houſe. 32.
But whoſo committeth adultery with a woman, [b] lacketh § underſtanding: he that doth it, deſtroyeth his own ſoul. 33. A wound and diſhonour ſhall he get, and his reproach ſhall not be wiped away. 34. For jealouſy is the rage of a man: therefore he will not ſpare in the day of vengeance. 35. He will not † regard any ranſom; neither will he reſt content, though thou giveſt many gifts.

p Chap. i. 8.
q Ibid. iii. 3. & vii. 3.
r Chap. iii. 23, 24.
s Ibid. ii. 11.
t Pſ. xix. 8. & cxix. 105.
† Or candle.
u Chap. ii. 16. & v. 3. & vii. 5.
‡ Or of the ſtrange tongue.
x Mat. v. 28.
y Chap. xxix. 3.
|| Heb. The woman of a man.
z Gen. xxxix. 14.
a Exod. xxii. 1, 4.

Before Chriſt
1000.

b Chap. vii. 7.
§ Heb. Heart.
† Heb. Accept the face of, &c.

v. 20—35. We have here,

1. A repeated exhortation to attend the leſſons of inſtruction, that as a wiſe and careful parent, this father inculcated on his ſon, v. 20. They ſhould be engraved on the fleſhly tables of hearts, and worn as the beſt ornaments, v. 21. and the bleſſed effects of ſo doing will be experienced in the direction, protection, and comfort which they will miniſter, guiding us in the right way: when we ſleep, preſerving us from fears and terrors; and when we walk, affording ſweet ſubject for conſtant meditation, v. 22. For the commandment is a lamp, and the law is light; the world is a dungeon, without the light of God's word and ſpirit, and but for this, we muſt for ever be ſtumbling on the dark mountains of ignorance, error, and unbelief; but by this bright guide, we both ſee the way of truth, are cheared and comforted in walking therein; diſcover the ſnares and ſtumbling blocks of ſin and temptation, and eſcape them; and find the reproofs of inſtruction to be the way of life, of our ſpiritual and happy life on earth, and our eternal life in heaven.

2. A particular warning is again given, to guard againſt the wiles of the wanton, and to preſerve the temple of our bodies in purity and chaſtity; for againſt this generally beſetting ſin of uncleanneſs, too frequent and ſolemn cautions cannot be given. To keep thee from the evil woman, from the flattery of the tongue of a ſtrange woman, whoſe lips are more poiſonous than the venom of a ſerpent, and her words deceitful and enſnaring. Luſt not after her beauty in thine heart, for God accounts a laſcivious look, or impure deſire, adultery committed in the heart; therefore turn away thine eyes from the tempter's face, and let her not take thee with her eye-lids, with thoſe amorous glances that kindle the raging fire of lewdneſs, and bind our paſſions with cords ſtronger than links of iron. To deter us from this dreadful ſnare,

3. The dire conſequences are inſiſted upon: let him that readeth, underſtand.

(1.) Beggary attends her. By means of a whoriſh woman, a man is brought to a piece of bread, as was the prodigal ſon, and many others; who, enſlaved by ſuch a wretch, to gratify her extravagance, have ruined their families and themſelves.

(2.) Death is in her path. The adultereſs will hunt for the precious life; either leading a man into courſes, which end in an ignominious death, by the hand of the civil magiſtrate; or to rid herſelf of him, when tired of his company, and able to get no more out of him, ſhe gets him poiſoned or aſſaſſinated.

(3.) It will kindle a flame of guilt in his conſcience, that unleſs prevented by grace, will burn to all eternity. As impoſſible as it would be to take live coals into our boſom, and not be burnt, ſo impoſſible is it to commit adultery, and not kindle in our ſouls the fire of hell. Nay, every diſtant approach muſt be avoided, as we would ſhun the ſparks from the furnace; for whoſoever toucheth her in wanton dalliance, or with impure deſires, ſhall not be innocent, or free; he contracts guilt to burden his conſcience, or the ſinful liberties he take, will be diſcovered to his infamy and diſgrace. Note, They who would guard their hearts, muſt keep their eyes, their hands, their lips. Touch not, taſte not; the firſt approaches to ſin muſt be avoided, or, like the rolling ſtone on a declivity, each revolution accelerates the motion, and all the powers of reſtraint are loſt.

4. The infamy and puniſhment due to it, are greater than to theft. If a man ſteal, driven by hunger, we do not deſpiſe, but pity the miſerable object: nay, if he have no need, but ſteals out of pure knavery, the law provides he ſhall make full reſtitution. He ſhall give all the ſubſtance of his houſe, nay, might be ſold, if he had not wherewithal to pay; but more villainous and infamous is the thief that ſteals the affections of a wife, that robs his neighbour of his honour, and by introducing into his family a ſpurious brood, commits the moſt atrocious kind of theft, for which there can be no reſtitution. He lacketh underſtanding, for otherwiſe he never would act ſo madly: he that doth it, deſtroys his own ſoul, his goods cannot repair the damage, his life is forfeited to juſtice, John viii. 5. or his ſoul in torment eternal muſt pay the penalty. A wound and diſhonour ſhall he get; ſome puniſhment inflicted by the ſecret hand of God, or by man, and diſhonour that will make him deſpicable in the eyes of all men of virtue and religion; and his reproach ſhall not be wiped away; the brand of it on his reputation is indelible, even though the blood of Chriſt ſhould have waſhed the guilt from his conſcience.

5. The jealous huſband will not fail to take condign vengeance for the injury done him. His rage is not to be pacified with intreaties, or to be bribed by gifts; he will ſpare no pains to proſecute the ſuit, and bring to public infamy and ſuffering the robber of his honour; or perhaps he will become the executioner of his own revenge, and take away, in bitter rage, the life of a wretch, that hath ſo juſtly forfeited it to divine juſtice. Be wiſe, ponder theſe things, and dread every approach that would lead to ſuch a fearful end.

Before Chriſt 1000.

CHAP. VII.

On this fatal rock of youthful luſts, ſo many have made ſhipwreck of their ſouls, that repeated admonitions are moſt neceſſary. In this chapter we have, 1. A general exhortation to get our minds principled and governed by the word of God, as a ſovereign antidote againſt this ſin, ver. 1—5. 2. A particular repreſentation of the great danger which unwary young men are in, of being inveigled into this ſnare, ver. 6—23. 3. A ſerious caution inferred from thence in the cloſe, to take heed of all approaches towards this ſin, ver. 24—27. We ſhould all pray, Lord, lead us not into this temptation.

1. MY ſon, keep my words, and [a] lay up my commandments with thee. 2. [b] Keep my commandments, and live: and my law [c] as the apple of thine eye. 3. [d] Bind them upon thy fingers, write them upon the table of thine heart. 4. Say unto wiſdom, Thou art my ſiſter; and call underſtanding thy kinſwoman: 5. [e] That they may keep thee from the ſtrange woman, from the ſtranger which flattereth with her words.

[a] Chap. ii. 1.
[b] Lev. xviii. 5. Chap. iv. 4.
[c] Deut. xxxii. 10.
[d] Ibid. vi. 8. & xi. 18. Chap. iii. 3. & vi. 21.
[e] Chap. ii. 16. & v. 3.

v. 1—5. The way of life is only to be found in the word of God, and therefore Solomon inculcates on his ſon the neceſſity of treaſuring up God's commandments in his heart, v. 1. tender of them, and jealous of every thing that would lead him to offend, as he guards the apple of his eye, v. 2. Bind them upon thy fingers, as a memorial ever in view; or as an ornament the moſt graceful: write them upon the table of thine heart, engraven there in characters indelible. Say unto wiſdom, thou art my ſiſter, and call underſtanding thy kinſwoman, delight in it, love it, cultivate the moſt intimate acquaintance therewith: and this ſhall be the beſt preſervative from the wiles of the adultereſs, and detect the falſehood and flatteries of the harlot's words, v. 5.

6. ¶ For at the window of my houſe I looked through my caſement, 7. And beheld among the ſimple ones, I diſcerned among the youths, a young man [f] void of underſtanding, 8. Paſſing through the ſtreet near her corner; and he went the way to her houſe, 9. [g] In the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night: 10. And behold, there met him a woman with the attire of an harlot, and ſubtle of heart. 11. [h] (She is loud and ſtubborn, [i] and her feet abide not in her houſe. 12. Now is ſhe without, now in the ſtreets, and lieth in wait at every corner) 13. So ſhe caught him and kiſſed him, and † with an impudent face ſaid unto him, 14. ‡ I have peace-offerings with me; this day have I payed my vows. 15. Therefore came I forth to meet thee, diligently to ſeek thy face, and I have found thee. 16. I have decked my bed with coverings of tapeſtry, with carved works, with [k] fine linen of Egypt. 17. I have perfumed my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon. 18. Come, let us take our fill of love until the morning, let us ſolace ourſelves with loves. 19. For the good man is not at home, he is gone a long journey; 20. He hath taken a bag of money ‖ with him, and will come home at § the day appointed. 21. With [l] her much fair ſpeech ſhe cauſed him to yield, with the flattering of her lips ſhe forced him. 22. He goeth after her ſtraightway as an ox goeth to the ſlaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the ſtocks: 23. Till [m] a dart ſtrike through his liver, [n] as a bird haſteth to the ſnare, and knoweth not that it is for his life.

[f] Chap. vi. 32. & ix. 16.
[g] Job xxiv. 15.
[h] Chap. ix. 13.
[i] 1 Tim. v. 13. Tit. ii. 5.
† Heb. Strengthened her face, and ſaid.
‡ Heb. Peace-offerings are upon me.
[k] Iſa. xix. 9.
‖ Heb. In his hand.
§ Or the new moon.
[l] Chap. v. 3.
[m] Num. xxv. 8.
[n] Eccleſ. ix. 12.

v. 6—23. Example often proves more prevalent and effectual, than mere precept or reaſoning. To enforce, therefore, the advice he had given, he produces a ſtriking inſtance of a harlot's wiles, and of an unhappy youth betrayed into the ſnare. And whilſt as a magiſtrate he ſat at his window, to obſerve the manners of his people, and bring tranſgreſſors to ſhame, as a prophet he writes to ſet us on our guard, and to make us wiſe by others harms. We have,

1. The unhappy victim; a youth, whoſe inexperience expoſed him the more eaſily to the ſnare, void of underſtanding, untutored in the principles of wiſdom, among the ſimple ones, the companion of weak and ſilly youths like himſelf; paſſing through the ſtreet, idly ſauntering and looking round him, or walking, as the word implies, with a foppiſh air, to attract notice, near her corner, where ſhe uſed to take her ſtand to pick up her gallants; and he went the way to her houſe, led on by his corrupted appetite, in the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night, to prevent diſcovery, and when he flattered himſelf with the thought, that no eye ſeeth me. Read, thoughtleſs youth, and be wiſe! ſhun idleneſs, ſhun temptation, ſhun the deeds of darkneſs; there is an eye ſeeth thee brighter than the ſun.

2. The wily tempter. Behold! with aſtoniſhment, indignation, and abhorrence hear the tale; there met him a woman, a wife, diveſted of all that brighteſt ornament of woman, modeſty, with the attire of an harlot, flaunting, looſe, gaudy; beſpeaking in her dreſs the lewdneſs of her mind; ſubtle of heart, that knew each wheedling art, or reſerved, pretending coyneſs and modeſt diſtance (for they who are moſt deſtitute of modeſty, dare not avow it) yet flying only to be purſued. She is loud and ſtubborn; at home that voice, that to her paramour breathes now the ſofteſt accents of pretended love, is heard with ſhrilleſt note, and her turbulent, headſtrong, and ſelf-willed temper makes her houſe the ſcene of noiſe, ſtrife, and diſpute. Her feet abide not in her houſe; her home, in her eyes, is her priſon; viſiting, company, and an eternal round of diſſipation engage all her thoughts; for ever gadding abroad, now ſhe is without, to take the air, pay morning viſits, or idle round the ſhops; now in the ſtreets and public places, ſeeking ſome object to inveigle, and lieth in wait at every corner, to catch, with her amorous glances, the incautious weak gallant. Let every woman tremble at the diſtant approach to ſuch a character.

3. The ſnare ſpread. With barefaced lewdneſs, that ſtayed not to be wooed, ſhe caught him in her arms, and kiſſed him, to inflame impure deſire; and with an impudent face, as if the darkneſs had extinguiſhed modeſty, and that it was daylight only which made ſin; ſhe ſaid unto him, I have peace-offerings with me, her houſe afforded all plenty, ſhe wanted not hire, but his company; and having that day payed her vows, might begin another ſcore of ſins: ſad commutation! where the force of prayers, ſacraments, and profeſſion of piety can but aggravate the guilt and damnation of the hypocrite. Therefore I came forth to meet thee, to partake of her delicacies, her heart wholly taken up with him, and unable to reliſh the entertainment, if his preſence graced not the table: diligently to ſeek thy face; to her, as ſhe pretends, the lovelieſt object, and I have found thee; with a tranſport ſhe ſpeaks it, as if her life depended on it, and Providence had kindly favoured her deſign. Nor does ſhe conceal her foul intentions; but with alluring invitations courts him to her bed, adorned with tapeſtry, nicely carved, ſpread with the fineſt linen of Egypt, perfumed with the richeſt ſpices, to gratify every ſenſe. Come, ſays ſhe, drawing him nearer to her, come, let us take our fill of love, or be inebriated with it till morning, let us ſolace ourſelves with loves; horrid abuſe of that ſacred name, proſtituted to cover beſtial appetite: miſerable ſolace! ſo ſhort-lived the joy, ſo endleſs the ſorrow which ſucceeds it; and leaſt the fear of diſcovery, or interruption, might beget reluctance in her gallant, ſhe takes care to let him know that the man, (for huſband ſhe will not call him) the good man of the houſe is not at home, he is gone a long journey; hath taken a large ſum with him to trade, or bear his expences, and will make a conſiderable ſtay, till the day appointed for his return, which is yet at a diſtance; ſo that they have nothing to apprehend: thus ſecreſy and impunity are urged to embolden the fooliſh youth to ſin.

4. Her wiles at laſt prevailed. Probably at firſt he ſtartled at the crime, for conſcience will remonſtrate; but, vanquiſhed by her fond and flattering tongue, with her much fair ſpeech ſhe cauſed him to yield; his corruptions ſilenced his convictions, and preſent pleaſure overcame the fears of future pain; with the flattering of her lips ſhe forced him, bound in the chains of her enticing words, and ſurrendering himſelf her ſlave.

5. The youth is undone. He goeth after her ſtraightway, or ſuddenly, at all hazards reſolved to gratify his luſts, as an ox goeth to the ſlaughter, ſenſeleſs of his danger, when led by the butcher to the fatal ax, or as a fool to the correction of the ſtocks, who, in his drunken fit, is not aware of the ſhame or puniſhment: Till a dart ſtrike through his liver, a mortal blow, aimed by the enraged huſband, by the executioner of juſtice, or ſome fatal diſeaſe contracted by his ſin; and the arrows of divine and eternal vengeance are ready on the ſtring to pierce him through: as a bird haſteth to the ſnare, and knoweth not that it is for his life, caught with the flattering bait, and heedleſs of the danger; and too late perceives the irremediable ruin, when the immortal ſoul is drowned in perdition and deſtruction. May his fearful ſtate be our warning!

24. ¶ Hearken unto me now therefore, O ye children, and attend to the words of my mouth. 25. Let not thine heart decline to her ways: go not aſtray in her paths: 26. For ſhe hath caſt down many wounded: yea, [o] many ſtrong men have been ſlain by her. 27. [p] Her houſe is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death.

[o] Neh. xiii. 26.
[p] Chap. ii. 18. & v. 5. & ix. 18.

Before Chriſt 1000.

v. 24—27. The application of the ſtory is here made, and we are called to hearken to the words of wiſdom before it is too late, and attend to theſe divine admonitions, v. 24. Let not thine heart decline to her ways; ſuppreſs the firſt wandrings of corrupt deſire, and never, but with abhorrence, think for a moment of deviating from the path of purity. Go not aſtray; let nothing prevail with thee to do it, for ruin is before thee. Thouſands have been undone by thoſe fatal tempters; wounded in their character with infamy, in their bodies with diſeaſe; but, above all, in their ſouls with guilt and horror. Yea, even many ſtrong men have been ſlain by her; as Sampſon, brought to a miſerable death; and thoſe who have been ſtrong in grace, as David, have ſcarce eſcaped with life. Who need not then tremble for himſelf, when ſuch have ſo foully fallen? Her houſe is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death. The fire of luſt will kindle the fire of hell, and a ſhort life of guilty pleaſure be exchanged for an eternity of never-ending pain. Whoſo is wiſe will ponder theſe things.

CHAP. VIII.

This chapter is the voice of Chriſt, the wiſdom of God. It contains, 1. The higheſt commendations of wiſdom, ver. 1—21. 2. The glory of the eternal Logos, the divine Redeemer, is ſet forth, ver. 22—31. And then it concludes with a repeated charge to the children of men, diligently to attend to God's word.

[a] Chap. i. 20. & ix. 3. 1. [a] DOTH not wiſdom cry? and underſtanding put forth her voice? 2. She ſtandeth in the top of high places, by the way in the places of the paths.
3. She crieth at the gates, at the entry of the city, at the [b] Pſ. xlix. 1. coming in at the doors. 4. [b] Unto you, O men, I call, and my voice is to the ſons of man. 5. O ye ſimple, underſtand wiſdom; and ye fools, be ye of an under-[c] Chap. xxii. 20. ſtanding heart. 6. Hear, for I will ſpeak of [c] excellent things; and the opening of my lips ſhall be right things.
7. For my mouth ſhall ſpeak truth, and wickedneſs is † Heb. The abomination of my lips. † an abomination to my lips. 8. All the words of my mouth are in righteouſneſs, there is nothing froward or perverſe in them. 9. They are all plain to him that underſtandeth, and right to them that find knowledge.
[d] Jam. i. 21. 10. [d] Receive my inſtruction, and not ſilver; and know-[e] Job xxviii. 15. Pſ. xix. 10. & cxix. 27. Chap. iii. 14, 15. & iv. 7. & xvi. 16. ledge rather than choice gold. 11. For [e] wiſdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be deſired, are not to be compared to it.

v. 1—11. When Jeſus came to teach poor mortals the way to life eternal, a voice from the Excellent Glory proclaimed, This is my beloved Son; hear him. Let therefore every ear attend the divine inſtructions he condeſcends to give.

1. His words are publicly proclaimed in the places of chief concourſe, that whoſoever will, may come and learn of him. Thus Jeſus in the days of his fleſh preached openly on mountains, in the city, at the gates of the temple; and his prophets of old, his apoſtles and evangeliſts, went forth publiſhing his word and goſpel through the land. All are addreſſed; high and low, rich or poor; and the fools and ſimple, the fallen ſinful ſons of men, whoſe underſtanding is darkened, are invited to come, and find wiſdom, righteouſneſs, ſanctification, and redemption in him. Note, The goſpel excludes none who do not exclude themſelves. If ſinners periſh for lack of knowledge, it is becauſe they would not come to him, that they might have life.

2. The importance of the ſubject demands our moſt ſerious attention. The things ſpoken of are excellent; the doctrines of grace, the perſon, offices, and undertaking of the Redeemer, and the ineſtimable bleſſings obtained thereby; the knowledge of God and an eternal world, with all the glories there provided for wiſdom's children. They are right, moſt becoming God to command, moſt fit for us to obey. They are doctrines of truth, v. 7. they concern him who is the truth, and cannot deceive; for WICKEDNESS is an abomination to his lips: and as lying is his abhorrence, it ſhould be alſo ours. All his words are in righteouſneſs, ver. 8. perfectly correſponding thereunto; or, concerning righteouſneſs, the neceſſity and nature of that one divine righteouſneſs, which can only be our title to eternal life. There is nothing froward or perverſe in them, but the moſt entire harmony and ſuitableneſs in them. They are plain, and eaſy to be underſtood by all whoſe minds are ſpiritually enlightened, and really deſire without prejudice to come to the ſacred oracles of truth for information; though to the wiſeſt ſcholar, a ſtranger to divine teaching, they are fooliſhneſs and darkneſs; and right to them that find knowledge, who readily ſubmit to the dictates of wiſdom, and approve of the perfect path God's word points out to them. They are preferable to the riches of both the Indies, more deſirable than gold and ſilver, or rubies, and all the delights of the ſons of men, v. 10, 11. And in proportion as we have learned Chriſt, and been taught of him, in ſuch meaſure will our hearts be weaned from all inordinate delight in earthly things, and count them dung and loſs, compared with the excellency of the knowledge of him and his truth.

Before Chriſt 1000.

12. I wiſdom dwell with † prudence, and find out † Or, ſubtilty.
knowledge of witty inventions. 13. The fear of the LORD is to hate evil; pride and arrogancy, and the evil way, and the froward mouth do I hate. 14. Coun-ſel is mine, and ſound wiſdom: I am underſtanding, [f] I [f] Eccleſ. vii. 19.
have ſtrength. 15. [g] By me kings reign, and princes [g] Dan. ii. 21. Rom. xiii. 1. decree juſtice. 16. By me princes rule, and nobles, even all the judges of the earth. 17. [h] I love them that [h] 1 Sam. ii. 30. John xiv. 21 love me, and [i] thoſe that ſeek me early ſhall find me. [i] Jam. i. 5.
18. [k] Riches and honour are with me; yea, durable [k] Chap. iii. 16.
riches and righteouſneſs. 19. [l] My fruit is better than gold, yea, than fine gold; and my revenue than choice [l] Ibid. 14.
ſilver. 20. I ‡ lead in the way of righteouſneſs, in the ‡ Or, walk.
midſt of the paths of judgment: 21. That I may cauſe thoſe that love me to inherit ſubſtance; and I will fill their treaſures.

v. 12—21. Thus ſpeaks he, like unto whom never man ſpake. His own glory and excellence is the ſubject, and we may truly ſay, He is the chief of ten thouſand, and altogether lovely.

1. In him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. I wiſdom, the eſſential wiſdom, the all-wiſe God, dwell with prudence, poſſeſs it in all its fullneſs, and find out knowledge of witty inventions; either detect the devices of the crafty, and ſearch into the hearts of the children of men; or the inventions here ſpoken of relate to the aſtoniſhing contrivance of the covenant of grace, wherein all the perfections of God, his ſovereign grace, and inexorable juſtice, inviolable truth, and boundleſs mercy, are ſo eminently diſplayed, and ſo highly magnified; and wherein the miſerable ſinner beholds in Jeſus Chriſt a holy God, righteous and juſt in forgiving his ſins.

2. He hath a perfect hatred of ſin, and all who are taught of him abhor the thing which is evil. The fear of the Lord is to hate evil; this is the conſtant effect produced wherever that fear is implanted, and this becauſe God hates it. Pride and arrogancy, high thoughts of our vile ſelves and ſinful ſervices, and conceit of our own righteouſneſs, he abhors. The evil way, ſin of every kind, and the froward mouth, that ſpeaks in violence or rage, or propagates the doctrines of error, do I hate; and ſo muſt we. If we are ſpiritually proud, and our paſſions and frowardneſs unmortified, we are not wiſdom's children, but of our father the devil.

3. In him reſides all wiſdom and ſtrength in perfection for the government of all things, and out of his fulneſs muſt we in every ſtation receive wiſdom and power for all the work and duty to which he calls us, v. 14. By him ordained, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, his vicegerents upon earth, kings, princes, and judges are commiſſioned to bear rule; and reſiſtance againſt their lawful authority is rebellion againſt God. He endues them with capacities for their high ſtation, and they then rule well, when their own hearts are brought under the guidance and government of his word and ſpirit.

4. He will ſhew all affection and favour to thoſe who love and ſeek him. I love them that love me; and they that ſeek me early, with eagerneſs, or in the morning of youth, the accepted time, ſhall find me, and therewith every bleſſing of grace and glory.

5. He hath all riches and honour to beſtow, v. 18. as much as is for their good in this world, and with that peculiar ſatiſfaction, that they are got in righteouſneſs under the divine bleſſing. But rather the riches of grace, and the honour that cometh from God only are intended: riches that are durable, not like the periſhing ſubſtance of earth, but incorruptible in the heavens; and honours tranſcendently great, and abiding to eternity; poſſeſſed in virtue of the divine righteouſneſs of Jeſus, the great meritorious cauſe of all our preſent and eternal happineſs. My fruit is better than gold, yea, than much fine gold; the fruits of his undertaking for us; ſuch as redemption, reconciliation, adoption, &c. the fruits of his Spirit in us, love, joy, peace, &c. Compared with theſe, the glittering tinſel of this world's wealth vaniſhes into nothing, and is leſs than nothing and vanity.

6. He guides his followers in the paths of righteouſneſs, in the midſt of the path of judgment; neither deviating from it to the right hand or the left, that he may bring them to an inheritance in glory; and gives thoſe that love him, manſions in the ſkies, filled with all the treaſures of immortal bliſs. Happy, for ever happy, the ſoul whom he leads in theſe bleſſed paths, and brings, as inheritors of his kingdom, to the thrones provided for them in heaven.

22. [m] The LORD poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his way, before his works of old. 23. [n] I was ſet up from everlaſting, from the beginning, or ever the earth was. 24. When there were no depths, I was brought forth: when there were no fountains abounding with water. 25. [o] Before the mountains were ſettled; before the hills was I brought forth: 26. While as yet he had not made the earth, nor the † fields, nor the higheſt part of the duſt of the world. 27. When he prepared the heavens I was there: when he ſet a ‡ compaſs upon the face of the depth: 28. When he eſtabliſhed the clouds above: when he ſtrengthned the fountains of the deep:
29. When [p] he gave to the ſea his decree, that the waters ſhould not paſs his commandment: when [q] he appointed the foundations of the earth: 30. [r] Then I was by him, as one brought up with him: and [s] I was daily his delight, § rejoicing always before him: 31. Rejoicing in the habitable part of his earth, and my delights were with the ſons of men.

[m] Ecclus xxiv. 9. John i. 1.
[n] Pſ. ii. 6.
[o] Pſ. xc. 2.
† Or, open places.
‡ Or, circle.
[p] Gen. i. 9, 10. Job xxxviii. 10, 11. Pſ. civ. 9. Jer. v. 22.
[q] Job xxxviii. 4.
[r] John i. 1, 2, 18.
[s] Mat. iii. 17. Col. i. 13.
§ Heb. Sporting greatly.

v. 22—31. That not a quality but a perſon is here meant, is evident; for to ſuch alone can theſe properties be aſcribed, and that perſon is the eternal Son of God. Compare John i. 1—4. We have,

1. His eternal co-exiſtence with the Father. In perſon diſtinct, in eſſence the ſame. In the beginning, before the earth had a being, before ever the mountains roſe, or the waters retired to the boſom of the deep, the Lord poſſeſſed me, in that myſterious union which ſubſiſts between the divine perſons in the Godhead. I was ſet up from everlaſting; appointed in the eternal counſels, or anointed, deſigned for, and inveſted with, the office of Mediator.

2. His agency in the creation of all things; for by him God made the worlds, and without him was not any thing made that was made, Eph. iii. 9. Heb. i. 2. In each day's work he was preſent, not as a ſpectator merely, but as the great agent, and was firſt the Creator of all things, before he became incarnate for the redemption of ſinners, v. 27—30.

3. He was his Father's delight; brought up with him; from everlaſting the relation ſubſiſted, co-eternal, and co-equal; and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him; which may refer to the fulneſs of delight ſubſiſting mutually between the ſacred perſons in the ever-bleſſed Trinity; or to the complacence of the Father in the Son, and of both in the work of creation, whereof they expreſſed their approbation, Gen. i. 31. or, to their ſatisfaction in the counſel of peace between them, reſpecting man's redemption, God the Father being well-pleaſed in the Saviour's undertaking, and God the Son rejoicing to fulfil the work the Father had given him to do.

4. Towards the ſons of men he entertained the moſt enlarged affection, rejoicing in the habitable part of the earth, beſtowing upon all in rich profuſion the bounties of his providence; and his delights were with the ſons of men; thoſe whom he had choſen in a covenant of everlaſting love to be to the praiſe of his glory, in whoſe hearts he purpoſed to take up his abode, and for whoſe ſake he was content to take our nature upon him, and, through a ſcene of the moſt aſtoniſhing ſufferings, with chearfulneſs accompliſhed our ſalvation, ſatisfied to ſee at laſt in us his redeemed people the travel of his ſoul. What amazing love and grace! how are we bound to praiſe him, truſt him, love him with all our hearts!

32. Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children:
for [t] bleſſed are they that keep my ways. 33. Hear inſtruction and be wiſe, and refuſe it not. 34. [u] Bleſſed is the man that heareth me, [x] watching daily at my gates, waiting at the poſts of my doors. 35. For whoſo findeth me, findeth life, and [y] ſhall obtain favour of the LORD. 36. But he that ſinneth againſt me, wrongeth his own ſoul; all they that hate me, love death.

[t] Pſ. cxix. 1, 2, & cxxviii. 2. Luke xi. 28.
[u] Chap. iii. 13, 18.
[x] Luke x. 39.
[y] Chap. xii. 2.

v. 32—36. When one ſo great and glorious ſpeaks, yea, and to us withal ſo inexpreſſibly good and gracious, well may it be expected, that every ear ſhould be attention, and every heart obedience.

1. The exhortation is, Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye children; my redeemed people, the children of the covenant of promiſe, whoſe ears are by divine grace opened to attend; hear inſtruction, and be wiſe; ſo hear, as to mark, learn, and inwardly digeſt the ſacred truths of goſpel grace, and from them obtain ſound wiſdom: and refuſe it not; however contrary to fleſh and blood the precepts may appear, and mortifying to our fallen nature, we ſhall find them moſt healthful to our ſouls good. Watching daily at my gates, in prayer, meditation, and all the ordinances and means of grace, public or private, where God diſpenſes liberally to all who lack and ſeek wiſdom, and upbraideth not, Jam. i. 5. waiting at the poſts of my doors, humbly, patiently, perſeveringly, for then he never will ſend the hungry empty away.

2. Great will be the bleſſedneſs of thoſe who hear and obey the dictates of wiſdom, and yield up themſelves to Chriſt, to be governed by his word and ſpirit. Favour with God, acceptance of their perſons, forgiveneſs of their ſins, a ſenſe of his love, the ſpirit of adoption, the grace of the Sanctifier, and the comforts of the Holy Ghoſt: theſe are the preſent bleſſings provided for the faithful in Chriſt Jeſus, and life, ſpiritual and eternal, found in him, derived from him, and to be enjoyed with him in the world of bliſs and glory. May this bleſſedneſs be mine!

3. Dreadful will be the miſery of all who reject the Lord Jeſus and his goſpel. He that ſinneth againſt me, by hardened impenitence refuſing to return, or in proud ſelf-dependance truſting on their own doings and duties, inſtead of his grace and righteouſneſs, wrongeth his own ſoul: they ſin againſt their own mercies, refuſe the only remedy that can heal them, and bring down upon themſelves wrath to the uttermoſt. All they that hate me, love death. Our fallen nature is enmity againſt God; every ſinner is practically a hater of God; yea, is avowedly ſo, when he murmurs againſt the reſtraints of God's law as ſevere, and againſt his threatnings as hard or cruel: but all ſuch love death, not intentionally indeed, but it is the neceſſary conſequence of their ways; they chuſe the paths of ſin, and thereby court their own deſtruction. They periſh, becauſe they will periſh, and in hell will have none to upbraid but themſelves.

CHAP. IX.

Chriſt and ſin are rivals for the ſoul of man, and here we are told how they both make their court to it. 1. Chriſt, under the name of wiſdom, invites us to accept of his entertainment, and ſo to enter into acquaintance and communion with him, ver. 1—6. And having foretold the different ſucceſs of his invitation, ver. 7—9. he ſhews, in ſhort, what he requires from us, ver. 10. And what he deſigns for us, ver. 11. And then leaves it to our choice what we will do, ver. 12. 2. Sin, under the character of a fooliſh woman, courts us to accept of her entertainment, ver. 13—16. Pretends it is very charming, ver. 17. But Solomon tells what the reckoning will be, ver. 18. And now chooſe you this day whom you will follow.

1. WIſdom hath builded [a] her houſe, ſhe hath hewn out her ſeven pillars. 2. [b] She hath killed † her beaſts, [c] ſhe hath mingled her wine; ſhe hath alſo furniſhed her table. 3. [d] She hath ſent forth [e] her maidens, [f] ſhe crieth upon the higheſt places of the city, 4.
Whoſo is ſimple, let him turn in hither: as for him that wanteth underſtanding, ſhe ſaith to him, 5. [g] Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled. 6. [h] Forſake the fooliſh, and live; and go in the way of underſtanding. 7. He that reproveth a ſcorner, getteth to himſelf ſhame: and he that rebuketh a wicked man, getteth himſelf a blot. 8. [i] Reprove not a ſcorner, leſt he hate thee: [k] rebuke a wiſe man, and he will love thee. 9. Give inſtruction to a wiſe man, and he will yet be wiſer: teach a juſt man, and he will increaſe in learning. 10. [l] The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wiſdom: and the knowledge of the holy is underſtanding.
11. For [m] by me thy days ſhall be multiplied, and the years of thy life ſhall be increaſed. 12.
[n] If thou be wiſe, thou ſhalt be wiſe for thyſelf: but if thou ſcorneſt, thou alone ſhalt bear it.

[a] Mat. xvi. 18.
[b] Mat xxii. 3, &c.
† Her killing, or ſacrifice.
[c] Ver. 5.
[d] Rom. x. 15.
[e] 2 Cor. v. 20.
[f] Chap. viii. 3.
[g] Cant. v. 1. Iſa. lv. 1.
[h] 2 Cor. vi. 17.
[i] Mat. vii. 6.
[k] Pſ. cxli. 5.
[l] Job xxviii. 28. Pſ. cxi. 10. Chap. i. 7.
[m] Chap. x. 27.
[n] Chap. xvi. 26.

v. 1—12. When in the days of his fleſh the wiſdom of God appeared upon earth, he choſe for the moſt part to convey his divine inſtructions by parables, a method which he had uſed of old, to communicate the myſteries of his goſpel.

1. A rich entertainment is provided in a ſumptuous palace for wiſdom's gueſts. She hath builded her houſe, the church of the redeemed on earth, founded on Chriſt, the rock of ages, and glorioully adorned with all the gifts and graces of the Spirit therein abundantly diſpenſed; or the heavenly manſions provided for the ſaints everlaſting reſt, the houſe not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. She hath hewn out her ſeven pillars; intimating the ſtability and perpetuity thereof, ſeven being the number of perfection; or referring to the conſtant proviſion of wiſe and able miniſters, qualified with gifts and graces for the edifying of the body of Chriſt, and the ſupport of the intereſts of his church and people. She hath killed her beaſts, or her ſacrifice; ſhe hath mingled her wine; ſhe hath alſo furniſhed her table. The ſacrifice is a crucified Jeſus, offering himſelf upon the croſs for ſinners. The wine is his blood, the richeſt cordial to the guilty ſoul. The table is furniſhed with all the bleſſings of grace, pardon, righteouſneſs, peace, ſtrength, conſolation.

ſolation; the proviſion Jeſus himſelf hath made, and freely offers to every poor and hungry ſinner.

2. An invitation is ſent to them. She hath ſent forth her maidens, the miniſters of the goſpel, ordained and ſent to publiſh the glad tidings of ſalvation. She crieth upon the high places of the city, as our Lord himſelf did at Jeruſalem, and his ſervants continue to lift up their voice, with zeal and earneſtneſs delivering their meſſage. Whoſo is ſimple, let him turn in hither; even every ſoul, who, conſcious of his ſpiritual ignorance, deſires to be taught the leſſons of divine truth. As for him that hath no underſtanding, at leaſt not diſtinguiſhed by any attainments of ſcience, ſhe ſaith unto him, Come, eat of my bread, feed upon the dainties provided, and drink of the wine I have mingled; welcome to the feſtal board, to the wine and milk of goſpel grace. Eat, O my friends; yea, drink abundantly, O beloved; for here no exceſs is to be feared. They who feed upon Chriſt and his love, cannot come with deſires too enlarged; yea, bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt, for they ſhall be filled.

3. An admonition is given to the gueſts. Forſake the fooliſh, and live; the company of ſinners, whoſe works are folly, and their wages death: theſe we muſt leave, have no fellowſhip with them, that we may live unto God, quickened by his Spirit, and go in the way of underſtanding; the way of grace, peace, holineſs, and glory, which the word of God lays open and plain before us, and in which all who come to Jeſus Chriſt ought henceforth to walk, even as he alſo walked.

4. Directions are given, to thoſe ſent forth to bid the gueſts, whom to addreſs, and whom to avoid. Reprove not a ſcorner, who ſcoffs at all religion, and ridicules the profeſſors of it; who, ſo far from hearkening to the warnings and calls of the miniſters of the goſpel, turn them and their meſſage into deriſion, or perſecute them for their zeal and importunity; for he that reproveth a ſcorner, getteth to himſelf ſhame and hatred, v. 8. Theſe ſwine regard not the pearls, but turn and rent thoſe who proffer them, ſending them away diſappointed and ill-uſed for their pains. And he that rebuketh a wicked man, getteth himſelf a blot: their evil ſpirits but the more exaſperated, will abuſe and revile, and caſt ſome infamous reflection on their kind reprovers. Some indeed would give their meſſage a more welcome reception: Rebuke a wiſe man, and he will love thee; thankful for ſuch an inſtance of friendſhip, and growing wiſer and better by the rebuke, v. 9. Note, (1.) None are too wiſe to learn, or too good to amend; for in the beſt there ſtill remains much ignorance and folly, and of this they who are deepeſt read in ſelf-knowledge, will be moſt ſenſible. (2.) They who are angry at rebuke, prove the defectiveneſs of their underſtanding, as well as their want of grace. (3.) Fidelity in reproving is the ſureſt proof of genuine friendſhip.

5. The inſtructions which wiſdom's ſervants muſt give are theſe: The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wiſdom; a filial reverential fear of offending; and the knowledge of the holy is underſtanding; of the Holy Ones, the three divine perſons, their offices, and relation to us: or, of holy things, the goſpel, and all the myſteries of grace therein revealed. This is the beſt and moſt valuable knowledge; for by me thy days ſhall be multiplied; it being life eternal to know the true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom he hath ſent: and the years of thy life ſhall be increaſed. Often in this world ſuch is the bleſſed effect of true godlineſs, and certainly in the world to come, when life and immortality ſhall reign. If thou be wiſe, thou ſhalt be wiſe for thyſelf; thou wilt be thyſelf the gainer thereby. It is not that our goodneſs can profit God, that he invites us to come to him, but that we may be made happy: but if thou ſcorneſt the gracious invitation, thou alone ſhalt bear it; the guilt of rejecting the goſpel will lie on the ſinner's conſcience, and ruin everlaſting be brought on his fooliſh ſoul. The damned ſinner will have none to blame but himſelf for his miſery: God called, and he refuſed to anſwer: he would not come to Chriſt that he might have life; his blood therefore is upon his own head.

o Chap. vii. 11. ¶ 13. [o] A fooliſh woman is clamorous, ſhe is ſimple, and knoweth nothing. 14. For ſhe ſitteth at the door of her houſe, on a ſeat in the high places of the city, 15. To call paſſengers who go right on their ways. 16.
p Ver. 4. [p] Whoſo is ſimple, let him turn in hither: and as for him that wanteth underſtanding, ſhe ſaith to him, 17.
q Chap. xx. 17. [q] Stolen waters are ſweet, and bread † eaten in ſecret is † Heb. of ſecrecies. pleaſant. 18. But he knoweth not that [r] the dead are r Chap. ii. 18. & vii. 27. there; and that her gueſts are in the depths of hell.

v. 13—18. Folly is here ſetting up her ſtandard in oppoſition to wiſdom, which ſome interpret of carnal reaſon oppoſing divine revelation; others, of the arch tempter Satan; others, of the antichriſtian church of Rome; but it ſeems to be the ſame perſon before ſpoken of, chap. ii. v. vii. the ſeducing ſorcereſs, whoſe wily tongue deceives the unſtable and unwary.

1. Her character is, that ſhe is clamorous; either talkative and noiſy at home and abroad, or importunate in urging her paramours to comply with her ſollicitations. She is ſimple, and knows nothing; nothing as ſhe ought to know; wiſe enough to work wickedneſs, but to do good hath no knowledge, nor deſire after it. She ſitteth at the door of her houſe, idly ſauntering, and gazing after her prey: on a ſeat in the high places of the city; frequenting all public places, and ſeen at the moſt thronged and faſhionable aſſemblies, to catch with her toils ſome unhappy object: to call paſſengers who go right on their ways; who have been trained up in the ways of truth, and ſeemed to promiſe fair to follow them: with a malicious pleaſure ſhe ſeeks to debauch ſuch, and turn them aſide from the paths of virtue and religion.

2. Her addreſs is moſt inviting and enſnaring, with every agreable pretence of profit and pleaſure. Whoſo is ſimple, fettered with the reſtraints of education, and weakly ſuperſtitious, as ſhe terms it; afraid to taſte the delights of pleaſure; let him turn in hither, and learn the joys which ſenſe can give. And as for him that wanteth underſtanding, and hath not ſeen or known the world, ſhe ſaith to him, Stolen waters are ſweet: unlawful pleaſures, ſuch is the perverſeneſs of man's fallen nature, are moſt tempting; not that they are really moſt ſatisfactory: and bread eaten in ſecret is pleaſant, where the confidence of ſecurity gives a reliſh to the indulgence. But let the ſinner know, whatever the tempter promiſes, ſhe cannot make good: the curſe of God will embitter the joy, and the eye of God will pierce the ſhades of darkneſs; yea, often the moſt ſecret iniquities ſhall be produced to the eye of day, to the perpetual ſhame and reproach of the deluded ſinner. And therefore,

3. A warning is given, as an antidote to the poiſon. But he knoweth not that the dead are there; that he who liveth in ſuch guilty pleaſures, is dead whilſt he liveth, and each day expoſed to eternal death, the wages of ſin; and that her gueſts are in the depths of hell. Thouſands thus beguiled are now in torments: all who continue under the power of theſe vile affections have a hell in their conſcience; or if ſeared, as with a hot iron, v. 4. their damnation is more inevitable and ſure: and as theſe deeds of lewdneſs brought down a deluge of water upon the Rephaims, the ſinners of the old world, ſo ſurely ſhall they bring a deluge of fire upon all who follow their deſtructive ways: they who burn together in their luſts, muſt burn together in hell.

CHAP. X.

Hitherto we have been in the porch or preface to the Proverbs, here they begin; they are ſhort but weighty ſentences: moſt of them are diſtichs, two ſentences in one verſe, illuſtrating each other; but it is ſeldom that there is any coherence between the verſes, much leſs any thread of diſcourſe, and therefore in theſe chapters we need not attempt to reduce the contents to their proper heads; the ſeveral ſentences will appear beſt in their own places. The ſcope of them all is to ſet before us good and evil, the bleſſing and the curſe. Many of the proverbs in this chapter relate to the good government of the tongue, without which men's religion is vain.

1. THE proverbs of Solomon. [a] A wiſe ſon maketh a glad father; but a fooliſh ſon is the heavineſs of his mother. a Chap. xv. 20. & xvii. 21, 25. & xix. 13. & xxix. 15.

v. 1. Nothing is a greater comfort to parents, than to ſee their children profiting by their inſtruction and examples, and growing in wiſdom and favour with God and man. This is a recompenſe for all their toil; though, if otherwiſe, it will be ſome ſatisfaction to them to have done their beſt. On the other hand, nothing is a bitterer burden to an aged parent's heart, than to ſee their children ſtubborn, diſobedient, and refractory, bringing down their grey hairs with ſorrow to the grave. The guilt of ſuch conduct before God is exceedingly aggravated.

2. [b] Treaſures of wickedneſs profit nothing: [c] but b Pſ. xlix. 6, &c. Chap. xi. 4. righteouſneſs delivereth from death. 3. [d] The LORD c Dan. iv. 27.
will not ſuffer the ſoul of the righteous to famiſh: but d Pſ. x. 14. & xxxvii. 25.
he caſteth away † the ſubſtance of the wicked. † Or, the wicked for their wickedneſs.

v. 2, 3. The wicked have here uſually moſt of this world's wealth; yet, little are they to be envied; for treaſures of wickedneſs, either ſuch as are wickedly gotten, or ſpent in wickedneſs, profit nothing: they give no ſubſtantial ſatisfaction to the ſoul; the curſe of God is upon them, and he caſteth them away; either by ſome ſtrokes of his providence depriving men of what they abuſe, or at death removing them from their ſubſtance for ever.

Far different is it with the righteous. His righteouſneſs delivereth from death; others, by his charity relieving them; himſelf, as it prevents the judgments which ſinners provoke. Or, as it is a part of that divine nature which is poſſeſſed through faith in Chriſt, it is a preſervative from death eternal. The Lord will not ſuffer the ſoul of the righteous to famiſh; for their bodily proviſion he will take care, and eſpecially will feed their ſouls with the bread of life, which cometh down from heaven.

4. [e] He becometh poor that dealeth with a ſlack hand: e Chap. xii. 24. & xix. 15.
but [f] the hand of the diligent maketh rich. f Chap. xiii. 4. & xxi. 5.

Before Christ 1000.

v. 4. Honeſty is the beſt policy, and induſtry the ſureſt way to proſper. He becometh poor that dealeth with a ſlack or deceitful hand; who is idle in his buſineſs, or backward to relieve the diſtreſſed; or making haſte to be rich by fraud and injuſtice, brings down God's anger, and loſes his reputation among men. But the hand of the diligent, or acute, who are active and induſtrious, maketh rich. And in the concerns of our ſouls it is equally true; they who give all diligence are thoſe who will be richeſt in grace, and make their calling and election ſure.

5. He that gathereth in ſummer, is a wiſe ſon: but he that ſleepeth in harveſt, is [g] a ſon that cauſeth ſhame.

[g] Chap. xvii. 2. & xix. 26.

v. 5. Time muſt be ſeized by the fore-lock: the ſeaſon of opportunity is precious; it is a mark of true wiſdom to improve it; but idleneſs, and neglect of the proper ſeaſon, bring want and ſhame to the fooliſh ſon, and his parents ſhare his reproach. Youth is our ſummer, to provide for the winter of age; if we ſleep this away, without furniſhing our minds with knowledge and grace, we ſhall live to be mere cumberers of the ground.

6. Bleſſings are upon the head of the juſt: but [h] violence covereth the mouth of the wicked. 7. [i] The memory of the juſt is bleſſed: but [k] the name of the wicked ſhall rot.

[h] Ver. 11.
[i] Pſ. cxii. 6.
[k] Pſ. ix. 5, 6. Eccleſ. viii. 10.

v. 6, 7. The juſt, or juſtified, who by faith in Jeſus are accounted righteous before God, are entitled to all the bleſſings of grace and glory, more ornamental than the diadem, and a ſafer protection than an helmet of poliſhed ſteel: and when they go hence, their memory is precious, they are ſpoken of with honour, and ſurvivors bleſs God for their good examples, and the ſweet ſavour of their graces which remains behind them, by which, though dead, they yet ſpeak. As for the wicked, it is not ſo with them: violence covereth their mouth; when ſpeechleſs under the conviction of evil deeds, they have not a plea to make in arreſt of judgment: or, their mouth covereth violence; they palliate with excuſes their evil deeds, or hypocritically labour to conceal them. Their name ſhall rot; either they ſhall be buried in oblivion, notwithſtanding their care to perpetuate their memory; or, if remembered, ſhall be mentioned with deteſtation, expreſſive of that abhorrence due to their wickedneſs.

8. The wiſe in heart will receive commandments: [l] but a prating fool ſhall † fall.

[l] Ver. 10.
† Or, be beaten.

v. 8. They are truly wiſe, who are wiſe in heart, whoſe heads are not merely ſtored with knowledge, but their hearts fraught with grace; who give this proof of their wiſdom, they will receive commandments, as obedient ſubjects, dutiful children, and in all fidelity approving themſelves to God. But a prating fool, that loves to hear himſelf talk, opinionated of his underſtanding, and conceiting himſelf very wiſe, ſhall fall into contempt among men; into ſin, which ever attends a multitude of words; and conſequently into hell, the end of thoſe who ſay and do not.

9. [m] He that walketh uprightly, walketh ſurely: but he that perverteth his ways ſhall be known.

[m] Pſ. xxiii. 4. Chap. xxviii. 18.

v. 9. He that walketh uprightly, in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity cleaving to God's word and worſhip, and in his tranſactions with men ſpeaking the truth from his heart, and ſhewing all good fidelity; he walketh ſurely; ſafe under the divine protection, in the way to life and glory, and his end will be peace: but he that perverteth his ways; in crooked paths, doubles, and turns, diſſembles, and acts hypocritically with God or man; ſhall be known: in ſome unguarded moment the maſk will drop off, and his folly and ſin be manifeſted to his ſhame in this world; at leaſt, in the great day of recompenſe it ſhall be ſeen.

10. [n] He that winketh with the eye, cauſeth ſorrow: [o] but a prating fool ſhall fall.

[n] Chap. vi. 13.
[o] Ver. 8.

v. 10. He that winketh with the eye, to draw others into ſin with him, or as a ſignal to companions in miſchief, to carry on ſome ſcheme of wickedneſs, cauſeth ſorrow to the perſon againſt whom the deſign is laid; to thoſe who concur with him, bringing them to ſhare his guilt; and to his own ſoul, which muſt ſuffer for it: but a prating fool, leſs miſchievous and dangerous indeed, but moſt diſagreeable and troubleſome, ſhall fall, or be beaten, for his folly and impertinence.

11. [p] The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life: but [q] violence covereth the mouth of the wicked.

[p] Chap. xiii. 14. & xviii. 4.
[q] Pſ. cvii. 42. Ver. 6.

v. 11. A man is known by his words; for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth ſpeaketh. The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life, ſending forth the ſalutary ſtreams of a gracious converſation, and miniſtring edification to the hearers; but violence covereth the mouth of the wicked; his tongue is full of corrupt communication; or covers violence; ſpeaking lies in hypocriſy, and, under the guiſe of friendſhip, cloaking the moſt pernicious deſigns.

Before Christ 1000.

12. Hatred ſtirreth up ſtrifes: but [r] love covereth all ſins.

[r] Chap. xvii. 9. 1 Cor. xiii. 4. 1 Pet. iv. 8.

v. 12. Where hatred is in the heart, there will never be wanting occaſion for ſtrifes; for every look and word will be miſinterpreted into a provocation; and where ſuch a temper reigns, it will be ever ſcattering inſinuations, calumnies, and lies, to kindle the fire of contention: but love covereth all ſins; draws the veil of oblivion over all affronts and injuries, conceals the evil which may be hid, and wiſhes to extenuate what cannot.

13. In the lips of him that hath underſtanding, wiſdom is found: but [s] a rod is for the back of him that is void of † underſtanding.

[s] Chap. xxvi. 3.
† Heb. Heart.

v. 13. Underſtanding in the heart will put wiſdom in the lips: the converſation of ſuch will be edifying, and their words heard with reſpect and advantage; but a rod is for the back of him that is void of underſtanding, or wants a heart; whoſe folly expoſes him to ſhame and ſcourges, as his preſent puniſhment here; or to everlaſting ſhame and ſuffering, the wages of ſin hereafter.

14. Wiſe men lay up knowledge: but [t] the mouth of the fooliſh is near deſtruction.

[t] Chap. xviii. 7.

v. 14. They who know the value of wiſdom, lay it up as the moſt precious treaſure, and by every means of prayer, reading, and meditation, ſeek to increaſe their ſtore, that they may be ready to uſe it for the good of others; but the fool raſhly blabs what brings ruin on others or himſelf.

15. [u] The rich man's wealth is his ſtrong city: the deſtruction of the poor is their poverty.

[u] Chap. xviii. 11.

v. 15. Worldly wealth is a defence from injuries, few caring to aſſault thoſe well able to defend themſelves; and the rich are apt to place too great confidence in their poſſeſſions, and to be elated thereby, though they profit not in a day of wrath. On the other hand, the poor are ready to be oppreſſed by every foot, and are in conſternation and diſtreſs often above meaſure, through fear of periſhing for want.

16. The labour of the righteous tendeth to life; the fruit of the wicked to ſin.

v. 16. The labour of the righteous tendeth to life; his induſtry is bleſſed with a proviſion for himſelf and family; or his care for his ſoul ſucceeds in an increaſe of ſpiritual life, and eſtabliſhes his hope of eternal life: but the fruit of the wicked, whatever he poſſeſſes, whether by inheritance or acquired, all tendeth to ſin; hardens him in it, and is abuſed to ſerve his luſts, his pleaſures, and his pride.

17. He is in the way of life that keepeth inſtruction: but he that refuſeth reproof, † erreth.

† Or, cauſeth to err.

v. 17. The way to life eternal is the inſtruction the goſpel of Jeſus gives, and he that receiveth and keepeth it can never periſh; but he that refuſeth reproof, given in God's word, by his miniſters, parents, or maſters, erreth from the path of life, and, as the fruit of his perverſeneſs and obſtinacy, ruſhes upon his deſtruction.

18. He that hideth hatred with lying lips, and he that uttereth a ſlander, is a fool.

v. 18. They may think themſelves very wiſe, who, when hatred boils in their heart, can ſmile, be gracious, and cover it with deceit; and he that uttereth ſlander, may think to do it in ſo artful a manner, that the author of it ſhall never be known; but in God's account they are fools; their wickedneſs will be detected, and their ſhame be made manifeſt at the laſt.

19. [x] In the multitude of words there wanteth not ſin: but he that refraineth his lips is wiſe.

[x] Eccleſ. v. 3. Jam. iii. 2.

v. 19. Few words are beſt. They who muſt give an account for every idle word, need keep the door of their lips. Wiſdom is known by ſilence and thoughtfulneſs, folly by talkativeneſs.

20. The tongue of the juſt is as choice ſilver: the heart of the wicked is little worth. 21. The lips of the righteous feed many: but fools die for want of † wiſdom.

† Heb. Heart.

v. 20, 21. Though raſh and heedleſs talk is diſcountenanced, that is commendable which is for the uſe of edifying. The truly wiſe are not as dark lanthorns, that ſhine only to themſelves; but communicative out of the good treaſure of their hearts. The tongue of the juſt is as choice ſilver; pure from droſs, and precious, ſpeaking of thoſe truths of goſpel-grace that enrich the ſoul more than all treaſures: and their lips feed many; to whom they break the bread of life, and by it they are nouriſhed up in the words of ſound doctrine. But the heart of the wicked is little worth; evil, and only evil continually within, and from a fountain ſo corrupt nothing pure or profitable can be expected to flow. They may boaſt of the goodneſs of their heart, but he who knows it, aſſerts it to be deſperately wicked and worthleſs. No marvel therefore they die for want of wiſdom; obſtinate and unteachable, who neither know, nor deſire to know, the way of life and peace, but perſiſt in the devices of their own fooliſhneſs.

y Pſ. xxxvii. 22.

22. [y] The bleſſing of the LORD, it maketh rich, and he addeth no ſorrow with it.

v. 22. Thoſe are the truly valuable riches, which are acquired with God's bleſſing, and employed to his glory: no guilt attends the gain of them, no ſorrow embitters the enjoyment of them.

z Chap. xiv. 9. & xv. 21.

23. [z] It is a ſport to a fool to do miſchief: but a man of underſtanding hath wiſdom.

v. 23. Malicious wickedneſs takes a pleaſure to do miſchief; and in nothing do men more reſemble devils; or, to commit ſin, at which fools make a jeſt; or glory in their ſhame, which is the pinnacle of daring impiety: but a man of underſtanding hath wiſdom, to abhor ſuch wickedneſs; or, ſo is wiſdom to a man of underſtanding; it is his delight.

24. The fear of the wicked, it ſhall come upon him: but the deſire of the righteous ſhall be granted.

v. 24. The terrors of guilt often haunt the conſciences of the wicked; nor are they bugbear fears, but terrible realities, that in all their bitterneſs will quickly ſeize upon them: but the deſire of the righteous, his prayers for preventing, reſtraining, ſanctifying, comforting grace, ſhall be granted; no fear diſturb his peace, nor guilt terrify his ſpirit.

a Pſ. xxxvii. 36.
b Mat. vii. 24, 25. & xvi. 18.

25. As the whirlwind paſſeth, [a] ſo is the wicked no more: but [b] the righteous is an everlaſting foundation.

v. 25. Sudden and eternal deſtruction is ready to ſeize the wicked, ſecure as he may appear, and confidently as he boaſts himſelf: but the righteous, being built on Chriſt, the everlaſting foundation, ſtands faſt for ever, and no ſtorms or tempeſts can ever ſhake his confidence, or move him from the hope of the goſpel.

26. As vinegar to the teeth, and as ſmoke to the eyes, ſo is the ſluggard to them that ſend him.

v. 26. A ſluggard is a plague to thoſe who employ him: as vinegar ſets the teeth on edge, and ſmoke cauſes the eyes to water, ſo doth his dilatorineſs and neglects vex and provoke thoſe who ſend him.

c Chap. ix. 11.
† Heb. Addeth.
d Job xxii. 16. Pſ. lv. 23. Eccleſ. vii. 17.

27. [c] The fear of the LORD † prolongeth days: but [d] the years of the wicked ſhall be ſhortned.

v. 27. Though God hath fixed the days of our life by an unchangeable decree, yet he who ordains the end, ordains the means. A regard to God and his fear, by preſerving the body in temperance, ſoberneſs, and chaſtity, tends to prolong life; whilſt a courſe of wickedneſs brings on diſeaſes, and haſtens the ſinner to his grave.

e Job viii. 13. & xi. 20. Pſ. cxii. 10.

28. The hope of the righteous ſhall be gladneſs: but [e] the expectation of the wicked ſhall periſh.

v. 28. The hope of the righteous ſhall be, or is, gladneſs; it brings delight and ſatisfaction to the ſoul, and the iſſue of it will be eternal joy, when it ſhall be ſwallowed up in fruition: but the expectation of the wicked ſhall periſh. Whatever proſpects are before him, and however he flatters himſelf with confidence of ſucceſs, diſappointment ſhall blaſt his enterprizes, his hopes prove deluſion, and deſpair eternal cloſe the ſcene.

f Pſ. xxxvii. 22. & cxxv. 1.

29. The way of the LORD is ſtrength to the upright: but deſtruction ſhall be to the workers of iniquity. 30. [f] The righteous ſhall never be removed: but the wicked ſhall not inhabit the earth.

v. 29, 30. Say unto the righteous, It ſhall be well with them; but woe unto the wicked, it ſhall be ill with them. The upright, who walk in God's way, find him their ſtrength; his providence is their protection, his grace their ſupport in every trial, temptation, and difficulty; and they ſhall never be removed; preſerved by God's unchangeable love, almighty power, and everlaſting faithfulneſs; and thus enabled to perſevere unto the end. But the wicked have no ſupport: deſtruction terrible and irreſiſtable awaits them, and out of that earth on which they place their affections, ſhall they be rooted, and cut off from the enjoyment of all their poſſeſſions.

g Pſ. xxxvii. 30.

31. [g] The mouth of the juſt bringeth forth wiſdom: but the froward tongue ſhall be cut out. 32. The lips of the righteous know what is acceptable; but the mouth of the wicked ſpeaketh frowardneſs.

v. 31, 32. By a man's words he may be known. The righteous, knowing what is acceptable, out of the good treaſure of his heart bringeth forth good things, ſuch as are ſuited to miniſter grace to the hearers, and make them wiſe unto ſalvation: but the mouth of the wicked ſpeaketh frowardneſs, offenſive to God, and hurtful to his neighbour; and therefore in juſt judgment his tongue ſhall be cut out, or ſilenced in everlaſting burnings.

CHAP. XI.

a Lev. xix. 35, 36. Deut. xxv. 13—16. Chap. xvi. 11. & xx. 10, 23.
† Heb. Balances of deceit,
‡ Heb. A perfect ſtone.

1. [a] † A Falſe balance is abomination to the LORD: but ‡ a juſt weight is his delight.

v. 1. Some appearances of honeſty there may be, without religion; but there can be no religion towards God, where there is not honeſty towards man. God abhors all fraudulent dealings, and however a man may by ſhort weights and meaſures increaſe his profits, he is only treaſuring up wrath againſt the day of wrath: but a juſt weight, and conſcientious integrity in our dealings, is his delight, as being the evidence of his fear and love in our hearts.

b Chap. xv. 33. & xvi. 18. & xviii. 12.

2. [b] When pride cometh, then cometh ſhame: but with the lowly is wiſdom.

v. 2. Pride and ſhame are, like the body and ſhadow, inſeparable. Among men, every one wiſhes to mortify the arrogant; and God will certainly bring the lofty low in the day of recompenſe, when Satan's ſin will meet Satan's puniſhment: but with the lowly, who have a humble ſenſe of themſelves, and poor attainments, there is wiſdom; they judge rightly of themſelves, find favour with men, and acceptance with God.

c Chap. xiii. 6.

3. [c] The integrity of the upright ſhall guide them: but the perverſeneſs of tranſgreſſors ſhall deſtroy them.

v. 3. Where the heart is ſincere before God, there we ſhall never willingly deviate from the path of truth, and we may comfortably expect the Spirit of God to teach us the right way, and guide us in it; but deſtruction is in the ſinner's road, and his perverſeneſs in rejecting the teachings of God's word hurries him on to his ruin.

d Chap. x. 2. Ezek. vii. 19. Zeph. i. 18.

4. [d] Riches profit not in the day of wrath: but righteouſneſs delivereth from death.

v. 4. Whatever defence riches are now, they profit nothing in a day of wrath; unable to protect us from the ſtroke of death, or to buy us off at the bar of judgment; and therefore we ſhould put the leſs value on what can be of ſo little advantage to us, and be the more ſollicitous to obtain the true riches of grace, even that righteouſneſs, imputed and implanted, which delivereth from death; takes out ſin, the ſting of it, here, and ſaves us from eternal death hereafter.

† Heb. Rectify.
e Chap. v. 22. Eccleſ. x. 8, 9.

5. The righteouſneſs of the perfect ſhall † direct his way: but the wicked ſhall fall by his own wickedneſs. 6. The righteouſneſs of the upright ſhall deliver them: but [e] tranſgreſſors ſhall be taken in their own naughtineſs.

v. 5. 6. Perfect righteouſneſs and uprightneſs is indeed to be found in Chriſt alone; but by faith we are compleat in him, and, renewed by his grace, are enabled to make ſtrait paths for our feet, are preſerved from falling in the hour of temptation, and delivered from the power of death: whilſt the wicked and tranſgreſſors ſhall be cut off in the midſt of their career, and periſh by the very methods whereby they thought to avert their judgment.

7. When a wicked man dieth, his expectation ſhall periſh: and the hope of unjuſt men periſheth.

v. 7. Many flatter themſelves with deluſive hopes, whom death will quickly undeceive: then the worldling will ſee the fruits of his injuſtice flee from him; and the ſelf-righteous hypocrite, crite, who dreamed of heaven, be terribly ſurpriſed to find his ſoul in hell.

[f] Chap. xxi. 18. [g] Eſth. vii. 9. Dan. vi. 24.

8. [f] The righteous is delivered out of trouble, and [g] the wicked cometh in his ſtead.

v. 8. Before death comes, God is pleaſed ſometimes even here to diſtinguiſh the righteous from the wicked, by the diſpenſations of his providence, delivering the one out of their troubles, and bringing the other into thoſe very miſeries they plotted againſt the juſt. Mordecai was advanced, but Haman hung on the very gallows he had erected for him.

[h] Job viii. 13.

9. [h] An hypocrite with his mouth deſtroyeth his neighbour: but through knowledge ſhall the juſt be delivered.

v. 9. The tongue is a mortal poiſon. By flatteries, falſe doctrines, and artful ſeduction, the hypocrite deſtroyeth his neighbour, drawing him into ſin, and thereby into miſery; but through knowledge of God's word, ſhall the juſt be guarded againſt the tempter's wiles, and delivered from the deſtruction intended.

[i] Chap. xxviii. 12, 28. [k] Chap. xxix. 8.

10. [i] When it goeth well with the righteous, the city rejoiceth: and when the wicked periſh, there is ſhouting. 11. [k] By the bleſſing of the upright the city is exalted: but it is overthrown by the mouth of the wicked.

v. 10, 11. Whether others are like them or not, yet the proſperity and advancement of good men is matter of general joy, becauſe, as magiſtrates, they uſe their power, or as men of wealth, their ſubſtance, for the good of their fellow citizens. By the bleſſing of the upright, through God's bleſſing upon them, or their prayers, advice, and kindneſs, the city is exalted, and all who dwell with them fare the better for them: but the wicked are the plague and curſe of the places where they dwell; they corrupt their manners, and bring down God's wrath upon them. When they are cut off therefore by death, or their power, influence, and authority are broken, it is matter of general joy, and all who have any ſenſe of goodneſs, or knowledge of their own intereſts, ſhout at their fall.

† Heb. Heart.
[l] Lev. xix. 16. Chap. xx. 19.
‡ Heb. He that walketh, being a tale-bearer.

12. He that is void of † wiſdom, deſpiſeth his neighbour: but a man of underſtanding holdeth his peace. 13. [l] ‡ A tale-bearer revealeth ſecrets: but he that is of a faithful ſpirit concealeth the matter.

v. 12, 13. Two marks of folly and ſin are here cenſured, (1.) Contemptuous treatment of our neighbour, either in looks or words, proceeding from the conceit of our own ſuperior wiſdom or holineſs. (2.) Tale-bearing, going from houſe to houſe, revealing what was ſpoken in ſecreſy, ſowing diſcord, and doing miſchief irreparable. Far different is the conduct of the wiſe; if he can ſay no good of his neighbour, he will be ſilent; if provoked, will never anſwer in opprobrious language; what is truſted to his boſom, is ſacred; and he ſeeks to cover under the veil of oblivion, whatever might be to the prejudice of another.

[m] 1 Kings xii. 1, &c. Chap. xv. 22. & xxiv. 6.

14. [m] Where no counſel is, the people fall: but in the multitude of counſellors there is ſafety.

v. 14. Without prudent counſel, neither a kingdom can be long preſerved, nor our private affairs proſper; but where many wiſe counſellors unite in their conſultations, there is ſafety, every precaution will be taken, all danger prevented, and the proſpereſt methods uſed to enſure ſucceſs.

[n] Chap. vi. 1.
† Heb. Be ſore broken.
‡ Heb. Thoſe that ſtrike hands.

15. [n] He that is ſurety for a ſtranger ſhall † ſmart for it: and he that hateth ‡ ſuretiſhip, is ſure.

v. 15. Againſt raſh ſuretiſhip we were warned before, chap. vi. 1. but we need repeated admonition, where the conſequence might be ſo injurious to ourſelves, and ſo hurtful to our families. To be ſurety for a ſtranger, were the heighth of folly; nay, even where we think we are ſafe, and know our man; ſo many ill conſequences have followed from engagements for others, that it were ſafeſt to keep ourſelves free of theſe incumbrances.

[o] Chap. xxxi. 30.

16. [o] A gracious woman retaineth honour: and ſtrong men retain riches.

v. 16. Grace is the moſt honourable and amiable diſtinction, and this will increaſingly engage affection and reſpect, when other accompliſhments are fading and loſt. As tenacious therefore ſhould a woman be of this beſt ornament, as ſtrong men retain riches, who hold faſt what they poſſeſs, and ſuffer none to rob them of their treaſures.

17. The merciful man doth good to his own ſoul: but he that is cruel, troubleth his own fleſh.

v. 17. Self-love too often makes us ſelfiſh, but if we would conſult our trueſt intereſt, to be merciful and liberal will prove our higheſt advantage; it will do good to our own ſouls. But he that is cruel, ſordid, unfeeling, and deſtitute of bowels of compaſſion, troubleth his own fleſh; ſtarving himſelf, rather than uſing what he hath; or denying to his family and friends, what their wants and neceſſities demand.

[p] Hoſ. x. 12. Gal. vi. 8. Jam. iii. 18.

18. The wicked worketh a deceitful work: but [p] to him that ſoweth righteouſneſs, ſhall be a ſure reward.

v. 18. Sin promiſeth much enjoyment, but terribly diſappoints the deluded ſoul, when the pleaſure and profit he propoſed to himſelf iſſues in his perdition. Not ſo the way of righteouſneſs; the harveſt there abundantly anſwers the moſt ſanguine wiſhes in the preſent ſure reward of peace and joy, and the eternal reward of glory.

19. As righteouſneſs tendeth to life: ſo he that purſueth evil, purſueth it to his own death.

v. 19. True righteouſneſs hath the moſt direct tendency to ſecure life everlaſting; it is the earneſt of it, the meetneſs for it, and, in a ſenſe, glory begun: ſo he that purſueth evil with eagerneſs and violence, purſueth it to his own death, and ruſhes headlong into miſery.

20. They that are of a froward heart are abomination to the LORD: but ſuch as are upright in their way, are his delight.

v. 20. As we are regarded of God, ſo will our ſtate be to eternity. They that are of a froward heart, perverſe in their ſpirit, or double-minded, as the word may ſignify, theſe are abomination to the Lord: but ſuch as are upright in their way, in temper and conduct diſpoſed and labouring to walk before God in truth, ſimplicity, and godly ſincerity, theſe are his delight, and will be ſo to eternity.

[q] Chap. xvi. 5.

21. [q] Though hand join in hand, the wicked ſhall not be unpuniſhed: but the ſeed of the righteous ſhall be delivered.

v. 21. Strong is the conſpiracy of the wicked: multitudes, power, and policy, are on their ſide; yet though hand join in hand, they ſhall not be unpuniſhed; it is vain to oppoſe the arm of Omnipotence, for God will break the jaw bones of the lions; but the ſeed of the righteous, to whoſe children's children the love, mercy, and protection of a covenant God deſcend, ſhall be delivered from all their enemies, and ſee them laid low at their feet.

† Heb. Departeth from.

22. As a jewel of gold in a ſwine's ſnout, ſo is a fair woman which † is without diſcretion.

v. 22. Beauty is a jewel that glitters in every eye, but it is a dangerous poſſeſſion, and great grace and prudence are needful to keep its luſtre unſullied; for as a jewel of gold in a ſwine's ſnout is quite miſplaced, and that foul animal, regardleſs of its value, thruſts it into the mire and dunghill; ſo is a fair woman which is without diſcretion, or taſte for virtue or modeſty; given up to impurity, inflaming, and inflamed, ſhe makes herſelf quickly loathſome; and her beauty, ſo miſplaced and abuſed, proves her bane.

23. The deſire of the righteous is only good: but the expectation of the wicked is wrath.

v. 23. The deſire of the righteous is only good, that is his conſtant object: he deſires for himſelf God's favour and grace, and ſtudies to communicate bleſſing and happineſs to all around him: but the expectation of the wicked is wrath: they are imprecating, and wiſhing for vengeance on their enemies; and as the juſt retaliation, wrath to the uttermoſt ſhall overtake them.

[r] 2 Cor. ix. 8, 9, 10.
† Heb. The ſoul of the bleſſing.

24. [r] There is that ſcattereth, and yet increaſeth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. 25. [r] † The liberal ſoul ſhall be made fat: and he that watereth, ſhall be watered alſo himſelf.

v. 24, 25. No harveſt ſo ſure, or plenteous, as that which ſprings from the ſeed which charity ſcatters. God will give a great increaſe, and none ſhall be loſers by what is lent to him: The liberal ſoul ſhall be made fat, enriched with divine grace, and repaid in bleſſings temporal and ſpiritual, for whatever is diſperſed to the poor and deſtitute; and he that watereth others with the ſtreams of his benevolence, ſhall be watered himſelf with the abundance of God's goodneſs, ſo that we ſhall be gainers by our gifts; whilſt the covetous man, bent on hoarding, grows poor by ſparing. Deterred by the expence, he ſuſtains grievous loſſes, which might have been prevented; and defraud-

ing

Before Chriſt 1000.

ing his family, the poor, and God's altar of their portion, there is a curſe on his ſubſtance, and the want he is ſo anxious to prevent, overtakes him.

26. He that withholdeth corn, the people ſhall curſe him: but bleſſing ſhall be upon the head of him that ſelleth it.

v. 26. The bleſſing or curſe of the poor is of eternal conſequence, for God is the poor man's friend, and will not ſee him oppreſſed with impunity. To withhold corn, in order to enhance the price, and by a fictitious famine diſtreſs the needy, is highly criminal: and he, who by bringing his ſtores to the market, and content with a moderate profit, inherits the prayers of the poor, will be ſhortly found a much richer man than he who fills his pockets by oppreſſion, and goes to his grave under the curſes of the diſtreſſed.

[s] Pſ. vii. 15, 16. & ix. 15, 16. & x. 2. & lvii. 6.

27. He that diligently ſeeketh good, procureth favour: but [s] he that ſeeketh miſchief, it ſhall come unto him.

v. 27. He that diligently ſeeketh good for his own ſoul, and riſes early, to do every kind office for his neighbour, procureth favour; God is pleaſed with his labours of love, and men with gratitude acknowledge the kindneſs. But he that ſeeketh miſchief, God, in juſt retaliation for the hurt he deſigned againſt others, will by his providence ſo order, that it ſhall come unto him.

[t] Job xxxi. 34. Mark x. 24. 1 Tim. vi. 17.
[u] Pſ. i. 3. & xcii. 12, &c. Jer. xvii. 8.

28. [t] He that truſteth in his riches ſhall fall: but [u] the righteous ſhall flouriſh as a branch.

v. 28. They who put their confidence in riches, will find them a broken reed that will break under them, and pierce them through with many ſorrows; but the righteous, who truſt on Chriſt alone, ſhall flouriſh as a branch, ingrafted by faith on him their living root, and receiving out of his fulneſs the abundant ſupplies of quickning grace.

[x] Eccleſ. v. 16.

29. He that troubleth his own houſe, [x] ſhall inherit the wind: and the fool ſhall be ſervant to the wiſe of heart.

v. 29. He that troubleth his own houſe, by a paſſionate and peeviſh temper; or ever eager after gain, is perpetually harraſſing them above meaſure; or by idleneſs, neglect, or prodigality, beggars them; or by avarice defrauds his family of neceſſaries, ſhall inherit the wind: all his ſubſtance ſhall breed him vexation, and vaniſh withal, and leave him deſtitute. And the fool, who knows not how to manage, and lives without thought, ſhall be reduced to want, and for a maintenance be glad to become ſervant to his wiſer neighbour.

[y] Dan. xii. 3.
† Heb. Taketh.

30. The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and [y] he that † winneth ſouls is wiſe.

v. 30. A good man is a bleſſing to all around him; his fruit is a tree of life; his graces, example, prayers, inſtructions, are the means of giving life to the ſouls of thoſe who are near him, and hear, learn, and imitate: and he that winneth ſouls, wiſe, wins them for Chriſt, engages them to yield up themſelves to him, as their Lord and maſter, teaches them his truth, allures them with the great and precious promiſes, taketh them by the mighty word, beating down the ſtrong-holds of Satan, or catches them with the net of goſpel grace; all which ſenſes the word bears, and comprehends all the means and methods the wiſe and diligent miniſters of Chriſt uſe to turn the hearts of the diſobedient unto the wiſdom of the juſt.

[z] 1 Pet. iv. 17, 18.

31. Behold, [z] the righteous ſhall be recompenſed in the earth: much more the wicked and the ſinner.

v. 31. God will be juſt in all his diſpenſations; he will make it appear oftentimes here on earth, and will certainly magnify his juſtice in the day of recompence. Behold! and note it as a certain and important truth, the righteous ſhall be recompenſed in the earth, either their good works ſhall meet a reward of earthly bleſſings, or their ſins and offences are corrected with the rod of affliction: and if God ſpareth not his own children, but viſits them, much more the wicked and the ſinner, whom on earth he ſometimes makes monuments of vengeance; or if they eſcape for a while here, let them not hope for impunity, their damnation ſlumbereth not: a judgment day will give them that they have deſerved.

CHAP. XII.

1. WHoſo loveth inſtruction, loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof is brutiſh.

v. 1. A teachable ſpirit is among the beſt ſymptoms of a gracious heart. Whoſo loveth inſtruction, deſires to learn of Chriſt, and out of his word, or from thoſe whom he hath appointed to teach, whether miniſters, parents, or teachers, loveth knowledge, and proves it by ſuch a childlike ſpirit; but he that hateth reproof, and will not bear to be told of his faults, or warned to amend them, is brutiſh; void of ſenſe as grace, and ſtupid and hardned to his ruin.

Before Chriſt 1000.

[a] Chap. viii. 35.

2. [a] A good man obtaineth favour of the LORD; but a man of wicked devices will he condemn.

v. 2. God's favour is towards the good and gracious, not that abſolutely there is any good but one; yet he makes ſome to differ from others: only let it be remembered, that whatever meaſure we have of grace or goodneſs, it is his gift. But a man of wicked devices, whoſe thoughts are bent on miſchief, he will condemn, to ſuffer the juſt deſert of his deeds.

[b] Chap. x. 25.

3. A man ſhall not be eſtabliſhed by wickedneſs: but [b] the root of the righteous ſhall not be moved.

v. 3. The proſperity of the wicked is ſhort-lived: though they may ſeem to flouriſh for a while, there is no ſolidity nor ſtability in their poſſeſſions; ſo ſoon ſhall they vaniſh as a dream when one awaketh: but the root of the righteous, deep ſtruck into the rock Chriſt, ſhall not be moved, whatever ſtorms of temptation, perſecution, affliction, or corruption blow upon them; though they may bow, they ſhall not break, or be rooted up, but ſtand faſt for ever and ever.

[c] Chap. xxxi. 23.

4. [c] A virtuous woman is a crown to her huſband: but ſhe that maketh aſhamed, is as rottenneſs in his bones.

v. 4. Among the greateſt of human bleſſings, is a virtuous wife; whoſe prudence, induſtry, modeſty, and ſubmiſſiveneſs, adorn her ſtation; whoſe chearfulneſs under trials enables us more ſteadily to ſuſtain them, and who is a crown to her huſband, a credit and honour to the relation ſhe bears: but of all plagues, the heavieſt is a bad wife, whoſe folly, extravagance, wantonneſs, peeviſhneſs, and ill humours, ſhame him when abroad, torment him at home; and like an inveterate and waſting diſeaſe, leave him no reſt, nor hopes of a cure.

5. The thoughts of the righteous are right: but the counſels of the wicked are deceit.

v. 5. God ſees and obſerves the riſing thoughts of our hearts; in the righteous they are right; being made partakers of a divine nature, his very thoughts are under divine government, and not an evil ſuggeſtion allowedly entertained: he ever means and purpoſes God's glory, and his neighbour's good; but the counſels of the wicked are deceit; he is ever caſting about in his mind how to accompliſh his crafty deſigns, and ſo to cover his purpoſes as to prevent ſuſpicion, but his detection is at hand.

[d] Chap. i. 11, 18.
[e] Ibid. xiv. 3.

6. [d] The words of the wicked are to lie in wait for blood: but [e] the mouth of the upright ſhall deliver them.

v. 6. A man's words will be as his thoughts. The malice of the wicked leads them to perſecute unto death, by perjury and oppreſſion, thoſe they hate; but the upright is the advocate of injured innocence, and pleads in its defence. Note, They who kill the body are bad, but they who by falſe doctrine murder the ſoul are worſe; againſt theſe, every faithful miniſter is bound to riſe up, and plead for God and truth.

[f] Pſ. xxxvii. 36, 37. Chap. xi. 21.
[g] Mat. vii. 25.

7. [f] The wicked are overthrown, and are not: but [g] the houſe of the righteous ſhall ſtand.

v. 7. Like the rainbow, though the ſinner ſhone in wealth and affluence, it is a momentary greatneſs, and quickly vaniſhes away; but the houſe of the righteous ſhall ſtand, his ſeed be bleſſed upon earth, himſelf live long to ſee it, and when he is gone hence, he ſhall enter a houſe eternal in the heavens.

† Heb. Perverſe of heart.

8. A man ſhall be commended according to his wiſdom: but he that is † of a perverſe heart ſhall be deſpiſed.

v. 8. The love of fame is the univerſal paſſion, and here we are taught how to ſecure it in a right way; not by deſiring to be great, ſo much as to be good; not from riches, preferment, nobility, or ſcience, but from that wiſdom which maketh wiſe unto ſalvation, which God and all good men will highly honour; whilſt he that is fooliſhly perverſe, in following the ways of his own corrupted heart, ſhall bring himſelf into preſent and everlaſting contempt.

[h] Chap. xiii. 7.

9. [h] He that is deſpiſed and hath a ſervant, is better than he that honoureth himſelf, and lacketh bread.

v. 9. To

v. 9. To cut a figure in the world, and appear elegant in the eyes of men, with equipage and attendants, many are driven to miſerable ſhifts; to run in debt, and want bread rather than their finery. Far better is he, who though deſpiſed as poor or mean, content with a ſingle ſervant, or a ſervant to himſelf, keeps within the bounds of his income, and hath enough and to ſpare.

i Deut. xxv. 4.
† Or bowels.

10. [i] A righteous man regardeth the life of his beaſt: but the † tender mercies of the wicked are cruel.

v. 10. God's compaſſions to the brute creation muſt engage ours. The life of his beaſt, and whatever is needful for the comfort of it, is regarded by the righteous; he provides it with proper food and reſt, neither works it too hard, nor ſtrikes it in anger: but ſo unfeeling are the wicked, and, without bowels, ſo cruel in their nature, that the very tender mercies they affect to ſhew, prove the innate barbarity of their minds.

k Chap. xxviii. 19.

11. [k] He that tilleth his land, ſhall be ſatisfied with bread: but he that followeth vain perſons, is void of underſtanding.

v. 11. Diligent induſtry will be crowned with abundance, but idleneſs and bad company will bring a man to want, and too late to rue the fruits of his folly.

† Or fortreſs.

12. The wicked deſireth the † net of evil men: but the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit.

v. 12. All wicked men are not alike crafty; but they who are vile in ſpirit, look on the wiſer knave with ſecret envy, and long for his net, to be like him; or his fortreſs, to be as ſecure in iniquity: but the root of the righteous yieldeth fruit, more excellent than what is got by knavery, and a more enduring ſubſtance.

† Heb. The ſnare of the wicked is in the tranſgreſſion of lips. Chap. xviii. 7.

13. † The wicked is ſnared by the tranſgreſſion of his lips: but the juſt ſhall come out of trouble.

v. 13. The tongue of the wicked often proves his ſnare; his treaſons, perjuries, lies, or calumnies, are detected and puniſhed; and as liars have not always the beſt memories, his own contradictions bring him to ſhame: but the juſt, though they may come into troubles, yet God will ſave them harmleſs, and extricate them out of them.

l Chap. xiii. 2.
m Rom. ii. 6.

14. [l] A man ſhall be ſatisfied with good by the fruit of his mouth, and [m] the recompenſe of a man's hands ſhall be rendred unto him.

v. 14. Not a gracious ſpeech, nor one labour of love ſhall be forgotten in the day of recompence: and even at preſent, the good advice we give to others, may not only prove a bleſſing to them, but inſtructive to ourſelves, and the works of faith produce a plenteous harveſt here below.

n Chap. iii. 7. Luke xviii. 11.

15. [n] The way of a fool is right in his own eyes: but he that hearkneth unto counſel is wiſe.

v. 15. Conceit is the moſt incorrigible folly. The ſelf-righteous and the careleſs flatter themſelves all is well, and ſcorn to be adviſed: but the wiſe are diffident of their own abilities, and willing to hear the counſels of age and experience.

o Chap. xxix. 11.
† Heb. In that day.

16. [o] A fool's wrath is † preſently known: but a prudent man covereth ſhame.

v. 16. The boſom of fools is full of wrath, and eaſily provoked; but he is twice a fool, who, inſtead of reſtraining it, burſts forth into rage and paſſion, and expoſes his own weakneſs. A prudent man, if he finds his anger riſing, will curb it, aſhamed to let it appear, or covers the provocation given him; willing rather to overlook the offence, than to reſent it.

p Chap. xiv.
q Pſ. lvii. 4. & lix. 7. & lxiv. 3.
r Pſ. lii. 5.

17. [p] He that ſpeaketh truth ſheweth forth righteouſneſs; but a falſe witneſs, deceit. 18. [q] There is that ſpeaketh like the piercings of a ſword; but the tongue of the wiſe is health. 19. The lip of truth ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever: but [r] a lying tongue is but for a moment.

v. 17—19. We have here the commendation of a good tongue, and the cenſure of a bad one.

1. A good man, out of the good treaſure of his heart, (1.) Speaketh truth, ſhewing all fidelity, repreſenting things as they are, whether before a magiſtrate on oath, or in private converſation. (2.) His words are healing, v. 18. ſeeking to compoſe diſputes, ſoften the ſpirits of the exaſperated, and bring about friendly reconciliation. (3.) Such lips of truth ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever, they will be our credit among men, and acceptable before God, and they who thus ſpeak, need fear no ſhame.

2. An evil man, out of the evil treaſure of his heart, bringeth forth evil things. (1.) As a falſe witneſs in judgment, he prevaricates, conceals, or miſrepreſents the truth; in private tranſactions, uſes deceit in his dealings and in his converſation. (2.) His words are bitter, ſharp, and hurtful, as the piercings of a ſword, grieving thoſe to whom they are addreſſed; and wounding with ſtabs of calumny and evil ſurmiſes, againſt which no armour of innocence is proof. (3.) Though a liar may gain preſent credit, it is but for a moment; his falſehood and deceit will ſoon be detected, his own tongue will fall upon him with ſome inconſiſtence; or God in judgment bring to light his wickedneſs, at fartheſt in the day of recompenſe, when liars ſhall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire.

20. Deceit is in the heart of them that imagine evil: but to the counſellors of peace is joy.

v. 20. They who imagine evil, ſeek by craft and deceit to gain their ends, but are often found to impoſe upon themſelves; whilſt to thoſe, who with openneſs of heart meditate no guile, conſult their neighbour's peace, and ſtudy to promote it, joy will be their happy portion.

s Rom. viii. 28.

21. [s] There ſhall no evil happen to the juſt: but the wicked ſhall be filled with miſchief.

v. 21. God will be the protection of the juſt; no evil ſhall happen to them; his grace ſhall preſerve them from ſin, his providence from ſuffering: yea, though they may fall into divers temptations, they ſhall all work together for their good. But miſery haunts the wicked, cloſe as their ſhadow; their miſchief ſhall be viſited on their own heads, and given up to their own evil hearts; they ſhall be left to fill up the meaſure of their iniquities, till wrath come upon them to the uttermoſt.

t Chap. vi. 17. Rev. xxii. 15.
u Chap. xi. 20.

22. [t] Lying lips are abomination to the LORD: but [u] they that deal truly are his delight.

v. 22. We cannot have too many warnings againſt lying, to which the fallen nature is ſo prone, and the conſequences of which are ſo fatal. The lying lips are abomination to the Lord, and he will ſharply rebuke them with hot burning coals: whilſt truth is his delight, and they who in all their words and dealings make conſcience to ſpeak it from their heart, will find God's bleſſing upon them.

x Chap. xiii. 16. & xv. 2.

23. [x] A prudent man concealeth knowledge: but the heart of fools proclaimeth fooliſhneſs.

v. 23. Though a wiſe man is not backward to communicate inſtruction, he is careful to avoid all oſtentation of knowledge, or his prudence appears in concealing what would not be proper to be divulged: but fools betray their ignorance, by their pompous affectation to appear wiſe.

y Chap. x. 4.
† Or deceitful.

24. [y] The hand of the diligent ſhall bear rule: but the † ſlothful ſhall be under tribute.

v. 24. Diligence is the way to riſe. Riches, and conſequently dominion, are the natural fruits thereof; but ſloth and ſlavery are twin ſiſters. The ſlothful ſhall be under tribute, or the deceitful, for they are cloſe allied; they who hate to work, uſually live by knavery.

z Chap. xv. 13.
a Iſa. l. 4.

25. [z] Heavineſs in the heart of man maketh it ſtoop: but [a] a good word maketh it glad.

v. 25. Heavineſs in the heart of MAN, ariſing from over anxiety about a worldly proviſion, the dread of want, the preſſures of adverſity, natural dejection of ſpirits, and above all, from a ſenſe of ſin lying upon the conſcience, maketh it ſtoop, unnerves the ſoul for labour, and keeps the miſerable wretch poring, diſconſolate, over his wretchedneſs; but a good word, encouraging, ſeaſonable, drawn from God's word, and applied by the ſpirit to the ſoul, maketh it glad, removes the fears of unbelief, revives the drooping ſpirits, and fills the ſoul with joy and peace in believing.

† Or abundant.

26. The righteous is more † excellent than his neighbour: but the way of the wicked ſeduceth them.

v. 26. Men's excellence is to be rated not from their poſſeſſions, but their piety. The righteous is more excellent than his graceleſs neighbour, however in external ſhew and greatneſs he may be his inferior; or more abundant, not in worldly wealth indeed, but what is infinitely better, in the graces of God's ſpirit; but the way of the wicked ſeduceth them, they promiſe themſelves profit and honour in their evil ways, but in the iſſue find themſelves deceived and undone.

27. The ſlothful man roaſteth not that which he took in hunting: but the ſubſtance of a diligent man is precious.

Before Chriſt 1000.

v. 27. The ſlothful, or deceitful man, roaſteth not that which he took in hunting; if he goes to the field, he does not labour enough to get his game: or if he hath caught it, he is ſcarce at the pains to dreſs it; or figuratively, it may refer to the wealth of the ſlothful and deceitful, which drops through their fingers, and of which they have no enjoyment: but the ſubſtance of a diligent man is precious; be it little or much, he hath God's bleſſing therewith, enjoys it with comfort and thankfulneſs, and it is withal abiding.

28. In the way of righteouſneſs is life, and in the pathway thereof there is no death.

v. 28. In the way of righteouſneſs, which is faith in Chriſt and his righteouſneſs, producing holy walking before God, is life; the true life of our ſouls, communion with God, a ſenſe of his favour here, and life eternal hereafter: and in the path way thereof there is no death; they who are paſſed from death unto life, ſhall never know a ſecond death; glory, honour, and immortality will be their everlaſting portion.

CHAP. XIII.

1. A Wiſe ſon heareth his father's inſtruction: but a ſcorner heareth not rebuke.

v. 1. That ſon, who attentively regards his father's inſtruction, and ſubmits to his correction, as the word may be rendered, is wiſe, and ſhews true grace in his heart; but a ſcorner, a diſobedient child, heareth not rebuke, cannot bear to be told of his faults, and refuſes to amend them.

a Chap. xii. 14.

2. [a] A man ſhall eat good by the fruit of his mouth: but the ſoul of the tranſgreſſors ſhall eat violence.

v. 2. A man ſhall eat good, or a good man ſhall eat of the fruit of his mouth, the bleſſing of his gracious diſcourſe ſhall be repaid him: but the ſoul of tranſgreſſors ſhall eat violence; as he meted to others, it ſhall in juſt judgment be meaſured to him again.

b Chap. xxi. 23.

3. [b] He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his life: but he that openeth wide his lips ſhall have deſtruction.

v. 3. It is wiſe to think before we ſpeak; a guard upon our tongue is the preſervative, both from much ſin and much ſorrow: whilſt laviſh diſcourſe brings deſtruction or conſternation; thoſe who are offended, reſent the injury; quarrels and duels enſue; and worſe, God is provoked, and his wrath threatens eternal perdition.

c Chap. x. 4.

4. [c] The ſoul of the ſluggard deſireth, and hath nothing: but the ſoul of the diligent ſhall be made fat.

v. 4. If wiſhing would do, the ſluggard would be wiſe and rich, but he hates the pains, without which neither can be attained, and therefore continues deſtitute of both. But the ſoul of the diligent ſhall enjoy the comfort of his labours; whether temporally, in the increaſe of his wealth, or ſpiritually, in the abundance of grace and conſolations miniſtered unto him, in anſwer to his unwearied prayers.

5. A righteous man hateth lying: but a wicked man is lothſome, and cometh to ſhame.

v. 5. A righteous man not only abſtains from lying, but abhors it as a ſin moſt offenſive to God, and injurious to man: but a wicked man is loathſome, like a putrid corpſe, ſending forth the peſtilential effluvia of ſin, and cometh to ſhame; his lies are detected, and he juſtly expoſed; or makes himſelf to ſtink, an object odious to God, and deteſted of all good men.

d Chap. xi. 3, 5, 6. † Heb. Sin.

6. [d] Righteouſneſs keepeth him that is upright in the way: but wickedneſs overthroweth † the ſinner.

v. 6. They who poſſeſs the grace of God in truth, will be preſerved upright in the way, ſound in the doctrine, and ſtedfaſt in the practice of the goſpel, unmoved by Satan's temptations, or the world's frowns or ſmiles: but wickedneſs overthroweth the ſinner, or ſin, for he is ſuch a maſs of corruption, that all he is and doth is evil, and only evil, and that continually; no wonder then, that he is overthrown with everlaſting deſtruction.

e Chap. xii. 9.

7. [e] There is that maketh himſelf rich, yet hath nothing: there is that maketh himſelf poor, yet hath great riches.

v. 7. They are not always the richeſt who make the greateſt figure in the world; but oftentimes men appear in all the extravagance of dreſs and equipage, when they are worſe than nothing, in debt, never intending, or able to pay it. Thus hypocrites, and talkative perſons, make large profeſſions of piety, when in fact they have only a name to live, and are really dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. On the other hand, ſome, with the ſhew and conſtant complaint of poverty, are really wallowing in wealth; yet, for fear of want, and through ſordid avarice, pine in the midſt of plenty. Thus alſo many truly rich in grace, and heirs of the kingdom, yet have ſometimes ſad complaints and fear for themſelves, whether ever they have been partakers of the bleſſing.

Before Chriſt 1000.

8. The ranſom of a man's life are his riches: but the poor heareth not rebuke.

v. 8. Riches are often a tempting bait, and bring the life of their poſſeſſor into danger, which he is glad to ranſom at the price of all his treaſures; but the poor having nothing to loſe, no accuſation is brought againſt them, as they have no bribes to pay, and no robber moleſts their empty coffers: or ſpiritually, the poor and lowly in heart are accepted of God, and have no rebukes in anger from him; whilſt the rich, who truſt on their wealth as their ranſom, will be utterly condemned.

9. The light of the righteous rejoiceth: [f] but the † lamp of the wicked ſhall be put out. f Job xviii. 6. & xxi. 17. † Or candle.

v. 9. Joy is ſown for the righteous: in time he ſhall walk in the reviving light of God's countenance; in eternity, his ſun ſhall never go down; but the lamp of the wicked, his glimmering ſhort-lived proſperity, the momentary pleaſures of ſin, ſhall be put out in eternal darkneſs.

10. Only by pride cometh contention; but with the well adviſed is wiſdom.

v. 10. Pride is the root of all quarrels. The opinionated cannot bear contradiction; the aſpiring, a rival; the ſelf-willed, oppoſition. Hence come wars and fightings, but with the well adviſed, who ſpeak or do nothing raſhly, but conſult their bibles, their able friends and their pillow, is wiſdom; they will not give a handle for contention, and avoid all occaſion of diſpute.

11. [g] Wealth gotten by vanity, ſhall be diminiſhed: but he that gathereth † by labour, ſhall increaſe. g Chap. x. 2. & xx. 21. Jer. xvii. 11. † Heb. With the hand.

v. 11. Light come, light go; wealth gotten by vanity, by tricking, fraud, gaming, &c. will be diminiſhed; ſoon it ſhall melt as ſnow before the ſun, for the curſe of God is upon it: but the fruits of honeſt induſtry will be an increaſing and laſting poſſeſſion.

12. Hope deferred maketh the heart ſick: but [h] when the deſire cometh, it is a tree of life. h Ver. 19.

v. 12. Suſpenſe is a ſtate of mind the moſt uneaſy, and the long delay of our hopes, almoſt as painful as their diſappointment: but when the deſire cometh, it is a tree of life, the ſoul is tranſported with joy, and in a temporary paradiſe. Note, (1.) It is good to have little expectation from creature good; then anxiety will give us no pain, or diſappointment vex us. (2.) Though the deſire of the ſaints after perfect holineſs and happineſs ſeem long delayed, it will be the ſweeter when it comes.

13. [i] Whoſo deſpiſeth the word, ſhall be deſtroyed: but he that feareth the commandment, † ſhall be rewarded. i 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. † Or ſhall be in peace.

v. 13. Many make light of God's word, deſpiſe his miniſters, and ſlight his warnings, who will quickly rue their folly; for they who refuſe to be ruled by it, muſt be ruined: deſtruction of body and ſoul in hell will be their judgment. Whilſt he that feareth the commandment, with reverence hears, trembles at God's word, and with diligence obeys, ſhall be rewarded with preſent comfort, and eternal glory.

14. [k] The law of the wiſe is a fountain of life, to depart from the ſnares of death. k Chap. x. 11. & xiv. 27 & xvi. 22.

v. 14. The law of the wiſe, the doctrines of truth they inculcate, taught by the all-wiſe Prophet, is a fountain of life, refreſhing, comforting, enlivening the ſoul, and a conſtant preſervative from the ſnares of death, from which we are warned thereby to depart.

15. Good underſtanding giveth favour: but the way of tranſgreſſors is hard.

v. 15. They will be reſpected in general, who ſhew themſelves intelligent, and particularly an underſtanding enlightned by the ſpirit to know the things of God, giveth favour with him, and all good men: but the way of tranſgreſſors is hard; ſin is the vileſt ſervitude, makes men a plague to others, a burden to themſelves. Strange! that we ſhould ever be ſo infatuated, as to prefer this hard way, to that ſervice which is perfect freedom!

Before Christ 1000.

[l] Chap. xii. 23. & xv. 2. † Heb. Spreadeth.

16. [l] Every prudent man dealeth with knowledge: but a fool † layeth open his folly.

v. 16. A prudent man is cautious; hears, examines, and weighs before he ſpeaks, and chuſes not to be engaged in any thing, till he has a thorough knowledge of the ſubject: but a fool, raſh and thoughtleſs, layeth open his folly, expoſing himſelf to the ridicule of every company.

[m] Chap. xxv. 13.

17. A wicked meſſenger falleth into miſchief: but [m] a faithful ambaſſador is health.

v. 17. Unfaithfulneſs in diſcharging his truſt, or delivering his meſſage, will bring the wicked ſervant to ſhame and puniſhment; and above all others, an unfaithful meſſenger of God's word, will fall into the deepeſt condemnation: but a faithful ambaſſador is health, profitable to thoſe who employ him, uſeful to others, and a credit to his character; and this is eminently true of thoſe who are faithful ambaſſadors for Chriſt.

[n] Chap. xv. 5, 31.

18. Poverty and ſhame ſhall be to him that refuſeth inſtruction: but [n] he that regardeth reproof, ſhall be honoured.

v. 18. They who are ſtubborn, and deaf to advice, will neceſſarily plunge themſelves into difficulties, and bring themſelves both to want and ſhame, as the fruit of their own perverſeneſs; but he that regardeth reproof, is thankful for it, and wiſely attends to it, ſhall be honoured; all good men will commend his ſpirit, and he will have that better honour which cometh from God's approbation.

[o] Ver. 12.

19. [o] The deſire accompliſhed is ſweet to the ſoul: but it is abomination to the fools to depart from evil.

v. 19. The deſires of the gracious heart are after God, the ſenſe of his favour, and the experience of his grace; and ſweet are they to the ſoul when accompliſhed, as they aſſuredly will be: but the wicked reject theſe joys, and are deſtitute of theſe deſires, obſtinately adhering to their ſins, and hating the thought of parting with them.

† Heb. Broken.

20. He that walketh with wiſe men, ſhall be wiſe: but a companion of fools ſhall be † deſtroyed.

v. 20. A man may be known by his company, and it is of the laſt importance with whom we connect ourſelves. They who aſſociate with the wiſe, and thoſe who excel in virtue, will profit by their converſation, and be quickened by their example: but a companion of fools, who joins in their levities, and follows their vices, is in the high road to ruin, ruſhing on an untimely death, or worſe, into everlaſting deſtruction.

[p] Pſ. xxxii. 10. Acts xxviii. 4.

21. [p] Evil purſueth ſinners: but to the righteous, good ſhall be repayed.

v. 21. Sinners may flatter themſelves with impunity, but their damnation ſlumbereth not; cloſer than their ſhadow the curſe of ſin purſues them: but to the righteous, good ſhall be repayed, in return for all they have ſuffered for righteouſneſs ſake; a reward, not indeed of debt, but of grace.

[q] Job xxvii. 17. Chap. xxviii. 8. Eccleſ. ii. 26.

22. A good man leaveth an inheritance to his children's children: and [q] the wealth of the ſinner is laid up for the juſt.

v. 22. A good man, as in duty bound, is careful to make a proviſion for his family; and whilſt he leaves them withal the bleſſing of his prayers and piety, he thereby enſures to children's children the comfort and abiding poſſeſſion of his honeſt gains; whilſt the ſinner, however rich he grows, leaves a curſe in the entail of his abundance; and by God's righteous providence, the property is quickly transferred into the hands of the juſt, Exod. xii. 36.

[r] Chap. xii. 11.

23. [r] Much food is in the tillage of the poor: but there is that is deſtroyed for want of judgment.

v. 23. Diligence and induſtry will make a little much; the poor need not want if they will work: but when men are without prudence to manage, and activity to execute, a great eſtate is eaſily made away with; extravagance, careleſſneſs, and over-graſping, hath ruined multitudes; or there is that is deſtroyed through injuſtice, diſhoneſty being the ready way to beggary.

[s] Chap. xix. 18. & xxii. 15. & xxiii. 13. & xxix. 15, 17.

24. [s] He that ſpareth his rod, hateth his ſon: but he that loveth him chaſtneth him betimes.

v. 24. Parents, by ſparing the rod from their children, often make a rod for themſelves; and their fooliſh fondneſs is in truth the greateſt injury they can do them. Every child of Adam needs correction; there is that folly bound up in the heart, which nothing but this rod can let out, and the ſooner the better: the tendereſt twig is moſt eaſily bent. This is the beſt mark of real love to them; indulgence is only ſelfiſhneſs, pleaſing ourſelves to their ruin, which is in fact to hate them: only in the ſeverity of chaſtiſement, let no paſſion appear, but let it be ſeen to be the rod of love, leaſt we provoke their wrath, inſtead of curing their wickedneſs.

Before Christ 1000.

[t] Pſ. xxxiv. 10 & xxxvii. 3.

25. [t] The righteous eateth to the ſatisfying of his ſoul: but the belly of the wicked ſhall want.

v. 25. Godlineſs with contentment is great gain; this is the portion of the righteous. Whatever he hath, his ſoul is ſatisfied and thankful, and that is a continual feaſt; and the Lord takes care he ſhall want no manner of thing that is truly good for him; eſpecially he breaks the bread of life to his ſoul, filling his heart with this beſt food and gladneſs: but the belly of the wicked, inſatiate in their deſires, and extravagant in the abuſe of their plenty, ſhall want, indigent in the midſt of abundance, or reduced to the diſtreſſes of poverty; and as the prodigal ſon, there ſhall be none to pity or give unto them.

CHAP. XIV.

[a] Ruth iv. 11.

1. EVery wiſe woman [a] buildeth her houſe: but the fooliſh plucketh it down with her hands.

v. 1. The proſperity and comfort of every man's family depends on the choice of the woman he ſets at the head of it: a wiſe woman, by her prudence, œconomy, and diligent inſpection into her affairs, makes a little go far, lives in credit, and lays up for her children: but a fooliſh woman, extravagant, careleſs, pleaſure loving, ever abroad; viſiting, gaming, at public places, hath neither time, inclination, or underſtanding to look into her family affairs; and as the conſequence, waſte and want neceſſarily enſue, her huſband's credit, perhaps his heart, is broken under the remedileſs evil, and his family ruined.

[b] Job xii. 4.

2. He that walketh in his uprightneſs, feareth the LORD: but [b] he that is perverſe in his ways, deſpiſeth him.

v. 2. It is a ſure way of judging to mark men's ways, for by their fruits ye ſhall know them. It is evident, where the conduct is under the guidance of the divine word, there God's authority is revered, and his fear implanted in the heart; and as evident, that where the way is perverſe before God, and ſin indulged in oppoſition to his commands and threatnings, there all reſpect for his government is caſt off, and atheiſm practical, if not avowed, the temper.

[c] Chap. xii. 6.

3. In the mouth of the fooliſh is a rod of pride: but [c] the lips of the wiſe ſhall preſerve them.

v. 3. A proud, imperious, arrogant tongue is the evidence of a proud heart; and this rod, with which they ſo often ſmite others, will ſhortly break their own heads; provoked by their inſolence, ſome will be found who will take delight to chaſtiſe and mortify them; at leaſt in the end, the rod of pride will be broken: but the lips of the wiſe ſhall preſerve them from giving provocation to others, or being hurt by their perverſeneſs.

4. Where no oxen are, the crib is clean: but much increaſe is by the ſtrength of the ox.

v. 4. They who would have plenty, muſt be content with the dirt which labour makes: a clean crib may be nicer, but the ox with all his litter, is far more eligible. In a ſpiritual ſenſe, the want of miniſters in the goſpel, neceſſarily brings a famine of the word, and ſouls periſh for lack of knowledge: but where they labour in the word and doctrine, there ſouls are fed and nouriſhed up in the truth, and increaſe with the increaſe of God.

[d] Exod. xx. 16. & xxiii. 1. Chap. vi. 19. & xii. 17. Ver. 25.

5. [d] A faithful witneſs will not lie: but a falſe witneſs will utter lies.

v. 5. A faithful man will neither in common diſcourſe, or a court of juſtice, bear witneſs to an untruth: he makes conſcience of every word; whilſt the falſe and faithleſs, deſtitute of the fear of God, ſtick at nothing to carry their point, and without heſitation or ſhame, lie on.

[e] Chap. viii. 9. & xvii. 24.

6. A ſcorner ſeeketh wiſdom, but findeth it not: but [e] knowledge is eaſy unto him that underſtandeth.

v. 6. Many affect to be wiſe who ſcorn divine teaching, and take reaſon, inſtead of revelation, for their guide. No marvel therefore, that their reſearches are fruitleſs, and they never come to the knowledge of the truth; indeed it is impoſſible they ſhould, nothing being ſo oppoſite thereto, as that proud wiſdom that exalteth itſelf againſt God. But where there is an underſtanding enlightened by the divine grace, and guided by the divine word, as a lamp to the feet, there knowledge is eaſy, the myſteries unintelligible to the reaſon of the proud are open and obvious; and the doctrines which this world's wiſe men deem abſurd and irrational, appear the wiſdom of God, perfectly conſiſtent, and admirably diſpoſed to exalt his glory, to engage our dependance, and ſecure our obedience.

7. Go from the preſence of a fooliſh man, when thou perceiveſt not in him the lips of knowledge.

v. 7. It is wiſe to get out of their company, from whom we can learn no good; we may by buſineſs, and the duties of our ſtation, indeed be ſometimes called to be with thoſe, whoſe diſcourſe is diſagreeable: but when it becomes indecent, profane, or blaſphemous, we ſhould teſtify our abhorrence, by an immediate and abrupt departure.

8. The wiſdom of the prudent is to underſtand his way: but the folly of fools is deceit.

v. 8. Our wiſdom muſt appear by the management of our affairs; either in the way of our calling, ſhewing ourſelves maſters of our buſineſs; or in the way of our duty, by underſtanding the right path, and purſuing it: but the folly of fools is deceit, they conceit they are wiſe and knowing; and wrong as all their ways are, deceive themſelves to their ruin.

[f] Chap. x. 23.

9. [f] Fools make a mock at ſin: but among the righteous there is favour.

v. 9. Inſenſible of the evil, malignity, and danger of it, fools make a mock at ſin, hardening themſelves in iniquity, pleaſed with others wickedneſs, ſporting at the miſchief occaſioned by it, and turning off all the rebukes of the wiſe with a jeſt, or a laugh; but among the righteous there is favour, they dare not make light of ſin, but ſeek God's favour, and find it; and inſtead of making a jeſt at miſchief, deſire to ſhew all kindneſs and regard, both to men's bodies and ſouls.

† Heb. The bitterneſs of his ſoul.

10. The heart knoweth † his own bitterneſs; and a ſtranger doth not intermeddle with his joy.

v. 10. There is a bitterneſs none know but they who feel it: in worldly troubles, there are aggravations unknown to any but the ſufferer; and in the diſtreſſes of a troubled conſcience, an anguiſh which is heavier than our groaning. On the other hand, when God lifts up the light of his countenance, and heals the broken hearted with his conſolations, no joys are to compare with it: they are ſuch, as a ſtranger to divine light and love hath never taſted; they are unſpeakable, and full of glory.

11. The houſe of the wicked ſhall be overthrown: but the tabernacle of the upright ſhall flouriſh.

v. 11. Firm as the wicked thinks he builds, both for time and eternity, his foundation is on the ſand, and ruin will enſue. His earthly greatneſs ſhall be brought low, and his hopes of heaven quickly be exchanged for deſpair in hell: but the tabernacle of the upright, though it appeared weak and deſpicable, ſhall flouriſh, eſtabliſhed here under the divine bleſſing, and growing into an houſe eternal in the heavens.

[g] Chap. xvi. 25.

12. [g] There is a way which ſeemeth right unto a man; but the end thereof are the ways of death.

v. 12. Such is the way of the worldling, who heapeth up riches; the way of the lovers of pleaſure, who live in a round of indulgence; and eſpecially of the ſelf-righteous and rigid obſervers of outward forms, who affect great zeal for the rituals of religion, but are ſtrangers to the power of it: but all theſe paths tend alike to perdition, and the more ſanguine their hopes of happineſs, the more terrible will be their diſappointment in eternal miſery.

[h] Eccleſ. ii. 2. Luke xvi. 25.

13. Even in laughter the heart is ſorrowful; and [h] the end of that mirth is heavineſs.

v. 13. The countenance that ſmiles, often covers a heart that writhes with vexation, envy, and anguiſh. All are not happy that appear ſo; and particularly they who affect to laugh off their convictions, and are aſhamed to acknowledge what they feel, will pay dear for their reſiſtance againſt the Holy Ghoſt, either in bitter penitential tears, or what is worſe, the weepings and wailings of eternal deſpair.

[i] Chap. i. 31.

14. The backſlider in heart [i] ſhall be filled with his own ways: and a good man ſhall be ſatisfied from himſelf.

v. 14. Backſliding ariſes from an evil heart of unbelief; and though it iſſues not in apoſtacy, will be the cauſe of bittereſt anguiſh, when the ſenſe of baſe unfaithfulneſs ſhall fill the ſoul with ſharper remorſe than was even felt in the firſt pangs of the awakened conſcience. Whilſt a good man, who ſtands faſt, not moved away from the hope of the goſpel, ſhall be ſatisfied from himſelf, comforted in conſcious ſimplicity, and in the expectation of his eternal happineſs, the foretaſtes of which he feels begun.

15. The ſimple believeth every word: but the prudent man looketh well to his going.

v. 15. The credulous are eaſily impoſed upon, but in this lying world, ſuſpicion is needful. It is prudent to try before we truſt, and not be haſty in crediting men's profeſſions, or reports. We muſt look well to our way, if we would not err from the truth, for deceivers abound.

16. A wiſe man feareth, and departeth from evil; but the fool rageth and is confident.

v. 16. A wiſe man feareth to offend God, and departeth from evil, is upon his guard againſt temptation, and keeps at a diſtance from the appearance of evil; it is dangerous coming too near the fire: but the fool rages againſt rebuke, and confident of his ſafety, preſumptuouſly perſiſts in his rebellion, and ruſhes on his ruin.

17. He that is ſoon angry dealeth fooliſhly: and a man of wicked devices is hated.

v. 17. They who on every provocation fly out, and are eaſily heated with contradiction, ſhew their folly, and will uſually be the more teazed and laughed at in the world: but whilſt the warm expoſe themſelves to contempt, the wicked and malicious are the objects of hatred.

18. The ſimple inherit folly: but the prudent are crowned with knowledge.

v. 18. Folly is the natural inheritance of fallen man, and he delights in it: but the prudent are crowned with knowledge, they eſteem it their nobleſt ornament, and labour after higher attainments; or they crown knowledge, are a credit to their profeſſion, and an honour to the religion they profeſs.

19. [k] The evil bow before the good: and the wicked at the gates of the righteous.

[k] Iſa. lx. 14.

v. 19. It is thus ſometimes the caſe here below; but this will moſt eminently be fulfilled in the future day, when the abaſement of the wicked, and the exaltation of the righteous ſhall be compleat.

20. [l] The poor is hated even of his own neighbour: but † the rich hath many friends.

[l] Chap. xix. 7.

† Heb. Many are the lovers of the rich.

v. 20. This ſpeaks not what ought to be, but what is. No ſhame in the world like poverty; be but reduced to want, and your neareſt neighbour often will grow ſtrange; whilſt every one bows at the rich man's feet, and profeſſes friendſhip, where he hopes for advantage. Note, (1.) A true friend is a ſcarce commodity in this world. (2.) Chriſt never forſakes his choſen, he is a friend born for adverſity.

21. He that deſpiſeth his neighbour, ſinneth: but [m] he that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he.

[m] Pſ. xli. 1. & cxii. 9.

v. 21. It is an affliction to be poor, a greater to be deſpiſed for it; yet this is the world's way, and a very ſinful one it is. We ſhould learn a different leſſon; to be merciful and kind to the diſtreſſed, condeſcending, ready to every good office, which by our purſe, our counſel, or countenance, we can ſhew them: for happy is he, nothing is more truly its own reward, than ſuch a gracious ſpirit: the immediate ſatisfaction thence reſulting, is great, and the eternal bleſſedneſs which is in ſtore for ſuch, far greater.

22. Do they not err that deviſe evil? but mercy and truth ſhall be to them that deviſe good.

v. 22. Many think their craft ſhall iſſue to their comfort, but they greatly err; the evil they deviſe ſhall fall upon themſelves: but mercy and truth ſhall be to them that deviſe good, who make it their ſtudy and delight to be extenſively uſeful, and lay themſelves out to ſerve men's bodies and ſouls: the mercies they ſow, they ſhall reap; and a reward, not of debt indeed, but of grace, which the truth of God is engaged for, ſhall be given them.

23. In all labour there is profit: but the talk of the lips tendeth only to penury.

v. 23. They who would thrive, muſt take pains, and diligent induſtry ſcarce ever fails of being crowned with abundance; whilſt great talkers are uſually little doers, and they who boaſt moſt over their cups how much they are worth, and what they can get, ſeldom fail of coming to poverty. Thus it is alſo with the ſoul; the thriving chriſtian is ſilent and induſtrious, ſwift to hear, ſlow to ſpeak; whilſt talkative diſputers, are all tongue and no heart, mere ſounding braſs and tinkling cymbals.

24. The crown of the wiſe is their riches: but the fooliſhneſs of fools is folly.

v. 24. Riches, when under the management of a wiſe head, and gracious heart, become ornamental as a crown, and give us a longer field to be ſerviceable to the intereſts of religion and mankind; but the fooliſhneſs of fools is folly, no ſtate, no condition alters them: nay, the more of this world's wealth they have, they ſtand only on a higher pedeſtal, to have their folly and wickedneſs more notorious.

[n] Ver. 5.

25. [n] A true witneſs delivereth ſouls, but a deceitful witneſs ſpeaketh lies.

v. 25. A true witneſs delivers ſouls, boldly bearing teſtimony, when by falſe accuſations, his neighbour's life or property was in danger: but a deceitful witneſs, hardened in villainy, ſpeaketh lies; and when ſuch a one riſeth up, no man's life is ſafe. Thus it is with true miniſters and falſe; the one preach the free grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt, bear witneſs to the truth of the goſpel-promiſes, to ſave periſhing ſinners by faith only: the others ſet up the damnable doctrine of human works and righteouſneſs, to juſtify ſinners before God, to the ruin of immortal ſouls, who believe their lies.

[o] Chap. xiii. 14.

26. In the fear of the LORD is ſtrong confidence: and his children ſhall have a place of refuge. 27. [o] The fear of the LORD is the fountain of life, to depart from the ſnares of death.

v. 26, 27. The fear of God comprehends the ſubſtance of true godlineſs, and great is the bleſſedneſs thereof. (1.) It gives ſtrong confidence; for they who walk in God's fear, may be aſſured of his protection. (2.) In every day of trial, God's children have a ſure refuge from all the ſtorms of wrath, and the rage of earth and hell. (3.) This fear is a fountain of life, it is what brings preſent comfort and ſatisfaction to the ſoul, and will ſpring up to everlaſting life hereafter. (4.) All who are governed by it, depart from the ſnares of death; it keeps us from ſin with all its allurements, and thereby ſhields us from the ſufferings which are the wages of ſin. Lord, put this fear in my heart!

28. In the multitude of people is the king's honour: but in the want of people is the deſtruction of the prince.

v. 28. As numbers are the great ſecurity of a kingdom, it is the labour of every good king, by the mildneſs and equity of his adminiſtration, to encourage trade, manufactures, and agriculture; and the flouriſhing condition of his ſubjects redounds to his honour. Whilſt, where the government is rigorous, tyrannical, and arbitrary, property is inſecure, the ſpur to induſtry is loſt, the land uncultivated and deſerted, and the nation's forces weakened, leave it a prey to every invader.

† Heb. Short of ſpirit.

29. He that is ſlow to wrath is of great underſtanding: but he that is † haſty of ſpirit, exalteth folly.

v. 29. They ſhew great underſtanding who curb their paſſions, reſtrain their anger, continue undiſturbed under provocations, and in their patience poſſeſs their ſouls; but a man haſty of ſpirit, that fires in a moment, and in looks, words, or actions, betrays his anger, exalteth folly, the ſlave of his paſſion, and expoſing himſelf to contempt.

[p] Pſ. cxii. 10.

30. A ſound heart is the life of the fleſh: but [p] envy the rottenneſs of the bones.

v. 30. A ſound heart, right with God, and truly turned to him, or a healing heart, that ſeeks to compoſe all differences, or a light heart, good humoured and chearful, is the life of the fleſh, or fleſhes, contributes to our own and other's health and comfort; but envy the rottenneſs of the bones, it waſtes the body, preys upon the ſpirits, and brings men to be walking corpſes, before they go into the grave.

[q] Chap. xvii. 5. Mat. xxv. 40, 45.

31. [q] He that oppreſſeth the poor, reproacheth his maker: but he that honoureth him, hath mercy on the poor.

v. 31. God is the poor man's patron, and regards with indignation, every unkindneſs ſhewn them as an affront done to himſelf, who made them what they are. Whoever therefore means to honour God, muſt ſhew it in mercy to the poor; and the kindneſs done to them ſhall be rewarded by him, who is the friend of their friends, and the enemy of their enemies.

† Or for. [r] Job xiii. 15. & xix. 26. Pſ. xxiii. 4. 2 Cor. i. 9.

32. The wicked is driven away † in his wickedneſs: but [r] the righteous hath hope in his death.

v. 32. Death will make ſtrange alterations. The wicked, who lived thoughtleſs and careleſs, will be ſurpriſed thereby, and no gifts can bribe, no perſuaſions delay this executioner of judgment: he ſhall be driven away in his wickedneſs, in the midſt of his ſins; ſudden as the whirlwind, and terrible as the thunderbolt, ſhall the ſtorm of wrath overtake him; his ſtruggles are vain: reluctantly as he parts with earth, go he muſt; God's patience is at an end, the laſt hour is come: but the righteous hath hope in his death, a hope full of immortality, that enables him to riſe ſuperior to his fears, and count it his privilege to die: no longing, lingering looks are caſt behind on a world he is loath to part with, but gladly he quits a ſcene of ſorrow for eternal joys, a miſerable abode on earth for a manſion of glory, and weeping friends for congratulating angels.

[s] Chap. xii. 16. & xxix. 11.

33. Wiſdom reſteth in the heart of him that hath underſtanding: but [s] that which is in the midſt of fools is made known.

v. 33. In the deep receſſes of his heart, the wiſe man ſtores up divine knowledge and underſtanding, abidingly fixed on the purſuit, and making no oſtentation of his gains: but all that is in the fool's heart drops out at his mouth; he takes a pride in diſplaying the pittance he is poſſeſſed of, and by his vanity diſcovers his folly.

34. Righteouſneſs exalteth a nation: but ſin is a reproach to any people.

v. 34. Righteouſneſs exalteth a nation; either the profeſſion and practice of pure religion, which, ſecuring God's bleſſing, brings proſperity along with it; or the impartial adminiſtration of juſtice, which contributes greatly to national ſecurity and felicity; or the faithful obſervance of treaties with foreigners without, and honeſty and charity exerciſed by the fellow-ſubjects within: but ſin is a reproach to any people, it offends God, whoſe ſupport withdrawn, their own vices quickly ruin them, expoſe them for a prey, and render them deſpicable in the eyes of their neighbours.

[t] Mat. xxiv. 45—47.

35. [t] The king's favour is toward a wiſe ſervant: but his wrath is againſt him that cauſeth ſhame.

v. 35. When kings reign in wiſdom, real worth and merit, not favour and partiality, will be the road to diſtinction; the unqualified, the negligent, and the infamous, will be diſgraced; and under the marks of diſpleaſure driven from the Royal preſence. Happy the nation that finds ſuch a Monarch!

CHAP. XV.

[a] Chap. xxv.

1. [a] A Soft anſwer turneth away wrath: but grievous words ſtir up anger.

v. 1. It is wiſer when the ſtorm is high, to bend under it, than ſtiffly reſiſt it. A ſoft word will diſarm thoſe, that a ſharp reply would exaſperate.

[b] Ver. 28. Chap. xii. 23. & 13. 16.
† Heb. Belcheth, or bubbleth up.

2. The tongue of the wiſe uſeth knowledge aright: but [b] the mouth of fools † poureth out fooliſhneſs.

v. 2. The right uſe of knowledge is to communicate it for others' inſtruction, comfort, and edifying; and thus the tongue of the wiſe is employed: but the folly bound up in the heart of a fool, guſhes out at his lips as a fountain, offenſive to God, hurtful to others, and a reproach to himſelf.

[c] Job xxxiv. 21. Chap. v. 21. Jer. xvi. 17. & xxxii. 19. Heb. iv. 13.

3. [c] The eyes of the LORD are in every place, beholding the evil and the good.

v. 3. This is an awful truth, which ſhould be ever deep impreſſed on our minds, as the great means of deterring us from evil, and quickening us to duty. Shall we be aſhamed to ſin in the eye of the ſun, and not be more confounded to offend, when under that eye, which is brighter than ten thouſand ſuns?

† Heb. The healing of the tongue.

4. A † wholſome tongue is a tree of life: but perverſeneſs therein is a breach in the ſpirit.

Before Chriſt 1000.

v. 4. As a man's tongue is, he proves a bleſſing or a plague to ſociety. A wholſome tongue is a tree of life, pouring conſolation into the troubled conſcience, yielding inſtruction to the ignorant, healing the breaches among brethren, and ſoftening the exaſperated: but the very oppoſite is the tongue of perverſeneſs, whoſe paſſion, brutality, impurity, profaneneſs, falſehood, malicioufneſs, wound like the piercings of a ſword, making the hearts of many ſad, and bringing deſtruction on its poſſeſſor.

[d] Chap. x. 1. [e] Chap. xiii. 18. Ver. 31, 32.

5. [d] A fool deſpiſeth his father's inſtruction: [e] but he that regardeth reproof is prudent.

v. 5. Inattention to the inſtruction of ſuperiors, whether parents or miniſters, and diſregard of their reproofs, is egregious folly: but the wiſe ſon hearkeneth and ſubmits; for though reproofs may be bitter phyſic, they are neceſſary, and, when coming recommended by a father's love, are moſt thankfully to be received.

6. In the houſe of the righteous is much treaſure: but in the revenues of the wicked is trouble.

v. 6. When God ſees it good, even in this life, the righteous have an abundant portion; and whether they have little or much, it becomes a rich treaſure in the thankfulneſs and contentment with which they enjoy it: and what is better than all worldly wealth, their ſouls are ſtored with the riches of divine grace: but vexation and trouble embitter all the revenues of the wicked; they are got with anxiety, employed in the ſervice of ſin, enjoyed under a curſe, and tending to their ruin.

7. The lips of the wiſe diſperſe knowledge: but the heart of the fooliſh doth not ſo.

v. 7. Knowledge, like the light, ſhould be diſperſed, and a wiſe man will ſhine as the ſun, a univerſal bleſſing: not ſo the fool, his heart is darkneſs and his talk folly.

[f] Chap. xxi. 27. Iſa. i. 11. & lxi. 8. & lxvi. 3. Jer. vi. 20. & vii. 22. Am. v. 22.

8. [f] The ſacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the LORD: but the prayer of the upright is his delight.

v. 8. It is not the expenſiveneſs of the ſacrifice, but the ſpirit of the offerer which ſtamps its real value. The prayers and devotion of formality, and the moſt liberal almſgiving of thoſe who continue to ſerve ſin, and think this a kind of commutation, or depend on theſe ſervices as meritorious; God, ſo far from regarding, abhors them and their ſacrifices; whilſt the widow's mite, or the fervent prayer out of a pure heart, are his delight.

[g] Chap. xxi. 21. 1 Tim. vi. 11.

9. The way of the wicked is an abomination unto the LORD: but he loveth him [g] that followeth after righteouſneſs.

v. 9. Where the heart is naught, and the way perverſe before God, it were folly to think any ſacrifices can be pleaſing; they who would have their ſervices accepted, muſt firſt have their ſouls right with him; and where this is the labour and prayer, there his love will be placed.

† Or, inſtruction. [h] Chap. v. 12. & x. 17.

10. † Correction is grievous unto him that forſaketh the way: and [h] he that hateth reproof ſhall die.

v. 10. They who forſake God's ways, which they have once known, can leaſt bear reproof, and reſent every warning, however kindly given; and the caſe becomes deſperate when the only remedy is loathed and rejected, the patient then muſt infallibly die.

[i] Job xxvi. 6. Pſ. cxxxix. 8. [k] 2 Chron. vi. 30. Pſal. vii. 9. & xliv. 21. John ii. 24, 25. Acts i. 24.

11. [i] Hell and deſtruction are before the LORD: how much more then [k] the hearts of the children of men?

v. 11. Deep and univerſal is God's knowledge; the grave to him hath no covering, and hell itſelf is naked; the place of departed ſpirits, and the tophet of the damned are open to him; much more the hearts of the children of men, with the ſecrets of which he muſt be acquainted, and from him no darkneſs or ſhadow of death can hide the workers of iniquity. Let the guilty tremble! God ſees and minutes his every thought, word, and work.

[l] Am. v. 10.

12. A ſcorner [l] loveth not one that reproveth him: neither will he go unto the wiſe.

v. 12. A ſcorner hates reproof, or to reprove himſelf; to reflect upon his conduct, and take ſhame for his ſin: he thruſts out every uneaſy thought, ſilences the whiſpers of conſcience; and ſhuns the door of the wiſe, where he ſuſpects he ſhall meet the admonition he abhors.

Before Chriſt 1000.

[m] Chap. xvii. 22. [n] Ibid. xii. 25.

13. A merry heart maketh a chearful countenance: but [n] by ſorrow of the heart the ſpirit is broken.

v. 13. They have moſt abundant reaſon to ſhew a chearful countenance whoſe hearts are joyful in Chriſt Jeſus and his ſalvation. A down-caſt gloomy look ſavours more of ſuperſtition than piety, and is utterly unbecoming thoſe who are commanded to rejoice always: but where melancholy preys upon the ſpirits, it unfits us for both the duties of devotion and our ſtation, leavens all our comforts, makes us diſagreeable to others, and a burden to ourſelves.

14. The heart of him that hath underſtanding ſeeketh knowledge: but the mouth of fools feedeth on fooliſhneſs.

v. 14. The heart that hath taſted of true underſtanding, finds its appetite whetted by every freſh attainment; and that of this fountain it is always true, the deeper the ſweeter: but the fool, inſenſible of the bleſſings of wiſdom, hath no reliſh for any thing above the gratification of ſenſual appetite, and feedeth on theſe huſks.

[o] Chap. xvii. 22.

15. All the days of the afflicted are evil: but [o] he that is of a merry heart hath a continual feaſt.

v. 15. Vaſt is the difference between the eſtates of men below, ſome ſeem born for a ſucceſſion of miſeries, and go mourning all their days, naturally of a dejected ſpirit, and burdened with afflictions; others are bleſt with chearfulneſs of temper, and enjoy a continual feaſt, which no croſſes or loſſes are able to embitter, eſpecially where the true grace of God in the heart miniſters matter for abiding joy.

[p] Pſ. xxxvii. 16. Chap. xvi. 8. 1 Tim. vi. 6. [q] Chap. xvii. 1.

16. [p] Better is little with the fear of the LORD, than great treaſure, and trouble therewith. 17. [q] Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a ſtalled ox, and hatred therewith.

v. 16, 17. A man's happineſs conſiſts not in the abundance of the things he poſſeſſes, but in the temper with which he uſes them. A little with the fear of the Lord (and God's people expect no great things here) is better than great treaſure, and trouble therewith, the uſual attendant on wealth, which increaſes our cares, and multiplies our vexations: and a dinner of herbs, where love is, whether among our friends or in our own houſe, is better than a ſtalled ox, and hatred therewith: where love ſweetens the entertainment, coarſe fare will have a delicious reliſh; but where there is diſcontent, bickerings, diſpute, and, though doomed to dwell together, perſons have a hearty averſion to each other, there muſt be miſery in the midſt of plenty.

[r] Chap. xxvi. 21. & xxix. 22.

18. [r] A wrathful man ſtirreth up ſtrife: but he that is ſlow to anger appeaſeth ſtrife.

v. 18. A paſſionate man is ever in broils, quarrelſome himſelf, and unable to let others reſt in quiet: but a gentle ſpirit allays the warmth which was kindling, ſoothes the exaſperated, and ſoftens the obſtinate. A bleſſed ſpirit this!

[s] Chap. xxii. 5. † Heb. Raiſed up as a cauſey.

19. [s] The way of the ſlothful man is an hedge of thorns: but the way of the righteous is † made plain.

v. 19. The way of the ſlothful man is an hedge of thorns; in ſuch difficulties he involves himſelf by his idleneſs, or he fancies inſurmountable obſtacles in the way of his duty, and that the path of godlineſs is ſtrewed with briers and thorns, and therefore is diſcouraged from entering upon it: but the way of the righteous is made plain; he finds none of the difficulties the ſlothful ſuggeſt, the way of righteouſneſs is both plain and pleaſant.

[t] Chap. x. 1. & xxix. 3.

20. [t] A wiſe ſon maketh a glad father: but a fooliſh man deſpiſeth his mother.

v. 20. Nothing rejoices a parent's heart ſo much as to behold their children growing up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and as dutifulneſs and obedience is their wiſdom, ſo to deſpiſe their advice, act contrary to their commands, and refuſe their corrections, will be found as much their own ſhame and ſin, as their parent's grief.

[u] Chap. x. 23. † Heb. Void of heart.

21. [u] Folly is joy to him that is † deſtitute of wiſdom: but a man of underſtanding walketh uprightly.

v. 21. Sin is the delight of a fool; he boaſts of his own ſhame, and takes pleaſure in the iniquities of others: but where the ſpirit of wiſdom hath enlightned the underſtanding, there ſin is abhorred, and God's perfect word made the conſtant rule.

[x] Chap. xi. 14. & xx. 18.

22. [x] Without counſel, purpoſes are diſappointed: but in the multitude of counſellors they are eſtabliſhed.

v. 22. Raſh reſolves, without mature deliberation, or without ſecreſy, are uſually defeated. To ſucceed in our ſchemes they ſhould be well weighed, abler heads than our own conſulted, objections foreſeen, and difficulties obviated.

[y] Chap. xxv. 11.
† Heb. In his ſeaſon.

23. A man hath joy by the anſwer of his mouth: and [y] a word ſpoken † in due ſeaſon, how good is it?

v. 23. It is a credit and comfort to a man himſelf to have a ready and pertinent anſwer when his advice is aſked; and that word is doubly welcome and profitable, which, in time, circumſtance, and manner, is exactly ſuited to the ſtate of the hearer: here is the mind that hath wiſdom, in men in general, and in miniſters particularly, to know how to give to every one his portion in due ſeaſon.

[z] Phil. iii. 20. Col. iii. 1, 2.

24. [z] The way of life is above to the wiſe, that he may depart from hell beneath.

v. 24. The wiſe man looks above this periſhing world; he ſeeks a life more enduring than the paſſing days of time, to be enjoyed in glory through the ages of eternity; and that he may depart from hell beneath; whilſt ſinners are haſtening downward, his affections are aſcending in faith, love, and hope to God; and every day he grows nearer the eternal reſt, after which his ſoul aſpires.

[a] Chap. xii. 7. & xiv. 17.
[b] Pſ. lxviii. 5, 6. & cxlvi. 9.

25. [a] The LORD will deſtroy the houſe of the proud: but [b] he will eſtabliſh the border of the widow.

v. 25. Pride, men's capital ſin, will prove their ruin: God delights to abaſe ſuch, overturn the lofty fabricks their vanity reared, and ruin their families, whoſe grandeur they meant to eſtabliſh: but for the poor, the oppreſſed, and the widow, he will appear, protect them from injuries, avenge their wrongs, and eſtabliſh them in the earth. The church of God, though at preſent in its widowed ſtate, ſhall riſe ſhortly above the power of the enemy, and every proud antichriſtian foe be deſtroyed for ever.

[c] Chap. vi. 18.
† Heb. Words of pleaſantneſs.

26. [c] The thoughts of the wicked are an abomination to the LORD: but the words of the pure are † pleaſant words.

v. 26. Though thoughts are inviſible to us, yet God trieth the hearts, and ſees and abhors the imaginations of the wicked, which are only evil, and that continually: but the thoughts of the pure, being cleanſed by the inſpiration of his holy ſpirit, their words pleaſe him, they are edifying and acceptable, the fruit of the root of grace he hath implanted.

[d] Chap. xi. 29.

27. He that is greedy of gain, [d] troubleth his own houſe: but he that hateth gifts ſhall live.

v. 27. They who are in haſte to be rich, and with anxious and ceaſeleſs purſuit ſlave for the world, both weary themſelves, and plague and harraſs all around them; bringing withal the curſe of God upon their gains, that like the worm at Jonah's gourd, will cauſe it to wither: but he that hateth gifts, and for no advantage can be bribed to ſpeak a falſe word, or do a wrong thing, ſhall live; his comfort ſhall be ſecured, and his real intereſt be thereby advanced, for honeſty will in the end be found ever the beſt policy.

28. The heart of the righteous ſtudieth to anſwer: but the mouth of the wicked poureth out evil things.

v. 28. A good man takes heed to his words; knowing he muſt be accountable for them, he thinks before ſpeaks, and weighs a queſtion before he anſwers it: but the wicked, thoughtleſs of conſequences, lets go what is uppermoſt, and the evil of his heart guſhes forth as a fountain, without thought of the miſchief done to others, the diſhonour caſt on God, or the ruin he is bringing on himſelf.

[e] Pſ. xxxiv. 16.
[f] Ibid. cxlv. 18, 19.

29. [e] The LORD is far from the wicked: but [f] he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

v. 29. Though God be near the wicked, to ſeize them for vengeance, he is far from them reſpecting any favour or communion, and hears or grants none of their prayers, and ſhortly they will be eternally baniſhed from his preſence: but no prayer of the righteous is offered in vain; more ready to give than we to aſk, he is a ſure and preſent help to all that call upom him faithfully.

30. The ſight of the eyes rejoiceth the heart: and a good report maketh the bones fat.

v. 30. As the beautiful proſpect gladdens the eye and makes the heart gay, ſo doth good news enliven, and is heard with pleaſure: but the heart's greateſt joy is to behold a reconciled God in Chriſt, and the proſpect of eternal glory; and the beſt report is that which the goſpel brings, diffuſing preſent gladneſs in the ſoul, the foretaſte of eternal bliſs.

31. The ear that heareth the reproof of life abideth among the wiſe.

v. 31. The reproofs of life are thoſe which are drawn from the life-giving word, urged with affectionate warmth upon the conſcience, and tending to the ſpiritual and eternal life of thoſe who receive them; they that with attentive ear regard them, are in the way to be numbered with the wiſe.

† Or, correction.
‡ Or, obeyeth.
§ Heb. Poſſeſſeth an heart.

32. He that refuſeth † inſtruction, deſpiſeth his own ſoul: but he that ‡ heareth reproof, § getteth underſtanding.

v. 32. He that refuſeth inſtruction, or correction, whether from God, or thoſe ſet in authority over him, diſpiſeth his own ſoul; ſhows his ignorance of the value of it, and for the indulgences of the periſhing fleſh, wilfully deſtroys his ſpirit, which is immortal: but he that heareth reproof, and ſubmits to it, getteth underſtanding, and grows wiſer and better thereby.

[g] Chap. i. 7.
[h] Ibid. xviii. 12.

33. [g] The fear of the LORD is the inſtruction of wiſdom; and [h] before honour is humility.

v. 33. The fear of the Lord is the inſtruction of wiſdom, by it we are taught how to walk and pleaſe God; and before honour is humility; the lower we lie in our own eyes, the more certain and eminent will be our exaltation of God.

CHAP. XVI.

[a] Ver. 9. Chap. xix. 21. & xx. 24. Jer. x. 23.
† Or, diſpoſings.

1. [a] THE † preparations of the heart in man, and the anſwer of the tongue is from the LORD.

v. 1. All is from God; to think, ſpeak, or act aright is ſolely his gift, and without him we can do nothing to pleaſe him: or it may be rendered as a conceſſion, that though the preparations of the heart are in man, and he hath the marſhalling, as the word ſignifies, of his thoughts; yet, unleſs God gives him utterance, his memory will fail, his tongue heſitate, or his ſpeech be confounded.

[b] Chap. xxi. 2.

2. [b] All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes: but the LORD weigheth the ſpirits.

v. 2. We are too apt to be partial to ourſelves, and the ſelf-righteous eſpecially, ignorant of the perfection of God's law, are ready to think they can and do obey it, ſo as to obtain life thereby: but our ſelf-deceit will appear when God weighs us in the balances of his ſanctuary; he trieth the heart, and all the righteouſneſs in fallen man will be found utterly defective, both in principle and practice.

[c] Pſ. xxxvii. 5. & lv. 22. Mat. vi. 25. Luke xii. 22. Phil. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 7.
† Heb. Roll.

3. [c] † Commit thy works unto the LORD, and thy thoughts ſhall be eſtabliſhed.

v. 3. Whilſt we take the helm into our own hands, our affairs both of body and ſoul will be in a dangerous way, and ready each moment to ſuffer ſhipwreck; but all is ſafe when our care is caſt upon him, the ſtorm of anxiety then will be calmed, and our voyage to the ſhores of eternal reſt ſure to be ſafe and proſperous.

[d] Iſa. xliii. 7.
[e] Job xxi. 30. Rom. ix. 22.

4. [d] The LORD hath made all things for himſelf: [e] yea, even the wicked for the day of evil.

v. 4. The great Author of all deſigned in all his works to ſhew forth his own glory, nor ſhall the apoſtacy of angels, or the ſins of men, defeat his purpoſes; the creatures that glorify not the riches of his grace in their ſalvation, ſhall glorify the ſeverity of his juſtice and the greatneſs of his power in their damnation.

[f] Chap. vi. 17. & viii. 13.
[g] Ibid. xi. 21.

5. [f] Every one that is proud in heart, is an abomination to the LORD: though hand join in hand, he ſhall [g] not be unpuniſhed.

v. 5. Pride of heart, whether on worldly greatneſs, or conceit of our own excellence above other men, is God's abomination; nor let the ſtout-hearted be ſecure in their numbers, power, or policy; he is able to abaſe them, his truth hath engaged for it, his holineſs demands, and his power will execute upon them condign puniſhment.

Before Chriſt 1000.

h Dan. iv. 27. Luke xi. 41.
i Chap. iv. 16.

6. [h] By mercy and truth iniquity is purged; and [i] by the fear of the LORD men depart from evil.

v. 6. Two things man a ſinner needs from God: to be cleanſed from the guilt, to be delivered from the power of his ſins; and both are accompliſhed by the mercy of God in ſending his Son Chriſt Jeſus for a propitiation, and by his truth in fulfilling the promiſes of the everlaſting covenant iniquity is purged; and there is no condemnation lying againſt the believing ſoul, whilſt by the fear of the Lord, implanted in the heart, the power of evil is broken, and we are enabled to depart from the bondage of corruption.

7. When a man's ways pleaſe the LORD, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him.

v. 7. God hath in his hands the hearts of all men, and ſtrange changes he can effect, turning the bittereſt foes into the warmeſt friends; and thoſe who pleaſe him may ſafely truſt him; he will preſerve them, and gain them reſpect and favour from thoſe with whom they leaſt expected to find it.

k Pſ. xxxvii. 16. Chap. xv. 16.

8. [k] Better is a little with righteouſneſs, than great revenues without right.

v. 8. It is not abundance, but God's bleſſing, which can give us enjoyment of worldly goods. A little, got in an honeſt way, and uſed in a gracious manner, is better, does more good, gives more content, and will laſt longer, than great revenues without right, which are often ſquandered as profuſely as they were acquired unjuſtly, are embittered with wrath, and muſt be brought to a fearful account in the day of recompenſe.

l Ver. 1.
m Pſ. xxxvii. 23.

9. [l] A man's heart deviſeth his way: but [m] the LORD directeth his ſteps.

v. 9. As reaſonable creatures, but eſpecially as redeemed and renewed in the ſpirit of our minds, it becomes us to deviſe our way, and conſider how to walk and pleaſe God; but when we have done all, we muſt look above for ſtrength, ſeeing it is the Lord alone who can direct our ſteps; and when we depend on his grace, we may be aſſured he will guide us in the right way.

† Heb. Divination.

10. † A divine ſentence is in the lips of the king: his mouth tranſgreſſeth not in judgment.

v. 10. This is only literally true of the King of kings, the divine Meſſiah, but it ſpeaks what ſhould be the conduct of every ruler: A divine ſentence, or divination, ſhould be in their lips, their wiſdom ſhould be oracular, and their deciſions never influenced by paſſion or favour, but guided by the rule of the unerring truth of God.

n Lev. xix. 36. Chap. xi. 1.
† Heb. Stones.

11. [n] A juſt weight and balance are the LORD's: all the † weights of the bag are his work.

v. 11. In commercial dealings, and the adminiſtration of juſtice, God hath appointed a ſtandard of truth, by which every weight and meaſure muſt be tried, and every cauſe decided with impartiality; and though in this world the fraudulent practices of the wicked may paſs unnoticed, the day is coming when God will lay judgment to the line and righteouſneſs to the plummet.

o Chap. xxv. 5. & xxix. 14.

12. It is an abomination to kings to commit wickedneſs: for [o] the throne is eſtabliſhed by righteouſneſs.

v. 12. As kings are by their ſtation more exalted, they ſhould in piety be more exemplary, and ſhew their abhorrence of all wickedneſs, not only by abſtaining from the practice of it themſelves, but by diſcountenancing it in others; and this is much for the ſecurity of their throne, as under ſuch a government the ſubjects will pay ready obedience, and the bleſſing of God will be around them as a protection.

p Chap. xiv. 35. & xxii. 11.

13. [p] Righteous lips are the delight of kings: and they love him that ſpeaketh right.

v. 13. About courts ſincerity and truth are too rarely found; therefore value the more a faithful adviſer, and love thoſe beſt, not who make their approach with flatteries, but who ſpeak right, what is moſt conducive to the people's good, which is the monarch's trueſt glory.

q Chap. xix. 12. & xx. 2.

14. [q] The wrath of a king is as meſſengers of death, but a wiſe man will pacify it.

v. 14. In deſpotic governments, as thoſe are in the Eaſt, life and property are more immediately at the mercy of the king; a frown or an angry word were therefore as meſſengers of death: yet ſuch is the force of wiſdom and ſoft addreſs, that it can pacify even a tyrant's rage. See 1 Sam. xix. 6.

Before Chriſt 1000.

r Chap. xix. 12.
s Job xxix. 23. Pſ. lxxii. 6.

15. In the light of the king's countenance is life, and [r] his favour is [s] as a cloud of the latter rain.

v. 15. As fearful as is the wrath, ſo deſirable is the favour of a king; if he ſmiles graciouſly on thoſe who have offended him, it is as life given to the dying malefactor, and his favour ſhowers down honour and affluence, as the cloud of the latter rain covered the land with plenty: but if ſo terrible the wrath, ſo deſirable the favour of a dying worm like ourſelves, how much more to be feared is the King of kings, whoſe wrath extends to body and ſoul in hell? and much more eagerly to be ſought the light of his countenance, which enſures all bleſſings to us in time and eternity!

t Chap. viii. 11, 19.

16. [t] How much better is it to get wiſdom than gold? and to get underſtanding, rather to be choſen than ſilver?

v. 16. Chriſt and his grace are the invaluable treaſures; get them, you get all; compared with this, gold is as droſs, and ſilver as dung; yet few there are who do not prefer gold to godlineſs, and riches on earth to treaſures in heaven. Amazing folly! In eternity at leaſt men will be undeceived.

17. The high-way of the upright is to depart from evil: he that keepeth his way, preſerveth his ſoul.

v. 17. The highway of holineſs is the path of the upright, and whilſt they keep in this road, the ſaints of old have trod, they depart from evil, neither fall into the evil of ſin, nor provoke the evil of puniſhment; but perſevering ſteadily, through Divine grace, in this ſtrait road, they preſerve their ſouls from the pollutions of the world, from the paths of the deſtroyer, and for the eternal enjoyment of God. In this way may my ſoul be kept a follower of thoſe who now, through faith and patience, inherit the promiſes.

u Chap. xi. 2. & xvii. 19. & xviii. 12.

18. [u] Pride goeth before deſtruction, and an haughty ſpirit before a fall.

v. 18. The proud are often too high for the arm of fleſh to humble, but the arm of Omnipotence ſhall ſeize them; God delights in humbling the lofty looks of man, and when moſt elated arrogance hurls him down the precipice of deſtruction, Dan. iv. 30, 31. Are we by grace exalted? let us fear to abuſe God's gifts to vain glorying, it will be the ſure prelude of ſome mortifying fall.

19. Better it is to be of an humble ſpirit with the lowly, than to divide the ſpoil with the proud.

v. 19. The world looks down in general on the meek as mean, and on the lowly as deſpicable; yet their ſtate is to be envied. Better it is to be of an humble ſpirit with the lowly; content in our ſtation, ſubmiſſive to God's will, deſiring not high things, but ſeeking to be diligent followers of the humble Jeſus; this will afford us a more ſolid ſatisfaction now, and be infinitely more happy for us hereafter, than to divide the ſpoil of oppreſſion, or worldly gain and preferment, with the proud, who are ever graſping after theſe, and prize them as their chief good.

† Or, underſtandeth.
x Pſ. ii. 12. & xxxiv. 8. & cxxv. 1. Iſa. xxx. 18. Jer. xvii. 7.

20. He that † handleth a matter wiſely, ſhall find good: and [x] whoſo truſteth in the LORD, happy is he.

v. 20. They who ſpeak, write, or act with acuteneſs and wiſdom, find good, are eſteemed, and ſucceſsful in their undertakings: and whoſo truſteth in the Lord, renouncing his own wiſdom, righteouſneſs, and ſtrength, and depending on Chriſt alone, happy is he in the preſent ſupport and comfort he experiences, and in the glorious hopes which are before him.

21. The wiſe in heart ſhall be called prudent, and the ſweetneſs of the lips increaſeth learning.

v. 21. The wiſe in heart, deep read in the knowledge of themſelves, the myſteries of grace, and experimental acquaintance with the word of God, ſhall be called prudent; all who converſe with them will reſpect and reverence them; and the ſweetneſs of the lips, that, with pleaſing elocution, and clearneſs of expreſſion, communicate inſtruction, increaſeth learning, their diſciples improve faſt under their tuition.

y Chap. xiii. 14. & xiv. 27.

22. [y] Underſtanding is a well-ſpring of life unto him that hath it; but the inſtruction of fools is folly.

v. 22. Underſtanding, to know Chriſt Jeſus and his ſalvation, is a well-ſpring of life: from this fountain ſtreams of wiſdom flow continually, and the poſſeſſor of it hath in himſelf the beginning and earneſt of life eternal; but from a fool nothing can be got; when he pretends to read lectures of wiſdom he but expoſes his own emptineſs.

† Heb. Maketh wiſe.
z Pſ. cxix. 103.
a Pſ. li. 8.

23. The heart of the wiſe † teacheth his mouth, and addeth learning to his lips. 24. Pleaſant words are as an honey-comb, [z] ſweet to the ſoul, [a] and health to the bones.

v. 23, 24. A ſweet elocution was before commended; but without wiſdom in the heart it would be but as a pleaſant ſong: this gives weight to the diſcourſe, and ſolidity to the reaſoning; and thus it becomes profitable as pleaſing, ſweet to the ſoul as the honey-comb, and nouriſhing as marrow to the bones.

b Chap. xiv. 12.

25. [b] There is a way that ſeemeth right to a man: but the end thereof are the ways of death.

v. 25. When the deluſion is in its nature ſo dangerous, and withal ſo common, repeated warnings are the more needful, chap. xiv. 12. The word of God is the only touchſtone, and diligent ſelf-examination to be daily made: the moſt take up with the form of godlineſs, ſit down content with their religion, as they call it, though ſtrangers to the grace of God in truth, having never experienced a change of heart, or been born again of the ſpirit. Reader, is the caſe thine own, conſider well the warning; thou mayſt have a good opinion of thyſelf, and the world admire thee as the beſt ſort of perſon in it, and yet thou mayſt be in the path of death and hell.

† Heb. Boweth unto him.

26. He that laboureth, laboureth for himſelf; for his mouth † craveth it of him.

v. 26. Nature is craving; we muſt work, that we may eat; but the wants of our ſouls are more urgent than thoſe of our bodies, and need be more attended to; our miſery and folly is, that acutely as we feel the one, we are too inſenſible to the other, and whilſt we labour enough, perhaps too much, for the meat which periſheth, we uſe no pains to obtain that which endureth unto life eternal.

† Heb. A man of Belial.
c Chap. vi. 14, 19. & xv. 18. & xxvi. 21. & xxix. 22.
‡ Heb. Sendeth forth.
d Chap. xvii. 9.

27. † An ungodly man diggeth up evil: and in his lips there is as a burning fire. 28. [c] A froward man ‡ ſoweth ſtrife, and [d] a whiſperer ſeparateth chief friends.

v. 27, 28. The wicked reſt not except they have done miſchief. An ungodly man diggeth up evil as if it was his treaſure, prying into men's characters in order to find ſome ground for calumny, and inſinuating ſome malicious ſuggeſtion to their prejudice: and in his lips there is as a burning fire, kindled from hell, and with lies and ſlander devouring around. Froward himſelf, he envys others the peace and comfort they enjoy, and fain would interrupt it by ſowing ſeeds of ſtrife, whiſpering things to their prejudice, and going between friends with ill-natured and miſrepreſented ſtories, to create ſuſpicions, cool their affections, and exaſperate them againſt each other. A dire proof of the deſperate wickedneſs of man's nature, that ſuch a character ſhould exiſt.

e Chap. i. 10, &c.

29. A violent man [e] enticeth his neighbour, and leadeth him into the way that is not good. 30. He ſhutteth his eyes to deviſe froward things: moving his lips he bringeth evil to paſs.

v. 29. 30. Men often do the devil's work, and turn tempters to each other. A violent man, reſtleſs to carry his point, enticeth his neighbour with fair ſpeeches, promiſing him I know not what pleaſure and advantage, and undertaking to be his guide, leads him into the way that is not good, the way of ſin and ruin. He ſhutteth his eyes againſt the light of truth, or to avoid interruption from any object, whilſt he ſets himſelf to deviſe froward things, how he may execute his diabolical deſigns; then moving his lips in ſome flattering diſcourſe, or as a ſignal to his accomplices, he bringeth evil to paſs, ſeducing men to ſin, or plaguing them with ſome miſchief and vexation.

f Chap. xx. 29.

31. [f] The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteouſneſs.

v. 31. Thoſe locks are venerable indeed that are grown old in virtue's ſchool; ſuch aged diſciples are well-honoured as fathers, and heard as oracles, and their ſilver hairs are ready to receive that crown of glory which fadeth not away.

g Chap. xix. 11.

32. [g] He that is ſlow to anger, is better than the mighty: and he that ruleth his ſpirit, than he that taketh a city.

v. 32. The greateſt conqueſt is to ſubdue ourſelves; though we held a captive world under our feet, if our paſſions reigned we ſhould ſtill be ſlaves at home; to ſubdue theſe, our labours and prayers therefore muſt be directed. Anger is among our moſt beſetting ſins; againſt this therefore we are called to ſtruggle, to rule our ſpirit, to be ſlow to wrath, amidſt every provocation; and if we feel the riſing warmth, to repreſs it; firſt emotions. In patience thus to poſſeſs our ſouls, is to be truly greater than if nations were led in chains behind our triumphal car.

33. The lot is caſt into the lap: but the whole diſpoſing thereof is of the LORD.

v. 33. Events to us are fortuitous as the lot; but to God all are known, all decreed, and nothing happens but according to his eternal counſels: if therefore on ſolemn occaſions, with a view to Divine direction, ſee 1 Sam. xiv. 41. Acts i. 24. an appeal be thus made to God, it becomes us to ſubmit to his diſpoſal, and in all the diſpenſations of his providence to acknowledge his hand, and refer ourſelves entirely to his ſovereign will and pleaſure. O for ſuch a ſpirit at all times!

CHAP. XVII.

a Chap. xv. 17.
† Or, good cheer.

1. [a] BETTER is a dry morſel, and quietneſs therewith, than a houſe full of † ſacrifices with ſtrife.

v. 1. The great ſecret of family comfort is to live in love and peace, then a dry cruſt is ſweet, a cottage a palace; and every meal a feaſt. But ſtrife embitters all our enjoyments, and a houſe full of ſacrifices affords no delight where mutual diſguſt and diſcord reign.

b Chap. x. 5. & xix. 26.

2. A wiſe ſervant ſhall have rule over [b] a ſon that cauſeth ſhame: and ſhall have part of the inheritance among the brethren.

v. 2. It is not birth but wiſdom which makes the nobleſt diſtinction. A wiſe ſervant will be made tutor over a fooliſh ſon, and, as the reward of his fidelity, be adopted, to receive an inheritance among the brethren.

c Pſ. xxvi. 2. Chap. xxvii. 21. Jer. xvii. 10. Mal. iii. 3.

3. [c] The fining-pot is for ſilver, and the furnace for gold: but the LORD trieth the hearts.

v. 3. God is the only ſearcher of hearts, and he is pleaſed to prove his people in the furnace of affliction: as gold and ſilver are tried and purified in the fire, he proves and refines them from the droſs of corruption.

4. A wicked doer giveth heed to falſe lips: and a liar giveth ear to a naughty tongue.

v. 4. A wicked man bent on miſchief is glad to catch at every thing which can further his deſigns; his ears are open to any falſe ſtory, and he is pleaſed to hear and propagate the lies of others, as well as invent falſhoods himſelf.

d Chap. xiv. 31.
e Job xxxi. 29.
† Heb. Held innocent.

5. [d] Whoſo mocketh the poor, reproacheth his Maker: and [e] he that is glad at calamities, ſhall not be † unpuniſhed.

v. 5. It is a reflection upon God to mock the poor, and inſult him becauſe of his indigence: ſeeing this is the condition God hath been pleaſed to allot him, and he, as the poor man's friend, will be the avenger of his wrongs: as wicked alſo is it to ſport with the calamities of others, and take pleaſure in their fall. Such a malignant ſpirit ſhall not be unpuniſhed.

f Pſ. cxxvii. 3. & cxxviii. 3.

6. [f] Childrens children are the crown of old men; and the glory of children are their fathers.

v. 6. It is a ſingular bleſſing ſhown to old men, to ſee their childrens children; and twice fathers, they are often doubly fond of them, eſpecially when their gracious diſpoſitions render them amiable; and reciprocally as children to parents, ſo are godly parents the glory of their children, ſpared to watch over them, inſtruct and guide them; and a good child, ſo far from wiſhing their removal to enjoy their eſtate, thinks it the greateſt bleſſing, that God is pleaſed to continue them ſo long, and makes it his ſtudy and delight to requite them in filial duty and affection for all their parental care.

† Heb. A lip of excellency.

7. † Excellent ſpeech becometh not a fool: much leſs do lying lips a prince.

v. 7. If a wicked man affects to ſpeak excellently on divine ſubjects, his life gives the lie to his doctrine; and if a fool pretends to make a fine harangue, it is abſurd, ſeeing his underſtanding is defective: as therefore theſe things are unſuitable, much more are lying lips unbecoming a prince, or a great man, whoſe truth and integrity ſhould be an example for inferiors to imitate.

g Chap. xviii. 16. & xix. 6.
† Heb. A ſtone of grace.

8. [g] A gift is as † a precious ſtone in the eyes of him that hath it: whitherſoever it turneth, it proſpereth.

v. 8. Riches are the grand idol; men value them as their greateſt ornament; they ſparkle in their eyes like the diamond; and to this mammon they expect every knee ſhould bow; nor expect in vain, for few are found proof againſt its dazzling charms: for this, conſcience, honour, juſtice, are too often bartered; and they who can bid up to the price are generally ſure to ſucceed. Such is this wicked mercenary world.

h Chap. x. 12.
† Or, procureth.
i Chap. xvi. 28.

9. [h] He that covereth a tranſgreſſion, † ſeeketh love: but [i] he that repeateth a matter, ſeparateth very friends.

v. 9. Mutual forbearance is the only way to preſerve the union of friendſhip inviolate: we are corrupted creatures, the beſt have much to be borne with; it is the great ſecret of happineſs, and the exerciſe of true love, to cover tranſgreſſion, over look it, excuſe it to others, become apoligiſts for the offences given ourſelves, and never repeat what might breed variance, for by ſuch vile tale-bearing the deareſt friends have been ſeparated.

† Or, aweth a wiſe man more than than to ſtrike a fool a hundred times.

10. A reproof † entreth more into a wiſe man, than an hundred ſtripes into a fool.

v. 10. A word, a hint, a look, is more effectual to awaken the conſcience of a good man, or warn him of his danger, than the ſevereſt afflictions are to the impenitent ſinner. Thou art the man, pierced David's heart, whilſt, after all the plagues of Egypt, Pharoah continued but the more hardened.

11. An evil man ſeeketh only rebellion: therefore a cruel meſſenger ſhall be ſent againſt him.

v. 11. Sin is rebellion againſt God, and that the evil man ſeeks continually; or rebellion, the rebellious man ſeeketh only evil; how to overturn the government, and execute his traiterous deſigns: therefore a cruel meſſenger ſhall be ſent unto him; when his conſpiracy againſt the peace of the kingdom being diſcovered, he is ſeized and executed: or for his ſin againſt God, death, the meſſenger of evil, drags him to the priſon of the grave, and delivers him over to Satan, the tormentor to execute God's wrath on body and ſoul in hell.

12. Let a bear robbed of her whelps meet a man, rather than a fool in his folly.

v. 12. The wrath of a fool is violent and brutiſh, and when rouſed, a bear robbed of her whelps is not ſo dangerous, for the firſt object he meets becomes the unhappy victim of his paſſion, whether it be friend or foe. From ſuch men's company withdraw thyſelf.

k Rom. xii. 17. 1 Theſ. v. 15. 1 Pet. iii. 9.

13. [k] Whoſo rewardeth evil for good, evil ſhall not depart from his houſe.

v. 13. Ingratitude God abhors, and though human laws cannot puniſh it, he will, in the entail of his curſe on the family of ſuch baſe ungenerous ſouls.

l Chap. xx. 3.

14. The beginning of ſtrife is as when one letteth out water: therefore [l] leave off contention before it be meddled with.

v. 14. The leaſt aperture in the river's bank widens with every drop that paſſeth, till the mound is thrown down, and the country deluged: ſuch is the beginning of ſtrife; one warm word brings on another, and every reply exaſperates the more: it is wiſdom therefore to ſtop the ſmalleſt breach, and check the firſt riſings of anger, before paſſion gets head, and reſiſtance is vain.

m Ex. xxiii. 7. Chap. xxiv. 24. Iſa. v. 23.

15. [m] He that juſtifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the juſt; even they both are abomination to the LORD.

v. 15. Two abominations are here rebuked. [1.] Juſtifying the wicked, either by abſolving them through bribes or corrupt influence from the charges proved in court againſt them, or by pleading for the harmleſsneſs of ſin, and ſeeking for arguments to vindicate iniquity. [2.] Condemning the juſt, either by an oppreſſive ſentence, under the formalities of juſtice, or by laying to his charge, and cenſuring him for, things of which he is utterly innocent. Of ſuch wrongs God will be the avenger.

16. Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a fool to get wiſdom, ſeeing he hath no heart to it.

v. 16. Myſterious are God's diſpenſations; we may now wonder at them, but they will be all at laſt unfolded: he gives to the fool, the wicked, a price to get wiſdom, natural abilities, worldly ſubſtance to procure inſtructors, and opportunity ſufficient to learn his good ways; but he hath no heart to it, chuſing rather to ſpend his time and talents in the ſervice of his luſts, than in the ſchool of wiſdom, in the word of God, and attending the miniſters of his goſpel: if we aſk wherefore God is ſo good to give them advantages he knows they will abuſe, the anſwer is, thou knoweſt not now, but thou ſhalt know hereafter.

n Chap. xviii. 24.
o Eſth. iv. 14.

17. [n] A friend loveth at all times, and a brother is born [o] for adverſity.

v. 17. A true friend is rare to be found; advantage, intereſt, ſelfiſhneſs, or caprice, are the general bands of worldly friendſhip: no wonder therefore they are ſo eaſily looſed by adverſity, a peak, or mere humour: but a true friend loveth at all times, and diſtreſs or unkindneſs warps not his affections, and a brother, where the bonds of blood ſtrengthen the bond of friendſhip, is born for adverſity; then his warm regard has eſpecial opportunity of being diſplayed: and emphatically is this ſcripture fulfilled in Jeſus the friend of ſinners.

p Chap. vi. 1. & xi. 15.

18. [p] A man void of underſtanding ſtriketh hands, and becometh ſurety in the preſence of his friend.

v. 18. Friendſhip hath bounds; to aſſiſt a friend in diſtreſs is duty; to ruin ourſelves and family by raſh ſuretyſhip is folly and injuſtice. A man void of underſtanding ſtriketh hands, and becometh ſurety in the preſence of his friend; which implies that he is not worthy of credit, but ſuſpected of inſolvency or knavery; and therefore we need be cautious in ſuch a caſe how we involve ourſelves, leaſt we ſmart for it.

q Chap. xvi. 18.

19. He loveth tranſgreſſion, that loveth ſtrife: and [q] he that exalteth his gate, ſeeketh deſtruction.

v. 19. A quarrelſome ſpirit loves to be in ſtrife, flying to the law for every trifling offence, captious in company, and delighting in diſpute: much ſin is hereby committed. And he that exalteth his gate, in proud and arrogant ſpeeches, or builds magnificent palaces to outvie his neighbours, ſeeketh deſtruction; ſuch pride God will abaſe, and his enormous expences will be the ruin of his fortune.

† Heb. The froward of heart.

20. † He that hath a froward heart, findeth no good: and he that hath a perverſe tongue, falleth into miſchief.

v. 20. By miſchief nothing is got; they who hope to make their advantage of it will be diſappointed; God's favour, and the regard of all good men, will be loſt thereby: and a perverſe tongue, falſe, deceitful, and not conſiſtent with itſelf, will prove the ruin of its owner.

r Chap. x. 1. Ver. 25.

21. [r] He that begetteth a fool, doth it to his ſorrow: and the father of a fool hath no joy.

v. 21. Children at their birth are the joy of their parents; but they need rejoice with trembling, the day may come when they may wiſh they had never been born, for wicked children are their parents greateſt plague, and their ill conduct embitters all their other comforts. How grievous a caſe! Let children be aſhamed of ſuch ingratitude, and tremble at the thought of giving their aged parents ſuch cauſe of ſorrow.

s Chap. xv. 13, 15. & xii. 25.
t Pſ. xxii. 15.

22. [s] A merry heart doth good like a medicine: [t] but a broken ſpirit drieth the bones.

v. 22. Not ſenſual mirth, but ſpiritual joy is here meant; naturally indeed ſome are more chearful than others, and this is a bleſſing, and contributes to a man's eaſe and health; but that which is the beſt medicine, the richeſt cordial, is the ſenſe of the Divine love making glad the heart; whilſt a broken ſpirit, pierced with a ſenſe of wrath, or ſunk under afflictions, emaciates the body with grief, and dries up the very marrow of the bones.

23. A wicked man taketh a gift out of the boſom to pervert the ways of judgment.

v. 23. Both he that gives and he that takes bribes are alike evil; if it be done never ſo ſecretly God ſeeth; and though now the ways of juſtice be perverted by falſe witneſſes, or partial judges, every cauſe will have a rehearing, when judgment will be adminiſtred according to truth.

u Chap. xiv. 6. Eccleſ. ii. 14. & viii. 1.

24. [u] Wiſdom is before him that hath underſtanding: but the eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth.

v. 24. The wiſe man keeps the book of God, as the pilot his compaſs, ever in his eye; and Chriſt, his polar ſtar, guides all his motions: but the fool lives at large, his eyes are in the ends of the earth, unſettled, without rudder or compaſs, toſſed to and fro, and wandering about as the various paſſions of his heart drive him.

[x] Chap. x. 1. & xv. 20. & xix. 13. Ver. 21.

25. [x] A fooliſh ſon is a grief to his father, and bitterneſs to her that bare him.

v. 25. This is an unhappy, though too common caſe; and much is that parent to be pitied, much that child to be condemned, that gives occaſion for ſuch grief and bitterneſs to thoſe, whoſe tenderneſs and care to him deſerved far other returns.

[y] Chap. xviii. 5.

26. Alſo [y] to puniſh the juſt is not good, nor to ſtrike princes for equity.

v. 26. Magiſtrates muſt beware that they abuſe not their power, nor employ that to oppreſs the juſt, which ſhould be exerted for their protection. And let not ſubjects murmur or rebel againſt their rulers. Though they were evil, it were their duty to ſuffer and ſubmit; and how much more criminal to reſiſt them when they govern in righteouſneſs, and to quarrel with them as ſevere, becauſe they impartially execute juſtice on offenders.

[z] Jam. i. 19.
† Or, cool.

27. [z] He that hath knowledge ſpareth his words: and a man of underſtanding is of an † excellent ſpirit.

v. 27. The wiſe think much, and ſpeak little, at leaſt not in an oſtentatious way; or, he reſtrains his words from raſh or angry ſpeeches, and herein he proves himſelf of an excellent ſpirit, is highly to be valued, and ſhews the goodneſs and underſtanding of his heart; or of a cool ſpirit, as in the margin, not eaſily provoked, able to curb his anger, and, even under provocation, compoſed and ſedate.

[a] Job xiii. 5.

28. [a] Even a fool when he holdeth his peace, is counted wiſe: and he that ſhutteth his lips is eſteemed a man of underſtanding.

v. 28. Silence is a mark of wiſdom; even a fool, whilſt he holds his peace, gains the reputation of being wiſe; and, till he ſpeaks, the defects of his underſtanding are covered; but it is the ſummit of his folly, that he hath not the ſenſe to hold his tongue.

CHAP. XVIII.

† Or, He that ſeparateth himſelf, ſeeketh according to his deſire, and intermeddleth in every buſineſs. Jude 19.

1. † THrough deſire a man having ſeparated himſelf, ſeeketh and intermeddleth with all wiſdom.

v. 1. This may be interpreted in a bad ſenſe, as deſcriptive of a conceited perſon, who affects ſingularity, and the ſhew of univerſal learning; forward in every company to advance his own opinions: or, in a good ſenſe, it may reſpect the man who, ardent in his thirſt for knowledge, ſeparates himſelf from all other avocations, that he may be at leiſure to give himſelf up to the ſtudy of univerſal wiſdom.

2. A fool hath no delight in underſtanding, but that his heart may diſcover itſelf.

v 2. All the little pains a fool is driven to take, is not thro' the love of wiſdom, for that he hath no delight in; but merely to be able to make a parade of it, and appear knowing. Thus a hypocrite in religion takes no real pleaſure in communion with God in prayer, or the ſcriptures: all his labour is by fair ſpeeches to keep up a creditable profeſſion.

3. When the wicked cometh, then cometh alſo contempt, and with ignominy reproach.

v. 3. Either the ſenſe is, That when the wicked hath advanced far in evil, he begins to ſcoff at and contemn the glorious truths of God, and treats its profeſſors with ignominy and reproach: or, That the wicked themſelves are contemptible and vile in the eyes of God and of all good men; are a reproach to their families and friends, and will ſhortly awake to everlaſting ſhame and contempt.

[a] Chap. x. 11. & xx. 5.
[b] Pſ. lxxviii. 2.

4. [a] The words of a man's mouth are as deep waters, and [b] the well-ſpring of wiſdom as a flowing brook.

v. 4. A wiſe man's heart is full of wiſdom; his words, as deep waters, flow ſilently, and cannot be eaſily fathomed when he ſpeaks the deep things of God; and as a flowing brook from the good reſervoir within, he is ever ſending forth thoſe ſtreams of inſtruction, which are refreſhing, quickening, and conducive to the fruitfulneſs of all around him.

[c] Lev. xix. 15. Deut. i. 17. & xvi. 19. Chap. xxiv. 23.

5. [c] It is not good to accept the perſon of the wicked, to overthrow the righteous in judgment.

v. 5. It is exceeding great wickedneſs to pervert juſtice, and, through favour or intereſt, to connive at, and acquit the wicked; or to give the cauſe againſt a righteous man, through prejudice, reſpect of perſons, party, or partiality. Woe to ſuch unjuſt judges!

[d] Chap. x. 14. & xii. 13. & xiii. 3. Eccleſ x. 12.

6. A fool's lips enter into contention, and his mouth calleth for ſtrokes. 7. [d] A fool's mouth is his deſtruction, and his lips are the ſnare of his ſoul.

v. 6, 7. To meddle in other people's quarrels, or by idle and inſolent prating to give provocation, is the height of folly; and they who do ſo will ſmart for it with many a hard blow. Caught in his own contradictions, a fool often here ruins himſelf, and eternal deſtruction aſſuredly awaits him.

[e] Chap. xii. 18. & xxvi. 22.
† Heb. Chambers.

8. [e] The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds, and they go down into the † innermoſt parts of the belly.

v. 8. Vile and deteſtable is the character of the tale-bearer. His words are as wounds, mortal and incurable, ſinking into the heart, and rankling there: or, as of thoſe that are wounded; pretending to be bitterly affected with what they repreſent, and that it gives them pain to be obliged to mention it: or, as cruſts greedily ſwallowed by a hungry man; ſo eagerly heard, and ſo incorporating with us as our food.

9. He alſo that is ſlothful in his work, is brother to him that is a great waſter.

v. 9. Idleneſs and prodigality are near allied, and the effects the ſame, iſſuing in the ruin of the ſlothful and extravagant. Thus negligence about the ſoul is as fatal as open and avowed ungodlineſs. He that will not pray, muſt periſh, as ſurely as the profane.

[f] 2 Sam. xxii. 51. Pſ. xviii. 2. & xxvii. 1. & xci. 2. & cxliv. 2.
† Heb. Is ſet aloft.

10. [f] The name of the LORD is a ſtrong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and † is ſafe.

v. 10. The name of the Lord includes all his perfections, by which he makes himſelf known to us; and all who fly to him through Chriſt, by whom alone he is approachable, as their ſtrong tower, will find deliverance from the power of evil. Whatever enemies attack, or dangers threaten, his almighty power, his unchangeable faithfulneſs, his infinite love, will be their ſupport, ſtability, and comfort. No guilt can condemn, no corruption enſlave, no wrath overtake, no fear diſmay them: they are ſafe, eternally ſafe, leaning on his everlaſting arms. My ſoul, ſeek this ſure refuge.

[g] Chap. x. 15.

11. [g] The rich man's wealth is his ſtrong city, and as an high wall in his own conceit.

v. 11. How poor and wretched a defence is the rich man's wealth, compared with the righteous man's refuge! In conceit indeed he thinks his riches an impregnable fortreſs, and a wall ſo high that no enemy can ſcale it, and therefore ſays to his ſoul, Take thine eaſe; till late conviction detects his folly; the flood of providential judgments here deſcends, and ſweeps away his refuge of lies: or, in a day of wrath hereafter, to his terrible diſappointment he finds that riches profit not.

[h] Chap. xi. 2. & xv. 33. & xvi. 18.

12. [h] Before deſtruction the heart of man is haughty, and before honour is humility.

v. 12. Pride is the prelude of perdition. They who are puffed up with worldly wealth, high conceit of their own attainments, either of nature or grace, ſtand on ſlippery ground, and are on the precipice of ruin: whilſt humility, a low opinion of ourſelves, and a humble uſe of what we poſſeſs, is the preſage and preparative for true honour both before God and man.

[i] John vii. 51.
† Heb. Returneth a word.

13. [i] He that † anſwereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and ſhame unto him.

v. 13. A precipitate anſwer expoſes a man's folly; a weakneſs, into which quick parts are apt to betray us. It is wiſe to hear every circumſtance before we decide, and not judge by the repreſentation of one party, leſt we ſhould afterwards have reaſon to take ſhame for our raſhneſs.

[k] Job i. 21.
[l] Job vi. 4.

14. [k] The ſpirit of a man will ſuſtain his infirmity; but [l] a wounded ſpirit who can bear?

v. 14. All outward evils, whether afflictions of our bodies, croſſes in our families, loſſes of our goods, reproaches on our character, &c. are ſupportable, by thoſe at leaſt who are endued with power from on high, and, as good ſoldiers of Jeſus Chriſt, are inured to hardſhip. But the ſevereſt of our trials are within, when the ſpirit, which ſhould ſuſtain outward infirmity, is itſelf wounded with melancholy, dejection, or that ſharpeſt ſword, the intolerable wrath of God, a ſenſe of which is ready to ſink us into deſpair, till Jeſus comes with his blood and grace to heal the broken-hearted.

15. The heart of the prudent getteth knowledge; and the ear of the wiſe ſeeketh knowledge.

v. 15. The wiſe and prudent, whatever their attainments are, continually deſire an increaſe therein; and attentive to every means of improvement, in private converſation, or the public miniſtry of the word, hear, that their ſouls may live, growing in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

16. [m] A man's gift maketh room for him, and bringeth him before great men.

m Chap. xvii. 8. & xxi. 14.

v. 16. In this wicked world money goes much farther than merit: it maketh room, or enlarges a man; will often buy off puniſhment, and open his priſon-doors, or procure him a favourable hearing in a bad cauſe. It gains him acceſs at the gates of the great, when, but for the fee, the door would be but half opened; or puts him in the way for preferment, ſooner than every qualification.

17. He that is firſt in his own cauſe, ſeemeth juſt; but his neighbour cometh and ſearcheth him.

v. 17. Audi alteram partem, Hear the other ſide, is an approved maxim both in law and private converſation. A matter may be very plauſibly told, which, on croſs examination, enquiring into circumſtances, and hearing other witneſſes, may appear groſly miſrepreſented, or utterly falſe.

18. The lot cauſeth contentions to ceaſe, and parteth between the mighty.

v. 18. When contentions ariſe, and the mighty quarrel, where the caſe is of difficult determination, an appeal to God by lot ſhould end the ſtrife. By lot was Canaan divided; and if in ſome important concerns we ſolemnly, by prayer, as Acts i. 26. referred the matter to the divine determination, we ſhould have cauſe to rejoice in our quiet acquieſcence in his deciſions. In matters of doubtful right, the lot may be a wiſer recourſe, than the law or the ſword.

19. A brother offended is harder to be won than a ſtrong city: and their contentions are like the bars of a caſtle.

v. 19. Where love is turned to hatred, and neareſt relations quarrel, the reſentment is ever moſt exaſperated, and the anger moſt implacable. Let near relatives cultivate a ſpirit of forbearance and forgiveneſs, and, ſeeing the evil which would ariſe from a breach, be more careful to maintain the bonds of peace.

20. [n] A man's belly ſhall be ſatisfied with the fruit of his mouth; and with the increaſe of his lips ſhall he be filled.

n Chap. xii. 14. & xiii. 2.

v. 20. A gracious heart will appear in gracious ſpeech, which will not only yield ſatisfaction and edification to others, but be a teſtimony for good to our own ſouls; for by our own words we ſhall be juſtified, and as we ſow we ſhall reap the comforts of our good converſation.

21. [o] Death and life are in the power of the tongue; and they that love it, ſhall eat the fruit thereof.

o Mat. xii. 37.

v. 21. Much good, or much evil, neceſſarily enſues from a right or wrong uſe of our tongues. By the tongues of falſe teachers and falſe witneſſes, the bodies and ſouls of men are deſtroyed; whilſt lips full of grace are the life of thoſe who hear, and the comfort of thoſe that ſpeak. As men love the one or the other, ſo will the iſſue be to them, either life or death.

22. [p] Whoſo findeth a wife, findeth a good thing, and obtaineth favour of the LORD.

p Chap. xix. 14. & xxxi. 10.

v. 22. Of all earthly bleſſings a good wife is the chief; and a ſingular inſtance it is of God's favour, when, guided by his providence, we meet with ſuch an helpmate.

23. The poor uſeth intreaties, but the rich anſwereth [q] roughly.

q Jam. ii. 3.

v. 23. Note, (1.) It becomes thoſe who are poor, to have their ſpirit humbled to their condition; and when we draw near to God, we cannot have too lowly a ſenſe of our ſpiritual wants and diſtreſſes. (2.) Affluence is apt to elate; and they who grow rich, too often grow arrogant; but then their greatneſs becomes their ſnare and curſe.

24. A man that hath friends muſt ſhew himſelf friendly: and [r] there is a friend that ſticketh cloſer than a brother.

r Chap. xvii. 17.

v. 24. Friendſhip muſt be mutual: they who love, have ſome title to a return in kind; and where true regard is in the heart, it will make us ready for every act of kindneſs. And we ſhall find the comfort of ſo doing; for the bands of affection are even ſtronger than thoſe of blood; and we ſhall often find from a faithful friend inſtances of kindneſs and zeal for our welfare, which we never met from our neareſt relations. But the beſt of friends is the friend of ſinners, whoſe ſurpaſſing faithfulneſs and regard all who cleave to him prove by bleſſed experience.

CHAP. XIX.

1. [a] BEtter is the poor that walketh in his integrity, than he that is perverſe in his lips, and is a fool.

a Chap. xxviii. 6.

v. 1. Poverty is uſually deſpiſed; yet, better is the poor that walketh in his integrity, upright before God, and honeſt towards men; than he that is of perverſe lips, however great his affluence may be, and is a fool, deſtitute of that divine wiſdom the poor man poſſeſſes, and therefore deſpicable.

2. Alſo, that the ſoul be without knowledge, it is not good; and he that haſteth with his feet ſinneth.

v. 2. Two things are here condemned, ignorance and precipitation. He that knoweth not the way, cannot but err; and he who doth not allow himſelf time to conſider, will take many a falſe ſtep.

3. The fooliſhneſs of a man perverteth his way: and his heart [b] fretteth againſt the LORD.

b Pſ. xxxvii. 7.

v. 3. All our miſery comes from our perverſeneſs: we go out of God's way, and thereby involve ourſelves in trouble. And ſuch is our corruption, that we are ever ready to lay the blame upon God, and fret and murmur againſt thoſe diſpenſations of his providence which are the puniſhment of our own ſin and folly.

4. [c] Wealth maketh many friends; but the poor is ſeparated from his neighbour.

c Chap. xiv. 20.

v. 4. Mammon is the ſhrine at which men bow. All affect to be friends of thoſe from whom they hope to gain: but, is a man reduced? his neighbour grows ſhy of him. Like leaves in autumn, worldly friends fall off; and every one is willing to paſs by on the other ſide, and overlook wants he hath no inclination to relieve.

5. [d] A falſe witneſs ſhall not be † unpuniſhed, and he that ſpeaketh lies ſhall not eſcape.

d Exod. xxiii. 1. Deut. xix. 16, 19. Chap. vi. 19. & xxi. 28. Ver. 9.
† Heb. Held innocent.

v. 5. Perjury and lying ſhall meet their recompenſe. However undetected the authors of them may now paſs, the day is near, when they will be unveiled, and eternal vengeance overtake the perjured and the lying tongue, Rev. xxi. 8.

6. [e] Many will intreat the favour of the prince; and [f] every man is a friend to † him that giveth gifts. 7. [g] All the brethren of the poor do hate him: how much more do his friends go far from him? he purſueth them with words, yet they are wanting to him.

e Chap. xxix. 26.
f Ibid. xvii. 8. & xviii. 16. & xxi. 14.
† Heb. A man of gifts.
g Chap. xiv. 20.

v. 6, 7. Theſe are maxims too ſadly verified by the experience of all ages. The great are courted, flattered, careſſed; and, becauſe they have much to give, crowds of petitioners attend their levee, profeſſing affection and ſervice, whilſt meaning only to ſerve themſelves. But the poor, neglected and deſpiſed, is univerſally ſlighted: his very relations look upon him as a ſcandal to the family, would fain diſown him, and rid themſelves of the burden of providing for him; and no marvel therefore, if other friends, bound by leſs ties, forſake him. Vain are his entreaties; they turn a deaf ear: or if he can get a fair word, or a promiſe, they are mere evaſions to be rid of his importunity, and will be found to mean nothing. Let it be our care then to make the bleſſed God our friend, who is greater than the greateſt, and able to ſupply all our wants, and ſo gracious and kind, that he will never turn away the prayer of the poor unanſwered.

8. He that getteth † wiſdom, loveth his own ſoul: he that keepeth underſtanding, ſhall find good.

† Heb. An heart.

v. 8. He that getteth wiſdom, the true knowledge of God's mind and will, or a heart, a right ſpirit, a renewed heart, loveth his own ſoul; for he thereby provides for its preſent and eternal bleſſedneſs. He that keepeth underſtanding, holds faſt God's truth, and acts under the influence of it, ſhall find good, both now and for ever.

h Ver. 5.

9. [h] A falſe witneſs ſhall not be unpuniſhed, and he that ſpeaketh lies ſhall periſh.

v. 9. Lying and ſlander are ſins ſo common, ſo offenſive to God, ſo prejudicial to ſociety, and ſo eternally deſtructive to men's ſouls, that we need repeated admonitions againſt them.

i Chap. xxx. 22. Eccleſ. x. 6, 7.

10. Delight is not ſeemly for a fool: much leſs [i] for a ſervant to have rule over princes.

v. 10. Delight is not ſeemly for a fool; he hath more reaſon to weep than laugh, to mourn than rejoice; and all his mirth is madneſs, the wrath of God abiding on him: much leſs for a ſervant to rule over princes; for the inſolence of mean ſpirits in office is uſually intolerable.

k Chap. xiv. 29. † Heb. prudence. l Chap. xvi. 32.

11. [k] The † diſcretion of a man deferreth his anger, and [l] it is his glory to paſs over a tranſgreſſion.

v. 11. To feel the riſings of anger is natural to every boſom; to reſtrain and ſuppreſs it, is the proof of a wiſe man. Cool reflection can only dictate the proper method to rectify real injuries. Nothing can be right that is done in a paſſion: nor ſhould we be haſty to take offence. The greateſt glory of man is not to reſent injuries, but with charity paſs them over; not to revenge, but to forgive them.

m Chap. xvi. 14, 15. & xx. 2. & xxviii. 15. n Pſ. lxxii.

12. [m] The king's wrath is as the roring of a lion; but his favour is [n] as dew upon the graſs.

v. 12. As terrible as the wrath, and deſirable as the favour of an earthly prince may be; yet, infinitely more terrible is the wrath, and more deſirable the favour of the King of kings: not to offend him therefore, but by every means to engage and ſecure his regard, muſt appear our higheſt wiſdom.

o Chap. x. 1. & xv. 20. & xvii. 21, 25. p Chap. xxi. 9, 19. & xxvii. 15.

13. [o] A fooliſh ſon is the calamity of his father; and [p] the contentions of a wife are a continual dropping.

v. 13. From what we promiſed ourſelves would afford us the moſt ſubſtantial comfort, often proceeds our bittereſt anguiſh, and the diſappointment aggravates our miſery. A great calamity is a fooliſh ſon, impoveriſhing his father by his extravagance, bringing a reproach on his family, and breaking his aged parent's heart with his diſobedience and wickedneſs: but a greater ſtill is a ſtubborn, ſelf-willed, fretful, ſcolding wife. This is a continual dropping; for ſuch a one's tongue will never reſt, nor matter be wanting to exerciſe it. Miſerable is the man unequally yoked with ſuch a mate!

q Chap. xviii.

14. Houſe and riches are the inheritance of fathers; and [q] a prudent wife is from the LORD.

v. 14. Parents are in duty bound to lay up for their children, and from them by deſcent the inheritance comes; but the comfort of enjoying it muſt be from God, who only can give the prudent wife, without which we are but half ourſelves. And herein God muſt be eſpecially acknowledged; for with all the circumſpection we can uſe, it is eaſy to deceive, and be deceived; and we muſt own it a ſingular bleſſing from God, if on experience we find a gracious partner, circumſpect in her conduct, careful in her family, making it her ſtudy and delight to pleaſe.

r Chap. x. 4. & xx. 13. & xxiii. 21.

15. Slothfulneſs caſteth into a deep ſleep, and [r] an idle ſoul ſhall ſuffer hunger.

v. 15. Sloth is deſtructive both to ſoul and body: the ſoul by it is kept in ſtupid inſenſibility; the faculties unemployed; the time idled away; opportunity loſt; and want, the neceſſary conſequence, enſues: but the ſleep of ſloth will be at laſt diſturbed by the pinchings of hunger, or by thoſe ſharper pains, which will give the ſinner no reſt day nor night for ever.

s Luke x. 28. & xi. 28.

16. [s] He that keepeth the commandment, keepeth his own ſoul; but he that deſpiſeth his ways, ſhall die.

v. 16. The path of duty is the way both of comfort and ſafety, and whoever hath a real regard to his ſoul's true good, will make conſcience of obſerving God's commandments, and will find the preſent and eternal advantage of it: whilſt the careleſs ſinner, who regards not his ways, but lives at large, unconcerned whether God's laws are kept or broken, is in the road to ruin, and will die eternally.

t Chap. xxviii. 27. Mat. x. 42. & xxv. 40. 2 Cor. ix. 6, 7. † Or, his deed.

17. [t] He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the LORD; and † that which he hath given, will he pay him again.

v. 17. The beſt hands in which we can place our money, are thoſe of the poor, for then God graciouſly regards himſelf as our debtor, and we ſhall not fail of being repaid with intereſt. Not that it is merely the money given, but the temper with which we give, that makes the work real charity. A compaſſion to them, wrought by a ſenſe of the divine compaſſions to us, makes the acceptable ſervice.

u Chap. xiii. 24. & xxiii. 13. & xxix. 17. † Or, to his deſtruction.

18. [u] Chaſten thy ſon while there is hope, and let not thy ſoul ſpare † for his crying.

v. 18. Ill weeds muſt not be ſuffered to take deep root; the ſooner we begin to uſe the rod of correction, the likelier is the hope of ſucceſs in reſtraining thoſe evils in a child, which indulgence and habit would render inveterate. Nor ought any fooliſh fondneſs and pity at their tears or intreaties to reſtrain us, but rather by the needful ſeverity ſhould we ſhow true love to their ſouls, and conſult their beſt intereſts, and our own as well as their future comfort.

19. A man of great wrath ſhall ſuffer puniſhment: for if thou deliver him, yet thou muſt do it again.

v. 19. An angry man will be ever in broils: extricate him from them to-day, and he will be involved again to-morrow. So uſeleſs is every kind interpoſition, where the ſpirit remains unſubdued and unmortified.

20. Hear counſel, and receive inſtruction, that thou mayſt be wiſe in thy latter end.

v. 20. They are truly wiſe, who are wiſe in their latter end, and ſhew they have made a proviſion for eternity their great concern. The way to be ſo is to poſſeſs an obedient ear, attentive to the advice and injunctions of parents, miniſters, maſters, and, above all, to Jeſus Chriſt and his word, for that ſhall bring a man peace at the laſt.

x Job xxiii. 13. Pſal. xxxiii. 10, 11. Chap. xvi. 1, 9. Iſa. xlvi. 10.

21. [x] There are many devices in a man's heart: nevertheleſs the counſel of the LORD, that ſhall ſtand.

v. 21. Deep laid and ſecret are often the devices of men, oppoſing God's will, or without any regard to his bleſſing, as if the ſucceſs depended on their cunning. Nay, when, as in duty bound, in the ordinary affairs of life, we uſe our reaſon to plan the propereſt method of accompliſhing our deſigns, God overrules all, according to the counſels of his own will; and his eternal decrees the craft of men or devils can never diſappoint; his people therefore may be comforted, and his enemies deſpair.

22. The deſire of a man is his kindneſs: and a poor man is better than a liar.

v. 22. The deſire of a man is his kindneſs; either God's kindneſs and love, which is to the gracious ſoul moſt highly deſireable; or he wiſhes to have it in his power to ſhew kindneſs to others, his ſoul, like God, delighting in doing good: and a poor man is better than a liar, however rich and great, who hath the ability without the deſire to do good, and is liberal of promiſes which he never means to perform.

23. The fear of the LORD tendeth to life, and he that hath it ſhall abide ſatisfied: he ſhall not be viſited with evil.

v. 23. The advantages accruing from the fear of the Lord are repeated, to engage our hearts in the purſuit of real godlineſs. It tendeth to life; hath the promiſe of this life, as well as that which is to come. It affords the moſt ſubſtantial ſatisfaction, as bringing an habitual and abiding evidence of the divine love and favour, and that contentment which is the greateſt gain: and it is a preſervative from every evil, from ſin and ſuffering, God being the keeper of his people, and therefore under the ſhadow of his wings they are ſafe.

y Chap. xv. 19. & xxvi. 13, 15.

24. [y] A ſlothful man hideth his hand in his boſom, and will not ſo much as bring it to his mouth again.

v. 24. Sloth is a moſt beſetting and moſt pernicious evil, ruinous to ourſelves, as well as offenſive to God. The ſlothful, averſe to every labour, loves to ſaunter with his hand in his boſom; and, when he hath meat before him, will not be at the pains of raiſing it from the platter (as the word we read boſom may be rendered) to his mouth.

z Chap. xxi. 11.

25. [z] Smite a ſcorner, and the ſimple will beware; and reprove one that hath underſtanding, and he will underſtand knowledge.

v. 25. Incorrigible ſinners ſhould be puniſhed, if for no good to themſelves, yet as a warning to others: and they who ſcoff at religion, though our reproofs may be loſt upon them, yet may they ſerve to warn others in company, and prevent the evil ſuch men might otherwiſe do. But on a man of underſtanding no rebuke is loſt; he will hear and fear, and grow wiſer and better by the admonition.

26. He that waſteth his father, and chaſeth away his mother, is [a] a ſon that cauſeth ſhame, and bringeth reproach.

[a] Chap. xvii.

v. 26. The ſin and ſhame of a prodigal ſon are great. By his extravagance he beggars his parents, waſtes their ſubſtance, alienates their affections: if they have put themſelves in his power, they are perhaps turned out of doors, and their grey hairs brought with ſorrow to the grave. All cry out ſhame upon him; he is a ſcandal to his relations, abhorred of man, and odious in the ſight of God.

27. Ceaſe, my ſon, to hear the inſtruction, that cauſeth to err from the words of knowledge.

v. 27. Falſe teachers are ever ready to inſtil their pernicious doctrines, and the factors for Satan can colour over every pleaſurable vice with the ſmootheſt appellations: we need take heed how we hear. Flight is a young man's beſt ſecurity from ſuch company; for evil communications are moſt corrupting.

28. † An ungodly witneſs ſcorneth judgment: and [b] the mouth of the wicked devoureth iniquity. 29. Judgments are prepared for ſcorners, and ſtripes for the back of fools.

† Heb. A witneſs of Belial.
[b] Job xv. 16. & xx. 12. & xxxiv. 7.

v. 28, 29. When men are hardened in ſin, they ruſh on without fear. Thus an ungodly witneſs forſwears himſelf, advances lies, or falſe doctrine, and ſcorneth judgment; deſpiſing alike the laws of man, and the wrath of God: and with as much pleaſure as the hungry eats, ſo greedily doth he ſwallow down iniquity: but his career is ſhort, for vengeance is ready to overtake ſcorners, when they will find the wrath of an offended God is not to be mocked; and with the ſtripes of human puniſhment, or the ſtrokes of divine and inexorable juſtice, they ſhall eternally ſuffer the juſt reward of their folly and wickedneſs.

CHAP. XX.

1. [a] WINE is a mocker, ſtrong drink is raging: and whoſo is deceived thereby is not wiſe.

[a] Chap. xxiii. 29. Iſa. xxviii. 7. Hoſ. iv. 11.

v. 1. Drunkenneſs is a vice moſt odious; expoſes a man to be the jeſt and ſport of others; brings him into broils; diſorders his body with feveriſh heat; and though the liquor at firſt ſeems to exhilerate his ſpirits, he is deceived thereby; it drowns his reaſon and his conſcience together, and tends to the ruin of body and ſoul both here and for ever.

2. [b] The fear of a king is as the roring of a lion: whoſo provoketh him to anger, ſinneth againſt his own ſoul.

[b] Chap. xvi. 14. & xix. 12.

v. 2. Let evil doers tremble. God hath not committed the ſword to kings in vain: they are to puniſh the diſobedient, as his delegates upon earth; and the preſent wages of ſin they inflict, is but the earneſt of the eternal wrath which remains for impenitent tranſgreſſors.

3. [c] It is an honour for a man to ceaſe from ſtrife: but every fool will be meddling.

[c] Chap. xvii. 14.

v. 3. To ceaſe from ſtrife is ever wiſe: if we are in the wrong, it is our honour and wiſdom to acknowledge it: if we are right, better be ſilent, or give way, than provoke others, and grow warm ourſelves: but to be meddling with what we have no concern, is the ſure proof of folly.

4. [d] The ſluggard will not plough by reaſon of the † cold; therefore ſhall he beg in harveſt, and have nothing.

[d] Chap. x. 4.
† Or, winter.

v. 4. Sloth and beggary go together. Glad of every excuſe, the ſluggard will not even plough his own land, becauſe he pretends it is too cold, when indeed his work would keep him warmer than the fire-ſide. Juſtly therefore when others bring their ſheaves in harveſt, is he reduced to beg, and is refuſed; for ſturdy beggars are the peſt of ſociety, and they who will not work, ſhould not eat. It is the ſame with our ſouls: if we get not the oil of grace in our lamps, we ſhall beg too late when the bridegroom cometh.

5. [e] Counſel in the heart of man is like deep water; but a man of underſtanding will draw it out.

[e] Chap. xviii. 4.

v. 5. Some men are naturally cloſe, reſerved, and uncommunicative; others with deep deſign conceal the ſchemes they are plotting: but a man of underſtanding, by diſtant enquiries and obſervation on men and things, will draw out the ſecret, or inſinuate themſelves into the heart, and unlock the lips of thoſe who are moſt reſerved.

6. [f] Moſt men will proclaim every one his own † goodneſs: but a faithful man who can find?

[f] Chap. xxv. 14.
† Or, bounty.

v. 6. Moſt men will proclaim every one his own goodneſs; how friendly, humane, charitable, generous, he is; but the greateſt boaſters are uſually the leaſt doers: but a faithful man who can find? really ſuch as he profeſſes himſelf; a friend in adverſity; a father to the diſtreſſed; true to his word; pious without parade; in ſhort, an Iſraelite indeed, in whom there is no guile. A rare character this!

7. The juſt man walketh in his integrity: [g] his children are bleſſed after him.

[g] Pſ. cxii. 2.

v. 7. Uprightneſs of conduct is the conſtant effect of that faith which juſtifies; and the children of ſuch gracious parents fare the better for their unfeigned faith and piety.

8. [h] A king that ſitteth in the throne of judgment, ſcattereth away all evil with his eyes.

[h] Ver. 26.

v. 8. Kings that are intruſted with the throne of judgment, muſt be impartial in the execution of it, laborious in the diſcharge of their truſt, vindicating the innocent, and puniſhing the offenders. Where ſuch ſtrict care is obſerved, flagrant evil will be made to hide its head; and though no human coercive power can cure the deſperate wickedneſs of the heart, ſuch ſharp eyes of juſtice will ſcatter away what is openly and ſcandalouſly offenſive.

9. [i] Who can ſay, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from ſin?

[i] 1 Kings viii. 46. 2. Chron. vi. 36. Job xiv. 4. Pſ. li. 5. Eccleſ. vii. 20. 1 John i. 8.

v. 9. Not a living man can reply to the challenge. Corruption is in our nature; we are born in ſin; as unable of ourſelves to cleanſe ourſelves, as the Ethiopian to change his ſkin. To attempt it in our own ſtrength would be madneſs; to conceit ourſelves pure and ſinleſs, would be pride and folly: nor can we ever be made clean, till we are made ſenſible of our filthineſs, and deſpair of being able to help ourſelves: then the fountain of a Saviour's blood and grace is open; there we may waſh and be clean.

10. [k] † Divers weights, and divers meaſures, both of them are alike abomination to the LORD.

[k] Deut. xxv. 13, &c. Chap. xi. 1. & xvi. 11. Ver. 23. Mic. vi. 10, 11.
† Heb. A ſtone and a ſtone.

v. 10. God hates injuſtice of every kind. To buy by a greater meaſure, and ſell by a leſs; to diminiſh the weight below the ſtandard; theſe and the like frauds, too common in trade, are his abomination; and gain thus made will prove at laſt our greateſt loſs.

11. Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right.

v. 11. By their fruits ye ſhall know them, is the ſure rule of judgment; and even from the earlieſt days of infancy, the genious and diſpoſition of a child diſcover themſelves, and give an opportunity to an attentive parent to correct what is evil, and improve what is promiſing. Some take the words in a different ſenſe: Even a child plays the diſſembler in his doings; hypocriſy is natural to them, and they can ſhew their little wiles even in arms; and ſtrict attention to them is neceſſary to diſcover their real turn.

12. [l] The hearing ear, and the ſeeing eye, the LORD hath made even both of them.

[l] Exod. iv. 11. Pſ. xciv. 9.

v. 12. All our faculties, both of body and ſoul, are from God's gift, and to be employed to his glory.

13. [m] Love not ſleep, leſt thou come to poverty: open thine eyes, and thou ſhalt be ſatisfied with bread.

[m] Chap. vi. 9. & xii. 11. & xix. 15.

v. 13. Immoderate ſleep is a great waſte of our time, a ſure proof of ſloth indulged, and the road to poverty. They who would thrive, muſt riſe early: and this is true in the concerns of our ſouls as well as of our bodies; they who lie in bed late, will uſually riſe to lazy prayers.

14. It is naught, it is naught, ſaith the buyer: but when he is gone his way, then he boaſteth.

v. 14. Buy cheap, is the world's maxim; and therefore the buyer labours to undervalue the goods, finds fault with the price, and pretends how much cheaper he can buy them elſewhere; but no ſooner hath the trick ſucceeded, and the gainful bargain is drove, through the ignorance or neceſſity of the ſeller, than he boaſts of what is truly his ſhame, and calls his craſt, judgment.

[n] Chap. iii. 15. & viii. 11.

15. There is gold, and a multitude of rubies: but [n] the lips of knowledge are a precious jewel.

v. 15. Fine feathers, in the world's eye, make fine birds; but no chains of gold, not the richeſt embroidery, or the profuſion of jewels, are to be compared with that more precious ornament, the lips of knowledge, where a pleaſing elocution diffuſes that divine wiſdom, which is treaſured up in the heart.

[o] Chap. xxii. 27. & xxvii. 13.

16. [o] Take his garment that is ſurety for a ſtranger: and take a pledge of him for a ſtrange woman.

v. 16. It is dangerous truſting thoſe who are taking the moſt direct means to beggary, engaging in raſh ſuretyſhip, and companions of looſe and abandoned women. Ere we trade with, or lend to ſuch, we need ſecure ourſelves, or may expect they will break, or run away, and leave us to ſtand by the loſs.

[p] Chap. ix. 17.
† Heb. of lying.

17. [p] Bread † of deceit is ſweet to a man: but afterwards his mouth ſhall be filled with gravel.

v. 17. Sin in general promiſes much ſatisfaction; eſpecially the ſins of lewdneſs, and of fraud, that fill the coffers faſt: but it is all deceit; what is ſo ſweet in the mouth, will make the belly bitter, and the conſcience ake, (as gravel in the teeth makes them jar) either here in the pangs of penitence, or eternally in the torments of deſpair.

[q] Chap. xv. 22. & xxiv. 6.
[r] Luke xiv. 31.

18. [q] Every purpoſe is eſtabliſhed by counſel: and [r] with good advice make war.

v. 18. Deliberation with ourſelves, and adviſing with the wiſe, is the way to obtain ſucceſs in our undertakings, and prevent the reproaches which otherwiſe would ariſe on their miſcarriages. And war eſpecially, whether with an enemy without, or at the litigious bar, requires much conſultation; ere it be begun, to prepare for it; and, when commenced, how to be carried on, and brought to a happy concluſion.

[s] Chap. xi. 13.
† Or, enticeth.

19. [s] He that goeth about as a tale-bearer, revealeth ſecrets: therefore meddle not with him that † flattereth with his lips.

v. 19. Suſpect the man that flatters you, and turn a deaf ear to the tale-bearer, who, by revealing the ſecrets of others, wants to inſinuate into your confidence, and betray you. Theſe are peſts of ſociety, and to be ſhunned by every wiſe man.

[t] Exod. xxi. 17. Lev. xx. 9. Mat. xv. 4.
[u] Chap. xxiv, 20.
† Or, candle.

20. [t] Whoſo curſeth his father or his mother, [u] his † lamp ſhall be put out in obſcure darkneſs.

v. 20. Under the law this was a capital offence; and though that at preſent ceaſes to be the caſe, there is a Law-giver and Judge, who takes cognizance of the baſeneſs, ingratitude, and impiety of undutiful children, advanced to ſuch a pitch of wickedneſs, as to curſe their parents, and wiſh them in their graves. The curſe of God is upon their devoted heads; here their name ſhall be infamous, and death quickly rid the earth of ſuch monſters; and hereafter the blackneſs of darkneſs muſt be their eternal abode.

[x] Chap. xxviii. 20.

21. [x] An inheritance may be gotten haſtily at the beginning: but the end thereof ſhall not be bleſſed.

v. 21. He that maketh haſte to be rich, cannot be innocent; and therefore, though his deſigns ſucceed, there is a worm at his gourd; the wrath of God embitters his gains; they often melt as quickly as they are amaſſed; and, in the end, will eat up his fleſh like fire.

[y] Deut. xxxii. 35. Chap. xvii. 13. & xxiv. 29. Rom. xii. 17. 1 Theſ. v. 15. 1 Pet. iii. 9

22. [y] Say not thou, I will recompenſe evil: but wait on the LORD, and he ſhall ſave thee.

v. 22. Vengeance is mine, I will repay, ſaith the Lord. To him therefore we muſt refer ourſelves, when provoked, oppreſſed, or injured; wait in patient well-doing for the fulfilment of his promiſes, and be aſſured he will vindicate our wrongs in his own good time and way. Hard is this precept to our proud hearts, and obedience to it among the beſt proofs of our adoption of God.

[z] Ver. 10.
† Heb. Balances of deceit

23. [z] Divers weights are an abomination unto the LORD: and † a falſe balance is not good.

v. 23. This is repeated from v. 10. and not unneceſſarily; for againſt a practice ſo common, ſo wicked, and ſo fatal, we cannot be too often warned.

[a] Pſ. xxxvii. 23. Chap. xvi. 9. Jer. x. 23.

24. [a] Man's goings are of the LORD, how can a man then underſtand his own way?

v. 24. God's over-ruling hand governs all, both in the concerns of our bodies and our ſouls. In him we live and move; guided by his providence, or ſupported by his grace. He alone can proſper our undertakings, whilſt we can neither foreſee the iſſue, nor ſecure the ſucceſs of them. Needful therefore it is, that conſtantly and humbly we ſhould wait on him for direction, and follow the leadings of his providence, and the dictates of his word.

[b] Eccleſ. v. 4, 5.

25. It is a ſnare to the man who devoureth that which is holy: and [b] after vows to make inquiry.

v. 25. Two great ſins are here rebuked, that are a ſnare and ruin to men's ſouls.

1. Sacrilege, embezzling to a man's own uſe what was dedicated to the ſervice of God: and however long cuſtom and poſſeſſion may countenance the abuſe, they who fatten upon the ſpoils of the churches, where ſcarce bread is left for thoſe who ſerve at the altar, muſt give an account to God.

2. Covenant-breaking. What we vow to God or man, it lieth upon us to diſcharge. It is too late to make inquiry, when we have opened our mouth; and to ſeek excuſes, when none can exculpate us.

[c] Pſ. ci. 5, &c. Ver. 8.

26. [c] A wiſe king ſcattereth the wicked, and bringeth the wheel over them.

v. 26. Severity is often needful, and wiſe magiſtrates will with vigour put the laws into execution. The diſturbers of the public peace deſerve to be broken with the wheel of public juſtice.

[d] 1 Cor. ii. 11.
† Or, lamp.

27. [d] The ſpirit of a man is the † candle of the LORD, ſearching all the inward parts of the belly.

v. 27. The ſpirit of a man, either his rational ſoul, or rather his renewed ſpirit enlightened and enlivened by the Holy Ghoſt, is the candle of the Lord, ſearching all the inward parts of the belly; diſcovering, judging, accuſing, or approving whatever paſſes within, according as it is conformable or oppoſite to the perfect rule of God's revealed will.

[e] Pſ. ci. 1. Chap. xxix. 14.

28. [e] Mercy and truth preſerve the king: and his throne is upholden by mercy.

v. 28. Theſe are the qualifications of a good king, and the great ſtability of his throne: Mercy, towards his ſubjects, eaſing them of every unneceſſary burden, and ſoftening with clemency, where the caſe calls for it, the rigour of the law: and truth, religiouſly obſervant of all his engagements, whether thoſe he made to his own ſubjects, or treaties with his neighbours. This will make him beloved and revered at home, and formidable abroad.

[f] Chap. xvi. 31.

29. The glory of young men is their ſtrength: and [f] the beauty of old men is the gray head.

v. 29. Youth is deſigned for action, age for wiſdom: each reciprocally needs, and each muſt therefore honour the other. Strength without counſel would deſtroy itſelf; counſel, without power to execute, would be uſeleſs; united, they reflect a glory on each other.

† Heb. Is a purging medicine againſt evil.

30. The blueneſs of a wound † cleanſeth away evil: ſo do ſtripes the inward parts of the belly.

v. 30. Corroſives are often highly neceſſary, and nothing but ſevere chaſtiſement will work on ſome ſtubborn tempers. They muſt be beaten blue ere their frowardneſs will depart from them, and their obſtinacy muſt be broken with many a ſtripe. Thus God ſees it often needful, reſpecting his deareſt children, to lay his heavy hand upon them, and to purge them in the furnace of affliction, from the droſs of vile affections. The operation is painful indeed, but the peaceable fruits which ariſe from it may well reconcile us to the ſuffering.

CHAP. XXI.

1. THE king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: he turneth it whitherſoever he will.

v. 1. The hearts of all men, even the greateſt; all their purpoſes and deſigns, whether unſtable, or impetuous as water, are under divine direction; and by his powerful though unperceived operation upon their minds, they are made ſubſervient to the purpoſes of his glory, as by canals the river takes that direction which we pleaſe to give it.

[a] Chap. xvi. 2.

2. [a] Every way of man is right in his own eyes: but the LORD pondereth the hearts.

Before Chriſt 1000.

v. 2. Partial to ourſelves, we are ever apt to flatter ourſelves we are right. The ſelf-righteous, the lover of pleaſure, the worldling, all concur in this ſelf-deceit; but God's deciſions are made from intimate knowledge of the heart, and widely differ from our fond and falſe conceits: and what men highly eſteem and value themſelves upon, is in his eyes often an abomination.

[b] 1 Sam. xv. 22. Chap. xv. 8. Iſa. i. 11, &c. Hoſ. vi. 6. Mic. vi. 7, 8.

3. [b] To do juſtice and judgment, is more acceptable to the LORD than ſacrifice.

v. 3. The moſt pompous devotions, the moſt expenſive benefactions, or the moſt liberal alms, commend us not to God, when ſet in the place of moral duties. Juſtice and judgment, uprightneſs, and integrity of heart before God and man, are more acceptable than any ſacrifice; nay, without theſe the other is an abomination.

[c] Chap. vi. 17. † Heb. Haughtineſs of eyes. ‡ Or, the light.

4. [c] † An high look, and a proud heart, and ‡ the plowing of the wicked is ſin.

v. 4. Haughty looks ſhew a proud heart; and where ſuch a ſpirit reigns, all is naught. The moſt innocent, nay, the moſt commendable actions, are tainted by the evil temper from whence they flow: ſo that even the ploughing of the wicked is ſin: he means only himſelf in all his labours, and leaves God far above out of his ſight.

[d] Chap. x. 4. & xiii. 4.

5. [d] The thoughts of the diligent tend only to plenteouſneſs: but of every one that is haſty, only to want.

v. 5. Prudent contrivance and diligent induſtry are the ſure road to plenty and affluence: but raſh ſchemes, haſty reſolutions, and precipitate meaſures, involve men in trouble and loſs, and leave them in poverty to lament their folly.

[e] Chap. x. 2. & xiii. 4.

6. [e] The getting of treaſures by a lying tongue, is a vanity toſſed to and fro of them that ſeek death.

v. 6. The getting treaſures by a lying tongue, by falſe pretences, deceit in trade, or fraudulent contracts, is a vanity toſſed to and fro of them that ſeek death. Light as vanity, and eaſily diſperſed as ſtubble, are ſuch treaſures; and death eternal is found at laſt to be the end of their deſtructive ways.

† Heb. ſaw them aſunder.

7. The robbery of the wicked ſhall † deſtroy them; becauſe they refuſe to do judgment.

v. 7. All injuſtice will by and by prove the ſinner's deſtruction; or ſaw them, pierce their conſcience with penitential anguiſh, or ſink them into hell, where they will have no reſt, night nor day; becauſe they refuſe to do judgment, which is the worſt of robbery; for againſt an avowed thief you may be on your guard; but from a lying tongue, and falſhood in dealings, there is no defence.

8. The way of man is froward and ſtrange: but as for the pure, his work is right.

v. 8. By nature every man's way is froward, ſtrange, and contrary to God's will, till divine grace renews the heart, and purifying the conſcience through the blood of ſprinkling, and the powerful operations of the Spirit, makes the ſoul pure within, and the way directed to pleaſe God.

[f] Ver. 19. Chap. xix. 13. & xxv. 24. & xxvii. 15. † Heb. A woman of contentions.

9. [f] It is better to dwell in a corner of the houſe-top, than with † a brawling woman in a wide houſe.

v. 9. A brawling and contentious woman may juſtly be reckoned among the bittereſt afflictions. Her din is ever heard; the largeſt houſe echoes throughout with it; the leaſt accident or wry word cauſes her fury to riſe, and all authority or argument to reſtrain her rage is as uſeleſs as talking to the wind. A wiſe man, burdened with ſuch a croſs, chuſes therefore rather to retire, than anſwer railing for railing; and rather ſits in a corner of the houſe-top, where he can be quiet, though expoſed to all the inclemency of the ſky without, than under ſuch a perpetual ſtorm within.

[g] Jam. iv. 5. † Heb. is not favoured.

10. [g] The ſoul of the wicked deſireth evil: his neighbour † findeth no favour in his eyes.

v. 10. It is the very heart's deſire of a wicked man, to ſee his neighbour fall into ſin or misfortune; and ſo hard-hearted is he, that in the greateſt need he will afford him no aſſiſtance; or if any expoſtulate with him on his conduct, they will receive for it only abuſe.

[h] Chap. xix. 25.

11. [h] When the ſcorner is puniſhed, the ſimple is made wiſe: and when the wiſe is inſtructed, he receiveth knowledge.

Before Chriſt 1000.

v. 11. This was obſerved, chap. xix. 25. The puniſhment of ſcorners, ſcoffers at religion, and blaſphemers of God and godlineſs, either by divine judgment or the ſword of the magiſtrate, will ſerve to deter the ſimple, who might have been influenced by their wickedneſs: and a wiſe man, when inſtructed, far from ſcorning to be taught, ſenſible of his own deficiencies, hears attentively, and grows in knowledge. Or, when the wiſe is inſtructed, he, the ſimple, who is a by-ſtander, receiveth knowledge, and profits by what is ſpoken.

12. The righteous man wiſely conſidereth the houſe of the wicked: but God overthroweth the wicked for their wickedneſs.

v. 12. Theſe words bear a twofold interpretation. The righteous, the good man, when looking upon the affluence of the wicked he might be tempted to envy, wiſely conſidereth how ill it was got, and how fearfully it will end, when God will utterly overthrow the place of their abode, and puniſh them for their wickedneſs. Or, the righteous magiſtrate examines the houſe of the wicked, for ſtolen or contraband goods, or to diſcover his treaſonable practices; and, convicting him of his wickedneſs, executes deſerved judgment upon him.

[i] Mat. xviii. 30, &c.

13. [i] Whoſo ſtoppeth his ears at the cry of the poor, he alſo ſhall cry himſelf, but ſhall not be heard.

v. 13. The hard-hearted and uncharitable ſtop their ears to the cry of the poor; drive them from their door empty; nor can be moved by the importunity of want: but God will make ſuch feel the miſeries they diſregard: reduced to abject wretchedneſs, themſelves ſhall cry; either on earth, and be refuſed a bit of bread; or, like Dives, in hell, and be denied a drop of water.

[k] Chap. xvii. 8. & xviii. 16.

14. [k] A gift in ſecret pacifieth anger: and a reward in the boſom, ſtrong wrath.

v. 14. Raging is the paſſion of anger; yet, ſtronger is the love of money. Few, however offended, are proof againſt a well-judged preſent, by way of ſatisfaction, when given ſecretly, and timed opportunely. Some refer it to a bribe, to pervert the execution of juſtice; but the firſt ſenſe ſeems preferable.

15. It is joy to the juſt to do judgment: but deſtruction ſhall be to the workers of iniquity.

v. 15. It is a pleaſure to a good man to do good; to a juſt magiſtrate, to adminiſter juſtice; and they rejoice in ſeeing others do the ſame: but deſtruction ſhall be to the workers of iniquity; either when judgment is miniſtred by upright magiſtrates, or at laſt, when God ſhall recompenſe them according to their deeds.

16. The man that wandreth out of the way of underſtanding, ſhall remain in the congregation of the dead.

v. 16. The way of underſtanding is the path of life, marked out in the goſpel-word, from which whoever departs, through unbelief and the love of ſin, will meet his ruin. He ſhall remain in the congregation of the dead; ſpiritually dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, and doomed to eternal death. And great is this congregation; for wide is the gate that leadeth to deſtruction, and many there be that go in thereat.

† Or, ſport.

17. He that loveth † pleaſure, ſhall be a poor man: he that loveth wine and oil, ſhall not be rich.

v. 17. Inordinate love of pleaſure, and luxurious indulgence of appetite, are the way to ruin both of body and ſoul. To reliſh and enjoy the bleſſings God beſtows, he never forbids; to abuſe them to exceſs, or to place our chief happineſs in them, is to provoke him to deprive us of them. He will make thoſe feel in pining want the loſs of what they ſquandered away in ſenſuality and profuſion.

[l] Chap. xi. 8. Iſa. xliii. 3.

18. [l] The wicked ſhall be a ranſom for the righteous; and the tranſgreſſor for the upright.

v. 18. By the puniſhment inflicted by the ſword of juſtice on the wicked, the wrath of God is averted from the nation, as in the caſe of Achan: and God himſelf by his providence turns upon the malicious their own devices; and ranſoms his upright ones, by bringing the wicked into the pit they have digged, as Haman was hung on the gallows erected for Mordecai.

[m] Ver. 9. † Heb. the land of the deſart.

19. [m] It is better to dwell in † the wilderneſs, than with a contentious and an angry woman.

v. 19. This is ſimilar to v. 9. It were well if thoſe whom this character ſuits, were admoniſhed of the great ſinfulneſs of their conduct, and led to amend it. Wretched beyond expreſſion ſion is the man thus unequally yoked with a contentious and angry woman: every comfort in his family is embittered; the ſolitude of the deſart is preferable to ſuch perpetual brawling; and the company of wild beaſts more eligible than ſuch a termagant.

n Pſ. cxii. 3.

20. [n] There is a treaſure to be deſired, and oil in the dwelling of the wiſe; but a fooliſh man ſpendeth it up.

v. 20. The wiſe preſerve with care what they gain by induſtry. In their houſe there is abundance of good things; enough, and to ſpare: yea, though but a cottage, as the word ſignifies, there is that moſt deſirable of all treaſures, grace; and that greateſt gain, godlineſs with contentment; but a fooliſh man ſpendeth it up; either ſquandering the ſtore which his wiſer father had provided; or, by living up to the height of his income, depriving his children of the proviſion he ought to make for them.

o Chap. xv. 9.

21. [o] He that followeth after righteouſneſs and mercy, findeth life, righteouſneſs, and honour.

v. 21. Behold,

1. The buſineſs of the wiſe; to follow after righteouſneſs and mercy; righteouſneſs, both that which is by faith in Jeſus Chriſt imputed to us, and by the Spirit of Jeſus implanted in us. Mercy, or grace, which, as poor and periſhing, we need, and muſt ſeek at God's hands, and, according to our ability and meaſure, exerciſe towards our brethren.

2. The bleſſing of ſo doing. Such an one findeth life; for none thus earneſtly ſeek in vain: life ſpiritual, with all the bleſſings and comforts of it, is their preſent portion; life eternal, hereafter ſecured to them. Righteouſneſs in Jeſus Chriſt, both his title to glory, and his meetneſs for it, is given him; and honour, the higheſt conceivable, even to reign with God in glory, is his ſure reward.

p Eccleſ. ix. 14, &c.

22. [p] A wiſe man ſcaleth the city of the mighty, and caſteth down the ſtrength of the confidence thereof.

v. 22. Wiſdom is better than ſtrength, Eccleſ. ix. 16. Nothing is impregnable where conſummate prudence plans, and cool fortitude with ſteady perſeverance executes the deſign. The ſinner's heart is like this city of the mighty, kept by the power of Satan and in-dwelling ſin; but Chriſt caſts down the ſtrong-holds, and, by the power of the Spirit of wiſdom and grace which he implants, brings the whole man, body, ſoul, and ſpirit, into ſubjection to his bleſſed ſelf.

q Chap. xii. 13. & xiii. 3. & xviii. 21.

23. [q] Whoſo keepeth his mouth and his tongue, keepeth his ſoul from troubles.

v. 23. The tongue is a world of iniquity, and needs a ſharp reſtraint, that nothing impure, falſe, profane, raſh, injurious, may be uttered. Its ungovernableneſs is the fruitful ſource of moſt of our preſent troubles, and God hath threatened it with eternal condemnation; and there is no way of avoiding theſe but by keeping that with all diligence.

† Heb. the wrath of pride.

24. Proud and haughty ſcorner is his name, who dealeth in † proud wrath.

v. 24. Pride is uſually the parent of paſſion; and they who are high in their own conceit, conſtrue every inadvertence into a ſlight, and a miſplaced word is an affront. Thus wrath is their trade, ſo habitually are they given to it. But though they may think their hectoring and hard words make them look great and be feared, they are deceived; it will only procure them an ill name, and render them truly contemptible.

r Chap. xiii. 4.
s Pſ. cxii. 9.

25. [r] The deſire of the ſlothful killeth him: for his hands refuſe to labour. 26. He coveteth greedily all the day long: but [s] the righteous giveth and ſpareth not.

v. 25, 26. Vexed with unſatiſfied deſires, the ſlothful pines away, becauſe he refuſeth to labour to ſupply his wants: or coveting greedily what is the property of others, to ſave himſelf from labour, he robs, or ſteals, and that brings him to an untimely end. But the righteous, having by honeſt induſtry obtained enough and to ſpare, giveth to the truly neceſſitous with a liberal hand.

t Pſ. l. 9. Chap. xv. 8. Iſa. lxvi. 3. Jer. vi. 20. Am. v. 22.
† Heb. in wickedneſs.

27. [t] The ſacrifice of the wicked is abomination: how much more, when he bringeth it † with a wicked mind?

v. 27. Though ſacrifice was of divine appointment, it never was becauſe of any delight God had in the blood of bulls or goats, or any outward forms of ritual devotion; but becauſe they were typical of the one great oblation of Jeſus; and without faith and ſimplicity of heart in the offerer, were not only uſeleſs, but an abomination. Thus all the prayers, alms, and outward appearances of piety, in the wicked and ſelf-righteous, are merely hypocritical; and their perſons being not accepted, their ſervices muſt be rejected of God, eſpecially when offered with a wicked mind, as Balaam's ſacrifices, or the Phariſee's prayers were, in order to be ſubſervient to their wickedneſs.

u Chap. xix. 5, 9.

28. [u] A falſe witneſs ſhall periſh: but the man that heareth, ſpeaketh conſtantly.

v. 28. A deliberate liar is an undone ſoul; but a man of integrity ſpeaketh the truth from his heart; teſtifies what he hath heard and knows, without wavering or variation.

† Or, conſidereth.

29. A wicked man hardneth his face: but as for the upright, he † directeth his way.

v. 29. Impenitent ſinners ceaſe to bluſh at their abominations, and deſpiſe alike the terrors of the law, and the wrath of the Almighty: no rebuke confounds, no correction humbles him; but the upright, he directeth his way, according to the rule of God's word.

x Jer. ix. 23.
y Pſ. xx. 7. & xxxiii. 17.
z Pſ. iii. 8.
† Or, victory.

30. [x] There is no wiſdom, nor underſtanding, nor counſel againſt the LORD. 31. [y] The horſe is prepared againſt the day of battle: [z] but † ſafety is of the LORD.

v. 30, 31. Many are the devices that human and diabolical craft have planned againſt the kingdom of Jeſus and his people; but vain are the deepeſt politics, or the moſt ſubtle deſigns; God mocks at the efforts of impotent malice: and as no counſel can prevail againſt him, neither can any ſtrength protect without him. However juſt the cauſe, or great the preparations made, the iſſue of the battle depends upon him who giveth it not always to the ſtrong. Under his protection we are ſafe in the midſt of danger: and as in all human conteſts the victory or ſalvation is of the Lord; ſo in all our ſpiritual conflicts alſo, his power and grace alone are our ſtability, and ſecure our eternal ſalvation amidſt the attacks of corruption, earth, and hell.

CHAP. XXII.

a Eccleſ. vii. 1.
† Or, Favour is better than, &c.

1. [a] A Good name is rather to be choſen than great riches, and † loving favour rather than ſilver and gold.

v. 1. A name among the ſons of God, to be reſpected by the wiſe, and eſteemed by the good, is far preferable to any wealth the wicked may poſſeſs; and to have the affectionate regard of thoſe around us, conduces more to real happineſs than ſilver or gold. Or, as the words may be rendered, Grace is better than ſilver or gold; a ſubſtance both more precious and more enduring.

b Chap. xxix. 13.
c Chap. xiv. 31.

2. [b] The rich and poor meet together: [c] the LORD is the maker of them all.

v. 2. Whatever difference ſubſiſts between men's outward ſtate, the Lord is to be acknowledged as the author of it; and before him there is no reſpect of perſons; both are alike welcome to a throne of grace; both muſt meet together in the grave; the righteous, whether rich or poor, will meet in glory; and the wicked, of whatever condition, muſt lie down in hell.

d Chap. xiv. 16. & xxvii. 12.

3. [d] A prudent man foreſeeth the evil, and hideth himſelf: but the ſimple paſs on, and are puniſhed.

v. 3. The prudent man foreſeeth the evil, and hideth himſelf; ſhuns the temptation which would draw him into ſin, and provides againſt the miſchief which threatens him: but the ſimple, thoughtleſs of their danger, never look before them, nor conſider conſequences, and plunge themſelves into ſin and ſorrow here and for ever.

e Pſ. cxii. 3.
‡ Or, the reward of humility, &c.

4. [e] ‡ By humility and the fear of the LORD, are riches, and honour, and life.

v. 4. Humility, and the fear of the Lord, are the great characteriſtics of true godlineſs; and wherever theſe are found, there riches, as much as is needful of this world, and the abundance of divine grace; honour, the moſt exalted, which comes from God; and life ſpiritual and eternal, with all the comforts of both, will be the portion of ſuch an humble ſoul.

f Chap. xv. 9.
g 1 John v. 18.

5. [f] Thorns and ſnares are in the way of the froward: [g] he that doth keep his ſoul ſhall be far from them.

v. 5. They who make for themſelves crooked paths, ſhall be plagued in them. The ways of ſin, however pleaſing in appearance, will be found full of vexation, anguiſh, and ſorrow; whilſt he who carefully takes heed to walk and pleaſe God, finds reſt to his ſoul, and is delivered from all thoſe miſeries which embitter the ways of wickedneſs.

‡ Or, catechize. [h] Eph. vi. 4. § Heb. in his way.

6. ‡ [h] Train up a child § in the way he ſhould go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

v. 6. The bleſſing of a good education is ineſtimable, and parents will never have cauſe to regret the pains they beſtow in early inculcating upon their children the fear of the Lord, and inſtructing them in the word of his truth. God often bleſſes ſuch labours with immediate good effect, and they ſee their children growing in wiſdom as ſtature: nay, if they turn away, as too many do, they cannot ſin ſo eaſily as others; their conſcience is more tender, and open to divine conviction, in order to their recovery.

[l] Jam. ii. 6.

7. [l] The rich ruleth over the poor, and the borrower is ſervant to the lender.

v. 7. The rich ruleth over the poor. Such is the conſtitution of this world by the divine Providence; and if ſuperiors rule well, and conſult the good of their inferiors, they would have no cauſe to complain: but if, taking advantage of their meanneſs and wants, they trample on them ſevere and tyrannical, then is this among the great evils under the ſun: and the borrower is ſervant to the lender, muſt ſpeak him fair, and do as he bids. Note, They who would maintain their independance muſt keep out of debt.

[k] Job. iv. 8. Hoſ. x. 13. ‡ Or, With the rod of his anger he ſhall be conſumed.

8. [k] He that ſoweth iniquity, ſhall reap vanity: and ‡ the rod of his anger ſhall fail.

v. 8. As a man ſows, he muſt reap; and the harveſt of iniquity will be vanity and vexation, deceiving the expectations of thoſe who promiſed themſelves they ſhould reap much profit and pleaſure thereby; and their abuſed power, which was exerciſed with anger and ſeverity, ſhall be taken from them, and they degraded with ſhame.

[l] 2 Cor. ix. 6. ‡ Heb. The good of eye.

9. [l] ‡ He that hath a bountiful eye ſhall be bleſſed: for he giveth of his bread to the poor.

v. 9. The eye is the door to the heart; the charitable and compaſſionate are ever ſeeking objects to relieve, and no ſooner behold diſtreſs, than they melt over it, and the pleaſure and kindneſs they expreſs in their countenance makes the relief they offer doubly obliging. Nor ſhall they loſe their reward: this man ſhall be bleſſed in his deed; bleſſed with the prayers of the poor, bleſſed with favour of a gracious God, bleſſed in time, bleſſed in eternity.

[m] Pſ. ci. 5.

10. [m] Caſt out the ſcorner, and contention ſhall go out; yea, ſtrife and reproach ſhall ceaſe.

v. 10. Scorners are the troublers of ſociety: ſcoffing at godlineſs and good men, they ſeek to raiſe perpetual ſtrife in the church, the ſtate, and among friends. The only way to be ſafe and at peace, is to be ſeparate from them.

[n] Pſ. ci. 6. Chap. xvi. 13. ‡ Or, and hath grace in his lips.

11. [n] He that loveth pureneſs of heart, ‡ for the grace of his lips, the king ſhall be his friend.

v. 11. When the heart is purified by the ſpirit of holineſs, grace will be in the lips; and ſuch a man a wiſe king will prefer for his friend, the ſweetneſs of whoſe converſation, and the frankneſs and honeſty of his heart, render him truly amiable; and withal he ſhall fare better ſtill, and find a warmer affection and friendſhip ſhewn him by the King of kings.

‡ Or, matters.

12. The eyes of the LORD preſerve knowledge, and he overthroweth the ‡ words of the tranſgreſſor.

v. 12. By the providential care of God, his word, the great means of wiſdom, is preſerved pure and uncorrupt, and a goſpel miniſtry in ſucceſſion maintained to ſpread the knowledge of it. His people are kept alſo by him increaſing in ſpiritual underſtanding, amidſt the darkneſs and errors around them; and he overthroweth the words of the tranſgreſſor, who would corrupt or handle his word deceitfully to the perverſion of men's ſouls, and thereby brings on himſelf ſwift deſtruction.

[o] Chap. xxvi. 13.

13. [o] The ſlothful man ſaith, There is a lion without, I ſhall be ſlain in the ſtreets.

v. 13. They who have a love for lazineſs, will ſeldom be at a loſs for an excuſe; and the moſt abſurd and improbable ſuggeſtions are to them as inſurmountable difficulties in the path of duty.

[p] Chap. ii. 16. & v. 3. & vii. 5. & xxiii. 27. [q] Eccleſ. vii. 26.

14. [p] The mouth of ſtrange women is a deep pit: [q] he that is abhorred of the LORD, ſhall fall therein.

v. 14. Nothing ſo dangerous, ſo eternally dangerous to the ſoul, as thoſe fleſhly luſts which war againſt it. The mouth of a ſtrange woman, an harlot, or adultereſs, is a deep pit, fairly covered with ſmooth and flattering words, but beneath is the abyſs of miſery. He that is abhorred of the Lord, and for his ſins hath provoked God to give him up to a reprobate and abandoned ſpirit, ſhall, in juſt judgment, fall therein, as his puniſhment, as well as his ſin, permitted thus to fill up the meaſure of his iniquity, till wrath come upon him to the uttermoſt.

[r] Chap. xiii. 24. & xix. 18. & xxiii. 13, 14. & xxix. 15, 17.

15. Fooliſhneſs is bound in the heart of a child, but [r] the rod of correction ſhall drive it far from him.

v. 15. Natural and deep-rooted is the corruption of the fallen heart; it is born with us, and what is thus bred in the bone, will not eaſily come out of the fleſh. Early chaſtiſement therefore, when ſin and folly begin to bud, is abſolutely neceſſary; and nothing but this can cut off the ſhoots, which, each moment they are ſpared, will grow more luxuriant.

16. He that oppreſſeth the poor to increaſe his riches, and he that giveth to the rich, ſhall ſurely come to want.

v. 16. They who are in haſte to be rich, often take thoſe methods that moſt effectually diſappoint their own deſigns. The fruits of oppreſſion are gotten with a curſe, and in expenſive entertainments of the rich, or bribes to obtain their protection, are quickly waſted, and that want they thus wickedly ſought to ſhun, in all its miſery overtakes them.

‡ Heb. In thy belly. [s] Eph. i. 13. [t] Chap. viii. 6. [u] 1 Pet. iii. 15. § Or, to thoſe that ſend thee.

17. Bow down thine ear, and hear the words of the wiſe, and apply thine heart unto my knowledge. 18. For it is a pleaſant thing if thou keep them ‡ within thee; they ſhall withal be fitted in thy lips. 19. [s] That thy truſt may be in the LORD, I have made known to thee this day, even to thee. 20. Have not I written to thee [t] excellent things in counſels and knowledge? 21. That I might make thee know the certainty of the words of truth; [u] that thou mighteſt anſwer the words of § truth to them that ſend unto thee.

v. 17—21. The inſpired penman here changes his ſtile, and, as in the beginning, addreſſes himſelf to his ſon in a way of exhortation; and what he ſaith unto him, he ſaith unto all who are called upon to hear and learn. Diligent attention, and heart-application, are neceſſary, v. 17. if we would come to the knowledge of the truth, and underſtand the words of the wiſe, thoſe inſpired writers, whom God hath employed to communicate to us his mind and will. And in order hereunto, various arguments are ſuggeſted to engage our minds in the purſuit.

1. It is a pleaſant thing if thou keep them within thee; for heart-religion only, not formality, can bring us to taſte the comforts of true godlineſs; and they who are moſt faithful, will be moſt happy, and find that joy a ſtranger intermeddleth not with.

2. It will be highly becoming. They ſhall withal be fitted in thy lips, or, be ordered by thy lips; ſpoken ſo as to miniſter grace to the hearers, and gain their regard and reverence.

3. Hereby our hearts will be eſtabliſhed in faith and confidence in God, v. 19. this being the bleſſed effect of his word, and the great end for which it was written, and is preached; and when we are enabled to truſt, we ſhall ſee the great ſalvation of God.

4. The matter is clear, the ſubject infinitely important, and highly excellent, deſigned to promote our eternal bleſſedneſs, written to convey perpetual inſtruction, and particularly addreſſed to us by name: to thee, reader, even to thee; therefore to-day, whilſt it is called to-day, may the word of goſpel-grace ſounding in thine ears, ſink down into thine heart, as an engrafted word, able alſo to ſave thy ſoul!

5. The truths are certain, v. 21. not cunningly deviſed fables, but delivered by the inſpiration of God; and by the peruſal of them, with fervent prayer, we ſhall arrive at the full aſſurance of underſtanding; ſhall have an evidence of the certainty of the objects of our faith, ſtrong as that of our being, ſo that not a doubt remains.

6. They will enable us to give an anſwer to every one that aſketh us a reaſon of the hope that is in us, and out of the good treaſure of our heart to communicate to them the leſſons we have been taught of God.

[x] Zech. vii. 10. [y] Job xxxi. 21. Pſal. lxviii. 5. Chap. xxiii. 11. Jer. li. 36. [z] Iſa. xxxiii. 1.

22. Rob not the poor, becauſe he is poor: [x] neither oppreſs the afflicted in the gate. 23. For [y] the LORD will plead their cauſe, and [z] ſpoil the ſoul of thoſe that ſpoiled them.

v. 22, 23. Poverty ſhould plead for compaſſion: it is doubly cruel to take advantage of their diſtreſs to oppreſs the needy, by vexatious law-ſuits, in which they have not ability to defend themſelves; by impoſitions levied on their neceſſities, or by perverting their judgment in the gate, and, through bribes or favour, robbing them of their right. God himſelf, the poor man's advocate, will vindicate theſe wrongs, and, either in time or eternity, ſeverely retaliate theſe ſpoils of oppreſſion.

24. Make no friendſhip with an angry man: and with a furious man thou ſhalt not go: 25. Leſt thou learn his ways, and get a ſnare to thy ſoul.

v. 24, 25. It is of vaſt importance with whom we aſſociate; for we readily learn their ways, and their evil ones are moſt eaſily copied. It is wiſe therefore to avoid all near connection with ſuch, whoſe ſinful examples and communications would corrupt our manners: particularly, never to make a paſſionate man our boſom-friend, nor to be often in his company, leſt by his ill temper our own be exaſperated, or we learn to be like him, imbibe his ſentiments, grow froward, and ſo get a ſnare to our ſouls, involving them in guilt, and expoſing ourſelves thereby to eternal ruin.

[a] Chap. vi. 1. & xi. 15.

26. [a] Be not thou one of them that ſtrike hands, or of them that are ſureties for debts. 27. If thou haſt nothing to pay, why ſhould he take away thy bed from under thee?

v. 26, 27. Many cautions we have had againſt raſh ſuretiſhip, and more are neceſſary to deter us from it. We muſt have nothing to do with thoſe extravagants, who, having ruined themſelves, ſeek to maintain their credit a little longer, by engaging others to be bound for them. It were folly to ſtrike hands with ſuch, if we have any thing to loſe; and if we have not, then it were the height of injuſtice; for it is the vileſt of all knavery, when we know our own inſolvency, to run in debt ourſelves, or give our word for another, in order to defraud the creditor, who is unacquainted with our deſperate circumſtances. Provoked by ſuch impoſition, no marvel he ſhould be ſevere, and not ſpare even the bed we lie on.

[b] Deut. xix. 14. & xxvii. 17. Chap. xxiii. 10.
‡ Or, bound.

28. [b] Remove not the ancient ‡ land-mark which thy fathers have ſet.

v. 28. The boundaries of property are ſacred, and never to be intrenched upon, by open violence or ſecret fraud. Antient cuſtoms claim preſcription, and the ſettled conſtitution of the government, eſtabliſhed by our forefathers, we ſhould maintain inviolate.

‡ Heb. the obſcure.

29. Seeſt thou a man diligent in his buſineſs? he ſhall ſtand before kings, he ſhall not ſtand before ‡ mean men.

v. 29. Diligence, attention, and diſpatch in buſineſs, are the great commendation to wiſe rulers, and the way to riſe; for he that is active and faithful in the improvement of a little, ſhews he is fit to be entruſted with more; ſuch therefore they chuſe to employ. In our ſpiritual concerns this will be alſo eminently verified: the King of kings will advance thoſe who have been faithful in that which is leaſt, commend their diligence, and cauſe them to enter into his everlaſting preſence and joy.

CHAP. XXIII.

1. WHEN thou ſitteſt to eat with a ruler, conſider diligently what is before thee. 2. And put a knife to thy throat, if thou be a man given to appetite. 3. Be not deſirous of his dainties: for they are deceitful meat.

v. 1—3. Senſuality is, in many, a ſore beſetting ſin; directions are therefore laid down how to behave when at the great man's table, where delicacies of meat and drink of every kind invite to indulge the appetite; the more tempting to thoſe who are leſs uſed to ſuch dainty fare.

1. Conſider diligently what is before thee; the company, that nothing may offend them: the table; what is moſt proper, not what is moſt luxurious: eſpecially conſider whoſe eye is there, that, whether we eat or drink, we may do all to the glory of God.

2. Put a knife to thy throat; refrain from all exceſs, as being mortally dangerous: the more temptations are before us, the more watchful need we be. And this is eſpecially needful, if thou be a man given to appetite, and naturally inclined to indulge, and reliſhing highly theſe delicacies; deny thyſelf, and mortify the cravings of inordinate appetite.

3. Be not deſirous of his dainties; culling every nice bit, and eating to pamper luſt, not to relieve hunger; for they are deceitful meat. Sweet as they are to the taſte, they will turn ſour on the ſtomach. By them men are betrayed to divulge their ſecrets; and, what is worſe than all the other evils, they ſteal away the heart from God, ſenſualize the ſoul, and render it utterly unfit for the ſervice or the enjoyment of God.

[a] Chap. xxviii. 20. 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.
[b] Chap. iii. 5.

4. [a] Labour not to be rich: [b] ceaſe from thine own wiſdom. 5. Wilt thou ſet thine eyes upon that which is not? for riches certainly make themſelves wings, they flee away as an eagle towards heaven.

v. 4, 5. Covetouſneſs is as common and as dangerous as ſenſuality; and to be overcharged with the cares of this life, is equally pernicious to the ſoul, as to be overcharged with ſurfeiting and drunkenneſs. Earneſtly therefore Solomon diſſuades from inordinate love of money: Labour not to be rich; eager in the purſuit, till weary and out of breath, as the word implies. A diligent care for a family is commendable, and to grow rich by honeſt induſtry, far from criminal; but to make wealth our object and firſt concern, and for the ſake of it to be ſo immerſed in the world, as to be diſqualified for caring for the ſoul, this is fatal. Ceaſe therefore from thine own wiſdom; regard not the acquiſition of riches, as the proof of wiſdom; depend not on thy own ſchemes and contrivances; ceaſe from all anxious and diſquieting thoughtfulneſs and ſollicitude; for it is loſt labour to riſe up early, and lie down late, unleſs God give ſucceſs to the undertaking. Two things he urges to ſupport his exhortation:

1. The vanity of riches, when they are gotten. Why wilt thou ſet thine eyes upon that which is not? Glittering as they appear in the eye of ſenſe, they are really mere nothings; can neither eaſe an aching head, much leſs relieve a wounded heart. They can no more ſatisfy the cravings of an immortal ſoul, than the huſks could relieve the prodigal's hunger; and as they daily periſh in the uſing, at death they vaniſh as a dream.

2. They are highly precarious; for riches certainly make themſelves wings; by a thouſand methods the providence of God may deprive us of them: ſcarce have we feaſted our eyes upon them, ere they take flight as an eagle towards heaven, ſuddenly, haſtily, irrecoverably, and leave thoſe who, like Micah, make them their god, to lament their miſery, deſtitute of all other conſolation.

[c] Pſ. cxli. 4.

6. [c] Eat not thou the bread of him that hath an evil eye, neither deſire thou his dainty meats. 7. For as he thinketh in his heart, ſo is he: Eat and drink, ſaith he to thee, but his heart is not with thee. 8. The morſel which thou haſt eaten, ſhalt thou vomit up, and loſe thy ſweet words.

v. 6—8. This world is full of deceit; many are very free of their compliments, who never mean to have their profeſſions put to the proof.

1. The perſon is deſcribed. One who pretends to give the heartieſt welcome, invites you to eat and drink freely, and affects to entertain you with the higheſt politeneſs, yet eyes every morſel; and, however his lips ſpeak fair, his niggard heart grudges the entertainment; and, whilſt he affects liberality, his covetouſneſs does penance to his pride.

2. The admonition given. Eat not his bread, neither deſire his dainties: refuſe his invitations, nor ſit down at his table; for if thou doſt, his inſincerity and ſordidneſs will appear, and embitter the entertainment. The conſciouſneſs of being an unwelcome gueſt will make the ſtomach nauſeate the food, and thou wilt grieve to have thrown away ſo many thanks for his civilities, when they are found to be utterly inſincere, and mere unmeaning compliments.

[d] Chap. ix. Mat. vii. 6.

9. [d] Speak not in the ears of a fool; for he will deſpiſe the wiſdom of thy words.

v. 9. When we have proved a man profane, and a ſcoffer at godlineſs, the wiſeſt admonitions are uſeleſs, and our pearls not to be caſt before ſuch ſwine: ſo far from knowing their value, they will trample them under their feet.

[e] Deut. xix. 14. & xxvii. 17. Chap. xxii. 28.
[f] Job xxxi. 21. Chap. xxii. 23.

10. [e] Remove not the old land-mark; and enter not into the fields of the fatherleſs. 11. For [f] their redeemer is mighty; he ſhall plead their cauſe with thee.

v. 10, 11. They who are moſt helpleſs ſhould be treated with tendereſt compaſſion. It is aggravated guilt to oppreſs the fatherleſs, incroach on their property, treſpaſs on their lands, or plunder their ſubſtance. Nor ſhall it be done with impunity, unable as they are to defend themſelves; their Redeemer is mighty, yea, almighty; he ſhall plead their cauſe with thee, and woe to thoſe againſt whom he riſes up in judgment.

[g] Chap. xiii. 24. & xix. 18. & xxii. 15. & xxix. 15, 17.

12. Apply thine heart unto inſtruction, and thine ears to the words of knowledge. 13. [g] Withhold not correction from the child: for if thou beateſt him with the rod, he ſhall not die. 14. Thou ſhalt beat him with the rod, and ſhalt deliver his ſoul from hell. 15.

My ſon, [h] if thine heart be wiſe, my heart ſhall rejoice, ‡ even mine. 16. Yea, my reins ſhall rejoice, when thy lips ſpeak right things.

[h] Chap. xxix. 3.
‡ Or, Even I will rejoice.

v. 12—16. We have here the duty of parents and children, and the comfort ariſing from the mutual diſcharge of the relation they bear to each other.

1. A parent muſt inſtruct, a child attend, and apply his heart to learn the words of knowledge, the doctrines and precepts of the divine word, whereby he may become wiſe unto ſalvation.

2. A parent muſt correct, a child ſubmiſſively bow under the chaſtening rod. It is as painful to the tender father's heart to inflict, as it can be to the ſon to ſuffer the correction; but it is abſolutely neceſſary, when their evil tempers call for this check, and muſt not be with-held; only it muſt be done without paſſion, and accompanied with the gracious expoſtulation, and then he ſhall not die, the ſtroke will not be ſo ſevere as to hurt him: it will be the means of preſerving him from thoſe evil courſes, which might bring him to an ignominious death; and, under God's bleſſing, effect a reformation of heart, and ſave his ſoul from hell. For this ſhould be every parent's chief deſign, deſire, and prayer, reſpecting their children, that God would make both his inſtructions and corrections effectual to this great end, the ſalvation of their ſouls.

3. The bleſſing will be mutual. When he ſees his labours ſucceed, the parent will rejoice in beholding the wiſdom of his ſon's heart, evidenced in his whole converſation and conduct, thank God for ſuch a child, and depart in peace, comfortably aſſured he ſhall leave thoſe behind him, who will tread in his ſteps, and ſerve his father's God. And thus to be made wiſe in heart, and learn to ſpeak and act aright, will be a ſon's greateſt joy: he will reap the benefit of the inſtructions and corrections he hath received, and count it among his chief mercies to have had ſuch a parent.

17. [i] Let not thine heart envy ſinners: but [k] be thou in the fear of the LORD all the day long. 18. [l] For ſurely there is † an end, and thine expectation ſhall not be cut off.

[i] Pſ. xxxvii. 1. & lxxiii. 3. Chap. iii. 31. & xxiv. 1.
[k] Chap. xxviii. 14.
[l] Ibid. xxiv. 14.
† Or a reward.

v. 17, 18. When we ſee the proſperity of ſinners, we are too apt to envy them their abundance, but it is our folly; for we have a better portion infinitely than they enjoy, when walking in the fear of the Lord all the day long; the ſenſe of his love and favour, is better than all manner of riches; and if we mark the end, ſhall never wiſh an exchange, ſince all our momentary trials ſhall quickly have their period, and our faith and hope be loſt in the fruition of eternal bleſſedneſs; but the wicked ſhall lie down in torments intolerable, uninterrupted, everlaſting.

19. Hear thou, my ſon, and be wiſe, and guide thine heart in the way. 20. [m] Be not amongſt wine-bibbers; amongſt riotous eaters † of fleſh. 21. For the drunkard and the glutton ſhall come to poverty: and [n] drowſineſs ſhall clothe a man with rags.

[m] Iſa. v. 22. Luke xxi. 34. Rom. xiii. 13. Eph. v. 18.
† Heb. Of their fleſh.
[n] Chap. xix. 15.

v. 19—21. Repeated calls to engage our attention, intimate how prone we are to let our minds wander.

1. We are in general exhorted to hear the inſtructions of parents, miniſters, or others, who kindly wiſh to direct us right; and be wiſe, not merely hearing, but receiving the words of knowledge, and that evidenced by guiding our hearts in the way, the way of faith and holineſs, which leads to glory.

2. In particular we are warned againſt gluttony and drunkenneſs; vices moſt odious to God, moſt hurtful to ſociety, and moſt deſtructive to ourſelves, both to body and ſoul, fame and fortune, in time and in eternity: to avoid which, we muſt ſhun the company of drunkards, and refuſe to join in the entertainments of the luxurious; for unleſs we avoid the temptation, we ſhall not long keep from the ſin. To deter us from theſe vices, the immediate evil conſequences are inſiſted upon, ſince preſent danger influences the moſt, beyond any fear of future recompenſe: they are the high road to ruin, will waſte our ſubſtance, enfeeble our bodies, ſtupify our faculties, diſqualify us for buſineſs, and bring us to a ſtate wretched, contemptible, in want and rags to ſuffer, the fruit of our folly and wickedneſs.

22. [o] Hearken unto thy father that begat thee, and deſpiſe not thy mother when ſhe is old. 23. [p] Buy the truth, and ſell it not; alſo wiſdom, and inſtruction, and underſtanding. 24. [q] The father of the righteous ſhall greatly rejoice: and he that begeteth a wiſe child ſhall have joy of him. 25. Thy father and thy mother ſhall be glad, and ſhe that bare thee ſhall rejoice.

[o] Chap. i. 8. & xxx. 17.
[p] Chap. iv. 5, 7.
[q] Chap. x. 1. & xv. 20. Ver. 15.

v. 22—25. We have here,

1. Parental reverence enjoined. The father who begat, and the mother who brought us forth, as they have peculiar authority over us, and poſſeſs the tendereſt regard for us, therefore, attention to them is not more our duty than our intereſt; nor muſt we deſpiſe them when old, or jeſt at the grave advice of our aged mothers; experience is beſt learnt by years, and grey heads the wiſeſt counſellors.

2. An exhortation to prize highly the truth, the revealed word of God, the goſpel of our ſalvation, with all the wiſdom, inſtruction, and underſtanding therein contained. We muſt buy it as the moſt deſirable acquiſition, which we ſpare no labour or price to purchaſe; reading, hearing, meditating on the ſcriptures, praying over them, conferring with thoſe, whoſe knowledge and experience is moſt eminent; and, when poſſeſſed of the truth, holding it faſt in profeſſion and practice, never ſelling it for the riches, honours, or pleaſures of the world; or parting with it through any fears of reproach, loſs, or ſuffering.

3. The ſatisfaction this will afford to pious parents, and to give them joy, will be the delight of every gracious child. They greatly will rejoice to ſee their offſpring thus wiſe in the knowledge, and righteous in the practice of the truth; and it will be their comfort and credit in their old age, and ſerve to chear thoſe evil days, when they would otherwiſe have ſaid, there is no pleaſure in them.

26. My ſon, [r] give me thine heart, and let thine eyes obſerve my ways. 27. For [s] an whore is a deep ditch; and a ſtrange woman is a narrow pit. 28. [t] She alſo lieth in wait † as for a prey, and increaſeth the tranſgreſſors among men.

[r] 2 Cor. viii. 5.
[s] Chap. xxii. 14. Eccleſ. vii. 26.
[t] Chap. vii. 12.
† Or as a robber.

v. 26—28. The great thing Chriſt requires of his children is their heart; for without this, all beſides is nothing worth; and moſt reaſonable is the demand, when his title to it is ſo evident: and where the heart is right with God, our ways will be directed to pleaſe him; we ſhall eye the path of duty to walk in it, and the leadings of his providence, to improve under every diſpenſation, and in this way ſhall be preſerved from evil; eſpecially from that moſt fatal ſnare of youthful luſts, in which dreadful whirlpool ſo many ſouls are drowned eternally. For an whore is a deep ditch, and a ſtrange woman is a narrow pit, whoſe lewdneſs and covetouſneſs are inſatiable; and thoſe who fall therein, ſink for the moſt part irrecoverably, never to riſe again. She alſo lieth in wait as for a prey, ravenous as a beaſt of the foreſt, and practiſing every wile to draw men to her toils, and plunder them, not only of their money, but what is infinitely more precious, of their virtue, honour, and peace of mind: and increaſeth the tranſgreſſors among men; drunkenneſs, theft, lying, ſwearing, and all the train of abominations naturally flow from ſuch a connection; or ſhe increaſeth the perfidious; for her they break the covenant of marriage, are faithleſs to men; and worſt of all, treacherouſly depart from God, to their everlaſting deſtruction. Let him that readeth, underſtand, and fly the fatal toil; be deaf to enticement, and mark the end of thoſe ways.

29. [u] Who hath woe? who hath ſorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cauſe? who hath redneſs of eyes? 30. [x] They that tarry long at the wine, they that go to ſeek [y] mixt wine. 31. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itſelf aright. 32. At the laſt it biteth like a ſerpent, and ſtingeth † like an adder. 33. Thine eyes ſhall behold ſtrange women, and thine heart ſhall utter perverſe things. 34. Yea, thou ſhalt be as he that lieth down in ‡ the midſt of the ſea, or as he that lieth upon the top of a maſt. 35. They have ſtricken me, ſhalt thou ſay, and I was not ſick; they have beaten me, and I felt it not: [z] when ſhall I awake? I will ſeek it yet again.

[u] Iſa. v. 11, 12.
[x] Chap. xx. 1.
[y] Pſ. lxxv. 8. Chap. ix. 2.
† Or a cockatrice.
‡ Heb. The heart.
[z] Deut. xxix. 19. Iſa. lvi. 12.

v. 29—35. Drunkenneſs is the door at which all miſery and miſchief enters, and therefore we have,

1. The fatal effects of it ſet before us, in order to deter us from the ſin.

(1.) It is the cauſe of endleſs quarrels. Inflamed with wine, and reaſon loſt, the tongue is let looſe, ſcurrilous, abuſive, provoking; contentions ariſe on the moſt frivolous grounds, or none; blows and bloodſhed enſue, and long woe and ſorrow are the dire conſequences. Whilſt in the redneſs of eyes, beaten in the fray, or inflamed with the debauch, men carry about with them their brand of infamy, and pain and deformity are their preſent puniſhment.

(2.) It excites to all manner of lewdneſs. The bottle ends with a whore, or ſends the drunkard neighing after his neighbour's wife, ready for every ſcene of guilt, and inſenſible to every danger.

(3.) In their cups men utter perverſe things; reveal their ſecrets, betray their truſts, their talk is obſcene, rude, profane, abſurd; at which, in ſoberer hours, they will be overwhelmed with ſhame.

(4.) They are giddy, their feet ſtagger, their heads ſwim, their eyes roll, as a ſhip in a ſtorm; and as a man aſleep on the top of a maſt, they are ſecure, and thoughtleſs of the impending danger, though ready to ruſh into the abyſs of miſery: they are deaf to rebuke, and corrections make no impreſſion.

(5.) They are hardned. Notwithſtanding all that is paſt, no ſooner is the drunkard awake, than, like the dog, he returns to his vomit again; and perhaps it is his language of boaſting to his companions, v. 35. how well he came off the night before, unhurt amidſt the blows and beating; thus glorying in his ſhame.

(6.) Men muſt feel at laſt the dire effects of drunkenneſs in this world, when their bodies, bloated as with poiſon, grow loathſome with diſeaſe, and tormented with the palſy, dropſy, gout, and all the train of miſeries drinking brings on; and their ſouls, with horror, reflect upon the paſt, and are terrified with the fearful looking-for of judgment to come. But if ſuch men live and die ſtupid, their damnation ſlumbereth not; the worm that never dies, and the fire that never ſhall be quenched, awaits them; when they ſhall lie down in torments, and nothing be able to allay the fierceneſs of theſe everlaſting burnings.

2. The admonition given us. We muſt fly from the temptation, if we mean to eſcape the ſin: we are ſafe only by keeping out of harm's way: and three directions are here given; (1.) Not to ſeek ſuch company, but avoid them, and ſhun the taverns which the drunkards haunt. (2.) Not to tarry long at the wine; when men ſit in company, one glaſs is apt to draw on another; and if the ſenſes are not drowned, yet the ſoul is hurt, and the precious hours of life idly ſquandered. (3.) Not to look upon the wine with inordinate deſire and delight, when it is red, which was moſt prized in Canaan, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itſelf aright, ſparkles in the glaſs, its colour beautiful, its flavour exquiſite. The more tempting the bait, the leſs it will bear to be tampered with: ſipping and taſting draws on to drinking.

CHAP. XXIV.

1.[a] BE not thou envious againſt evil men, neither deſire to be with them. 2. For [b] their heart ſtudieth deſtruction, and their lips talk of miſchief.

a Pſ. xxxvii. 1, &c. & lxxiii. 3. Chap. iii. 31. & xxiii. 17. Ver. 19.
b Pſ. x. 7.

v. 1, 2. The ſinner's proſperity is little to be envied, and their company far from deſirable; their preſent ſtudy and talk is miſchievous and deſtructive, and their end is perdition; they are therefore rather to be ſhunned than courted, and ſhould raiſe our indignation, not our envy.

3. Through wiſdom is an houſe builded, and by underſtanding it is eſtabliſhed: 4. And by knowledge ſhall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleaſant riches. 5.[c] A wiſe man is † ſtrong, yea, a man of knowledge increaſeth ſtrength. 6. For [d] by wiſe counſel thou ſhalt make war: and in multitude of counſellors there is ſafety.

c Chap. xxi. 22. Eccleſ. ix. 16.
† Heb. In ſtrength.
d Chap. xi. 14. & xv. 22. & xx. 18. Luke xiv. 31.

v. 3—6. However by unjuſt methods the wicked may haſtily amaſs wealth, yet honeſty will be found the beſt policy, and what is wiſely acquired under God's bleſſing, will wear beſt, and laſt longeſt.

1. In our temporal concerns, wiſdom and prudent management will build up our families; make our circumſtances flouriſhing, bring us riches, pleaſant as precious, becauſe got under the divine bleſſing, and doubly enjoyed under a ſenſe of God's love. It will give us ſtrength to preſerve and defend what we have acquired; and if war be neceſſary, whether in the field, or at the bar, we ſhall be ſafe, having with other wiſe counſellors foreſeen and provided for every emergence.

2. In our ſpiritual concerns, wiſdom is moſt needful: our ſoul is our houſe, and the foundation muſt be laid on Jeſus the rock of ages; the chambers of all our faculties furniſhed with precious and pleaſant graces, the moſt durable and invaluable riches: thus wiſe unto ſalvation, we ſhall be ſupported againſt all the attacks of our ſpiritual enemies, ſtrong in the Lord, and the power of his might; yea, we ſhall be enabled to go from ſtrength to ſtrength, and, ſafe from all the powers of evil, be made more than conquerors at laſt, through him, who is the wonderful counſellor, and the everlaſting refuge of his people.

7. [e] Wiſdom is too high for a fool: he openeth not his mouth in the gate.

e Pſal. x. 5. Chap. xiv. 6.

v. 7. Wiſdom is too high for a fool, he has no capacity for attaining it, eſpecially divine wiſdom; which, though deep read in the ſciences and philoſophy, the natural man cannot know, being deſtitute of that ſpiritual diſcernment, without which the myſteries of God appear fooliſhneſs. He openeth not his mouth in the gate, he is not qualified to ſpeak in the preſence of the wiſe, and if he doth, is diſregarded.

8. He that deviſeth to do evil, ſhall be called a miſchievous perſon.

v. 8. They who do ill things, deſerve an ill name; and the more art and contrivance there is in ſin, the greater the malignity, and the more miſchievous the author.

9. [f] The thought of fooliſhneſs is ſin: and the ſcorner is an abomination to men.

f Acts viii. 22.

v. 9. God is the ſearcher of hearts. Thoughts of fooliſhneſs are ſins already committed in his eye; or, the thoughts of the fooliſh are ſin, evil continually; and a ſcorner, who ſcoffs at God and godlineſs, and ridicules its profeſſors, is an abomination to men, juſtly abhorred as a dangerous man, and a peſt to ſociety.

10. If thou faint in the day of adverſity, thy ſtrength is † ſmall.

† Heb. Narrow.

v. 10. Days of adverſity are trying ſeaſons; and under diſeaſe and pain of body, deep providential afflictions, fierce perſecutions, or more burdenſome ſpiritual diſtreſſes, we are too apt to faint, and prove how ſmall was that ſtrength, of which, when at eaſe, we thought ourſelves poſſeſſed. Need have we therefore to be looking up for greater ſtrength than our own, to him who giveth ſtrength to the weak, and to thoſe who have no might, increaſeth ſtrength.

11. [g] If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and thoſe that are ready to be ſlain: 12. If thou ſayeſt, Behold, we knew it not: doth not he [h] that pondereth the heart conſider it? and he that keepeth thy ſoul, doth not he know it? and [i] ſhall not he render to every man according to his works?

g Pſ. lxxxii. 4. Iſa. lviii. 6, 7. 1 John iii. 16.
h Jer. xvii. 9.
i Job xxxiv. 11. Pſ. lxii. 12. Jer. xxxii. 19. Rom. ii. 6. Rev. xxii. 12.

v. 11, 12. Injured innocence demands our interpoſition, and the more imminent the danger, the more forcible the obligation to haſten our aſſiſtance. Whether they are born down by falſe accuſations, their lives endangered by fraud or violence, by perils of robbers at land, and ſtorms at ſea, or their ſouls led away by ſeducers, and expoſed to eternal death, we are bound to fly to their reſcue, and ſpare no pains or labour to extricate them from their diſtreſs. Nor muſt we think to get off with plauſible excuſes, pretending we knew it not, becauſe we turned away our face, and paſſed by on the other ſide; or knew him not, as if becauſe he was perſonally unknown, he might be unnoticed and neglected. The law of univerſal charity, and the love of juſtice, obliges us to regard every man as our neighbour; and though among men our excuſes may paſs, yet God's ſcrutiny is not to be thus evaded. He pondereth the heart, and knows the evil principles which ſwayed our conduct; and will render to every man according to his works, when they who ſhewed no mercy, may expect to find none.

13. My ſon, eat thou honey, becauſe it is good; and the honey-comb, which is ſweet † to the taſte: 14. [k] So ſhall the knowledge of wiſdom be unto thy ſoul: when thou haſt found it, then [l] there ſhall be a reward, and thy expectation ſhall not be cut off.

† Heb. Upon thy palate.
k Pſ. xix. 10. & cxix. 103.
l Chap. xxiii. 18.

v. 13, 14. To uſe and enjoy the creatures of God, is good; he who gave honey its ſweetneſs, intended it to pleaſe the palate, as well as nouriſh the body. So ſweet, ſo ſtrengthening is wiſdom to the ſoul, as they by experience find, who feed by faith on the great and precious promiſes of the goſpel; and all the pains employed in ſearching after it, in the uſe of the appointed means, will be amply recompenſed, and our expectations fully anſwered; yea, exceeded in the preſent ſatisfaction enjoyed here, and more abundantly in the glory which ſhall follow hereafter.

15. Lay not wait, O wicked man, againſt the dwelling of the righteous: ſpoil not his reſting-place. 16. For [m] a juſt man falleth ſeven times, and riſeth up again: [n] but the wicked ſhall fall into miſchief.

m Job v. 19. Pſ. xxxiv. 19. & xxxvii. 24.
n Amos v. 2. & viii. 14.

v. 15, 16. Vain and impotent are the attempts of malicious wickedneſs. Lay not in wait, O wicked man, againſt the dwelling of the righteous, looking for ſome opportunity to ſpoil his reſting-place, and by fraud, or force, to oppreſs and plunder him, as the wolf devours the harmleſs ſheep: but if the wicked will not hear, the faithful need not fear; God will preſerve them, and puniſh their enemies. For though a juſt man falleth ſeven times, either into affliction, which ſeems principally intended, or into ſin, ſeduced by the power of temptation; yet God will not leave him; by his grace he is renewed unto repentance, or extricated from his troubles, and riſeth up again, perhaps ſtrengthened by his fall; but the wicked ſhall fall into miſchief, from one evil to another, from the troubles on earth to the torments of hell, and ſhall never riſe up again.

Before Chriſt 1000.

17. [o] Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he ſtumbleth: 18. Leſt the LORD ſee it, and it † diſpleaſe him, and he turn away his wrath from him.

o Job xxxi. 29. Pſ. xxxv. 15. Chap. xvii. 5.
† Heb. Be evil in his eyes.

v. 17, 18. Rejoice not in the ſins or ſufferings of thy bittereſt enemy. It is the proof of a revengeful ſpirit, and highly diſpleaſing to God, who knows the ſecrets of the ſoul, and ſees the malicious pleaſure, when it but riſes in the heart; and in juſt puniſhment of ſuch an evil temper, turns away his anger from him, removing the evils he was about to inflict, and by an unexpected reverſe, will bring them upon thee, and change thy joys into bitter ſorrows.

19. [p] † Fret not thyſelf becauſe of evil men, neither be thou envious at the wicked. 20. For there ſhall be no reward to the evil man, [q] the ‡ candle of the wicked ſhall be put out.

p Pſ. xxxvii. 1. Chap. xxiii. 17. Ver. 1.
† Or keep not company with the wicked.
q Job xviii. 5, 6. & xxi. 17. Chap. xiii. 9. & xx. 20.
‡ Or lamp.

v. 19, 20. To envy the wicked, and fret at the diſpenſations of God's providence towards them, is both ſinful and unreaſonable. For glittering as their proſperity appears, there ſhall be no reward to the evil man, their poſſeſſions miniſter no ſubſtantial good, and they have no reward to expect hereafter, but the very contrary: the candle of the wicked ſhall be put out, their good things are often conſumed in this world; at fartheſt, death at leaſt will extinguiſh it, and rob them of all their comfort, and into outer darkneſs they will be caſt, where is weeping and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth; and ſhall we envy ſuch a ſtate?

21. My ſon, fear thou the LORD, [r] and the king: and meddle not with them that are given to change. 22. For their calamity ſhall riſe ſuddenly, and who knoweth the ruin of them both?

r Rom. xiii. 1, &c.

v. 21, 22. 1. We cannot be good chriſtians, unleſs we are loyal ſubjects. Nor will thoſe be long loyal ſubjects, who are deſtitute of the fear of God; for where conſcience engages not obedience from principle, intereſt will ſway; and rebels againſt God will eaſily turn traitors to their king.

2. All innovations are dangerous, and in days like ours, the caution is peculiarly needful: when in the church, even of her pretended ſons, ſo many are diſcontented with thoſe ſtandards of divine truth, the articles of religion, and fain would alter them, to ſquare with their Arminian, Socinian, or deiſtical opinions. And in the ſtate, factious and turbulent ſpirits, pretending the good of the people, labour after changes, whereby their own ambition, or avarice, merely may be gratified: from ſuch, turn away.

3. The ruin of ſuch is near. They who encourage the cabals of faction, labour to bring in the damnable doctrines of man's merit, ſufficiency, and free-will, totally ſubverſive of the grace of the goſpel, ſhall meet ruin ſudden and terrible, when God ariſeth to judge; and how ſoon that may be, who knoweth?

23. Theſe things alſo belong to the wiſe. [s] It is not good to have reſpect of perſons in judgment. 24. [t] He that ſaith unto the wicked, Thou art righteous; him ſhall the people curſe, nations ſhall abhor him. 25. But to them that rebuke him ſhall be delight, and † a good bleſſing ſhall come upon them. 26. Every man ſhall kiſs his lips ‡ that giveth a right anſwer.

s Lev. xix. 15. Deut. i. 17. & xvi. 19. Chap. xviii. 5. & xxviii. 1. John vii. 24.
t Chap. xvii. 15. Iſa. v. 23.
† Heb. A bleſſing of good.
‡ Heb. That anſwereth right words.

v. 23—26. Let wiſe men ſhew the wiſdom they profeſs, by their attention to theſe admonitions, eſpecially judges and magiſtrates, to whom they are particularly addreſſed.

1. Their duty. To ſhew no reſpect of perſons, never influenced by favour, affection, or intereſt, to pervert juſtice, to condemn the innocent, or acquit the guilty; but to pronounce ſentence without partiality, and rebuke the wicked as he deſerves, without connivance at his crimes.

2. The inducement for ſo doing. It is good, pleaſing to God, and right in his eyes. To act with injuſtice, will bring the abhorrence of all good men, and the curſe of the people; whilſt every mouth will praiſe, commend, bleſs, and pray for thoſe beſt friends and trueſt patriots, who, with unſhaken fidelity and uprightneſs, diſcharge the truſts committed to them.

27. [u] Prepare thy work without, and make it fit for thyſelf in the field; and afterwards build thine houſe.

u Luke xiv. 28.

v. 27. Before we begin to build, it is prudent to calculate our expence, and make the neceſſary proviſion of materials; leaſt enlarging our foundation beyond what we can afford, we are undone by our folly. The rage of building hath ruined many, and brought men to ſuch difficulties and debts, that they had been much happier in a cottage, than now in the great houſe.

Before Chriſt 1000.

28. Be not a witneſs againſt thy neighbour without cauſe: and deceive not with thy lips. 29. Say not, [x] I will do ſo to him as he hath done to me: I will render to the man according to his work.

x Chap. xx. 22. Mat. v. 29. Rom. xii. 17, 19.

v. 28, 29. Without charity, there can be no religion. The exerciſe of it is here enjoined.

1. Be not witneſs againſt thy neighbour without cauſe, either in private company, or at the bar of juſtice.

2. Deceive not with thy lips, either thy neighbour, by flattering words and falſe pretences; or others, by reports to his prejudice; or the judge and jury, by partial repreſentations, concealment of the truth, or peremptory falſhood.

3. Retaliate no injuries; think it not a ſufficient reaſon to return evil, becauſe you have received it: all private revenge is criminal, however great the provocation. It is not our buſineſs to puniſh; God ſays, Vengeance is mine; and we intrench on his prerogative, when we refuſe to refer our caſe to him, and will be the executioners of our own wrath: he will not ſuffer it with impunity.

30. I went by the field of the ſlothful, and by the vineyard of the man void of underſtanding: 31. And lo, it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof, and the ſtone-wall thereof was broken down. 32. Then I ſaw, and † conſidered it well: I looked upon it, and received inſtruction. 33. [y] Yet a little ſleep, a little ſlumber, a little folding of the hands to ſleep: 34. [z] So ſhall thy poverty come, as one that travelleth; and thy want as ‡ an armed man.

† Heb. Set my heart.
y Chap. vi. 9. &c.
z Chap x. 4. & xiii. 4. & xx. 4.
‡ Heb. A man of ſhield.

v. 30—34. The obſervations and reflections which this wiſe king makes, are daily verified.

1. In worldly affairs, ſloth and poverty are inſeparably connected. See the picture of a negligent huſbandman; he ſleeps when others wake; his field, uncultivated, is covered with weeds, the hedge broken down, no revenue ariſing to the owner; and, as the neceſſary conſequence of his neglect, want and wretchedneſs ſeize him as an armed man. And this will be the caſe in every trade and buſineſs with thoſe, who, inſtead of diligence and activity, leave their affairs at random, live careleſs and negligent, expoſe themſelves, and neceſſarily ruſh on their ruin. When ſuch objects ſtrike us, we muſt ſtay and pauſe, and learn wiſdom by the reflections we make on their folly.

2. In our ſpiritual concerns, the ſame obſervations hold good. The ſoul of the careleſs ſinner is like this field of the ſlothful, overrun with the rank weeds of corrupt and vile affections; open to the inroads of every temptation; no fruit produced to God's glory, or his own comfort: yet, ſecure he ſleeps on in the devil's arms, and cares not to be diſturbed in his fatal dream; till ſeized at laſt by death, and hurried to a throne of judgment, too late he diſcovers his miſerable plight, and receives the doom of the ſlothful in the place of torment. Such negligence in others, ſhould quicken our diligence, to break up the fallow ground of our hearts, to root up the thorns and nettles of corrupt deſires, which are natives of the ſoil, to guard againſt the entry of temptation; and, watching unto prayer, daily to be working out our ſalvation, and bringing forth thoſe fruits of faith and holineſs, whereby ourſelves may be enriched, and which, through Jeſus Chriſt, are to the praiſe and glory of God.

CHAP. XXV.

1. THESE are alſo proverbs of Solomon, which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied out.

700.

v. 1. Here begins a new collection of proverbs, ſpoken by Solomon, the author of the former, and copied at the command of King Hezekiah, from ſome public record, or from thoſe mentioned, 1 Kings iv. 32. and perhaps with a particular view to his own uſe and improvement; many of them having eſpecial regard to kings, and their government.

2. [a] It is the glory of God to conceal a thing: but the honour of kings is to ſearch out a matter.

a Deut. xxix. 29. Rom. xi. 33.

v. 2. The firſt verſe contained the title; here begins the ſubject.

1. It is the glory of God to conceal a thing; his counſels are unfathomable, his decrees ſecret, he needs no advice in his government, and it were preſumption in us to queſtion his reaſons, who giveth an account of none of his matters. Some apply this to the pardon of ſin, which is indeed God's ſole prerogative and great glory.

2. The honour of kings is to ſearch out a matter. The omniſcient God needs no enquiry, for all things are naked and open to him; but his delegates upon earth muſt be at much pains,

Before Chriſt 700.

muſt know thoroughly the rule of his word, and ſift out every circumſtance of the caſes which come before them, if they would miniſter impartial juſtice.

3. The heaven for height, and the earth for depth, and the heart of kings † is unſearchable.

† Heb. There is no ſearching.

v. 3. Wiſe kings plan their deſigns with deep conſideration, and conceal them with impenetrable ſecreſy; on this the ſucceſs of them often depends. It is not for ſubjects to pry into the reaſons of ſtate, or pretend to cenſure haſtily thoſe proceedings, the motives and deſign of which they cannot diſcover.

4. Take away the droſs from the ſilver, and there ſhall come forth a veſſel for the finer. 5. [b] Take away the wicked from before the king, and his throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed in righteouſneſs.

[b] Chap. xx. 8.

v. 4, 5. Magiſtrates muſt not bear the ſword in vain. The wicked, like droſs, muſt be taken away, by the wholeſome ſeverity of well executed laws; and eſpecially all evil counſellors and miniſters ſhould be baniſhed from the royal preſence, and then the nation will flouriſh, as ſilver ſhines purified in the fire, and the ſtability of the throne be ſecured, God's bleſſing and protection upholding and maintaining ſuch a righteous government.

6. † Put not forth thyſelf in the preſence of the king, and ſtand not in the place of great men. 7. For [c] better it is that it be ſaid unto thee, Come up hither: than that thou ſhouldſt be put lower in the preſence of the prince whom thine eyes have ſeen.

† Heb. Set not out thy glory.
[c] Luke xiv. 8—10.

v. 6, 7. Bold intruſion, or a vain-glorious diſplay of our wealth before our betters, is diſguſting, and call for ſome mortification; whilſt genuine modeſty and humility is the higheſt recommendation to favour, in the eyes of a wiſe king: and much more for our honour will it be, to be called up from the lower place we have modeſtly taken, than thruſt out with ſhame, as an impertinent intruder, in the midſt of all the company, and in the preſence of the prince. To this, our Saviour ſeems to allude, Luke xiv. 9.

8. Go not forth haſtily to ſtrive, leſt thou know not what to do in the end thereof, when thy neighbour hath put thee to ſhame. 9. [d] Debate thy cauſe with thy neighbour himſelf; and † diſcover not a ſecret to another: 10. Leſt he that heareth it, put thee to ſhame, and thine infamy turn not away.

[d] Mat. v. 25. & xviii. 15.
† Or diſcover not the ſecret of another.

v. 8—10. If we would take the wiſe man's advice, how many lawſuits might be prevented!

1. Do nothing raſhly. Commence not the ſuit whilſt paſſion is high; take the advice of thoſe who are impartial; conſider whether the loſs we have ſuſtained, is not leſs than the certain expence and trouble we muſt incur, beſide the uncertainty of the iſſue.

2. Try firſt every amicable method. Debate thy cauſe with thy neighbour himſelf, hear what he hath to plead in his defence, and ſee if, when with calmneſs the affair is canvaſſed, it may not better be finiſhed by a friendly compromiſe, than driven to extremities: and if the matter be a ſecret, not fit to be divulged, the more need there is to keep it from the eyes of the public: or it may be rendered, reveal not the ſecret of another; if there be a quarrel, take not this revenge to betray his ſecrets, that in time of intimacy he may have confided to thee, for this were baſe and ungenerous.

3. This will both prevent loſs, and ſecure our reputation; for the cauſe may at laſt be decided againſt us, and the coſts lie at our own door; and not only we ſhall ſuffer the mortification of being vanquiſhed, but gain the infamous character of being litigious; a blot that never may be wiped away.

11. [e] A word fitly ſpoken is like apples of gold in † pictures of ſilver. 12. As an ear-ring of gold, and an ornament of fine gold, ſo is a wiſe reprover upon an obedient ear.

[e] Chap. xv. 23.
† Or net-work.

v. 11, 12. We have here,

1. The excellence of a word ſeaſonably ſpoken; pertinent to the caſe, and ſatisfactory to the hearer: it is as pleaſing as apples of gold, reſembling them in colour, ſerved up in net-work, or baſkets of ſilver.

2. The preciouſneſs of a wiſe rebuke. It is moſt highly ornamental; as a jewel of gold, both to him who gives it, and him who receives it, when adminiſtered with tenderneſs, yet fidelity, and heard with deep acknowledgment of the kindneſs, and inſtant correction of the fault.

13. [f] As the cold of ſnow in the time of harveſt, ſo is a faithful meſſenger to them that ſend him: for he refreſheth the ſoul of his maſters.

[f] Chap. xiii. 17.

v. 13. As the cold of ſnow (which, in the Eaſtern countries was preſerved, as ice with us, to cool their liquors) is moſt refreſhing in the ſultry days of harveſt, ſo pleaſing to thoſe who ſend him, is a faithful meſſenger; who, zealous for his maſter's good, diſcharges the truſt repoſed in him, to his fulleſt ſatiſfaction. They who have ſo great a maſter as the Lord of glory, and ſo important a meſſage as that, on which the ſalvation of immortal ſouls depends, need approve their fidelity, and will then find gracious acceptance, 2 Cor. xi. 15.

14. [g] Whoſo boaſteth himſelf † of a falſe gift, is like [h] clouds and winds without rain.

[g] Chap. xx. 6.
† Heb. In a gift of falſehood.
[h] Jude xii.

v. 14. All boaſting is a ſure ſign of emptineſs. They who puff their own great benevolence, and make a talk of what they intend to do, when in fact they do nothing, are like the clouds that paſs away, raiſe our expectations of rain, but let down not a drop.

15. [i] By long forbearing is a prince perſuaded, and a ſoft tongue breaketh the bone.

[i] Gen. xxxii. 4, &c. 1 Sam. xxv. 24, &c. Chap. xv. 1. & xvi. 14.

v. 15. The good advice which princes reject in heat, if we wait a while, and humbly offer our reaſons with patience, may prevail at laſt. And when anger riſes, a ſoft anſwer does more than the moſt obſtinate reſiſtance, and bends the moſt violent to yield.

* * *

16. [k] Haſt thou found honey? eat ſo much as is ſufficient for thee, leſt thou be filled therewith, and vomit it.

[k] Ver. 27.

v. 16. The creature comforts we poſſeſs, God wills we ſhould enjoy, not abuſe; enough is a feaſt, exceſs is its own puniſhment. This muſt be extended to all lawful pleaſures; with temperance uſed, they are good; when inordinately, they engage our affections, or waſte our time; they ceaſe to be innocent, and ſurfeit the ſoul.

17. † Withdraw thy foot from thy neighbour's houſe: leſt he be ‡ weary of thee, and ſo hate thee.

† Or let thy foot be ſeldom in thy neighbour's houſe.
‡ Heb. Full of thee.

v. 17. To maintain a friendly intercourſe with our neighbours, is pleaſing; but too frequent viſits are troubleſome, and will render our room more agreeable than our company.

18. [l] A man that beareth falſe witneſs againſt his neighbour, is a maul, and a ſword, and a ſharp arrow.

[l] Pſal. xii. 4. Chap. xii. 18.

v. 18. The moſt dangerous and mortal weapon is the tongue of a falſe witneſs, againſt which, the pureſt innocence affords no protection.

19. Confidence in an unfaithful man in time of trouble, is like a broken tooth and a foot out of joint.

v. 19. Such a one will not only diſappoint our expectations from him, but our truſt upon him will add to our anguiſh; or the words may be rendered, the confidence of an unfaithful man, whatever was the object of it, his wealth, his wiſdom, or his righteouſneſs, in time of trouble, and that time is near, will fail, and leave him in anguiſh to bewail (too late) his folly. They who would have a ſupport which will not fail them, muſt ceaſe from all beſides, and ſtay themſelves on the rock of ages; none ever truſted in him, and were confounded.

20. As he that taketh away a garment in cold weather, and as vinegar upon nitre: [m] ſo is he that ſingeth ſongs to an heavy heart.

[m] Dan. vi. 18.

v. 20. It is cruel to exaſperate the griefs of the afflicted, and mock at their miſeries; and abſurd with unſeaſonable mirth to entertain the heavy heart. We muſt rather weep with thoſe that weep, and with ſympathetic tenderneſs ſeek to alleviate the ſorrows of the miſerable.

21. [n] If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat: and if he be thirſty, give him water to drink: 22. For thou ſhalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and [o] the LORD ſhall reward thee.

[n] Exod. xxiii. 4. Mat. v. 44. Rom. xii. 20.
[o] 2 Sam. xvi. 12.

v. 21, 22. To love our enemies, is no new commandment; and that not in word and tongue only, but expreſſed in every act of kindneſs to them, in the time of their diſtreſs: and hard muſt that heart be, that is not melted with ſuch generoſity; at leaſt, our labour ſhall not be in vain: if they continue inveterate, God will reward us with a ſenſe of his love here, and an inheritance in his kingdom hereafter.

23. [p] The north-wind † driveth away rain: ſo doth an angry countenance a backbiting tongue.

[p] Job xxxvii. 22.
† Or bringeth forth rain; ſo doth a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.

v. 23.

Before Chriſt 700.

v. 23. It is the countenance too commonly given to the tales of the ſlanderer, that emboldens him to proceed; but a good man cannot bear to hear the abſent reviled, and therefore with a frown, if he can do no more, teſtifies his diſpleaſure: a ſufficient check often to ſilence the tongue of calumny, and drive ſuch away, as the north wind doth the rain, confounded and aſhamed.

24. [q] It is better to dwell in a corner of the houſe-top, than with a brawling woman and in a wide houſe.

[q] Chap. xix. 13. & xxi. 9, 19.

v. 24. This obſervation is repeated, chap. xxi. 9. and much to be pitied is that miſerable man, thus yoked to contention and wretchedneſs.

25. As cold waters to a thirſty ſoul: ſo is good news from a far country.

[r] Luke ii. 10.

v. 25. Good news from a far country, where our friends or fortunes are, is with impatience expected, with delight heard, pleaſant to the ear as cold waters to the parched tongue. The goſpel is the beſt of tidings, ſent from heaven to comfort miſerable ſinners; with what delight ſhould we hear, with what eagerneſs welcome, the bleſſed meſſage of pardon, grace, and ſalvation, which it brings!

26. A righteous man falling down before the wicked, is as a troubled fountain, and a corrupt ſpring.

v. 26. Either when he is run down by the power of oppreſſors, and the fountains of juſtice are corrupted; or when, thro' fear or ſhame, he gives way, not daring to reprove the wicked, or making ſome baſe compliances with them, to the diſcredit of his profeſſion, and the troubling the hearts of the ſincere: or worſt of all, when he is drawn by the enticements of the abandoned into ſome open and ſcandalous ſin, that diſhonours God, wounds his own conſcience, grieves the faithful, diſcourages the weak, and hardens the impenitent. Lord, keep thy ſervants from preſumptuous ſin; let not the adverſary triumph with malicious joy, and cry, There! there! ſo would we have it!

27. [s] It is not good to eat much honey: ſo for men to ſearch their own glory, is not glory.

[s] Ver. 16.

v. 27. The pleaſures of ſenſe are dangerous, and appetite indulged to exceſs, breeds ſickneſs, and turns the moſt wholeſome food into poiſon. So, to be vain-glorious, and uſing every means to ſecure popular applauſe, is to render ourſelves deſpicable inſtead of reſpected: or as the latter clauſe may be rendered more conformable to the words, but the ſearching out of their glory, is glory; for though honey, ſweet as it is, will nauſeate when too much is eaten, not ſo is it with the ſearch after divine wiſdom; the more of this we acquire, the more glorious for us: here we need not fear exceſs.

28. [t] He that hath no rule over his own ſpirit, is like a city that is broken down, and without walls.

[t] Chap. xvi. 32.

v. 28. Every man's heart is his caſtle: it is aſſaulted with enemies without, and full of traitors within; and nothing but ſtrict reſtraint over our vile affections and unruly appetites, and watchfulneſs and prayer againſt temptation, can enable us to keep poſſeſſion of our ſouls: but when paſſion, not conſcience, governs, and luſt, inſtead of God's law, rules; then, like a city broken down, the ſpirit lies open to the inroads of every temptation, and is taken captive by the devil at his will.

CHAP. XXVI.

1. AS ſnow in ſummer, [a] and as rain in harveſt; ſo honour is not ſeemly for a fool.

[a] 1 Sam. xii. 17.

v. 1. As unſeaſonable as ſnow in ſummer, and as hurtful as rain in harveſt, ſo honour is not ſeemly for a fool; who, when he is advanced, if he is a weak man, will be a ſcandal to his dignity; and if a wicked man, will abuſe his authority, and no wiſe ruler will employ ſuch weak or wicked miniſters.

2. As the bird by wandring, as the ſwallow by flying, ſo the curſe cauſeleſs ſhall not come.

v. 2. When fools are exalted, they affect to keep thoſe around them in fear, ſtorming and ſwearing at them; and tho' no provocation be given, thunder forth their curſes: but they are impotent and vain, and can do us no more hurt, than the bird that flies over us. And ſuch are the anathemas of the church of Rome, whoſe cauſeleſs curſes ſhall return upon the mouths that utter them.

3. [b] A whip for the horſe, a bridle for the aſs, and a rod for the fool's back.

[b] Pſ. xxxii. 9. Chap. x. 13.

v. 3. Obſtinate, ſtupid, or refractory as the horſe, or wild aſſes colt, the wicked muſt be broken with correction, and ſharp reſtraints laid upon him. Diſgrace, not honour; the rod of chaſtiſement, not the ſtaff of office, are his deſert.

Before Chriſt 700.

4. Anſwer not a fool according to his folly, leſt thou alſo be like unto him. 5. Anſwer a fool according to his folly, leſt he be wiſe in his own † conceit.

† Heb. Eyes.

v. 4, 5. There is a time to ſpeak, and a time to keep ſilence, and wiſdom is profitable to direct.

1. Sometimes a fool is beſt anſwered by ſilence and contempt. It would be to reſemble him, to return railing for railing, or anger for anger.

2. Sometimes it is neceſſary to anſwer a fool according to his folly, leaſt he conceit his arguments unanſwerable, interpret ſilence as a conceſſion of victory, and himſelf be confirmed in his folly, or others ſuffer ill impreſſions thereby. Therefore, expoſe his futility, detect his fallacies, and turn his arguments upon him; that if he be not convinced, he may be at leaſt confounded, aſhamed, and his pride mortified.

6. [c] He that ſendeth a meſſage by the hand of a fool, cutteth off the feet, and drinketh damage. 7. The legs of the lame † are not equal: ſo is a parable in the mouth of fools. 8. ‡ As he that bindeth a ſtone in a ſling: ſo is he that giveth honour to a fool. 9. As a thorn goeth up into the hand of a drunkard, ſo is a parable in the mouth of fools.

[c] Num. xiii. 31.

† Heb. Are lifted up.

‡ Or as he that putteth a precious ſtone in an heap of ſtones.

v. 6—9. The fooliſh and the wicked are good for nothing, and will mar the work in which they are employed.

1. They who employ a fool on a meſſage, might as well have ſent a man without legs; ſo loitering, idle, and negligent is he, and by his blunders and ignorance, both damages and diſcredits thoſe who employ him: for many will judge of the maſter by the meſſenger.

2. When they affect to appear wiſe, and take upon them to deliver ſome weighty apothegms of their own, ſo abſurd is the obſervation, and delivered with as ill a grace, as a cripple pretending to dance, whoſe infirmities are more expoſed, and his affectation more ridiculous. Thus alſo, when a wicked man pretends to talk of religion, whoſe life is a lie to his lips, the abſurdity is glaring, and his diſcourſe treated with juſt contempt.

3. All honour beſtowed on a fool is uſeleſs, or hurtful: it is like putting a precious ſtone in a ſling, where any common pebble would be more ſuitable; or like the ſtone when ſlung out of it, that does miſchief.

4. As a drunkard meddling with thorns, thruſts them into his hand; ſo a fool wounds himſelf, and hurts others, when, taking the word of God into his mouth, he affects to turn it into ridicule; or, pretending to explain it, takes God's name in vain, and leads others into dangerous errors. Some give it another ſenſe; that the wicked are inſenſible to the ſharpeſt admonitions of God's word, as a man, when drunk, feels not the thorn that pierces him.

10. † The great God that formed all things, both rewardeth the fool, and rewardeth tranſgreſſors.

† Or a great man grieveth all; and he hireth the fool, he hireth alſo tranſgreſſors.

v. 10. The great God will not ſuffer ſinners to go unpuniſhed. The day is near when the judgment ſhall ſit, and then ſhall every man receive according to his work. Some render the words differently; A great one, who is oppreſſive and tyrannical, grieveth all his ſubjects, and he hireth the fool, and he hireth the tranſgreſſors, employing weak and wicked inſtruments to execute his vile deſigns.

11. [d] As a dog returneth to his vomit; [e] ſo a fool † returneth to his folly.

[d] 2 Pet. ii. 22.

[e] Exod. viii. 15.

† Heb. Iterateth.

v. 11. Many have pangs of remorſe, and no ſooner commit ſin, than their loathing is violent as their luſt; they reſolve againſt the evil, and ſeem to deteſt it for a while, but ſoon their conſciences grow quiet, and they return, like the dog, to their vomit again.

12. Seeſt thou [f] a man wiſe in his own conceit? [g] there is more hope of a fool than of him.

[f] Luke xviii. 11. Rom. xii. 16.

[g] Mat. xxi. 31.

v. 12. Folly is bad, and conceit renders the diſeaſe deſperate. They that think themſelves ſomething when they are nothing, and dogmatical and opinionative deſpiſe others, and are above being taught, will die inveterate in their ignorance: and eſpecially is this the caſe with thoſe, who, vainly puffed up of their fleſhly mind, think themſelves righteous, and placing their dependance on the rituals of religion, perſuade themſelves, that, by their own doings and duties, they can recommend themſelves to God's favour; ignorant of their ſinfulneſs, and the corruption of their nature, and ſtrangers to the power of changing grace:

of theſe, there is little hope; publicans and harlots will go into the kingdom of God before them; their pride and ſelf-righteouſneſs is an eternal bar to their converſion, John ix. 41.

h Chap. xxii. 13.

13. [h] The ſlothful man ſaith, There is a lion in the way, a lion is in the ſtreets.

v. 13. This wretched excuſe of the ſlothful we had before, chap. xxii. 13. It ſhews, that they who want an excuſe, will never be at a loſs; and that what is never ſo abſurd and improbable, will ſatisfy thoſe who chuſe to raiſe difficulties againſt what they have no mind to do. The pretended difficulties of a religious life, are the arguments the devil uſes to a ſlothful ſoul; when in fact, if we would but go forth, and try, the way would be found pleaſantneſs, and all the paths peace.

14. As the door turneth upon his hinges, ſo doth the ſlothful upon his bed.

v. 14. A lively image this of the ſlothful. He turns upon his bed, as if he made efforts to riſe, but only changes ſides; his buſineſs is neglected, all his affairs at a ſtand, and no ground got: ſuch is the lazy profeſſor; he moves in the ſame round of formal duties, as regularly as the door turns on its hinges, but never advances one ſtep heavenward; his heart is ſtill unrenewed as ever.

i Chap. xix. 24.
† Or he is weary.

15. [i] The ſlothful hideth his hand in his boſom, † it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth.

v. 15. The like obſervation ſee before, chap. x. 19—24. He hides his hand for fear of the cold, or pretends it is hurt, or weak, and unable to work; as they who hate labour, often ſham inability. Yea, ſo infamous is his ſloth, that it is a burden to be compelled to lift his hand to his mouth to feed himſelf; even then let him ſtarve. Note, They who have the word of God in their hands, yet refuſe to be at any pains in opening it, to find bread for their ſouls, deſerve to periſh for lack of knowledge.

16. The ſluggard is wiſer in his own conceit, than ſeven men that can render a reaſon.

v. 16. Thoſe who have the leaſt reaſon, are uſually the moſt conceited. The ſluggard, who hath taken no pains to acquire knowledge, yet rates high his attainments, and his inſolence equal to his ignorance, he fancies himſelf wiſer than ſeven men who can render a reaſon: all the arguments they can urge, to convince him of his miſtake and danger, he treats with contempt, and hugs himſelf in his own ſelf-ſufficiency.

† Or is enraged.

17. He that paſſeth by, and † meddleth with ſtrife belonging not to him, is like one that taketh a dog by the ears.

v. 17. It is dangerous meddling in other people's quarrels, and interfering in diſputes that do not belong to us. It is like taking a ſnarling cur by the ears, and being bit and laughed at for our folly. They who are diligent to mind their own affairs, will find enough to do, without concerning themſelves in thoſe of other people.

† Heb. Flames, or ſparks.

18. As a mad man who caſteth † fire-brands, arrows and death: 19. So is the man that deceiveth his neighbour, and ſaith, Am not I in ſport?

v. 18, 19. When miſchief is done, it is a poor excuſe to ſay, I was in jeſt. Lies are fire-brands; though told in ſport, they may have fatal conſequences. It is dangerous meddling with edged tools. It would be no joke to ſet our neighbour's houſe on fire over his head, much leſs to hurt his character, or draw him into ſin, and then turn it off with a laugh. Such mocking is madneſs.

† Heb. Without wood.
k Chap. xxii. 10.
‡ Or whiſperer.
‖ Heb. Is ſilent.

20. † Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: [k] ſo where there is no ‡ tale-bearer, the ſtrife ‖ ceaſeth.

v. 20. Tale-bearers are the bane of ſociety. By their vile inſinuations, the fire of contention is kept up, words are miſrepreſented, ſtories repeated, exaggerated; ſuſpicions inſtilled, and deareſt relatives alienated in their affections from each other: from ſuch, therefore, turn away, diſcountenance, caſt them out, and the fire of contention will ſoon go out.

l Chap. xv. 18. & xix. 22.

21. [l] As coals are to burning coals, and wood to fire; ſo is a contentious man to kindle ſtrife.

v. 21. The contentious are ever kindling ſtrife; if but a ſpark of provocation be given, they inſtantly blow it into a flame, by their quick and haſty reſentments. It is dangerous to aſſociate with thoſe, who are thus quarrelſome.

m Chap. xviii. 8.
† Heb. The chambers.

22. [m] The words of a tale-bearer are as wounds, and they go down into † the innermoſt parts of the belly.

v. 22. The wounds of calumny are more eaſily made than healed; even when the lie is detected, there is often a ſcar remaining.

n 2 Sam. xv. 3, 4. Mat. ii. 8.

23. [n] Burning lips, and a wicked heart, are like a potſherd covered with ſilver droſs.

v. 23. Hypocritical lips, full of profeſſions of kindneſs, that cloak the wickedneſs of an evil heart, are like a potſherd covered with ſilver droſs, which ſhines at a diſtance, but is found utterly worthleſs.

† Heb. Maketh his voice gracious.
o Jer. ix. 8. Mic. vii. 5.
‡ Or hatred is covered in ſecret.

24. He that hateth, diſſembleth with his lips, and layeth up deceit within him. 25. When he † ſpeaketh fair, [o] believe him not: for there are ſeven abominations in his heart. 26. ‡ Whoſe hatred is covered by deceit, his wickedneſs ſhall be ſhewed before the whole congregation.

v. 24—26. This is a diſſembling world. Nothing fairer than many from the teeth outward, yet rancour often lies under the guiſe of civility, and deceit knows no cloak more effectual than the ſhew of friendſhip: it is good not to be too credulous, to try before we truſt; not that the event anſwers the crafty deſign: God is pleaſed often to detect the hypocrite, and expoſe him to deſerved ſhame in this world; at fartheſt, he will be covered with everlaſting ſhame and contempt, before the great congregation of men and angels at the laſt day.

p Pſ. vii. 15, 16. & ix. 15. & x. 2. Chap. xxviii. 10. Eccleſ. x. 8.
q Eſth. vii. 10.

27. [p] Whoſo diggeth a pit ſhall fall therein: [q] and he that rolleth a ſtone, it will return upon him.

v. 27. Miſchief will return upon the contriver's head, cloſe as the deſign is laid, and with much toil carried on; the pit that he digged for others ſhall be his grave, and the ſtone he rolled, return and cruſh him to death.

28. A lying tongue hateth thoſe that are afflicted by it, and a flattering mouth worketh ruin.

v. 28. Injure a man, and you never forgive him. A lying tongue hateth thoſe that are afflicted by it; becauſe he hates them, he maligns them; and having injured them, the hatred becomes irreconcileable; and a flattering mouth betrays the unwary into ſin, or a ſnare, and worketh ruin, the more inevitable, becauſe unſuſpected.

CHAP. XXVII.

a James iv. 13, &c.

1. [a] BOAST not thyſelf of to-morrow; for thou knoweſt not what a day may bring forth.

v. 1. When we are in jeopardy every hour, it were folly to preſume on days to come; but what our hand findeth to do, eſpecially in the concerns of our ſouls, we muſt do it with our might: this moment we can call our own, but it is uncertain whether the next belongs to time or eternity.

2. Let another man praiſe thee, and not thine own mouth; a ſtranger, and not thine own lips.

v. 2. Nothing is ſo diſguſting as ſelf-commendation; nothing makes a man appear ſo deſpicable in the eyes of his company. We muſt ſtudy to deſerve praiſe, not court it; let our works ſpeak, and that will be truly to our honour.

w Heb. Heavineſs.
‡ Or wrath is cruelty, an anger an overflowing.
‖ Or jealouſy. Chap. vi. 34.

3. A ſtone is † heavy, and the ſand weighty: but a fool's wrath is heavier than them both. 4. ‡ Wrath is cruel, and anger is outrageous; but who is able to ſtand before ‖ envy?

v. 3, 4. Two great evils are here obſerved. Unbridled paſſion, and rooted envy; the former, dangerous as the fall of a heavy ſtone, or a load of ſand, that threatens to cruſh us to death; yet the latter ſtill more to be dreaded. A ſudden guſt of paſſion we may avoid, but where envy reigns, we are never ſafe, and the opportunity will be continually ſought to do us a miſchief.

b Pſ. cxli. 5.
c Luke xxii. 47, 48.
w Or earneſt, or frequent.

5. Open rebuke is better than ſecret love. 6. [b] Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but [c] the kiſſes of an enemy are † deceitful.

v. 5, 6. That is a ſelfiſh regard which would, for fear of offending, ſuffer ſin upon our brother; true friendſhip will dictate the faithful reproof, and every wiſe man will eſteem it the beſt evidence of ſincere affection; but the kiſſes of an enemy are deceitful, their ſmiles are more to be feared than their frowns; and when their profeſſions are warmeſt, they are moſt deeply meditating ſome malicious ſtroke.

† Heb. Treadeth under foot.
d Job vi. 7.

7. The full ſoul † lotheth an honey-comb; but [d] to the hungry ſoul every bitter thing is ſweet.

v. 7. Appetite makes the feaſt; the ſauce of hunger cauſes the dry cruſt of the poor to be more palatable, than any thing the pampered appetite feels, in all the provocatives to luxury.

8. As a bird that wandereth from her neſt, ſo is a man that wandereth from his place.

v. 8. A rolling ſtone, they ſay, gathers no moſs; an unſettled mind, that is ever roving, ſticks long to no buſineſs, nor ſtays long in any place; ever ſcheming, yet bringing nothing to perfection, is in the way to be undone; as the bird that hops from ſpray to ſpray, leaves her neſt, expoſes her young, and falls into the fowler's ſnare.

9. Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart: ſo doth the ſweetneſs of a man's friend † by hearty counſel.

† Heb. By, or from the counſel of the ſoul.

v. 9. Sweet are the joys of real friendſhip, and precious the bleſſing of hearty counſel as rich perfume; rejoicing the heart, when unboſoming our difficulties, we gain a reſolution of our doubts, and direction in our emergencies; eſpecially when, as the word ſignifies, it relates to counſel of the ſoul, to the promoting our eternal intereſts, and aſſiſting us in our ſpiritual diſtreſſes.

10. Thine own friend and thy father's friend forſake not; neither go into thy brother's houſe in the day of thy calamity: for [e] better is a neighbour that is near, than a brother far off.

e Chap. xvii. 17. & xviii. 24.

v. 10. When we profeſs friendſhip, we muſt approve our own fidelity, and not be changeable in our regards; and our father's friend, proved by long experience, merits our peculiar confidence. When a day of calamity, of poverty, or affliction comes, we ſhall find ſuch a neighbour ſtick faſter than a brother, and receive often that relief and cordial affection from them, which our own kindred are backward to ſhew.

f Chap. x. 1. & xxiii. 24.
g Pſ. cxxvii. 5.

11. [f] My ſon, be wiſe, and make my heart glad, [g] that I may anſwer him that reproacheth me.

v. 11. Gracious children are an honour to their parents, do credit to their education, and ſilence the reproaches of thoſe, who would be glad to impute any miſcarriages in the ſon, to the father's ill conduct, or neglect; or who blamed that ſtrictneſs of reſtraint, which now, by experience, is proved the greateſt bleſſing.

h Chap. xxii. 3.

12. [h] A prudent man foreſeeth the evil, and hideth himſelf: but the ſimple paſs on, and are puniſhed.

v. 12. A prudent man foreſeeth the evil, and hideth himſelf, ſhuns the temptation which would draw him into ſin, and knowing the dreadful conſequences of it, prudently declines the path of ruin, however enſnaring; but the ſimple paſs on, and are puniſhed; thoughtleſs, ruſh into the ſnare; heedleſs, advance to the precipice of ruin, and never think of the danger, till ſudden deſtruction cometh upon them.

i Exod. xxii. 26. Chap. xx. 16.

13. [i] Take his garment that is ſurety for a ſtranger, and take a pledge of him for a ſtrange woman.

v. 13. When a man by his folly, or abandoned conduct, is taking the unavoidable ſteps to ruin himſelf, it were imprudent to lend him a farthing, without a ſufficient pledge, to ſecure ourſelves, as we can otherwiſe never expect to be reimburſed, chap. xx. 16.

14. He that bleſſeth his friend with a loud voice, riſing early in the morning, it ſhall be counted a curſe to him.

v. 14. A ſycophant is a deteſtable character; pretending friendſhip, loud and extravagant in his commendations, and early in his adulations, fearful leaſt any ſhould ſupplant him; he will be counted accurſed of God, and be abhorred of the wiſe; and, inſtead of rendering an acceptable ſervice to his pretended friend, he will do him the greateſt prejudice, by provoking the envy of others; or worſe, puffing him up in pride, and flattering him to his deſtruction. See Acts xii. 22, 23.

k Chap. xix. 13.

15. [k] A continual dropping in a very rainy day, and a contentious woman are alike. 16. Whoſoever hideth her, hideth the wind, and the ointment of his right hand which bewrayeth itſelf.

v. 15, 16. From the wrath, or clamour of others, we can fly for ſhelter, as from a haſty ſhower; but from the perpetual dropping of a contentious woman's tongue, there is no covering: wretched is the man with ſuch a wife. To affect to reſtrain her, is as fruitleſs as attempting to bind up the raging winds, and to conceal her ſhame from others, is impracticable; as the ointment held in the hand ſends forth its perfume, and the cloſer preſſed, the more heated, the ſtronger its ſmell; thus reſiſtance makes her often rage the more, and in ſpite of every effort to conceal it, ſhe will bewray her own ſhame.

17. Iron ſharpneth iron, ſo [l] a man ſharpneth the countenance of his friend.

l Acts xxviii. 15. Heb. x. 24.

v. 17. Man is made ſocial; and the greateſt bleſſings, or the greateſt miſchiefs flow from this diſpoſition, according to the company we chuſe. The ſociety of the wiſe and gracious quickens, enlivens, and chears the heart, to walk in the good ways of God, whilſt companions in iniquity ſharpen each other for miſchief.

18. [m] Whoſo keepeth the fig-tree, ſhall eat the fruit thereof: ſo [n] he that waiteth on his maſter ſhall be honoured.

m 1 Cor. ix. 7.
n 1 Sam. ii. 30. John xii. 26.

v. 18. Though our ſtation be mean, and our work laborious, diligence and fidelity will bring their own reward with them. They who dig and prune the fig-tree, ſhall eat of its fruit, and the truſty ſervant ſhall be honoured, preferred, and rewarded of his maſter; and better ſtill, be graciouſly regarded by that greater maſter in heaven, with whom there is no reſpect of perſons.

19. As in water face anſwereth to face: ſo the heart of man to man.

v. 19. As we are all one man's children, the corrupted offſpring of a corrupted parent, we have each the ſame ſtrong traces of his fallen image; and whatever difference conſtitution, education, ſituation, and circumſtances may make in our conduct, the heart is the ſame in all, deceitful above all things, and deſperately wicked, as the reflection of the features in the glaſs exactly correſponds with the real face. And in renewed men, the caſe is exactly parallel; they partake of the ſame divine nature, their experience in general correſponds; and looking into the ſame glaſs of goſpel-grace, where they behold the glory of the Lord, they are changed into the ſame image, by the ſpirit of the Lord, Cor. iii. 18.

20. [o] Hell and deſtruction are † never full; ſo [p] the eyes of man are never ſatisfied.

o Chap. xxx. 16. Hab. ii. 5.
† Heb. Not.
p Eccleſ. i. 8. & vi. 7.

v. 20. Our corrupt appetites are inſatiable. The more indulged they are, the more craving: like the grave and hell, they are never full; but ſtill are crying, give, give, and nothing can ever ſatisfy the vaſt deſires of an immortal ſoul, but the fulneſs of God.

21. [q] As the fining-pot for ſilver, and the furnace for gold; ſo is a man to his praiſe.

q Chap. xvii. 3.

v. 21. A man is proved to be wiſe or fooliſh, wicked or gracious, according to the perſons from whom his praiſe cometh, as like loves like: or the ſenſe is, praiſe, like the fining-pot, will try a man's ſpirit; if he is fond of it, and proud, and conceited upon it, then he appears reprobate ſilver; if ready, with genuine modeſty, to diſclaim the commendation, humbled under it, as ſenſible of his unworthineſs, and made more careful to avoid every thing that would forfeit men's good opinion, then is this a gracious teſtimony of a right ſpirit within him.

22. [r] Though thou ſhouldſt bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a peſtil, yet will not his fooliſhneſs depart from him.

r Jer. v. 3. & vi. 29.

v. 22. If the grace of God does not change a man's heart, the ſevereſt corrections will be ineffectual. Were a ſinner even plunged into the belly of hell, and brought back to earth again, it would not cure one of his evil tempers; ſo deſperately corrupt, and fully ſet on evil, is the natural heart.

s 1 Pet. v. 1, 2.
† Heb. Set thy heart.
‡ Heb. Strength.
‖ Heb. To generation and generation.
t Pſ. civ. 14. & cxlvii. 8, 9.
u Mat. vi. 31. Heb. xiii. 5.

23. [s] Be thou diligent to know the ſtate of thy flocks, and † look well to thy herds. 24. For ‡ riches are not for ever: and doth the crown endure ‖ to every generation? 25. [t] The hay appeareth, and the tender graſs ſheweth itſelf, and the herbs of the mountains are gathered. 26. The lambs are for thy cloathing, and the goats are the price of the field. 27. [u] And thou ſhalt have goats milk enough for thy food, for the food of thy houſhold, and for maintenance for thy maidens.

v. 23—27. Diligence is neceſſary in every vocation and calling, and the maſter's eye is eſſential to the proſperity of his affairs. As the wealth of the eaſt conſiſted chiefly in their flocks, and the fruit of the field, theſe are particularly inſtanced, and reaſons given to enforce the needful care over them.

1. Riches are a periſhable thing; even crowns are not ſecured to poſterity: therefore, it becomes every man to take care of what God hath given him, that it be not waſted by his negligence, but tranſmitted entire to his ſucceſſors.

2. The liberal proviſion providence hath made, leaves the negligent inexcuſable. The earth, under the divine bleſſing, ſpontaneouſly produces food for the cattle in abundance, and herb for the ſervice of man; we have therefore only to ſeize the moment of opportunity, and gather in our winter's ſtore.

3. The benefit accruing from thence, will amply repay our labours. We ſhall have a ſufficiency of cloaths, meat, and money for ourſelves and our families; and though plain and homely the fare, perhaps the more wholeſome. Note, (1.) If we muſt look thus to our flocks, that they may thrive, how much more needful is it for us, to ſearch often into the ſtate of our ſouls, whether they proſper: for without this, what would it profit a man to gain the whole world, if, after all, he loſt his immortal ſoul. (2.) If a ſheep is of ſuch value, and requires ſuch attendance, how much more the glorious flock, which Chriſt hath purchaſed with his blood, and committed to our care? Negligence of this truſt, would be attended with aggravated ruin.

CHAP. XXVIII.

1. [a] THE wicked flee when no man purſueth: but the righteous are bold as a lion.

[a] Lev. xxvi. 17, 36. Pſ. liii. 5.

v. 1. Guilt makes men cowards. Their conſcience ſtartles at the appearance of danger, and their own fears make them fall. But conſcious integrity knows no diſmay, and in the way of duty ſtartles at no menaces. Where God is made the refuge and hope of the ſoul, and faith reſts on Jeſus, neither the fears of guilt, the power of corruption, the might of our ſpiritual enemies, no, not the terrors of death itſelf can affright, deject, or prevail againſt us.

2. For the tranſgreſſion of a land, [b] many are the princes thereof: [c] but † by a man of underſtanding and knowledge, the ſtate thereof ſhall be prolonged.

[b] 1 Kings xvi. 8, &c. [c] Job xxii. 30. † Or by men of wiſdom and underſtanding ſhall they likewiſe be prolonged.

v. 2. National ſins provoke national judgments, and none more ſevere than civil wars, where contending parties ſtruggle for the ſovereignty; or in quick ſucceſſion, as 1 Kings xvi. 8. one paves the way to the throne over the corpſe of his predeceſſor; but by a man of underſtanding and knowledge, the ſtate thereof ſhall be prolonged; one great man has often ſaved a ſinking nation; and, by his wiſdom, influence, and authority, cemented the broken ſhreds of faction, calmed the popular diſcontents, and reſtored ſtability to the tottering throne.

3. [d] A poor man that oppreſſeth the poor, is like a ſweeping rain which leaveth no food.

[d] Mat. xviii. 28.

v. 3. They who have known the pinchings of poverty, ſhould be moſt compaſſionate to others in the like diſtreſs; but often we obſerve the very reverſe. We ſee the poor, rapacious and over-reaching one another; and thoſe who have riſen from circumſtances the moſt indigent, are moſt covetous, oppreſſive, and deſtitute of compaſſion: like the ſtorm of rain, which, inſtead of watering the furrows, ſweeps away the ſeed ſown, and deſolates the field.

4. [e] They that forſake the law, praiſe the wicked: but ſuch as keep the law, [f] contend with them.

[e] Pſ. x. 3. & xlix. 18. Rom. i. 32. [f] Mat. iii. 7. & xiv. 4.

v. 4. They who forſake God's law, deſire to ſtrengthen their hands in wickedneſs, by mutual commendations. Covetouſneſs is called frugality; pride, ſpirit; intemperance, a chearful glaſs; and infidelity, freedom of thought. Thus iniquity is countenanced, and made reputable; but they who ſerve God themſelves, cannot bear to ſee him thus diſhonoured, and therefore boldly ſtand in the gap, ſtrip off the maſk of ſin, bear teſtimony againſt the evil doers, and ſee the law executed upon them.

5. [g] Evil men underſtand not judgment: but [h] they that ſeek the LORD underſtand all things.

[g] Pſ. xcii. 6. [h] 1 Cor. ii. 15. 1 John ii. 20, 27.

v. 5. Sin blinds the eyes, and hardens the heart: the plaineſt path of duty is overlooked, the moſt ſtriking judgments of God diſregarded; but they who ſeek the Lord by ceaſeleſs prayer, by reading and hearing his revealed word, they underſtand all things, all things at leaſt neceſſary for ſalvation; he will not ſuffer them to be deceived by falſe doctrine, nor to be ſeduced into ſinful practices; but they ſhall hear the voice behind them, ſaying, this is the way, walk in it; when they would turn to the right hand, or to the left.

6. [i] Better is the poor that walketh in his uprightneſs, than he that is perverſe in his ways, though he be rich.

[i] Chap. xix. 1. Ver. 18.

v. 6. It is not plenty, but piety, that makes a man acceptable to God, a bleſſing to ſociety, or comfortable to himſelf. A poor man that walketh in his uprightneſs, nor, however hard preſſed, ſwerves from the path of juſtice, is a better man, both more happy and honourable in this world, excluſive of his portion in eternity, than he who, with all his riches, is perverſe in his ways, or walketh in two ways, would be thought a good man, but walks in wickedneſs, and thereby brings guilt on his conſcience, the curſe of God upon his poſſeſſions; and by his abundance, is enabled to do more miſchief than others.

7. [k] Whoſo keepeth the law, is a wiſe ſon: but he that † is a companion of riotous men, ſhameth his father.

[k] Chap. xxix. 3. † Or feedeth gluttons.

v. 7. Obedience to God's law, ſhews true wiſdom; and ſuch a gracious ſon is a credit to his parents: but he that is a companion of riotous men, is ſure to learn their wicked ways; and by his extravagance, intemperance, and riot, brings not only ſhame upon himſelf, but reflects the greateſt diſcredit on his father, who will be ſuſpected of indulging him to his ruin.

8. [l] He that by uſury and † unjuſt gain increaſeth his ſubſtance, he ſhall gather it for him that will pity the poor.

[l] Job xxvii. 16, 17. Chap. xiii. 22. Eccleſ. ii. 26. † Heb. By increaſe.

v. 8. We ſee often ſtrange revolutions in the courſe of divine providence, and we know in general all is right; but ſome of God's diſpenſations eſpecially lead us to own his finger evident, and to admire his juſtice. As when he for a while permits the griping uſurer and unjuſt oppreſſor to proſper and increaſe their ſubſtance, then cuts them off at a ſtroke, and tranſmits their acquiſitions to ſuch as make themſelves friends of the mammon of unrighteouſneſs, and employ it in ſerving the poor.

9. [m] He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer ſhall be abomination.

[m] Pſ. lxvi. 18. & cix. 7. Chap. xv. 8.

v. 9. Prayer and practice muſt go together. It were folly, hypocriſy, and inſult on God, to pray one way, and live another: yet, many who continue to live in their ſins, and turn a deaf ear to the word of the goſpel, continue ſtill their ſtated ſeaſons of worſhip, and ſalve their conſcience with their devotions, whereas their prayers are as great an abomination, or greater, than any of their other ſins.

10. [n] Whoſo cauſeth the righteous to go aſtray in an evil way, he ſhall fall himſelf into his own pit: but the upright ſhall have good things in poſſeſſion.

[n] Chap. xxvi. 27.

v. 10. They who do the devil's work, and turn tempters to the righteous, to ſeduce them to ſin, and plunge them into ſorrow, ſhall have the devil's wages, and fall into the pit of deſtruction. But the upright, whom God will not ſuffer to be deceived, or periſh, ſhall have good things in poſſeſſion, the bleſſings of grace in time, of glory in eternity.

11. The rich man is wiſe in his own † conceit: but the poor that hath underſtanding ſearcheth him out.

† Heb. Eyes.

v. 11. Riches are fuel to vanity; and he who hath this world's wealth, is too apt to conceit he hath all excellence, and flatterers will never be wanting to fan the coals of pride: but whilſt he reckons himſelf oracular, and ſycophants admire his wiſdom, a poor man that hath underſtanding, and dares not act the mean part of a ſycophant, ſearcheth him out, obſerves his folly, and expoſes the vanity of his pretenſions.

12. [o] When righteous men do rejoice, there is great glory: but when the wicked riſe, a man is † hidden.

[o] Ver. 28. Chap. xi. 10. & xxix. 2. Eccleſ. x. 6. † Or ſought for.

v. 12. When good men proſper, and are advanced in the ſtate, there is great glory, the nation flouriſhes, religion lifts its head, and there is a pleaſant proſpect that this people will be great, gracious, and happy. But the reverſe is the caſe, when the wicked ſtep into the ſeat of office; then every good man is diſcountenanced, and obliged to retire into obſcurity, to be ſheltered from perſecution.

13. [p] He that covereth his ſins, ſhall not proſper: but whoſo confeſſeth and forſaketh them ſhall have mercy.

[p] Pſ. xxxii. 3, 5. 1 John i. 9, 10.

v. 13. There may be circumſtances when it would be of no uſe, yea, rather of great diſſervice in the cauſe of God, to publiſh a man's tranſgreſſions. But before God they muſt be ſpread con-

Before Chriſt 700.

continually, and a really penitent never deſires to palliate a ſingle circumſtance: and before men alſo, when duty calls, he is ready to accuſe himſelf, and take all the ſhame his ſin deſerves. And without this, neither pardon nor peace of conſcience can be obtained; whilſt both are promiſed to thoſe who, with true repentance, turn to God, confeſſing and forſaking the iniquities they bewail.

[q] Chap. xxiii. 17. [r] Rom. xi. 20.

14. Happy is the man [q] that feareth alway: but [r] he that hardneth his heart ſhall fall into miſchief.

v. 14. Servile fear is as contrary to all happineſs in God, as filial fear tends to promote and increaſe it. Jealouſy over our ſouls, leaſt we ſhould offend, will preſerve our rejoicing in the teſtimony of our conſcience; and every day we ſhall deſire to keep at a greater diſtance from ſin: but he that hardneth his heart in preſumptuous wickedneſs, ſhall fall into miſchief, go from evil to worſe, till he ſinks into the abyſs of miſery.

[s] Exod. i. 13. Eſth. iii. 9. Mat. ii. 16.

15. As a roaring lion, and a ranging bear; [s] ſo is a wicked ruler over the poor people.

v. 15. Woe to the unhappy people curſed with tyrannical rulers! haraſſed by oppreſſion, unable to reſiſt, and terrified with fears of greater evils than they feel.

16. The prince that wanteth underſtanding, is alſo a great oppreſſor: but he that hateth covetouſneſs, ſhall prolong his days.

v. 16. It is as unwiſe, as wicked, for a prince to abuſe his power, in plundering his ſubjects. For he is much richer on any emergence, who gains the affections of his people, than he who fills his treaſury with exorbitant taxes. To dethrone a tyrannical king, few ſcruple to lend a helping hand; to ſupport a mild adminiſtration, every purſe is open, every perſon ready.

[t] Gen. ix. 6. Exod. xxi. 24.

17. [t] A man that doth violence to the blood of any perſon, ſhall flee to the pit, let no man ſtay him.

v. 17. Blood cries for blood. No compoſition muſt be received, no pardon granted; the life is forfeited to juſtice, and none muſt ſtay the murderer from going down to the pit.

[u] Chap. x. 9, 25. [x] Ver. 6.

18. [u] Whoſo walketh uprightly, ſhall be ſaved: but [x] he that is perverſe in his ways ſhall fall at once.

v. 18. He that walketh uprightly, in all good conſcience before God and man, walketh ſurely; ſhall be ſaved from the preſent power of his enemies, and ſee the eternal ſalvation of God: but he that is perverſe in his ways, without piety to God, or honeſty to men; or in two ways, a hypocritical profeſſor, whoſe lips go one way, his heart another, ſhall fall at once; when moſt ſecure, and crying peace to his ſoul, deſtruction ſudden as terrible ſhall overtake him, and he ſhall not eſcape.

[y] Chap. xii. 11.

19. [y] He that tilleth his land, ſhall have plenty of bread: but he that followeth after vain perſons, ſhall have poverty enough.

v. 19. Induſtry and affluence are cloſe allied. They will have bread in plenty, who take pains to till their ground: but the idle and extravagant, the companions of others, vain and idle as themſelves, ſhall have poverty enough, be filled with it, reduced to the moſt abject ſtate of want and wretchedneſs.

[z] Chap. xiii. 11. & xx. 21. & xxiii. 4. Ver. 22. 1 Tim. vi. 9. † Or unpuniſhed.

20. A faithful man ſhall abound with bleſſings: but [z] he that maketh haſte to be rich, ſhall not be † innocent.

v. 20. Fidelity in our tranſactions, both with God and man, is the way to ſolid proſperity. We ſhall abound with bleſſings; thoſe of the baſket and ſtore, ſo far as are good for us, with the richer grace of God, the more ſubſtantial good: but he that maketh haſte to be rich, ſets his heart upon it, and labours with reſtleſs anxiety, or is determined, by right or wrong, to increaſe his wealth, ſhall not be innocent. Though no direct injuſtice may be diſcovered, riches haſtily gotten will awaken ſuſpicion in the minds of men, and God, at leaſt, will not hold him guiltleſs.

[a] Chap. xviii. 5. & xxiv. 23. [b] Ezek. xiii. 19.

21. [a] To have reſpect of perſons, is not good: for, [b] for a piece of bread that man will tranſgreſs.

v. 21. Partiality in the adminiſtration of juſtice, is highly criminal. A magiſtrate muſt forget the man; no ties of friendſhip, acquaintance, obligation, favours received or expected, muſt be in the leaſt attended to; right alone muſt rule. Where this is violated, and bribes influence, there iniquity will grow habitual, and for the meaneſt gratification that man will tranſgreſs.

† Or he that hath an evil eye haſteth to be rich. Ver. 20.

22. † He that haſteth to be rich, hath an evil eye, and conſidereth not that poverty ſhall come upon him.

Before Chriſt 700.

v. 22. Behold the evils of covetouſneſs. They who will be rich, will be ruined. He that haſteth to be rich, hath an evil eye, envious, and coveting what is another's, and grudging every farthing laid out in abſolute neceſſaries on himſelf, or family, and conſidereth not that poverty ſhall come upon him: he is poor in the midſt of his poſſeſſions, not daring to uſe them; and God in juſt judgment cauſes the riches, he ſo eagerly ſcraped together, to be plundered or waſted unaccountably, and the want he feared, to come upon him.

[c] Chap. xxvii. 6.

23. [c] He that rebuketh a man, afterwards ſhall find more favour than he that flattereth with the tongue.

v. 23. Rebukes are the genuine produce of friendſhip; they muſt be affectionate, free, private: and though bitter at firſt, and hardly to be digeſted, yet are afterwards acknowledged as real kindneſſes, and bind a man to be your friend for ever. Whilſt however pleaſant the words of flattery may be to the ear, we ſhall, when we ſee the dangerous tendency of them, abhor the ſycophant, and be aſhamed of our own folly, in having ever been delighted with it.

24. Whoſo robbeth his father or his mother, and ſaith, It is no tranſgreſſion; the ſame is the companion of a deſtroyer.

v. 24. Children are too apt to conſider what is their parents as their own, and that it is no tranſgreſſion to make uſe of their property; whereas it is doubly criminal to be unjuſt to thoſe, to whom they have ſuch peculiar obligations: and the immediate road to the gallows; for the bad company ſuch a wicked ſon keeps, leads him into ſuch wickedneſs, and by and by it will end in robbery, or murder, perhaps of his own parents.

[d] Chap. xiii. 10.

25. [d] He that is of a proud heart, ſtirreth up ſtrife; but he that putteth his truſt in the LORD, ſhall be made fat.

v. 25. He that is of a proud, or large heart, either covetouſly graſping, or inſolently overbearing, ſtirreth up ſtrife; ever quarrelling with his neighbours, at law, or impatient of contradiction, and violent on the leaſt provocation: but he that putteth his truſt in the Lord, content with his proviſion, dependant on his providence, and coveting no man's abundance, ſhall be made fat; God will proſper him in his worldly affairs, even as his ſoul proſpereth, and make him happy and eaſy in whatſoever ſtate he is.

26. He that truſteth in his own heart, is a fool: but whoſo walketh wiſely, he ſhall be delivered.

v. 26. Thoſe who know their own hearts, will place no dependance upon them; perſuaded their beſt wiſdom is folly, their ſtrength, weakneſs; their deſert, damnation; and therefore that they muſt look out of themſelves for all to Jeſus Chriſt, if they would be delivered from the power and guilt of ſin here, or the puniſhment of it hereafter. To truſt in an heart deceitful above all things, and deſperately wicked, were the heighth of folly, and muſt iſſue in miſery.

[e] Deut. xv. 7, &c. Chap. xix. 17. & xxii. 9.

27. [e] He that giveth unto the poor ſhall not lack; but he that hideth his eyes, ſhall have many a curſe.

v. 27. No man was ever the poorer for what he lent to the Lord, in relief of the indigent; God will ſupply all his lack: whilſt the hard hearted and covetous, who would not look towards a poor man, or caſt an eye over his piteous caſe, ſhall have many a curſe from the poor, who complain of his uncharitableneſs, from all who condemn ſuch niggardly conduct, and above all, from God, who, as the patron of the poor, will not, with impunity, ſuffer them to be treated unkindly.

[f] Chap. xxix. 2. [g] Job xxiv. 4.

28. [f] When the wicked riſe, [g] men hide themſelves: but when they periſh, the righteous increaſe.

v. 28. This is ſimilar to v. 12. and ſhews the unhappy ſituation of a people, when wicked men rule, and the wiſe and juſt are baniſhed into obſcurity: and how bleſſed the reverſe is, when hurled from their abuſed eminence, the wicked periſh, and better men ſucceed, to the encouragement of piety and juſtice, and by whoſe influence and examples the righteous increaſe.

CHAP. XXIX.

1. HE that being often reproved hardneth his neck, ſhall ſuddenly be deſtroyed, and that without remedy.

v. 1. It is a bad ſymptom in the caſe of many, that inſtead of being ſoftened by reproofs, from the ſpirit, from miniſters,

Before Chriſt 700.

from parents, they obſtinately reject the admonition, and harden their necks, like bullocks, that refuſe the yoke, and the conſequence cannot but be fatal. Sudden and irremediable deſtruction awaits them: there is and can be no healing, as the word ſignifies, for thoſe who refuſe the only remedy that can cure their diſeaſe. They who continue in impenitence, muſt ſink into eternal perdition.

a Chap. xi. 10. & xxviii. 12, 28. Eccleſ. x. 5. † Or, increaſed.

2. [a] When the righteous are † in authority, the people rejoice: but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn.

v. 2. And with abundant reaſon; becauſe they who themſelves are governed by God's word, will rule with mildneſs and equity. Whilſt they, who have caſt off regard to his authority, have no reſtraint upon their paſſions and pride; and under ſuch rulers, neither religion, liberty, nor property are ſecure, chap. xi. 10. xxviii. 12, 28.

b Chap. x. 1. & xv. 20. & xxvii. 11. c Chap. v. 9, 10. & vi. 26. & xxviii. 7. Luke xv. 13.

3. [b] Whoſo loveth wiſdom, rejoiceth his father: but [c] he that keepeth company with harlots, ſpendeth his ſubſtance.

v. 3. Tutored in the ſchool of wiſdom, a gracious youth delights in the good ways of God, and his pious parents behold with joy the pleaſing proſpect of his temporal and eternal welfare. But when appetite takes the reins, and the company of abandoned women is ſought, miſery and beggary enſue; the parent's heart is broken, and in body and ſoul the unhappy victim of his paſſions is undone.

† Heb. A man of oblations.

4. The king by judgment eſtabliſheth the land: but † he that receiveth gifts, overthroweth it.

v. 4. Where juſtice is impartially executed, and liberty and property ſecure, there a king eſtabliſheth the land, it grows great, proſperous, and happy under his ſway: but when avaricious princes ſuck the blood of their ſubjects, by heavy taxes; or magiſtrates for bribes connive at the wicked, and oppreſs the innocent, that nation is on the verge of ruin.

5. A man that flattereth his neighbour, ſpreadeth a net for his feet.

v. 5. Beware of the man that flatters you; he hath ſome ill deſign: either he means to make a property of you, or wants to draw you into ſin. Deteſt the artful inſinuations, and turn from him with indignation: thus ſhall the net ſpread for you entangle himſelf.

6. In the tranſgreſſion of an evil man, there is a ſnare: but the righteous doth ſing and rejoice.

v. 6. Miſerable are the ways, as well as the end of evil men. There is a ſnare in them, one ſin draws on another; and troubles and plagues, the fruit of their tranſgreſſions, perpetually torment them: but the righteous, who have Chriſt for their portion, his word for their rule, his ſpirit their guide, his love their comfort, ſing and rejoice, all their ways are pleaſantneſs, their paths peace, and on earth they begin the ſongs of eternity.

d Job xxix. 16. Pſ. xli. 1.

7. [d] The righteous conſidereth the cauſe of the poor: but the wicked regardeth not to know it.

v. 7. Though as poor, no man is entitled to favour; yet juſtice is a debt due to the meaneſt, and both council and judge are bound to ſee right done, and the cauſe of the poor throughly inveſtigated, and fairly decided. It is the mark of the wicked that the love of the fee, not of juſtice, influences his conduct; and that where little or nothing is to be got, he cares not to be at any trouble in examining, or pleading the cauſe of the indigent.

e Chap. xi. 11. † Or, ſet a city on fire.

8. [e] Scornful men † bring a city into a ſnare: but wiſe men turn away wrath.

v. 8. Scornful men, who ſcoff at religion, and ſpeak evil of dignity, neither fearing God, nor regarding man, theſe bring a city into a ſnare, or blow upon a city; breath faction among the people, enflame their minds againſt their governors, and bring ſome heavy ſcourge upon themſelves: but wiſe men, who are quiet in the land, and follow peace with all men, turn away wrath, ſooth the exaſperated ſpirits of the populace, extinguiſh the riſing flame, cement the diſunited members, and prevent the the impending ruin.

9. If a wiſe man contendeth with a fooliſh man, whether he rage or laugh, there is no reſt.

v. 9. It is abſurd and fruitleſs to ſpend our breath on fools that are incorrigible; whether we uſe ſharpneſs or pleaſantry, they are alike inſenſible, and all the return they will make, will be to abuſe, or laugh at us for our pains; there is no reſt, no good to be done, nor end of the diſpute.

Before Chriſt 700.

† Heb. Men of blood. f 1 John iii. 12.

10. † The blood-thirſty [f] hate the upright: but the juſt ſeek his ſoul.

v. 10. The enmity between the ſeed of the ſerpent and the ſeed of the woman is inveterate and perpetual: good men are the objects of hatred to the wicked; they thirſt for their blood; and eſpecially they abhor thoſe upright magiſtrates, who are their terror: but the juſt ſeek his ſoul; either of the ſinner, praying for him, and labouring after his converſion; or of the upright, interpoſing to ſave his life from the hands of the blood-thirſty perſecutors.

g Judge xvi. 17. Chap. xii. 16. & xiv. 33.

11. [g] A fool uttereth all his mind: but a wiſe man keepeth it in till afterwards.

v. 11. Prudent reſerve is wiſe; to make every perſon we meet our confidant, or on every provocation to let looſe the tongue without reſtraint, is folly.

12. If a ruler hearken to lies, all his ſervants are wicked.

v. 12. Liars are to be abhorred of all, eſpecially of princes, round whom flatterers throng; and if they give ear to their reports and repreſentations, each will ſtrive to gain it by adulation and calumnies, and wickedneſs univerſally prevail: the ruler who thus loves and encourages, will be equally criminal with the ſervants who make the lie.

h Chap. xxii. 2. † Or, the uſurer.

13. [h] The poor and † the deceitful man meet together: the LORD lightneth both their eyes.

v. 13. In this world there is a mixed multitude; the poor and deceitful man, or uſurer, who grows rich by uſury and fraud, meet together in the concerns of buſineſs: the Lord lightneth both their eyes; either cauſing his ſun to ſhine upon them, and beſtowing the common bleſſings of his providence, or by his grace calling them into the light of his goſpel, from which the rich are no more excluded than the poor, and ſometimes they who have been the vileſt publicans, become the moſt ſhining chriſtians.

i Chap. xx. 28. & xxv. 5.

14. [i] The king that faithfully judgeth the poor, his throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever.

v. 14. Nothing ſerves to eſtabliſh the throne, and perpetuate it to the poſterity of the prince, as an upright adminiſtration of juſtice to the meaneſt, which will engage the affections of all, and render them zealous to ſupport his crown and dignity, under whom they enjoy ſuch a diſtinguiſhed bleſſing.

k Ver. 17. l Chap. x. 1. & xvii. 21, 25.

15. [k] The rod and reproof give wiſdom: but a child left to himſelf, [l] bringeth his mother to ſhame.

v. 15. The neceſſity of correcting a child hath been repeatedly obſerved. The rod and reproof muſt go together, and then both are twice effectual; and when they are applied without anger, and with an evident deſign not for our pleaſure, but their profit, they give wiſdom: but a child indulged and left to himſelf is a child ſpoiled, and will bring his fond mother to ſhame, doing what will reflect diſhonour upon his parents, and perhaps by and by inſolently flying in her face.

m Pſ. xxxvii. 36. & lviii. 10. & xci. 8.

16. When the wicked are multiplied, tranſgreſſion increaſeth: [m] but the righteous ſhall ſee their fall.

v. 16. Iniquity countenanced by multitudes becomes impudent, and one wicked man emboldens another, and increaſes both the number and enormity of tranſgreſſions: but however many or mighty they are to work wickedneſs, their ruin approaches: the righteous need neither envy nor fear them, but ſhall behold their fall, either in this world, thruſt down with ſhame from their high eſtate, or in the next doomed to the place of eternal ſhame and contempt.

n Chap. xiii. 24. & xix. 18. & xxii. 15. & xxiii. 13, 14.

17. [n] Correct thy ſon, and he ſhall give thee reſt: yea, he ſhall give delight unto thy ſoul.

v. 17. Though it be a painful thing to a parent's heart to uſe ſeverity, yet the bleſſed effects of the correction, in his child's improvement, will afterwards afford great ſatisfaction and delight to his ſoul, both from the conſciouſneſs of having diſcharged his duty, and from the pleaſing proſpect of their well-doing in time and eternity.

o 1 Sam. iii. 1. Am. viii. 11, 12. † Or, is made naked. p John xiii. 17. James i. 25.

18. [o] Where there is no viſion, the people † periſh: but [p] he that keepeth the law, happy is he.

v. 18. Miſerable is the ſtate of that people who are left deſtitute of revelation, and the miniſtry of the word; they periſh for lack of knowledge in their ſins; or are made naked, as in the margin, ſtripped both of their armour and ornaments; or become idle, careleſs in their walk for want of warning; or go backward, as is uſually ſeen where the goſpel is taken away from a place, that many fall away quickly from their profeſſions; or are rebellious, deſtitute of the fear of God, they have no reſtraint, but caſt off the yoke of authority, and grow factious and turbulent; for all theſe ſenſes the wórd bears: but he that keepeth the law, not only hears, but obeys it, finds the bleſſing and comfort of his fidelity.

19. A ſervant will not be corrected by words: for though he underſtand, he will not anſwer.

v. 19. We have here the character of an idle and incorrigible ſervant; words, even ſharp ones, make no impreſſion upon him, and though he underſtands what you ſay, yet ſo ſullen and perverſe, he will not deign to make anſwer, or promiſe to rectify what was amiſs; a rod, and a ſmart one, muſt be laid on ſuch a fool's back.

q Chap. xxvi. 12.

20. Seeſt thou a man that is haſty in his words? [q] there is more hope of a fool than of him.

v. 20. Slow parts, with application, will make a ſcholar ſooner than the volatile and flighty genius, that ſticks long at nothing; and much more hope is there that he will grow wiſe who modeſtly is ſilent, than the man whoſe talkativeneſs and conceit makes his tongue run faſter than his wits.

21. He that delicately bringeth up his ſervant from a child, ſhall have him become his ſon at the length.

v. 21. Indulged ſervants are often ſpoiled; they forget their diſtance, and abuſe the kindneſs ſhown them; grow inſolent and aſſuming, and by and by affect to be treated as the ſon, and claim the inheritance.

r Chap. xv. 18. & xxvi. 21.

22. [r] An angry man ſtirreth up ſtrife, and a furious man aboundeth in tranſgreſſion.

v. 22. Paſſionate men are the plague of ſociety; every trifle exaſperates them, and where they are, there is perpetual contention; whilſt in their fury they ſtick at nothing, and by ſwearing, curſing, and violence, add ſin unto ſin.

s Job xxii. 29. Chap. xv. 33. & xviii. 12. Iſa. lxvi. 2. Mat. xxiii. 12. Luke xiv. 11. & xviii. 14. James iv. 6, 10. 1 Pet. v. 5.

23. [s] A man's pride ſhall bring him low: but honour ſhall uphold the humble in ſpirit.

v. 23. Pride and poverty are near allied; they who affect to live, to dreſs, to appear above their ſtation, are in the high-road to beggary, and worſe than that, to hell; whilſt the humble, who are little in their own eyes, honour ſhall uphold them, or they ſhall lay hold of it; their lowly opinion of themſelves will be their recommendation to the wiſe, and God will exalt them to the honour of his preſent favour, and to his eternal kingdom in glory.

24. Whoſo is partner with a thief, hateth his own ſoul: he heareth curſing, and bewrayeth it not.

v. 24. The receiver of ſtolen goods is as bad as the thief, and brings the ſame guilt and ruin upon his ſoul: he hears the villain with ſolemn imprecations denying the fact, yet ſits ſilent and will not convict him; or though ſummoned to give evidence, perjures himſelf to conceal his accomplice.

t Gen. xii. 12, 13. & xx. 2.
† Heb. Set on high.

25. [t] The fear of man bringeth a ſnare: but whoſo putteth his truſt in the LORD, ſhall be † ſafe.

v. 25. Nothing is a more dangerous ſnare to the ſoul than the fear of man; through this many are led to make ſinful compliances, to be aſhamed of their profeſſion, or deterred from the path of duty: but whoſo putteth his truſt in the Lord, riſes ſuperior to his fears, and daring to be faithful to God in the face of every danger and diſcouragement, ſhall find Divine ſupport, and be ſafe from the power and threatnings of man, that is a worm.

u Chap. xix. 6.
x Gen. xliii. 14. Eſth. iv. 16. Chap. xxi. 1.

26. [u] Many ſeek the ruler's favour, but [x] every man's judgment cometh from the LORD.

v. 26. This is the way of the world; they who are great will be careſſed, and at their feet all bow down, in hopes of advantage; but every man's judgment cometh of the Lord, and therefore his favour ſhould be ſought in the firſt place, who alone can make us truly happy; can order the diſpenſations of his providence ſo as to give us ſucceſs in our purſuits here; and what is of infinitely greater moment, by him our eternal judgment muſt be determined hereafter.

y Pſ. xv. 4.

27. [y] An unjuſt man is an abomination to the juſt: and he that is upright in the way, is abomination to the wicked.

v. 27. Light and darkneſs are not more contrary to each other, than the unjuſt and the upright; there is a natural and irreconcileable antipathy between them. The unjuſt man is an abomination to the juſt; not his perſon indeed, but his ways; he ſhuns his ſociety, teſtifies againſt his ſins, and would have all men take knowledge of it; that he abhors the unfruitful works of darkneſs: the like averſion to goodneſs dwells in the boſom of the wicked; they hate both the men and their manners, cannot endure the reproach which the conduct of the upright caſts upon them, and therefore, to the utmoſt of their power, would extirpate them from the earth.

CHAP. XXX.

This and the following chapter are an appendix to Solomon's proverbs; but they are both expreſly called prophecies, in the firſt verſes of both; by which it appears, that the penmen of them, whoever they were, were divinely inſpired. This chapter was penned by one that bears the name of Agur Ben Jakeh; what tribe he was of, or when he lived, we are not told: What he wrote, being indited by the holy Ghoſt, is here kept upon record. We have here, 1. His confeſſion of faith, ver. 1—6. 2. His prayer, ver. 7—9. 3. A caution againſt wronging ſervants, ver. 10. 4. Four wicked generations, ver. 11—14. 5. Four things inſatiable, ver. 15, 16. to which is added, fair warning to undutiful children, ver. 17. 6. Four things unſearchable, ver. 18—20. 7. Four things intolerable, ver. 21—23. 8. Four things little and wiſe, ver. 24—28. 9. Four things ſtately, ver. 29. ad finem.

a Chap. xxxi. 1.
b Pſ. lxxiii. 22.
c Mat. xvi. 17.
† Heb. Know.
d John iii. 13.
e Job xxxviii. 4, &c. Pſ. civ. 3, &c. Iſa. xl. 12, &c. f Pſ. xii. 6. & xviii. 30. & xix. 8. & cxix. 140.
g Pſ. lxxxiv. 11. & cxv. 9, 10, 11.
h Deut. iv. 2. & xii. 32. Rev. xxii. 18, 19.

1. THE words of Agur the ſon of Jakeh, even [a] the prophecy: the man ſpake unto Ithiel, even unto Ithiel and Ucal. 2. [b] Surely I am more brutiſh than any man, and have not the underſtanding of a man. 3. [c] I neither learned wiſdom, nor † have the knowledge of the holy. 4. [d] Who hath aſcended up into heaven, or deſcended? [e] who hath gathered the wind in his fiſts? who hath bound the waters in a garment? who hath eſtabliſhed all the ends of the earth? what is his name, and what is his ſon's name, if thou canſt tell? 5. [f] Every word of God is pure: [g] he is a ſhield unto them that put their truſt in him. 6. [h] Add thou not unto his words, leſt he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

v. 1—6. Who this Agur was is immaterial for us to enquire; it is enough that he wrote under prophetic inſpiration, either directing his diſcourſe to Ithiel and Ucal, his children or his diſciples; or ſpeaking concerning Ithiel and Ucal; the names applicable to the great Meſſiah, God with me, and the mighty one, able to ſave to the uttermoſt; or addreſſed to him as the Redeemer of his people, who hears their prayers, and delivers them out of all their troubles.

1. He humbly confeſſes his ſin and ignorance. Surely I am more brutiſh than any man, or a brute rather than a man; ſuch blindneſs and ignorance is in man's fallen nature, ſuch perverſeneſs and corruption in his heart; and they who have the deepeſt knowledge of themſelves diſcovering more of the folly and ſin of their own hearts, than they can poſſibly ſee in others, will adopt with deepeſt ſenſibility the confeſſion; and have not the underſtanding of a man, of Adam, in innocence, or of men in general, in compariſon with whom we are confounded and aſhamed, and ready to think there never was another in the human nature ſo vile and ſo abominable. I neither learned wiſdom, by any power of my own, nor can I underſtand it unleſs taught of God; nor have I knowledge of the holy ones, for imperfect are the higheſt attainments of knowledge, reſpecting the divine Being, and his glorious perfections; and the things of God can no man know but by the ſpirit of God.

2. He exalts the glory of Ithiel and Ucal, the great Creator and Redeemer of men: none but he ever could reveal the deep things of God, who came down from heaven, and is aſcended thither, John iii. 13. By his power the ſtormy winds are reſtrained, the clouds are wrapped up as in a garment, the deep in ſwaddling bands: the earth, founded upon the flood, ſpoken into being at his word, and upheld by his providence: but who can declare his generation whoſe hands have made all theſe things? what his is name, and what his is ſon's name, if thou canſt tell? we are loſt the moment we ſet ourſelves to the enquiry; for who by ſearching can find out God, his nature, perfections, the Divine paternity or filiation, and all the other myſteries hid in the triune God? Here we muſt bow and ſilently adore.

3. He commends the excellence of God's word. It is pure, without the leaſt human mixture, or adulteration, and tending to produce purity of heart and life in all who receive the ſcriptures in the light and love of them: it is faithful, none ever truſted the promiſes and were diſappointed; but they, who according to his word have made God their refuge, have ever found him their ſhield to ward off every danger: it is perfect, incapable of improvement; it were daring preſumption in man to add thereto, and ſuch arrogance would provoke God's rebukes, and iſſue in the confuſion of thoſe who pretending to ſet up their traditions or fancies on a level with the revelation of God, would be detected as deceivers, be branded as liars, and ſuffer the doom of ſuch in the lake that burneth with fire.

Before Chriſt 700.

† Heb. withhold not from me.
[i] Mat. vi. 11.
‡ Heb. Of my allowance.
[k] Deut. viii. 12. & xxxii. 15. Hoſ. xiii. 6.
§ Heb. Belie thee.

7. Two things have I required of thee, † deny me them not before I die. 8. Remove far from me vanity and lies: give me neither poverty nor riches; [i] feed me with food ‡ convenient for me: 9. [k] Leſt I be full, and § deny thee, and ſay, Who is the LORD? or leſt I be poor and ſteal, and take the name of my God in vain.

v. 7—9. We have here Agur's prayer, often mentioned, yet in truth ſeldom made.

1. He is importunate, and hath two ſhort requeſts to make, for ſhort prayers that are vehement are more effectual than many words without fervency of heart. He cries, Deny me not before I die, that is, as long as I live let me have an anſwer to my petitions, and be ever under the care of thy kind providence, and the guidance of thy grace.

2. The requeſts he makes are,

[1.] For ſpiritual mercies, the moſt valuable, and to be ſought in the firſt place. Remove far from me vanity and lies; deliver me from ſin, from the guilt and the power of it, from corrupt principles and practices, from error and deluſion, from the love of the world and its vanities; in ſhort, from whatever would be diſhonourable to God, and hurtful to the ſoul.

[2.] For temporal mercies. A moderate competence, not affluence, but convenient food, ſuch as nature needs, and the wants of a family may crave; or the food of my allowance, ſuch as the Divine providence allots, and with which, in whatever ſtate we are, it becomes us to be content: and as there are peculiar temptations attendant on abject want, and great wealth, he prays to be preſerved from both extremes, leaſt in affluence he ſhould grow proud, and deny God by the abuſe of his riches, or his unthankfulneſs for them; or through the pinchings of poverty be tempted to ſteal, and take the name of God in vain, murmuring againſt his providence, or forſwearing himſelf to conceal the theft; or giving occaſion, by ſuch wickedneſs, to the enemies of God to blaſpheme. Note, (1.) We are allowed to pray for daily bread, but for no more, having food and raiment, though it be coarſe and plain, we muſt be therewith content. (2.) We have as much need to cry in all time of our wealth, as under our deepeſt wants, Good Lord, deliver us. (3.) They who are poor, need often, and earneſtly, pray they may be kept honeſt; for poverty is a ſtrong temptation to ſteal. (4.) When we know how weak we are, we ſhall deſire to keep out of the way of temptation. (5.) No man may think himſelf ſafe from the moſt ſcandalous ſins; left to ourſelves there is no evil we may not fall into.

† Heb. Hurt not with thy tongue.

10. † Accuſe not a ſervant unto his maſter, leſt he curſe thee, and thou be found guilty.

v. 10. To tell the faults of a ſervant to his unſuſpecting maſter, whoſe buſineſs is neglected, or his property injured, is but duty, and we need not fear the curſes that ſuch may liberally beſtow; but we may not accuſe them wrongfully, raſhly, or for trifles exaſperate their maſters againſt them, for this would be cruel, conſidering their ſtate of ſervitude, which need not be made more heavy; and alſo leſt he curſe thee, complain to God of the injuſtice, or report it to thy diſcredit, and thou be found guilty; proved to have acted a malicious part, and puniſhed of him who is the avenger of the oppreſſed.

[l] Luke xviii. 11.
[m] Tit. i. 16.
[n] Chap. vi. 17.
[o] Job xxix. 17. Pſ. lii. 2. & lvii. 4. Chap. xii. 18.
[p] Pſ. xiv. 4. Am. viii. 4.

11. There is a generation that curſeth their father, and doth not bleſs their mother. 12. [l] There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, [m] and yet is not waſhed from their filthineſs. 13. There is a generation, O how [n] lofty are their eyes! and their eye-lids are lifted up. 14. [o] There is a generation whoſe teeth are as ſwords, and their jaw-teeth as knives, [p] to devour the poor from off the earth, and the needy from among men.

v. 11—14. We have here a deſcription of four ſorts of perſons, juſtly abhorred of God and man.

1. Unnatural and diſobedient children, who, inſtead of thankfulneſs for the kindneſs they have received, and which they never can requite, fly in their parents faces, and abuſe thoſe from whom they have received their being; curſing their father, and cannot give a good word even to their tender mother.

2. Phariſaical and ſelf-righteous profeſſors of godlineſs, who, making a ſhew of outward piety and devotion, are pure in their own eyes, and yet none farther in fact from real purity, for they are not waſhed from their filthineſs; they feel not the guilt of their ſins, nor are conſcious of the corruption of their nature, and therefore do not carry their ſouls to the blood of Jeſus, to be cleanſed from the pollution of their ſins, nor to the ſpirit of Jeſus to be ſaved from the power of them: their religion is mere outſide, like the whited ſepulchre; the uncleanneſs of an unregenerate heart remains the ſame within.

3. The purſe proud, and ſcornful, that look with diſdain upon their inferiors, and treat them as beings of a different ſpecies.

4. Cruel and covetous oppreſſors of the poor, who, like beaſts of prey, with teeth ſharp as ſwords, devour the ſubſtance of the needy, and let them pine away in want. God will be the avenger of all ſuch.

Before Chriſt 700.

† Heb. Wealth.
[q] Chap. xxvii. 20. Hab. ii. 5.
[r] Gen. xxx. 1.

15. The horſeleech hath two daughters, crying, Give, give. There are three things that are never ſatisfied, yea, four things, ſay not, † It is enough! 16. [q] The grave, and [r] the barren womb, the earth that is not filled with water, and the fire that ſaith not, It is enough.

v. 15, 16. Like the horſeleech are the oppreſſors of the poor, inſatiable in cruelty and covetouſneſs, the two daughters, that ever cry, Give, give: and herein they reſemble four things; the grave, that is never full, but yawning for more; the barren womb, impatient as Rachel for children, or the barren womb of harlots; the earth, which ſoaks up the rain as faſt as it falls; and the fire, which devoureth all the fuel which can be heaped on it, and never ſaith, It is enough.

[s] Lev. 20. 9.
‡ Or, the brook.

17. [s] The eye that mocketh at his father, and deſpiſeth to obey his mother, the ravens of ‡ the valley ſhall pick it out, and the young eagles ſhall eat it.

v. 17. Not only are they wicked and diſobedient children, who curſe their parents, but to mock them, their infirmities or weakneſs, or to deſpiſe their inſtructions or commands, even thoſe of a mother, is highly criminal; and God will in judgment bring them to an untimely or ignominious death, when, their corpſes expoſed unburied, or hung up in chains for their crimes, the ravens ſhall pick out thoſe eyes that ſcornfully and with contempt glanced at their aged parents. Note, Many who have come to the gallows have confeſſed, that undutifulneſs to their parents led the way to all their wickedneſs.

† Heb. Heart.
‡ Heb. Of a ſtrong man with a virgin.
[t] Chap. xix. 10. Eccleſ. x. 7.

18. There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not: 19. The way of an eagle in the air, the way of a ſerpent upon a rock, the way of a ſhip in the † midſt of the ſea, and the way ‡ of a man with a maid. 20. Such is the way of an adulterous woman; ſhe eateth, and wipeth her mouth, and ſaith, I have done no wickedneſs. 21. For three things the earth is diſquieted, and for four which it cannot bear: 22. [t] For a ſervant when he reigneth, and a fool when he is filled with meat, 23. For an odious woman when ſhe is married, and an handmaid that is heir to her miſtreſs.

v. 18—23. We have here,

1. Four things unſearchable: The way of an eagle in the air, which leaves no track of her paſſage; the way of a ſerpent upon a rock, that moves without feet, and no traces remain; the way of a ſhip in the midſt of the ſea, the waters ſtill cloſing as it ſwims, and no path is left behind; and the way of a man with a maid, whoſe defilement is not known, or whoſe wiles are ſo ſubtle, and perſuaſions ſo artful, in order to rob her of her virgin honour. And like to it is the way of an adulterous woman, whoſe guilt is unperceived by her huſband, and whoſe artful methods of carrying on her criminal amours, are hid from every eye: ſhe looks as demure as if ſhe had done no wickedneſs, and none entertain, it may be, a ſuſpicion of her infidelity: but God ſees, and will ſhortly pluck off all theſe vain coverings, to the everlaſting confuſion of all ſuch workers of iniquity.

2. Four things intolerable; or rather four ſorts of perſons that are a plague to the place where they dwell, and a burden on the earth they tread: A ſervant when he reigneth, whoſe pride and arrogance riſe in proportion to his meanneſs, and make him inſolent and overbearing to all around him; a fool when he is filled with meat, purſe proud, or overcharged with ſurfeiting and drunkenneſs, whoſe tongue is a diſturbance to the company, abuſes friend or foe, indecent, aſſuming, or profane; an odious woman, whoſe temper is as crooked and deformed as her perſon, who, however ſhe might conceal it before, when ſhe is married leads her huſband a weariſome life, and is croſs and ill-natured to every body who comes near him; and an handmaid that is heir to her miſtreſs, who wheedled herſelf into favour, and gets all that ſhe has when ſhe dies, and hereupon gives herſelf airs, and ſets up for a gentlewoman:

nothing more offenſive than ſuch upſtart pride. Let thoſe who riſe, bring the humility of their former ſtate along with them, or they had better have remained in it.

24. There be four things which are little upon the earth, but they are † exceeding wiſe; 25. [t] The ants are a people not ſtrong, yet they prepare their meat in ſummer; 26. [u] The conies are but a feeble folk, yet make they their houſes in the rocks; 27. The locuſts have no king, yet go they forth all of them ‡ by bands;
28. The ſpider [x] taketh hold with her hands, and is in kings palaces.

† Heb. Wiſe, made wiſe.
[t] Chap. vi. 6, &c.
[u] Pſ. civ. 18.
‡ Heb. Gathered together.
[x] Chap. xxii. 29.

v. 24—28. The meaneſt creatures have much in them worthy of imitation. Four things are inſtanced, deſpicable in our eyes, but yet ſhewing a wiſdom thoſe who deſpiſe them are ſtrangers to: The ants are a people not ſtrong, yet they prepare their meat in the ſummer; more provident than many a ſluggard, who neglects to provide for the concerns of time, and is careleſs about eternity. The conies, or mountain mice, are but a feeble folk, and therefore they ſeek a ſhelter, and make their houſes in the rocks, where they cannot be purſued, to teach us, who have ſo many ſpiritual enemies, ſo much ſtronger than we are, to contend with, to fly to Jeſus the rock of ages, that under his ſhadow we may be ſafe. The locuſts have no king, yet they go forth all of them in bands, nicely marſhalled by implanted inſtinct; or gathered together, united among themſelves: an emblem of that unity and concord Chriſtians ſhould maintain, and which conduces ſo greatly both to their mutual comfort and ſupport. The ſpider taketh hold with her hands; untaught, her web exceeds what the fineſt wheel ever ſpun, and diſpoſed with an exactneſs equal to the rule and plummit, and is in kings palaces; whatever care is taken to keep them nicely ſwept, ſhe will ſtill find admittance; and though often deſtroyed, renews again her toils. They who imitate her diligence, are fit to ſtand before kings.

29. There be three things which go well, yea, four are comely in going: 30. A lion which is ſtrongeſt among beaſts, and turneth not away from any, 31. A † grey-hound, an he-goat alſo, and a king [y] againſt whom there is no riſing up.

† Or, horſe. Heb. Girt in the loins.
[y] Eccleſ. viii. 4.

v. 29—31. The majeſty and ſtatelineſs of theſe four things are remarkable: A lion, which is ſtrongeſt among beaſts, and conſcious of his might, turneth not away from any: ſuch ſhould every chriſtian be in the way of duty, never diſmayed at any danger or difficulty, knowing he hath the ſtrength of Omnipotence engaged for him. A grey-hound; or an horſe, as others rather interpret the words, which ſignify girt in the loins, which muſt needs be reckoned among the moſt noble animals. An he-goat alſo, who heads the flock: And a king, againſt whom there is no riſing up; his majeſty confounds, his power cruſhes thoſe who would riſe up againſt him. How will rebel ſinners then be confounded, when the King of kings, cloathed in terrible majeſty, ſhall ariſe to judgment?

32. If thou haſt done fooliſhly in lifting up thyſelf, or if thou haſt thought evil, [z] lay thine hand upon thy mouth. 33. Surely the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the noſe bringeth forth blood: ſo the forcing of wrath bringeth forth ſtrife.

[z] Job xxi. 5. & xl. 4. Mic. vii. 16.

v. 32, 33. Nothing needs a ſeverer reſtraint than that anger which is ſo eaſily kindled in our boſom: we are here cautioned to reſtrain it, eſpecially if we have to do with ſuperiors offended; to quarrel with whom, is only to puniſh ourſelves: If therefore thou haſt done fooliſhly in lifting up thyſelf, vainly conceited, or perverſely reſiſting thoſe who had the rule over thee; or if thou haſt thought evil, and it hath not yet broke forth, lay thy hand upon thine mouth, ſuppreſs the riſing evil, and take ſhame for what hath fooliſhly been ſaid or done; for elſe damage and hurt may enſue: for as ſurely as the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, and the wringing of the noſe violently bringeth forth blood; ſo the forcing of wrath bringeth forth ſtrife; one hot word brings on another; men's paſſions are inflamed, and the weakeſt are ſure to be worſted. Note, (1.) As ſinners before God, we need ever lay our hand on our mouth, and our mouth in the duſt, taking ſhame to ourſelves for our ſin and folly in daring to contend with our maker. (2.) Thoughts not uttered, though evil, are our ſin alone: if a looſe be let to the tongue, the poiſon becomes diffuſed, the miſchief endleſs. (3.) They who are wiſe, will ever give way. Nothing is got by quarrels and paſſionate oppoſition, but bloodſhed and damage.

CHAP. XXXI.

Here is, 1. An exhortation to Lemuel, a young prince, to take heed of the ſins he would be tempted to, and to do the duties of the place he was called to, ver. 1—9. 2. The deſcription of a virtuous woman, eſpecially in the relation of a wife, and the miſtreſs of a family, which Lemuel's mother drew up, either as an inſtruction to her daughters, as the foregoing verſes were to her ſon, or as a direction to her ſon in the choice of a wife; ſhe muſt be chaſte and modeſt, diligent and frugal, dutiful to her huſband, careful of her family, diſcreet in her diſcourſe, and in the education of her children, and, above all, conſcientious in her duty to God; ſuch a one as this, if he can find her, will make him happy. ver. 10—31.

1. THE words of king Lemuel, [a] the prophecy that his mother taught him. 2. What, my ſon?
and what, the ſon of my womb? and what, the ſon of my vows? 3. [b] Give not thy ſtrength unto women, nor thy ways to [c] that which deſtroyeth kings. 4. [d] It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine, nor for princes ſtrong drink: 5. [e] Leſt they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of † any of the afflicted. 6. [f] Give ſtrong drink unto him that is ready to periſh, and wine to thoſe that ‡ be of heavy hearts. 7. Let him drink and forget his poverty, and remember his miſery no more. 8. [g] Open thy mouth for the dumb, [h] in the cauſe of all ſuch as are appointed to deſtruction. 9. Open thy mouth, [i] judge righteouſly, and plead the cauſe of the poor and needy.

[a] Chap. xxx. 1.
[b] Ibid. x. 9.
[c] Deut. xvii. 17. Chap. vii. 26.
[d] Eccleſ. x. 17.
[e] Hoſ. iv. 11.
† Heb. All the ſons of affliction.
[f] Pſ. civ. 15. 1 Tim. v. 23.
‡ Heb. Are bitter of ſoul.
[g] Job xxix. 15.
[h] 1 Sam. xix. 4. Eſth. iv. 16.
[i] Lev. xix. 15. Deut. i. 16.

v. 1—9. Interpreters are divided concerning the perſon of king Lemuel: but the two moſt probable opinions are, either that he was the king of ſome bordering country of Judea, whoſe mother was an Iſraelite, and taught him thoſe leſſons; or that it was another name of Solomon, which his fond mother gave him, intimating his being devoted to God, as the word ſignifies: and what, by the inſpiration of God, this gracious woman delivered to him, he took care to tranſmit in writing for future generations. We have firſt,

1. Her addreſs. What, my ſon? either it intimates the tender concern with which ſhe ſpoke; or, as wanting words to enforce the leſſons ſhe was about to deliver; or, as deſigned to awaken his attention; or as an expoſtulation, having obſerved in him a tendency to the evils from which ſhe would diſſuade him, and which were ſo unbecoming a prince: and hereunto the following words ſeem moſt ſuited: What, the ſon of my womb? have I brought thee forth with ſorrow, and educated thee with ſuch parental care? and ſhall it be fruitleſs? hear what the tendereſt affection dictates; and grant me, it is all I aſk, this ſmall return for all my pains: and what, the ſon of my vows? devoted to God from earlieſt infancy; the ſon of many prayers; and doubly criminal it would be in ſuch to be unfaithful. Note, (1.) That mother ſhews true tenderneſs to her children, who labours from earlieſt infancy to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord; and the more exalted their ſtation, the more carefully their education deſerves to be attended to. (2.) We muſt plead with our children the many prayers that have been offered for them, and the obligations they are under of being early devoted to God, and acquainted with his word, as what will render their unfaithfulneſs more ungrateful and inexcuſable.

2. Her warning. [1.] Againſt lewdneſs: Give not thy ſtrength to women, for by indulgence with harlots, both the ſtrength of the body is impaired, and the faculties of the mind debilitated; nor thy ways unto that which deſtroyeth kings; one falſe ſtep had nearly ruined his father; and by this ſin, kingdoms have been overturned. [2.] Againſt drunkenneſs: The moderate uſe of wine, and other good things, is not forbidden; but all exceſs in a king were doubly criminal and ſcandalous; it is a profanation of their dignity, diſqualifies them for the diſcharge of their high eſtate, gives the moſt pernicious example to their ſubjects, makes God's law forgotten, and lays them open to exerciſe wanton tyranny and cruel injuſtice. Note, If drunkenneſs be ſo unbecoming a king, how ought thoſe who are anointed kings and prieſts unto God, to be eſpecially careful of exceſs, and ſhun whatever would lead them to ſo diſhonourable a deed.

3. Her advice: To be liberal, compaſſionate, the advocate of the oppreſſed, and the upright magiſtrate; theſe are the things that exalt a king. Inſtead of abuſing affluence, employ it for the uſe of the needy; give ſtrong drink unto him that is ready to periſh, to ſupport his fainting ſpirits, and wine to thoſe that be of a heavy heart, to revive them when dejected, low, and in diſtreſs. Let him drink moderately and forget his poverty, his ſpirits being cheared and refreſhed, and remember his miſery no more. Wine thus employed is well beſtowed. How much better thus to put our bottle to our indigent neighbour's mouth to revive his fainting ſoul, than in exceſs to drown his ſenſes, and diſcover the ſhame of his nakedneſs? Spiritually this repreſents the ſtate of a ſinner's ſoul, diſtreſſed under a ſenſe of guilt, periſhing under the apprehenſions of the Divine wrath, conſcious of his abject ſpiritual poverty: to them the ſweet wine of goſpel promiſes ſhould be freely given, that a ſenſe of the love of God in Chriſt may chear their drooping hearts; and by faith, drinking in a rich ſupply of mercy and grace, they may forget their poverty, and no more conſider their miſery, God having forgiven their iniquity, and promiſing to heal all their infirmities. Inſtead of negligence or oppreſſion, open thy mouth for the dumb, be the advocate of the diſconcerted or ignorant, who cannot plead their own cauſe, and reſcue them from their cruel proſecutors, who ſeem bent on their deſtruction. Open thy mouth with boldneſs and zeal, judge righteouſly, without reſpect to perſons, unawed by any conſideration, and plead the cauſe of the poor and needy, whoſe meanneſs might expoſe them to be trampled upon, their cauſe neglected, or their right over-ruled.

Before Chriſt 1015.

[k] Chap. xii. 4. & viii. 22. & xix. 14. 10. ¶ [k] Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies. 11. The heart of her huſband doth ſafely truſt in her, ſo that he ſhall have no need of ſpoil. 12. She will do him good, and not evil, all the days of her life. 13. She ſeeketh wool, and flax, and worketh willingly with her hands. 14. She is like the merchant ſhips, ſhe bringeth her food from afar.
[l] Rom. xii. 11. 15. [l] She riſeth alſo while it is yet night, and giveth
[m] Luke xii. 42. meat to her houſhold, [m] and a portion to her maidens.
† Heb. Taketh. 16. She conſidereth a field, and † buyeth it: with the fruit of her hand ſhe planteth a vineyard. 17. She girdeth her loins with ſtrength, and ſtrengthneth her ‡ Heb. Taſteth. arms. 18. She ‡ perceiveth that her merchandiſe is good: her candle goeth not out by night. 19. She layeth her hands to the ſpindle, and her hands hold the [n] Heb. xiii. 16. diſtaff. 20. [n] She ſtretcheth out her hand to the poor;
yea, ſhe reacheth forth her hands to the needy. 21.
She is not afraid of the ſnow for her houſhold: for all her § Or, double garments. houſhold are clothed with § ſcarlet. 22. She maketh her-ſelf coverings of tapeſtry, her clothing is ſilk and purple. 23. Her huſband is known in the gates, when he ſitteth among the elders of the land. 24. She maketh fine linen, and ſelleth it, and delivereth girdles unto the merchant. 25. Strength and honour are her cloth-[o] Col. iv. 6. ing, and ſhe ſhall rejoice in time to come. 26. [o] She [p] 1 Cor. xiii. 4. openeth her mouth with wiſdom, and in her tongue [p] is the law of kindneſs. 27. She looketh well to the ways of her houſhold, and eateth not the bread of idleneſs.
28. Her children ariſe up, and call her bleſſed; her huſband alſo, and he praiſeth her: 29. Many daughters ‖ Or, gotten riches. have ‖ done virtuouſly, but thou excelleſt them all. 30.
[q] 1 Pet. iii. 4, 5. Favour is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but [q] a woman that feareth the LORD, ſhe ſhall be praiſed. 31. Give [r] Acts ix. 39. her of the fruit of her hands, and let [r] her own works praiſe her in the gates.

v. 10—31. This is the deſcription of what good wives ſhould be; it is a pattern they ought to copy, and if they reach not the ſummit of perfection, yet ſhould be deſirous of advancing towards it. We have,

1. The enquiry made after ſuch a virtuous woman: The ſcarcer they are, the more diligently are they to be ſought out. Many appear well at a diſtance, ſet off with every genteel accompliſhment, and in perſon and manners engaging, who, when proved, often deceive men's expectations, and leave them without remedy to mourn the raſhneſs and folly of their choice: but where God in mercy is pleaſed to beſtow on us a helpmeet, truly excellent, whoſe amiableneſs appears greateſt the nearer ſhe is viewed, and the more ſhe is tried; her price indeed is far above rubies.

2. Her deſcription:

[1.] She behaves ſo as to engage and deſerve the entire confidence of her huſband: ſhe never gives him the leaſt occaſion for jealouſy, nor reaſon to doubt her diſcretion in the management of his domeſtic affairs; has no ſeparate intereſts, nor ever waſtes on herſelf in needleſs expence his ſubſtance, ſo that he ſhall have no need of ſpoil; driven to extortion to ſupply her extravagance. She will do him good; ſtudy his temper, make it her delight to pleaſe him, ſeek his advantage, and do every thing that may contribute to his comfort, profit, and honour in this world and in the next, and this all the days of her life.

[2.] She is active and induſtrious, and looks narrowly into her affairs; neither eats the bread of idleneſs, nor loves the bed of ſloth: her houſe is the ſcene of order, diligence, and frugality. She does not love to dreſs and viſit, and card and ſaunter at public places; her houſe is her happineſs, and her domeſtic employments her delight. Her family is up before the day, and breakfaſted, ready for their work as ſoon as the light ariſes, and each have their allotted portion, and know their proper employment, v. 15. herſelf in the midſt of them ſets the encouraging example; and having provided flax and wool at the moſt advantageous market, worketh willingly with her hands, not regarding it as a burden, but counting her duty her pleaſure, v. 13. and this ſhe doth with her might, v. 17. Her work is not ſome fooliſh finery, that may be more properly called idleneſs than labour, but what will be of uſe to her family. She is not aſhamed of the ſpindle and the diſtaff, v. 19. and with the candle light lengthens out the day, till the fit time of repoſe arrives, v. 18.

Before Chriſt 1015.

[3.] She is wiſe in the diſpoſition of what ſhe hath wrought, and knows how to turn it to the beſt advantage, v. 18. whether for domeſtic uſes, or to exchange with the merchants, v. 24. for food brought from afar, v. 14. to ſupply the wants of her houſhold; or for money: and with this, having conſidered a field, how convenient or improvable it may be, ſhe buyeth it; and with the ſavings of her induſtry planteth a vineyard, to improve her purchaſe, and increaſe her huſband's poſſeſſions.

[4.] She is charitable. Though ſhe lays up a proviſion for her family, it is not at the expence of the poor; her hands are open to relieve their neceſſities, and the indigent ever find in her a bountiful friend: her diligence and œconomy enables her both to provide for her own, and have enough beſides to ſpare.

[5.] Her family appears in the greateſt credit. Her huſband is known in the gates, when he ſitteth among the elders of the land; her good conduct advances his reputation; his wealth increaſes by her management: even his very dreſs, and that of his attendants, beſpeak her care, and his honour; for all her houſhold are clothed in ſcarlet; and he is able to appear in ſplendor by her means; or, in double garments, having two ſuits for winter and ſummer; ſo that in every ſeaſon they are nobly clad. Her houſe is elegantly adorned with tapeſtry of her own work; and though her dreſs is neither her vanity nor her concern, ſhe appears ſuitable to her ſtation; and can afford, becauſe ſhe earns, the ſilk and purple which ſhe wears.

[6.] To enhance her character, She openeth her mouth with wiſdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindneſs; never haughty, aſſuming, ſullen, peeviſh, contentious; but her language is tender endearment, and dutiful ſubmiſſion; ſhe would rather hear than ſpeak: when ſhe offers her advice to her huſband, ſhe pretends not to dictate, but refers herſelf to his determination; avoids every occaſion of diſpute, or wiſely yields to his ſuperior judgment; and all her family are hearers of her gracious diſcourſe. As ſhe wiſhes to govern her houſhold by love, not by threatening, her very commands are obliging, and her corrections tempered with gentleneſs.

[7.] To crown the whole. She is truly religious: ſhe feareth the Lord; is governed in all her conduct by the principles of his word, and a regard for his glory, and this adds double luſtre to all her other excellencies. Beauty of perſon is pleaſing, but it is a fading tranſient good, compared with the more ſubſtantial beauty of the mind: diſeaſe may ſoon crop, and age muſt quickly wither this fair flower; but time ſhall more improve the graces of the ſoul, and render the union of kindred ſpirits, heirs together of the grace of life, more intimate and endeared.

3. The bleſſedneſs of ſuch conduct will be great.

(1.) It will procure praiſe and honour from all around: her huſband will thank God, and count himſelf happy in ſuch a partner; her children will bleſs her care, and grow up to acknowledge and adorn her gracious inſtructions: every eye will own her virtues; and ſhe ſhall be praiſed, as worthy a name among the moſt excellent and honourable of women, v. 29. whilſt her own ſpouſe will not allow her equal to be found, and admires her as the flower of her ſex.

(2.) She will have cauſe to rejoice in all time to come, v. 25. her works continuing to ſpeak her excellence, ſhe ſhall reap the fruit of her hands, ſtrength and honour be her conſtant clothing in this world, and in the world to come ſhe ſhall receive the reward of fidelity, and rejoice eternally there, where there is neither marrying nor giving in marriage, but the ſouls of the glorified ſaints are advanced to a ſtate of higher bleſſedneſs than mortality ever knew, and are made like unto the angels.

Some have thought this deſcription is purely myſtical, and applicable to the ſpouſe of Chriſt, the church, whoſe inviolable purity and fidelity render her dearer to him than rubies; yea, he proved how highly he valued her, when he bought her with his blood: he truſts her with his goſpel, his ordinances, his children, aſſured of her care over them, v. 11. his honour and intereſts are her conſtant concern for ever, v. 12. The external garments of profeſſion, and the white linnen, the righteouſneſs of ſaints, are, through grace, her conſtant labour, v. 13. By prayer and communion with God ſhe goes out, as merchant ſhips, to heaven, and returns, fraught with the bread of life, from that far country, v. 14. the ſtewards of her myſteries, riſing early, diſpenſe to each their portion, feeding each member of the family with thoſe words of truth which are ſuited to their ſtate and condition, v. 15. The ſcripture is the field ſhe purchaſes, and is enriched thereby: a purchaſe indeed, made without money, and without price, Matt. xiii. 44. Iſa. lv. 1, and in her vineyard new converts are daily planted, and grow up to bring forth fruit unto God, v. 16.

She labours for the glory of her lord, and the good of the ſouls intruſted to her, with all her might, v. 17. Her merchandiſe of grace is better than ſilver; her lamp of profeſſion ever burning; and in the darkeſt night of adverſity her hope is never extinguiſhed, v. 18. She is inceſſant in well-doing, v. 19. and her ſpirit is charity itſelf, v. 20. The double garments, beautiful and ſhining, of righteouſneſs imputed and implanted, adorn her houſhold, which no change of ſeaſons or trials can affect, v. 21. Her houſe is decently adorned, and her ordinances adminiſtered with dignity, v. 22. Her huſband, the great bridegroom of ſouls, is known, honoured, and adored, both by his ſaints below, and by angels above, v. 23. Her miniſters receiving of her ſtores, make a rich return of precious ſouls, v. 24. Strong in grace, and honourable, ſhe ſhall rejoice in all the ages of time and eternity, v. 25. The doctrines of Divine wiſdom, and goſpel grace, are by her diſpenſed, v. 26. Her diſcipline is exact, and no idleneſs ſuffered under her roof, v. 27. The members of Chriſt, her children, bleſs God for their mercies, and pray for her peace and proſperity; and the Lord himſelf approves her fidelity, v. 28. and gives her the higheſt commendation, v. 29. All other beauty, and human glory, ſhall fade, but to eternity ſhall the church of the redeemed be for a praiſe, v. 30. when her works follow her to the gates of heaven, and Chriſt ſhall beſtow upon her the promiſed recompenſe of eternal bliſs.

The End of the Book of PROVERBS.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the BOOK of ECCLESIASTES.

The account we have of Solomon's apoſtaſy from God in the latter end of his reign, 1 Kings xi. 1. is the tragical part of his ſtory: we may ſuppoſe he ſpake his Proverbs in the prime of his time, while he kept his integrity, but delivered his Eccleſiaſtes when he was grown old (for of the burdens and decays of age he ſpeaks feelingly, chap. xii.) and was, by the grace of God, recovered from his backſlidings: there he dictated his obſervations, here he wrote his own experiences. The title of the book and the penman we ſhall meet with in the firſt verſe, and therefore ſhall here only obſerve,

1. That it is a Sermon, a Sermon in print: the text is, chap. i. 2. Vanity of vanities, all is vanity; and the ſcope of it is to convince us of the vanity of the world, and its utter inſufficiency to make us happy; the vileneſs of ſin, and its certain tendency to make us miſerable; of the wiſdom of being religious, and the ſolid comfort and ſatisfaction that is to be had in doing our duty both to God and man; and this ſhould be intended in every ſermon, and that is a good ſermon by which theſe points are in any meaſure gained.
2. That it is a penitential ſermon, as ſome of David's pſalms are penitential pſalms; it is a recantation ſermon, in which the preacher ſadly laments his own folly and miſtake, in promiſing himſelf ſatisfaction in the things of this world, and even in the forbidden pleaſures of ſenſe, which now he finds more bitter than death. His fall is a proof of the weakneſs of man's nature; Let not the wiſe man glory in his wiſdom, nor ſay, I ſhall never be ſuch a fool as to do ſo and ſo, when Solomon himſelf, the wiſeſt of men, played the fool ſo egregiouſly; nor let the rich man glory in his riches, ſince Solomon's wealth was ſo great a ſnare to him, and did him a great deal more hurt than Job's poverty did him. His recovery is a proof of the power of God's grace, in bringing one back to God that had gone ſo far from him, and the riches of God's mercy in accepting him, notwithſtanding the many aggravations of his ſin, purſuant to the promiſe made to David, that if his children ſhould commit iniquity, they ſhould be corrected, but not abandoned and diſinherited, 2 Sam. vii. 14, 15. Let him therefore that thinks he ſtands, take heed leſt he fall, and let him that is fallen, make haſte to get up again, and not deſpair either of aſſiſtance or of acceptance therein.
3. That it is a practical, profitable ſermon: Solomon being brought to repentance, reſolves, like his father, to teach tranſgreſſors God's way, Pſal. li. 13. and to give warning to all to take heed of ſplitting upon thoſe rocks which had been fatal to him; and theſe were fruits meet for repentance. The fundamental error of the children of men, and that which is at the bottom of all their departures from God, is the ſame with that of our firſt parents, hoping to be as gods, by entertaining themſelves with that which ſeems good for food, pleaſant to the eyes, and deſirable to make one wiſe. Now the ſcope of this book is to ſhew, that this is a great miſtake; that our happineſs conſiſts not in being as gods to ourſelves, to have what we will, and do what we will, but in having him that made us to be a God to us. The moral philoſophers diſputed much about man's felicity or chief good; various opinions they had about it; but Solomon in this book determines the queſtion, and aſſures us, that to fear God and to keep his commandments is the whole of man. He tried what ſatisfaction might be found in the wealth of the world, and the pleaſures of ſenſe, and at laſt pronounced all vanity and vexation; yet multitudes will not take his word, but will make the ſame dangerous experiment, and it proves fatal to them. He, (1.) Shews the vanity of thoſe things in which men commonly look for happineſs, as human learning and policy, ſenſual delights, honour and power, riches and great poſſeſſions. And then, (2.) He preſcribes remedies againſt the vexation of ſpirit that attends them.

Though we cannot cure them of their vanity, we may prevent the trouble they give us, by ſitting looſe to them, enjoying them comfortably, but laying our expectations low from them, and acquieſcing in the will of God concerning us in every event, eſpecially by remembring God in the days of our youth, and continuing in his fear and ſervice all our days, with an eye to the judgment to come.

CHAP. I.

In this chapter we have, 1. The inſcription or title of the book, ver. 1. 2. The general doctrine of the vanity of the creature laid down, ver. 2. and explained, ver. 3. 3. The proof of this doctrine, taken, (1.) From the ſhortneſs of human life, and the multitude of births and burials in this life, ver. 4. (2.) From the inconſtant nature, and conſtant revolutions of all the creatures, ver. 5—7. (3.) From the abundant toil man has about them, and the little ſatisfaction he has in them, ver. 8. (4.) From the return of the ſame things again, which ſhews the end of all perfection, and that the ſtock is exhauſted, ver. 9, 10. (5.) From the oblivion to which all things are condemned, ver. 11. 4. The firſt inſtance of the vanity of men's knowledge, and all the parts of learning, eſpecially natural philoſophy and politics. Obſerve, [1.] The trial Solomon made of theſe, ver. 12, 13, 16, 17. [2.] His judgment of them; that all is vanity, ver. 14. For, 1. There is labour in getting knowledge, ver. 13. 2. There is little good to be done with it, ver. 15. 3. There is no ſatisfaction in it, ver. 18. And if this is vanity and vexation, all other things in this world being much inferior to it in dignity and worth, muſt needs be ſo too. A great ſcholar cannot be happy unleſs he be a true ſaint.

1. THE words of [a] the preacher, the ſon of David, king of Jeruſalem. 2. [b] Vanity of vanities, ſaith the preacher, [c] vanity of vanities, all is vanity. 3. [d] What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the ſun?

a Ver. 12. Chap. vii. 27. & xii. 8, 9, 10.
b Pſ. xxxix. 5, 6. & lxii. 9. & cxliv. 4. Chap. xii. 8.
c Rom. viii. 20.
d Chap. ii. 22. & iii. 9.

v. 1—3. Solomon upon the throne never appeared ſo auguſt and venerable, as here he doth in the pulpit. We have,

1. The titles he aſſumes. The preacher, or koheleth; which ſome render gathered, and ſupplying the word ſoul, make it a deſcription of his own ſtate, recovered from his grievous backſlidings; for ſuch monuments of mercy doth the Divine grace ſometimes make; and they who are thus reſtored, are everlaſtingly bound to keep up a grateful memorial of the mercy: or the gatherer, to whom the people reſorted to hear his leſſons of inſtructions; or perhaps he now collected his ſubjects together, who had been juſtly offended at his unfaithfulneſs, that they might hear his recantation, that he might take ſhame to himſelf for the offence he had given, and caution others by his ſad experience to avoid the paths of ſin in which he had walked. Thus true penitents deſire ever to take ſhame to themſelves publickly, where their offence was publick; and as far as lies in them, ſeek to recover thoſe whom their influence or ill example led aſtray. The ſon of David, an honourable relation; but which rendered his ſin the more aggravated, conſidering the education he had received under ſuch a father; yet the everlaſting covenant made with David emboldened his hopes, and encouraged his return: king of Jeruſalem; the dignity of his ſtation made his example more pernicious, and in Jeruſalem alſo, where God's preſence dwelt, and his ſeat of worſhip was fixed, which rendered his ſins more infamouſly ſcandalous: thus, as true penitents do, he dwelt upon the aggravation of his guilt; or perhaps he mentions his ſtation as what ſhould engage attention from the people, and give weight to his diſcourſe.

2. The text of his diſcourſe is, Vanity of vanities, all is vanity; and this is redoubled, to ſhew his own deep conviction of the truth, and affect his hearers with a ſenſe of it. The world, and all the things of it, are utterly unſatisfactory; they periſh in the uſing, afford no ſolid comfort to the ſoul, and diſappoint all thoſe who place their confidence in them, or expect happineſs from them; and they who have with greateſt eagerneſs ſtrove to quench their thirſt at theſe broken ciſterns, by ſad experience have found them vanity of vanities: none had ever greater abilities to gratify his deſires, none ever with more boundleſs indulgence ſought ſatisfaction in earthly things, than Solomon, and after long proof this is his deliberate concluſion.

3. He appeals to univerſal experience for confirmation of the truth. What profit hath a man of all his labour which he taketh under the ſun? ſuppoſing there is ſomething ſubſtantial in the riches, honours, and pleaſures of this inferior world, poor mortals toil and labour, and when they thought to find a reality, graſp a ſhadow: even here man's life is often embittered by his abundance, and his pleaſures prove his torment; at death nothing he poſſeſſes can profit him to gain a moment's reſpite, or paſs with him into the grave; and after death how inſignificant will all thoſe things appear, unable to purchaſe the pardon of one ſin, or ſtand us in any ſtead at the bar of judgment? We muſt labour for a better portion above the ſun, if we would be happy to eternity.

4. One generation paſſeth away, and another generation cometh: [e] but the earth abideth for ever. 5. [f] The ſun alſo ariſeth, and the ſun goeth down, and † haſteth to his place where he aroſe. 6. The wind goeth toward the ſouth, and turneth about unto the north; it whirleth about continually, and the wind returneth again according to his circuits. 7. [g] All the rivers run into the ſea; yet the ſea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they ‡ return again. 8. All things are full of labour, man cannot utter it: the eye is not ſatisfied with ſeeing, nor the ear filled with hearing. 9. [h] The thing that hath been, it is that which ſhall be: and that which is done, is that which ſhall be done: and there is no new thing under the ſun. 10. Is there any thing, whereof it may be ſaid, See, this is new? it hath been already of old time, which was before us. 11. There is no remembrance of former things, neither ſhall there be any remembrance of things that are to come, with thoſe that ſhall come after.

e Pſ. civ. 5. & cxix. 90.
f Ibid. xix. 5.
† Heb. Panteth.
g Job xxxviii. 10. Pſ civ. 8, 9.
‡ Heb. Return to go.
h Chap. iii. 15.

v. 4—11. To prove the vanity of all things he had aſſerted, he ſhews,

1. The ſhortneſs and uncertainty of all our earthly enjoyments; we are poſting faſt to the grave, and treading upon the heels of thoſe who are now ſtepping into it, and muſt quickly follow them; our abode here is but a moment, and that continually in jeopardy: a ſhort-lived pleaſure therefore can the creature afford us.

2. When we are gone, the earth abideth for ever; we can carry nothing out of it: the world muſt endure it's appointed time, and then, with all the works upon it, be burnt up.

3. All the things in the world are in a ſtate of revolution; the ſun riſes and ſets; the winds veer round the compaſs; the rivers ceaſeleſs roll: an emblem of man's fluctuating ſtate, ſeeking reſt and finding none, and haſting with full ſpeed to the duſt, from whence he came; as theſe return again to the ſame place, and point from whence they ſet forth: nor in all his career can he find,

4. The leaſt ſolid ſatisfaction; the ſea will ſooner overflow, than the heart be filled with creature good; all the rivers of proſperity are inſufficient; the fineſt proſpect, the moſt melodious airs, ſoon pall the ſenſes; we want new objects to ſatisfy curioſity, and grow tired of them as ſoon as they are familiar. All things are full of labour, nothing can be obtained without it, and when we have toiled in the purſuit, we find we have wearied ourſelves for very vanity; man cannot utter it, how weariſome a world this is, and how empty all its enjoyments.

5. There is nothing new; we are apt to flatter ourſelves with being able to diſcover arcana in nature unknown before, and improvements in arts and ſciences, ſuch as would ſhame all former generations; but it is only what hath been; the courſe of nature is the ſame, men's hearts the ſame, their intellectual faculties the ſame; and what we call new, is only ſo to us, for want of records of former ages, or through our confined knowledge of the world at preſent: we muſt look above if we would have all things new, Rev. xxi. new hearts, faſhioned by Divine grace here, and a new world, wherein dwelleth righteouſneſs, and where vanity ſhall be no more.

6. Do what we will to make ourſelves memorable, we ſhall be diſappointed, and not live even in fame; few of the great perſonages that have appeared, and the wonders they have wrought, have found an hiſtorian to tranſmit their remembrance to poſterity; they are ſunk in the lake of oblivion, and thoſe in future ages who ſucceed us, will perhaps never ſo much as hear that ſuch perſons as we are ever exiſted. The only way to ſecure deathleſs fame, is to have our names written in the book of life of the Lamb, among his worthies, whoſe memorial ſhall endure not only through all the generations of time, but through the ages of eternity.

12. ¶ I [i] the preacher was king over Iſrael in Jeruſalem. 13. And I gave my heart [k] to ſeek and ſearch out by wiſdom concerning all things that are done under heaven: [l] this ſore travel hath God given to the ſons of man, to be exerciſed therewith. 14. I have ſeen all the works that are done under the ſun, and behold,

i Ver. 1.
k Pſ. cxi. 2.
l Gen. iii. 19. Chap. iii. 10.

all

Before Chirſt 977.

all is vanity and vexation of ſpirit. 15. [m] That which is crooked cannot be made ſtraight: and † that which is wanting cannot be numbred. 16. I communed with mine own heart, ſaying, Lo, I am come to great eſtate, and have gotten [n] more wiſdom than all they that have been before me in Jeruſalem: yea, my heart ‡ had great experience of wiſdom and knowledge. 17. And [o] I gave my heart to know wiſdom, and to know madneſs and folly: I perceived that this alſo is vexation of ſpirit. 18. For [p] in much wiſdom is much grief: and he that increaſeth knowledge, increaſeth ſorrow.

m Chap. vii. 13.
† Heb. Defect.
n 1 Kings iii. 12. & iv. 30. & x. 7, 23. Chap. ii. 9.
‡ Heb. Had ſeen much.
o Chap. ii. 12. & vii. 23, 25.
p Chap. xii. 12.

v. 12—18. Having aſſerted in general the vanity of all ſublunary good, he paſſes on to the grand particulars that engage men's purſuits, in order to confirm the truth he had advanced: he begins with wiſdom, of earthly things the moſt excellent, and proves the vanity of this by experience and argument.

1. He tried what happineſs human wiſdom in its moſt refined and exalted ſtate would bring; and he poſſeſſed ſuch advantages to make the experiment compleat, that none after him will preſume to be a more competent judge. He was a preacher, endued with gifts of nature the moſt ſingular; a king, who had it in his power to furniſh himſelf with all poſſible aſſiſtance in the proſecution of his ſtudies; he was over Iſrael, a wiſe and underſtanding people, and in Jeruſalem, the very ſeat of wiſdom, where he had opportunity of converſing with God's prophets and prieſts, and with the wiſeſt of men, not only of his own nation, but from all the earth, who reſorted to him; and his application was as indefatigable as his advantages were ſingular: he ſet himſelf to ſeek and ſearch out by wiſdom all things that are done under heaven; the depths of philoſophy, the ſecrets of nature; the qualities of animals, vegetables, foſſils, and all that is above or beneath the earth, 1 Kings iv. 33. the myſteries of politics, trade, manufactures; the hiſtory of mankind, ancient and modern, their manners, cuſtoms, and ways; nor was the purſuit unſucceſsful, he attained aſtoniſhing heights of ſcience; I have ſeen all the works that are done under the ſun, whether of nature or of art, and none who had been before him, even in Jeruſalem the ſeat of learning, had ever gone ſo far; and withal, his knowledge deeply digeſted, and the fruit of great experience. And that by contraries he might the better know the value of wiſdom, he ſet his heart to know madneſs and folly alſo; to obſerve the follies and vices, as well as virtues of mankind. Thus furniſhed, as far as the human underſtanding could ſoar, he was fully qualified to judge what happineſs all the attainments of human literature and ſcience could afford. But,

2. The experiment anſwered not at all the pains it coſt; the purſuit was attended with ſore travel; for no labour is more fatiguing than that of the mind, intenſely engaged; the juſt puniſhment of God, for man's daring to affect a wiſdom which was forbidden him: the poſſeſſion afforded him only a view of the vexation, as well as vanity of the world: the more he knew of men and things, the more he ſaw that grieved and vexed him; whilſt he felt his own inability withal to rectify any of the wretchedneſs and wants of this diſordered world. That which is crooked cannot be made ſtraight; ſuch is the corruption of human nature, that no attainments of wiſdom can mend it, even when we ſee what is fit and right; the biaſs to evil is ſo ſtrong, that reaſon and philoſophy remonſtrate in vain; nothing but Divine grace, which changes the heart, can make our paths ſtraight: and that which is wanting cannot be numbred: the more we know, the more we are convinced we know nothing, diſcover the endleſs defects in our own underſtanding, and wants which can neither be numbred nor ſupplied: ſo that upon the whole, we cannot but conclude, in much wiſdom is much grief; it is painful to acquire; ſerves to excite our thirſt, without being able to ſatisfy it; enlarges our knowledge of human miſeries, and makes us more ſenſibly affected with them. In ſhort, he that increaſeth knowledge, only increaſeth ſorrow; and every new attainment affords freſh cauſe of diſquietude and diſſatisfaction. But there is a wiſdom that will not thus diſappoint the attentive enquirer; the knowledge of Jeſus, the wiſdom of God, and the myſtery of godlineſs; the more we are acquainted with it, the more ſatisfaction will it afford to our ſouls; and however defective our meaſure of it may be here, the leaſt attainment contains an earneſt and aſſurance, that hereafter it will be compleat and perfect, when we ſhall know even as we are known.

CHAP. II.

Solomon having pronounced all vanity, and particularly knowledge and learning, which he was ſo far from giving himſelf joy of, that he found the increaſe of it did but increaſe his ſorrow; in this chapter, he goes on to ſhew what reaſon he had to be ſick of this world, and with what little reaſon the moſt of men are fond of it. 1. He ſhews, that there is no true happineſs and ſatisfaction to be had in mirth and pleaſure, and the delights of ſenſe, ver. 1—11. 2. He re-conſiders the pretenſions of wiſdom, and allows it to be an excellent uſeful thing; yet ſees it clogged with ſuch diminutions of its worth, that it proves inſufficient to make a man happy, ver. 12—16. 3. He inquires how far the buſineſs and wealth of this world will go towards making men happy, and concludes, from his own experience, that, to thoſe who ſet their hearts upon it, it is vanity and vexation of ſpirit, ver. 17—23. and if there be any good in it, it is only to thoſe that ſit looſe to it, ver. 24—26.

Before Chriſt 977.

1. I Said in mine heart, Go to now, I will prove thee with mirth, therefore enjoy pleaſure: and behold, this alſo is vanity. 2. I ſaid [a] of laughter, It is mad: and of mirth, What doth it? 3. [b] I ſought in mine heart to give myſelf unto wine ([c] yet acquainting mine heart with wiſdom) and to lay hold on folly, till I might ſee what was that good for the ſons of men, which they ſhould do under the heaven, † all the days of their life. 4. [d] I made me great works, I builded me houſes, I planted me vineyards. 5. I made me gardens and orchards, and I planted trees in them of all kind of fruits. 6. I made me pools of water, to water therewith the wood that bringeth forth trees 7. I got me ſervants and maidens, and had ‡ ſervants born in my houſe; alſo I had great poſſeſſions of great and ſmall cattle, above all that were in Jeruſalem before me. 8. [e] I gathered me alſo ſilver and gold, and the peculiar treaſure of kings, and of the provinces: I gat me men-ſingers and women-ſingers, and the delights of the ſons of men, as muſical inſtruments, and that of all ſorts. 9. So [f] I was great and increaſed more than all that were before me in Jeruſalem; alſo my wiſdom remained with me. 10. And whatſoever mine eyes deſired, I kept not from them, I withheld not my heart from any joy: for my heart rejoiced in all my labour, and [g] this was my portion of all my labour. 11. Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labour that I had laboured to do: and behold, [h] all was vanity and vexation of ſpirit, and there was no profit under the ſun.

a Prov. xiv. 13. Chap. vii. 6.
b Chap. i. 17.
c 1 Kings xviii. 21. Mat. vi. 24.
† Heb. The number of the days, &c. d 1 Kings ix. 15—19.
‡ Heb. Sons of my houſe.
e 1 Kings ix. 28. & x. 10, 14, 21, &c.
f Chap. i. 16.
g Chap. iii. 22. & v. 18. & ix. 9.
h Chap. i. 3, 14.

v. 1—11. Since the purſuit of wiſdom diſappointed all his hopes, behold the ſyſtem changed, and that happineſs ſought in the indulgencies of ſenſe, and the flowery paths of pleaſure, which the regions of ſcience could not give.

1. In mirth the jocund hours are paſſed; no joy withheld, no amuſement forgotten; the poignancy of wit, and flights of humour, keep the gay circle in a burſt of laughter: in dance and ſong, and all the delights of the ſons of men, the live-long day is ſpent; whilſt muſic's enchanting ſound, with vaſt variety of inſtruments, pours forth a flood of harmony, and pleaſure reigns throughout the palaces of Sion: but is this man's proper good? no, in no wiſe; the event declared it: behold this alſo is vanity, poor and unſatisfactory. I ſaid of laughter, It is mad; it diverts the ſoul from the ways of ſerious godlineſs; and what can be greater madneſs, than for momentary mirth to plunge our ſouls into eternal mourning? What doth it? it can ſcarce afford a tranſient reſpite from preſent griefs; for even in laughter, often the heart is ſad; and the end of that mirth, which tends to blunt the edge of Divine conviction, or to diſſipate the impreſſions which God's word hath made on our minds, muſt be heavineſs: the time will come when none of theſe can afford the leaſt ſatisfaction; the witty jeſt can no longer brighten the countenance, ghaſtly in the convulſions of death; the ſongs of vanity are pangs to the ear, that, lying on the bed of ſickneſs, can ſcarce bear the lighteſt foot that treads the floor; and the gay circle can afford no delight to the eye ready to cloſe in death.

2. From wine he tried to find the joy which pleaſure had denied: the board is filled; the ſparkling glaſs goes round; and though with reluctance he deſcended from the intellectual pleaſures of a man, to the enjoyments of a beaſt, he reſolved to try the experiment, and to lay hold of folly; yet even when he made the attempt, he could not ſoberly but condemn the indulgence, and purpoſed to abſtain from groſſer exceſſes, and keep folly, as it were, at bay, acquainting himſelf yet with wiſdom; maintaining ſuch a guard over his appetite, that he might not be enſlaved by drunkenneſs or exceſs, and only taſte enough to ſatisfy him what was that good for the ſons of men, which they ſhould do under the ſun, all the days of their life; and as he owns the attempt folly, ſo he found it; for to ſeek from the intoxication of our ſenſes, any real good to our ſouls, muſt be indeed the fooliſhneſs of folly.

3. The board is cleared, the ſongs of mirth are ſilent, another ſcheme of happineſs purſued, and promiſing greater ſatisfaction: the noble plans are drawn, the materials ready, the gorgeous palace riſes majeſtical to view; the vineyards planted, the gardens laid out with taſte, the lawns extended, the woods diſpoſed with niceſt judgment; the trees, for fruit or ſhew, exquiſite of their kind; large pieces of water collected for uſe and beauty, to pleaſe the eye and fertilize the ſoil: a vaſt retinue ever waited his commands in all the various offices of his houſhold; and far from being impoveriſhed with all his works, his income exceeded his expence: his treaſuries were filled; his cabinet ſtored with jewels, and whatever was exquiſite and curious; and from the diſtant provinces the richeſt preſents courted his acceptance, ſent from tributary kings, or governors, or from ſuch as ſought ſolution of their difficulties, or counſel in their emergences from his tranſcendant wiſdom. Thus in riches, magnificence, and ſplendor, he quite obſcured all his predeceſſors; and ſtill his wiſdom remained; amidſt all his other purſuits he kept poſſeſſion of himſelf, and was not ſo enſlaved by any of them, as not to be able to form a right judgment of them; though he gave the moſt unbounded ſcope to the gratification of his deſires, kept back his heart from no joy, taſted his pleaſures with the higheſt reliſh of delight, and enjoyed all the fruits of his labours without a diſappointment, or check to allay the ſatisfaction: yet on the review, revolving all his works, the thought, the care, the expence they coſt him, and how little real happineſs they afforded him, he ſolemnly declares all to be vanity and vexation of ſpirit; and neither the employments, nor enjoyments under the ſun, afforded the leaſt real profit. They muſt look higher than the ſun who would ſecure ſubſtantial good.

[l] Chap. i. 17. & vii. 25.

12. And I turned myſelf to behold wiſdom, [l] and madneſs, and folly: for what can the man do that cometh after the king? even that which hath been already done. 13. Then I ſaw that wiſdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkneſs. 14. [k] The wiſe man's eyes are in his head, but the fool walketh in darkneſs: and I myſelf perceived alſo, that [l] one event happeneth to them all. 15. Then ſaid I in my heart, As it happeneth to the fool, ſo † it happeneth even to me; and why was I then more wiſe? Then I ſaid in my heart, that this alſo is vanity. 16. For there is no remembrance of the wiſe more than of the fool for ever; ſeeing that which now is, in the days to come ſhall all be forgotten: and how dieth the wiſe man? [m] as the fool.

[k] Prov. xvii. 24. Chap. viii. 1.
[l] Pſ. xlix. 10. Chap. ix. 2, 3.
† Heb. It happeneth to me, even to me.
[m] 2 Sam. iii. 33.

v. 12—16. Behold this wiſeſt of men.

1. Re-aſſuming his purſuit of wiſdom, though he had found it unſatisfactory: he might perhaps have overlooked ſomething, or been haſty in his concluſion; at leaſt he was reduced to this, becauſe on reflection he was convinced that all his other ſchemes of happineſs were comparatively madneſs and folly, and the pleaſures of ſcience as much ſuperior to the joys of ſenſe, as light excelleth darkneſs: and in all his deciſions we may ſafely acquieſce; nor vainly eſſay by our own experience, to prove thoſe things madneſs and folly, which one, ſo much abler both to make the experiment, and ſo much wiſer to determine upon the caſe, hath already reſolved.

2. The repeated trial confirmed his former concluſion; for though wiſe men ſeem to have ſome advantages over fools, yet all their foreſight often ſtands them in as little ſtead as the fool's blunders: One event happeneth to them all, their bodies liable to the ſame diſeaſes, the ſame diſaſters attend them both, the ſame grave awaits them, and when dead, they will be alike forgotten; even he himſelf, great as wiſe, was not exempt from this common fate, As it happeneth to the fool, ſo it happeneth to me, even to me, as the original emphatically expreſſes it; and therefore he concludes, Why was I then more wiſe? why take ſo much pains? What profit is there of my labour, when I ſtand on the ſame level, and am expoſed to the ſame diſaſters as others? Then I ſaid, this alſo is vanity, and the purſuit of worldly wiſdom unprofitable and uſeleſs. Let all the proud of this world, on learning, abilities, wealth, or ſtation, hear and weigh this mortifying truth, The fool and the beggar in the grave muſt be their equals; there no diſtinction is known, but what Divine grace makes alone.

17. Therefore I hated life, becauſe the work that is wrought under the ſun is grievous unto me: for all is vanity and vexation of ſpirit. 18. ¶ Yea, I hated all my labour which I had † taken under the ſun: becauſe [n] I ſhould leave it unto the man that ſhall be after me. 19. And who knoweth whether he ſhall be a wiſe man [o] or a fool? Yet ſhall he have rule over all my labour wherein I have laboured, and wherein I have ſhewed myſelf wiſe under the ſun. This is alſo vanity. 20. Therefore I went about to cauſe my heart to deſpair of all the labour which I took under the ſun. 21. For there is a man whoſe labour is in wiſdom and in knowledge and in equity: yet to a man that hath not laboured therein ſhall he ‡ leave it for his portion. This alſo is vanity, and a great evil. 22. For [p] what hath man of all his labour, and of the vexation of his heart wherein he hath laboured under the ſun. 23. For [q] all his days are ſorrows, and his travel grief; yea, his heart taketh not reſt in the night. This is alſo vanity. 24. [r] There is nothing better for a man than that he ſhould eat and drink, and that he ſhould ‖ make his ſoul enjoy good in his labour. This alſo I ſaw, [s] that it was from the hand of God. 25. For who can eat, or who elſe can haſten hereunto more than I? 26. For God giveth to a man that is good in his ſight, wiſdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the ſinner he giveth travel, to gather and to heap up, [t] that he may give to him that is good before God. This alſo is vanity and vexation of ſpirit.

† Heb. Laboured.
[n] Pſ. xlix. 10.
[o] 1 Kings xii. 14.
‡ Heb. Give.
[p] Chap. i. 3. & iii. 9.
[q] Job xiv. 1.
[r] Chap. iii. 12, 13, 22. & v. 18. & viii. 15.
§ Or, delight his ſenſes.
[s] Deut. viii. 18.
[t] Job xxvii. 16, 17. Prov. xxviii. 8.

v. 17—26. There ſeems to be ſomething of impatience as, well as diſſatisfaction, expreſſed in theſe words.

1. He appears heartily tired of all the ſchemes he had purſued, and the works in which he had been engaged; not only he hated his labour, was diſappointed in, and weary of the vanities he had ſought, but hated life itſelf, becauſe of the troubles and vexations with which it is embittered, and wanted a reſt he could not find on earth. In deſpair he quitted all his toils, cloſed his books, diſmiſſed his builders, forſook his pleaſures; and, now aſſured no happineſs could be found beneath the ſun, began, with holy indifference about creature vanities, to ſeek the ſubſtantial bliſs, which is to be found in a better world. Note, It is happy for us, when the conviction of the inſufficiency of the creature, leads us up to the all-ſufficiency of the Creator. God in Chriſt is the only portion which can fill the reſtleſs deſires of an immortal ſoul.

2. He gives ſubſtantial reaſons why he was tired of life and its toils. The work under the ſun was grievous, v. 17. not only the employments of the body, but the more fatiguing application of the mind, the labour of wiſdom, knowledge, and equity, v. 21. how to tranſact the buſineſs of our ſtation with greateſt advantage and integrity; the care and concern about which occaſions many ſorrows, through the diſappointments and perplexities in which we are involved; and what in the day dwells thus anxiouſly on our minds, at night drives ſleep from our eye-lids: ſuch a vanity and vexation of ſpirit do they find this world to be who are moſt occupied in it. And for whom do they toil? not for themſelves, but for thoſe who come after them, v. 18. At death all muſt be left behind, to one who enters into poſſeſſion of what coſt him no pains, v. 21. and light come, light go; or he takes it as his portion, v. 21. and thinks he has thereby obtained a preſcription to be idle and uſeleſs in his generation; for who knoweth whether he ſhall be a wiſe man or a fool who inherits the fruit of their labours? The eſtate raiſed by equity and prudence, is perhaps waſted in extravagance; and what the wiſe laboured all their days to erect, the fool that follows wantonly pulls down, v. 19. as was the caſe with Solomon himſelf; and perhaps he in the ſpirit of prophecy foreſaw how unworthy Rehoboam would prove. What therefore hath a man of all his labour? nothing that yields him ſubſtantial joy, or abiding ſatisfaction.

3. He declares what is the proper uſe of creature comforts: To enjoy them in moderation, poſſeſs them with thankfulneſs, and improve them to God's glory; and this muſt be the gift of God, who alone can give us a heart to ſpend freely, what we have gained wiſely; with a ſenſe of his love enable us to reliſh the good he beſtows, and make even our worldly enjoyments the means of drawing us nearer to his bleſſed ſelf: to this Solomon haſtened, v. 25. and the wiſe will ſeek to follow his example.

4. He concludes with obſerving the miſery of the wicked, who have no heart to uſe aright the bleſſings God beſtows upon them: They are curſed with perpetual anxiety and toil, both to amaſs and to preſerve their gains; they have no comfort in them, but pine in the midſt of plenty; and uncharitable and cruel, have no heart to open their ſtores for the relief of the needy; till God at laſt cuts them off, or takes from them what they ſo abuſe, to give it to others who will employ their abundance to a better purpoſe: and this alſo is vanity and vexation of ſpirit to the wicked, who cannot bear the thoughts of parting with his poſſeſſions; and grieves at the proſpect of ſeeing his beloved riches liberally ſpent, or in the hands of thoſe who will devote them to the glory of God, and the good of their fellow-creatures.

CHAP. III.

Solomon having ſhewed the vanity of ſtudies, pleaſures, and buſineſs, and made it to appear, that happineſs is not to be found either in the ſchools of the learned, in the gardens of Epicurus, or upon the exchange, he proceeds in this chapter further to prove his doctrine, and the inference he had drawn from it, that therefore we ſhould chearfully content ourſelves with, and make uſe of, what God has given us, by ſhewing, 1. The mutability of all human affairs, ver. 1—10. 2. The immutability of the divine counſels concerning them, and the unſearchableneſs of thoſe counſels, ver. 11—15. 3. The vanity of worldly honour and power, which is abuſed for the ſupport of oppreſſion and perſecution, ver. 16. And for a check to proud oppreſſors, and to ſhew them their vanity, he minds them, (1.) That they will be called to account for it in the other world, ver. 17. (2.) That their condition in reference to this world (for of that he ſpeaks) is no better than that of the brutes, ver. 18—21. And therefore he concludes, that it is our wiſdom to make uſe of what power we have for our own comfort, and not to oppreſs others with it.

1.[a] TO every thing there is a ſeaſon, and [a] a time to every purpoſe under the heaven: 2. A time † to be born, and a time to die: a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted: 3. A time to kill, and a time to heal: a time to break down, and a time to build up: 4. [b] A time to weep, and a time to laugh: a time to mourn, and a time to dance: 5. A time to caſt away ſtones, and a time to gather ſtones together: a time to embrace, and [c] a time to ‡ refrain from embracing: 6. A time to get, and a time to loſe: a time to keep, and a time to caſt away: 7. A time to rent, and a time to ſew: [d] a time to keep ſilence, and a time to ſpeak: 8. A time to love, and a time to hate: a time of war, and a time of peace. 9. [e] What profit hath he that worketh, in that wherein he laboureth? 10. [f] I have ſeen the travel which God hath given to the ſons of men, to be exerciſed in it.

[a] Ver. 17. Chap. viii. 6.

† Heb. To bear.

[b] Mat. ix. 15.

[c] Joel ii. 16. 1 Cor. vii. 5.

‡ Heb. Be far from.

[d] Am. v. 13.

[e] Chap. i. 3.

[f] Chap. i. 13.

v. 1—10. Known to God from the beginning are all his works, and fixed in his eternal mind his infinitely wiſe deſigns. Though we live in a changing world, where many things happen ſtrange, unexpected, and, as to us they appear, merely accidental; yet God hath left nothing uncertain. The diſpenſations of his providence and grace are governed by an unalterable decree; all events predetermined in his counſel and foreknowledge; and can neither be a moment delayed beyond, or anticipated before, their appointed time; and this ſhould give ſatisfaction to the child of God amidſt all the changes and chances of this mortal life, and engage him to wait the Lord's leiſure; for we know, that all things muſt work together for good to thoſe who love him. In a variety of particulars he proceeds to confirm the general truth, that to every thing there is a ſeaſon.

1. There is a time to be born, and a time to die: both were fixed ere we had our being; the moment, the manner, the place, the condition, and every circumſtance both of our lives and death.

2. A time to plant; either a tree; or an immortal ſoul, by the miniſtry of the word; or a nation, by divine providence; and a time to pluck up that which is planted; either the tree that is paſt bearing, or fruitleſs; or the ſoul, when its work is done, and it is ripe for glory; or when twice dead, and fuel for the flames of hell; or a nation, when the meaſure of its iniquities are full, Jer. xviii. 7—9.

3. A time to kill, by divine judgments, or the ſword of war, or the ſentence of the civil magiſtrate; and a time to heal, when thoſe who appeared incurable under the power of ſin in their ſouls, or diſeaſe in their bodies, are wonderfully reſtored to health; or when the affairs of a kingdom, that ſeemed haſting to ruin, are retrieved.

4. A time to break down, the ſtrength of the body, the proſperity of a family or nation; and a time to build up; when our private affairs ſeem moſt deſperate, and the church of God reduced to the moſt abject ſtate, he can, as of old, revive the ſtones of his temple out of the duſt.

5. A time to weep and mourn, when our own, our friends, or the church's afflictions, call forth our tears; and a time to laugh and dance, when God beſtowing proſperity on our bodies and ſouls, and on his Zion, requires us to ſerve him with gladneſs of heart.

6. A time to caſt away ſtones, when proud palaces and wicked cities are levelled to the ground; and a time to gather ſtones together, when God raiſeth the poor from the duſt, and giveth them cities to dwell in.

7. A time to embrace, with conjugal affection, the wife of our boſom, or with warm affection the friend of our heart; and a time to refrain from embracing; by choice, for a ſeaſon, to give ourſelves to prayer, See 1 Cor. vii. 3—5. or by neceſſity, when ſeparated from thoſe who are dear to us, through buſineſs, or in times of trouble and perſecution.

8. A time to get, when God's providence bleſſes, and we enjoy the moſt favourable opportunities of enriching ourſelves with temporal or ſpiritual good things; and a time to loſe, when unforeſeen events deprive us of our worldly ſubſtance, or ſad decays creep upon our ſouls.

9. A time to keep, when our increaſing families call for an increaſing proviſion, or when in peace we are permitted to enjoy our poſſeſſions; and a time to caſt away, when by God's gift our abundance enables us to ſupply the wants of the poor; or, for the teſtimony of a good conſcience, we are called upon to ſuffer the loſs of all things.

10. A time to rent our garments, in token of deep mourning, or in deteſtation of ſome atrocious wickedneſs; and a time to ſew, when the cauſe of our ſorrow is removed, and we may no longer be inconſolable.

11. A time to keep ſilence, under afflictive providences dumb before God, not daring to utter a murmuring word; or in the preſence of the wicked, when even from God's words we muſt refrain, nor caſt theſe pearls before ſwine: and a time to ſpeak, when duty calls for our boldneſs in the cauſe of God and truth, and prudence will dictate the fit ſeaſon and proper manner.

12. A time to love, when faithful friendſhip and mutual regard engage our affections; and a time to hate, when thoſe who behave unſuitably, forfeit our regard, oblige us to treat them with diſtance, and ſhun their company.

13. A time of war, in a juſt cauſe, when a nation's wrongs cannot be otherways redreſſed; or during our whole lives, whilſt our ſpiritual warfare laſts; and a time of peace, when the end for which the war was undertaken is anſwered; or at death, when the believer will enter into eternal reſt and peace.

Finally, As the inference from this view of the mutable and changing ſtate of the things in which we are engaged, he concludes the unprofitableneſs and vanity of all our purſuits. No poſſeſſion is ſure to us for an hour; and, inſtead of expecting our happineſs in any creature, we ſhould regard theſe labours rather as a part of the curſe denounced on the firſt man's ſin, and that God deſigns, as the word ſignifies, to afflict and humble us thereby. Note, (1.) This world is not our reſt: it was never deſigned to be ſo. Man is born in it to ſorrow and trouble, as the ſparks fly upwards. (2.) Our curſe of labour may be made eventually our mercy, as it prevents us from that idleneſs which would be highly dangerous to our ſouls, and ſerves to excite greater longings after that better world, where there remaineth a reſt for the people of God.

11. He hath made every thing beautiful in his time: alſo he hath ſet the world in their heart, ſo that [g] no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end. 12. [h] I know that there is no good in them, but for a man to rejoice, and to do good in his life. 13. And alſo [i] that every man ſhould eat and drink, and enjoy the good of all his labour, it is the gift of God. 14. I know that whatſoever God doth, it ſhall be for ever: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doth it, that men ſhould fear before him. 15. [k] That which hath been, is now; and that which is to be, hath already been, and God requireth that which is † paſt.

[g] Chap. viii. 17. Rom. xi. 33.

[h] Ver. 22.

[i] Chap. ii. 24.

[k] Chap. i. 9.

† Heb. Driven away.

v. 11—15. In all the changes and viciſſitude we meet with in this vain world, God's hand muſt be regarded, who doth all things according to the counſel of his own will.

1. We muſt reſt aſſured, that he doth all things well. He hath made every thing beautiful in his time: all the variety in nature, and the turns of providence, however ſome things may ſeem to us undeſirable, disjointed, uſeleſs, or afflictive, yet are connected in the greateſt beauty and harmony, and conſpire together to advance God's glory, and to promote the good of thoſe who love him. He hath ſet the world in their heart; expanded the volume of nature for our obſervation; yet, ſuch is the darkneſs of our fallen minds, that no man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end. We know at beſt but in part, and the ſhallow line of human reaſon cannot fathom the abyſs of his providences. And perhaps the former clauſe may ſuggeſt alſo the reaſon, through the prevailing love of the world in our hearts, which takes off our minds from divine contemplation. But whatever veil now covers the deep things of God, it will ſhortly be done away: tho' we know not now, we ſhall know hereafter, and for ever admire and adore the perfection, excellence, and beauty of all his works and ways, in creation, providence, and grace, and not a flaw be found.

2. We muſt chearfully acquieſce in our ſtate, whatſoever it be, and ſet ourſelves diligently to diſcharge the duties thereof.

[1.] To rejoice in our portion, whether it be leſs or more, knowing it exceeds all we deſerve: nor ſordidly covetous, thro' fear of future want, to ſpare what we at preſent need, but eat and drink what God hath given. And this alſo muſt come from his gift, who only can beſtow on us the heart to enjoy the good of our labour, without which we may be diſcontented, unthankful, and pine in the midſt of plenty.

[2.] To do good in this life. The time is ſhort, and we ſhould give the greater diligence to improve it; employ the portion God beſtows, in all thoſe works of faith, and labours of love, that our relations in life, the houſhold of faith, and the neceſſitous in general, call for at our hands; and this is the way to do good to ourſelves, for what is thus laid out, will turn to our beſt account hereafter.

[3.] To ſubmit entirely to the divine diſpoſals, and that becauſe neceſſity is laid upon us. What God doth, it ſhall be for ever; to quarrel with his diſpenſations, is but to kick againſt the pricks. He is in one mind, and his eternal decrees cannot be reverſed or altered: nor ſhould we wiſh it, if we knew the wiſdom and goodneſs of all his works and ways. Nothing can be put to it, for his work is perfect; nor any thing taken from it; there is nothing ſuperfluous, or unneceſſary, but the whole compleat in excellence; ſo that it is our higheſt intereſt, as well as duty, to ſay, Thy will be done.

[4.] To fear God, all his diſpenſations of providence and grace being deſigned to affect our ſouls with greater reverence of his majeſty, engage us to truſt him in every emergence, to fear offending, to be ſollicitous to pleaſe him, and to quicken us in the more diligent uſe of every means of grace, that we may be enabled for all he doth command, and prepared for whatever he hath prepared for us.

[5.] To acknowledge the ſteadineſs and uniformity of the divine government. The ordinances of heaven, the ſun, moon, and ſtars, perform the ſame revolutions; the events of providence are exactly ſimilar; that which hath been, is now. Nor may we think the world fuller of croſſes or of ſin than formerly: that which is to be, hath already been; the ſame changes will ſtill mark the rolling years; and God requireth that which is paſt, repeats what he had done before. Let us not therefore think our lot hard, or our trials uncommon: in adverſity, hope for ſuch a change as Job experienced; in proſperity, rejoice with trembling; and in every ſtate remember the ſolemn account of our behaviour in it, which we muſt one day make. This is wiſdom.

16. And moreover, [l] I ſaw under the ſun the place of judgment, that wickedneſs was there; and the place of righteouſneſs, that iniquity was there. 17. I ſaid in my heart, [m] God ſhall judge the righteous and the wicked: for there is [n] a time there for every purpoſe, and for every work. 18. I ſaid in my heart, concerning the eſtate of the ſons of men, † that God might manifeſt them, and that they might ſee that they themſelves are beaſts. 19. For [o] that which befalleth the ſons of men, befalleth beaſts, even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, ſo dieth the other, yea, they have all one breath, ſo that a man hath no preeminence above a beaſt: for all is vanity. 20. All go unto one place, [p] all are of the duſt, and all turn to duſt again. 21. Who knoweth [q] the ſpirit ‡ of man that goeth upward, and the ſpirit of the beaſt that goeth downward to the earth? 22. Wherefore I perceive that [r] there is nothing better, than that a man ſhould rejoice in his own works; for that is his portion: for who ſhall bring him to ſee what ſhall be after him?

l Chap. v. 8.
m 2 Cor. v. 10.
n Ver. 1.
† Or, That they might clear God, and ſee, &c. Rom. iii. 4.
o Pſ. xlix. 12, 20. Chap. ii. 16.
p Gen. iii. 19.
q Chap. xii. 7.
‡ Heb. Of the ſons of man.
r Ver. 12. Chap. ii. 24. & v. 18. & xi. 9.

v. 16—22. A wicked as well as vain world is this in which we live, and, becauſe of wickedneſs, made ſubject to vanity. Left deſtitute of the fear of God, the whole would be a ſcene of miſery and wretchedneſs; and it had been preferable to have been a beaſt, rather than a man.

1. The world is full of oppreſſion: even in the ſeat of judgment, where righteouſneſs ſhould influence every decree, iniquity often reigns; corrupt influence, bribery, or favour, perverts the adminiſtration of juſtice, and renders the wickedneſs, under the form of law, more intolerable. This Solomon had remarked in his obſervations on other nations, and perhaps, notwithſtanding all his care, could not expel from his own dominions.

2. However judgment may be perverted by men, there is a day coming, when all ſhall be reviſed, and juſtice miniſtered to every man according to truth; when God will vindicate the cauſe of the righteous, and condemn the wicked; and the unjuſt judges muſt be called to a terrible account for their unrighteous decrees. The time is fixed in the eternal counſels; it is advancing; it is near: let ſuch as are oppreſſed with wrong patiently wait for it: the eternal Judge ſtandeth before the door.

3. God, in all his diſpenſations towards the ſons of men in their preſent ſtate, deſigns to manifeſt them; either to ſeparate them, the righteous from the wicked, or, that they might clear God, as the word may be rendered, whoſe ways are equal all, but ours unequal; for we have only ourſelves to blame: or, to ſhew us what a creature man is when left to himſelf, even like the beaſts, ſtupid, untractable, cruel, brutiſh in his appetites, and mortal, like them, in his end, v. 19. Some make theſe the objections raiſed by an infidel againſt the judgment to come, and pleading for indulgence, becauſe all man is, ends at death. But it may very well be conſidered as Solomon's ſentiments, and intended to ſhew the vanity of man in general, and of the worldly-minded, ſenſual, and wicked in particular. Men and beaſts are liable to the ſame diſorders, accidents, calamities, and are ſupported by the ſame providential care. They have the ſame animal life, preſerved by the breath, which paſſes thro' their noſtrils; they lie down together in the duſt, and man, alike ſubject to vanity, knows no preeminence there; the ſame putrid corpſe, and returning to the ſame earth from whence they came, v. 20. Nor is there any viſible difference after death concerning their ſpirits; for though by the light of revelation we are told, that man is immortal; that his ſoul returns to God to be judged, and receive his eternal doom; whilſt the ſpirit of the beaſt is extinguiſhed with his body; yet, who knoweth this? It is not the object of our ſenſes; and I greatly queſtion, whether the reaſon of fallen man would ever come to the knowledge of his own immortality, unaſſiſted by traditionary revelation or the ſcriptures: certain however it is, few conſider the difference; the moſt live and die as the beaſts that periſh.

4. The concluſion he draws from theſe obſervations is, That ſince ſuch is man's preſent ſtate of wretchedneſs and vanity, his higheſt wiſdom is to make the beſt uſe he can of what he now poſſeſſes, for that is his portion; and ſince he muſt quickly leave earth, and all the things of it, and knows not how his ſucceſſors may prove, he ſhould wiſely lay out his ſubſtance as is moſt comfortable to himſelf, moſt to God's glory, and beneficial to mankind.

The whole may teach us, (1.) A very humbling leſſon of our preſent ſtate, and how little reaſon we have to be proud on any bodily accompliſhments, when the putrid carcaſe of a beaſt ſhall be ſhortly juſt as amiable. (2.) Since it is in our ſouls the great difference lies, to make the concerns of them our greateſt care. It is a trivial conſideration how we fare in time; the grand object is, to ſecure our well-being in eternity.

CHAP. IV.

Solomon having ſhewed the vanity of this world, in the temptation which thoſe in power are in to oppreſs and trample upon their ſubjects, here further ſhews, 1. The temptation which the oppreſſed are in to diſcontent and impatience, ver. 1—3. 2. The vanity of ſeeking happineſs in gain, which only excites envy, ver. 4. Or, 3. In ſloth and eaſe, ver. 5, 6. Or, 4. In covetouſneſs, ver. 7, 8. 5. The comforts of ſocial life commended, ver. 9—12. 6. The mutability even of royal dignity, not only through the folly of the prince himſelf, ver. 13, 14. but through the fickleneſs of the people, let the prince be never ſo diſcreet, ver. 15, 16.

1. SO I returned, and conſidered all [a] the oppreſſions that are done under the ſun: and behold, the tears of ſuch as were oppreſſed, and [b] they had no comforter; and on the † ſide of their oppreſſors there was power, but they had no comforter. 2. [c] Wherefore I praiſed the dead which are already dead, more than the living which are yet alive. 3. [d] Yea, better is he than both they, which hath not yet been, who hath not ſeen the evil work that is done under the ſun.

a Chap. v. 8.
b Lam. i. 2.
† Heb. Hand.
c Job iii. 17, &c. Chap. vi. 3.
d Job iii. 11, 16, 21.

v. 1—3. He had before conſidered the caſe of proud oppreſſors, and foreſeen their judgment; here he turns his eyes to the oppreſſed, and bewails their miſery.

1. Their condition is deplorable, and often helpleſs; for might here often overcomes right. The tears of the poor, the orphan, the perſecuted, cry out againſt their ſevere and covetous maſters, their treacherous guardians, and tyrannical governors; and they have no comforter, few caring to expoſe themſelves in the cauſe of injured innocence, eſpecially where the power in the hands of oppreſſors makes it dangerous to oppoſe their iniquitous proceedings, or even to ſhew compaſſion to thoſe who ſuffer under their wickedneſs.

2. The judgment he formed concerning this ſtate of oppreſſion is, that death itſelf were preferable to ſuch a continued ſcene of miſery; and never to have had a being, more deſirable, than merely to come thus into the world, to ſee the evil that is done under the ſun, and ſuffer. And this is ſpoken as the concluſion of ſenſe, without reſpect to a future ſtate; for elſe, as it is a great truth, that they who in Chriſt have finiſhed their warfare, are in a much more deſirable eſtate than thoſe militant ſaints who ſtill bear the burden and heat of the day; ſo to have a being, however miſerable upon earth, can never make a good man wiſh he had never been born, ſince God is glorified in his ſufferings, and an eternity of happineſs is before him. Nor ought any man to quarrel with his being, becauſe of the evil he ſees or feels; it is his own fault if the iſſue be not for his good.

4. ¶ Again, I conſidered all travel, and every right work, [e] that † for this a man is envied of his neighbour. This is alſo vanity and vexation of ſpirit. 5. [f] The fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own

e 1 John iii. 12.
† Heb. This is the envy of a man from his neighbour.
f Prov. vi. 10. & xxiv. 33.

Before Chriſt 977.

[g] Prov. xv. 16, 17. & xvi. 8.

own fleſh. 6. [g] Better is an handful with quietneſs, than both the hands full with travel and vexation of ſpirit.

v. 4—6. The more he conſiders, the more the conviction is evident, that all beneath the ſun is vanity and vexation of ſpirit.

1. Is a man induſtrious, ingenious, and ſucceſsful? ſtrait he is the butt of envy. Though with hard travel he laboured in the ſchool of learning, or in the buſineſs of life, and all the ſteps he took were unexceptionably upright; yet, ſuch is the vile nature of fallen man, that, inſtead of rendering the deſerved praiſe, and rejoicing in his neighbour's proſperity and honour, his evil eye is upon him, and his malignant tongue ready to traduce his merit. Even his good works ſhall draw upon him the bittereſt hatred, 1 John iii. 12. But though men make us ſo ungrateful a return, we muſt not be diſcouraged: we ſhall have praiſe of God, and that will overbalance the world's envy and hatred.

2. The oppoſite conduct is yet attended with greater vexation. Inſtead of being induſtrious, and to avoid being envied, the fool, the ſlothful man, foldeth his hands together; and the conſequence of ſuch idleneſs is, that he eateth his own fleſh; emaciated through hunger, and famiſhed for want; or waſting the ſubſtance his family ſhould inherit; and ſuggeſts, in vindication of himſelf, that a little with eaſe, and without labour, is better than abundance which muſt be hardly earned; as if ſloth was quietneſs, diligent induſtry intolerable toil, and indolence contentment. Or the words, v. 6. may expreſs the wiſe man's judgment, directing us to the golden mean between reproachful indolence and reſtleſs labour and anxiety; for the moderate gains of honeſt induſtry, enjoyed with contentment, are infinitely a more ſatisfactory portion, than the exorbitant wealth that is gotten with ſore travel, kept with anxiety, and embittered in the uſing.

[h] Iſa v. 8.

[i] Pſ. xxxix. 6.

[k] Gal. vi. 1.

[l] Heb. x. 24.

7. ¶ Then I returned, and I ſaw vanity under the ſun. 8. There is one alone, [h] and there is not a ſecond; yea, he hath neither child nor brother: yet is there no end of all his labour, neither is his eye ſatisfied with riches, [i] neither ſaith he, For whom do I labour, and bereave my ſoul of good? This is alſo vanity, yea, it is a ſore travel. 9. ¶ Two are better than one; becauſe they have a good reward for their labour. 10. For [k] if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but wo to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up. 11. Again, [l] if two lie together, then they have heat: but how can one be warm alone? 12. And if one prevail againſt him, two ſhall withſtand him; and a threefold cord is not quickly broken.

v. 7—12. He that walks about under the ſun, will ever be obſerving more and more of the vanity of the creature; a freſh inſtance of which is produced,

1. In the character of the miſer, who, though he hath none but himſelf to provide for, and neither child or brother, to whom he may bequeath the riches he hath amaſſed; yet is indefatigable in his labours, inſatiable in his deſires of wealth, fears to increaſe his family, ſhuns the joys of ſociety, nay, grudges the neceſſaries his own body craves, becauſe of the expence; and never once conſiders, (ſo wretchedly is he infatuated) for whom do I labour? neither for the glory of God, my own comfort, or others good; perhaps, for thoſe who will never thank me, and ſquander in extravagance, and thoughtleſs diſſipation, the fruits of ſo much toil and care. This is indeed a vanity and ſore travel, the folly great as the ſin.

2. The wiſe man ſhews how much preferable ſociety and the enjoyment of our labours is to this unnatural ſolitude and niggardlineſs. The comforts and advantages of marriage and friendſhip amply overpay us for all they coſt. Two are better than one; more happy than they could be ſeparate; becauſe they have a good reward for their labour; enjoy mutual aſſiſtance and counſel, and communicate mutual pleaſure. If one falls as they travel, the other is ready to lend his helping hand; if into errors or ſin, a faithful friend will ſeek to reſtore ſuch one in the ſpirit of meekneſs: if into ſorrow, he will be near to comfort him. But woe to him that is alone when he falleth: where he lies he is in danger of being loſt. Again, they communicate mutual warmth: If two lie together, they have heat; which is alſo true ſpiritually, for nothing warms the heart more than Chriſtian fellowſhip, as the diſciples going to Emmaus experienced; whilſt ſolitude, inſtead of raiſing our affections, as ſecluded monks and hermits boaſt, removes us from one of the moſt effectual means of heavenly-mindedneſs. As uſeful will ſociety be in time of danger: the robber will attack a ſingle traveller, that dares not attempt it when he hath company. Satan thus beſet Eve, and falſe teachers thus ſingle out their prey; but a faithful friend is a guard againſt temptation, which, even by communicating it, is ſometimes overcome; and a threefold cord, where Chriſtians unite in ſociety, and Chriſt is in the midſt of them, is not quickly broken; none of the powers of earth or hell ſhall be able to prevail againſt them.

† Heb. Who knoweth not to be admoniſhed.

[m] Gen. xli. 14.

13. ¶ Better is a poor and a wiſe child, than an old and fooliſh king, † who will no more be admoniſhed. 14. For [m] out of priſon he cometh to reign, whereas alſo he that is born in his kingdom becometh poor. 15. I conſidered all the living which walk under the ſun, with the ſecond child that ſhall ſtand up in his ſtead. 16. There is no end of all the people, even of all that have been before them: they alſo that come after, ſhall not rejoice in him. Surely, this alſo is vanity and vexation of ſpirit.

v. 13—16. Crowns ſeem the moſt ſubſtantial goods, yet they are held by a precarious tenure, and cumbered with much vanity and vexation of ſpirit.

1. If they are on the heads of the fooliſh, they totter; for though inherited by deſcent, and worn to old age, yet, if the king, whoſe age ſhould add veneration and weight to his dignity, be fooliſh, unable to manage the reins of government, and perverſe and conceited withal; who will not bear to be admoniſhed, nor adviſe with the counſellors of wiſdom; he becometh poor, dethroned by his ſubjects, or conquered by invaders. So that even a child, though poor and low in the world, yet, if wiſe, is a more reſpectable perſonage, and will riſe from the dunghill, as Joſeph from the dungeon, to the higheſt honours; whilſt the other is hurled from the ſummit of dignity and affluence, to the depths of infamy and want.

2. The very fickleneſs of the people will ſometimes be enough to bring about revolutions in the ſtate. Solomon obſerved in his reſearches, that the riſing ſun was uſually adored, and the ſucceſſor more careſſed than the reigning monarch. They are in haſte to ſee his child ſtand up in his ſtead, and think to alter their condition for the better in transferring the crown from the father to the ſon. Thus without end are they reſtleſsly given to change, v. 16. as thoſe who went before them were, and thoſe who come after them will be; diſſatisfied quickly with their new king, and willing to pull him down to-day, whom they ſat up yeſterday. And it cannot but afford much grief to a prince to ſee this inconſtancy in his ſubjects, and to hear thoſe hiſs him in contempt, who late received him with huzza's, and ſhouts of praiſe. It were well if this taught him to ſeek a richer and more enduring crown than that of gold, even a crown of glory, which fadeth not away

CHAP. V.

Solomon in this chapter diſcourſeth concerning the worſhip of God. All beſides religion hath been proved vanity; but if our religion be a vain religion, how great is that vanity! Let us therefore take heed of vanity, 1. In hearing the word, and offering ſacrifice, ver. 1. 2. In prayer, ver. 2, 3. 3. In making vows, ver. 4—6. 4. In pretending to divine dreams, ver. 7. Now, (1.) For a remedy againſt theſe vanities, he preſcribes the fear of God, ver. 7. (2.) To prevent the offence that might ariſe from the preſent ſufferings of good people, he directs us to look up to God, ver. 8. (3.) Concerning the wealth of this world, and the vanity and vexation that attends it. The fruits of the earth indeed are neceſſary to the ſupport of life, ver. 9. but as for ſilver and gold, and riches, 1. They are unſatisfying, ver. 10. 2. They are unprofitable, ver. 11. 3. They are diſquieting, ver. 12. 4. They often prove hurtful and deſtroying, ver. 13. 5. They are periſhing, ver. 14. 6. They muſt be left behind when we die, ver. 15, 16. 7. If we have not a heart to make uſe of them, they occaſion a great deal of uneaſineſs, ver. 17. And therefore he recommends to us the comfortable uſe of that which God hath given us, with an eye to him that is the Giver, as the beſt way both to anſwer the end of our having it, and to obviate the miſchiefs that commonly attend great eſtates, ver. 18—20.

[a] Exod. iii. 5. Iſa. i. 12.

[b] 1 Sam. xv. 22. Pſ. l. 8. Prov. xv. 8. & xxi. 27. Hoſ. vi. 6.

† Or, word.

[c] Prov. x. 19. Mat. vi. 7.

[d] Prov. x. 19.

1. [a] KEEP thy foot when thou goeſt to the houſe of God, and be more ready to hear, [b] than to give the ſacrifice of fools: for they conſider not that they do evil. 2. Be not raſh with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be haſty to utter any † thing before God, for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore [c] let thy words be few. 3. For a dream cometh through the multitude of buſineſs, and [d] a fool's voice is known by multitude of words.

v. 1—3. Since in the world all is vanity, the ſubſtantial good muſt be ſought, and can only be found, in the ways of godlineſs, in the worſhip and ſervice of God. But even here we muſt beware of vanity in our approach to him, leſt our very prayer be turned into ſin. He directs us therefore whither to

Before Chriſt 977.

to go, to the houſe of God; and how to behave in the congregation, ſo as to profit thereby.

1. We muſt draw near with reverence and godly fear, jealous over our hearts, that our corrupt affections may be put off, our thoughts ſolemn and recollected, and our devotions heart-felt and ſincere.

2. We muſt beware that we offer not the ſacrifice of fools. The prayers of the wicked are an abomination to the Lord, and their moſt expenſive ſacrifices a ſtench in his noſtrils. Whilſt they think to recommend themſelves to God by their pompous and hypocritical devotions, the ſervices of the lip and knee, not of the heart, they conſider not that they do evil; they deceive themſelves, and inſult the heart-ſearching God. Or, they know not but to do evil; for to do good they have no knowledge. How many a ſelf-righteous formaliſt in the day of judgment will be aſtoniſhed to ſee their very prayers and devotions, on which they truſted, riſing up to their condemnation!

3. That we may not offer the ſacrifice of fools, theſe neceſſary cautions are to be attended to.

[1.] We muſt be ready to hear God's word read and preached, that we may be inſtructed in the knowledge of his holy will, and directed how to ſerve him acceptably, and worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth. Note, They who place all their dependance on the form of public prayer, and are inattentive to the word of God read, or expect no benefit from the ſermon preached to them, are certainly ſelf-deceivers, and ſtrangers to the power of godlineſs.

[2.] We muſt not be raſh with our mouth, nor our heart be haſty to utter any thing before God. Serious meditation muſt prepare the matter; the heart be engaged; the preſence of God felt; a ſenſe of our wants deep; and our words breathing the language of fervent deſire. And the ſame may be ſaid of ſpeaking for God, as well as to him: the ſubject muſt be well-digeſted, and not the crude effuſions of haſty lips.

[3.] Our words muſt be few, and fervent, rather than prolix tautology: not that when the heart is full we are ſtraitened; it is not the length of prayers, but the vain repetition, and dry formality of them, which God condemns. And abundant reaſon there is for theſe cautions, if we conſider the God with whom we have to do, and our own vanity and vileneſs before him. He is in heaven, enthroned in glory and light inacceſſible; omniſcient, and almighty; the object of eternal adoration of ſaints and angels; and far exalted above all bleſſing and praiſe; and we are upon earth, worms and duſt before him, yea, ſinful duſt and aſhes, unworthy to open our polluted lips, or lift up our eyes to him. Highly profane and ſtrangely ignorant would it be therefore in us, to be uttering a multitude of words before him, unmeaning, crude, and indigeſted, like the ravings of a dream that cometh through the multitude of buſineſs, v. 3. In common converſation a fool is known by his talkativeneſs, but to approach God with ſuch noiſe and nonſenſe is not only the fooliſhneſs of folly, but the height of impiety.

4. [e] When thou voweſt a vow unto God, defer not to pay it: for he hath no pleaſure in fools; [f] pay that which thou haſt vowed. 5. [g] Better is it that thou ſhouldſt not vow, than that thou ſhouldſt vow and not pay. 6. Suffer not thy mouth to cauſe thy fleſh to ſin, neither ſay thou [h] before the angel, that it was an error:
wherefore ſhould God be angry at thy voice, and deſtroy the work of thine hands? 7. For in the multitude of dreams and many words, there are alſo divers vanities: but [i] fear thou God. 8. ¶ If thou ſeeſt the oppreſſion of the poor, and violent perverting of judgment and juſtice in a province, marvel not at the † matter: for [k] he that is higher than the higheſt, regardeth, and there be higher than they.

[e] Num. xxx. 2. Deut. xxiii. 21. Pſ. l. 14. & lxxvi. 11.
[f] Pſ. lxvi. 13, 14.
[g] Prov. xx. 25. Acts v. 2, 5.
[h] 1 Cor. xi. 10.
[i] Chap. xii. 14.
† Heb. Will or purpoſe.
[k] Pſ. lviii. 11. & lxxxii. 1.

v. 4—8. From the ſervice of prayer the wiſe man paſſes on to vows, wherewith a man ſhall bind his ſoul.

1. We muſt be conſcientious in fulfilling our vows. Defer not to pay it; preciſely and punctually perform the engagement, and that without delay; for delays are dangerous, where the path of duty is evident. To play the fool with God, is to bring ruin on our ſouls; for he will not be mocked, and hath no pleaſure in fools; abhors ſuch lightneſs and falſhood; and far better not vow, than not pay, v. 5. Every vow ſuppoſes that we were not under an antecedent obligation, and therefore need not bind our ſouls; but, when once made, it were highly criminal not to fulfil them. Therefore,

2. We ſhould be cautious of making vows, v. 6. However frequent under the law, they ſeem leſs ſuited to the goſpel diſpenſation, and tend to enſhare and bring the ſoul into bondage. Suffer not thy mouth to cauſe thy fleſh to ſin, by vowing what is evil, and not fit to be obſerved; or what, through the frailty of our nature, we are not likely to perform; leſt too late we ſhould be driven to a fooliſh and ſinful excuſe, and ſay before the angel, It was an error; either before the prieſt, the miniſter of God repreſented by the cherubim, or the great angel of the covenant Chriſt Jeſus; for ſuch levity and vain pretences will provoke God, and bring down his curſe upon the work of our hands, for the ſucceſs of which perhaps the vows were made.

Before Chriſt 977.

3. We muſt fear God, and that will prevent haſty words, and vain terrors from our dreams. They may be ſtrange, confuſed, frightful, and often perplex the minds of the ſuperſtitious; but in general are no more to be regarded, than the multitude of words in the mouth of a fool, which are not fit to be repeated. They who fear God, need fear nothing beſide.

4. We may not queſtion the equity of Divine Providence, becauſe of the injuſtice too commonly practiſed among men. It is a grievous and melancholy ſcene to behold the poor oppreſſed, and the form of law cloaking the moſt arbitrary and unrighteous decrees; but we may not think God hath therefore forſaken the earth. Marvel not at the matter, as ſtrange; or at the will of God in permitting it; for he that is higher than the higheſt, the omnipotent and eternal Judge, regardeth; obſerves the wickedneſs of the proud and the oppreſſor, and will reckon with them ſhortly, when every cauſe ſhall be reviſed at his bar. And there be higher than they; either ſuperior courts, wherein appeals may be lodged; or the holy angels, the miniſtring ſpirits who wait on the heirs of ſalvation to defend them, and are the executioners of divine vengeance on their enemies; or the eternal Three, before whom the proudeſt and moſt exalted of the ſons of men are leſs than nothing and vanity, more eaſily cruſhed than a moth under the finger.

9. ¶ Moreover, the profit of the earth is for all:
the king himſelf is ſerved by the field. 10. He that loveth ſilver, ſhall not be ſatisfied with ſilver; nor he that loveth abundance, with increaſe: this is alſo vanity.
11. When goods increaſe, they are increaſed that eat them: and what good is there to the owners thereof, ſaving the beholding of them with their eyes? 12. The ſleep of a labouring man is ſweet, whether he eat little or much: but the abundance of the rich will not ſuffer him to ſleep. 13. There is a ſore evil which I have ſeen under the ſun, namely, [l] riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt. 14. But thoſe riches periſh by evil travel: and he begetteth a ſon, and there is nothing in his hand. 15. [m] As he came forth of his mother's womb, naked ſhall he return to go as he came, and ſhall take nothing of his labour, which he may carry away in his hand. 16. And this alſo is a ſore evil, that* in all points as he came, ſo ſhall he go: and [n] what profit hath he [o] that hath laboured for the wind? 17. All his days alſo [p] he eateth in darkneſs, and he hath much ſorrow, and wrath with his ſickneſs.

[l] 1 Kings xxi. 7, 13.
[m] Job i. 21. Pſ. xlix. 17. 1 Tim. vi. 7.
[n] Chap. i. 3.
[o] Prov. xi. 29.
[p] Pſ. cxxvii. 2.

v. 9—17. Great riches, as well as all other things, however in general coveted, will be found a great vanity.

1. The earth affords enough for all, and agriculture is a noble employment, as it may be rendered, the excellency of the earth above all things is this; we can do much better without the merchant, than without the huſbandman. The king himſelf is ſerved by the field, with proviſions for himſelf and his houſehold: or, is a ſervant to the field, delights in huſbandry, and counts it no diſparagement to his dignity to follow the plough.

2. Tillage is a needful employment; and a decent proviſion, got by honeſt induſtry, deſirable; but inordinate love of money is criminal, and attended with much miſery.

[1.] The deſires are inſatiable, v. 10. He that hath much, would ſtill have more, and is ever craving. The abundance poſſeſſed cannot ſatisfy; ſomething ſtill is wanted. Hunger cannot be fed on gold; much leſs the ſoul find reſt in this ſhining vanity.

[2.] Great eſtates will be attended with great expences: as the wealth increaſes, ſo doth the family, equipage, and retinue; and the owner hath no other ſatisfaction of his affluence, than the ſeeing it with his eyes. He can but have food and raiment, and that he had equally ſufficient for himſelf when he had leſs. Indeed to have it in our power to do good is a bleſſing: but when the heart is covetous, it gives a man but pain to ſee his ſubſtance devoured.

[3.] The ſervant who labours hath, in ſome inſtances, the advantage. Sweet ſleep cloſes his eyes; no indigeſtion diſturbs his ſlumbers; no cares keep him waking; weary with toil he repoſes, and riſes refreſhed and vigorous. Thus ſhall the weary believer reſt, and wake with joy in a reſurrection-day. But the maſter, gorged to ſatiety, with his ſtomach loaded, lies down and toſſes reſtleſs and unquiet on his bed of down; or, filled with carking anxiety, and a world of buſineſs, his ruffled mind admits not the ſoft hand of ſleep to cloſe his eye-lids: or perhaps conſcious guilt haunts him, and ſtartles him with frightful dreams from broken ſlumbers.

[4.] Riches are often exceeding hurtful to their owners: they tempt the robber and murderer; they afford opportunity to gratify every lawleſs appetite; puff up the mind uſually with pride and ſecurity; through exceſs and luxury, bring diſeaſes upon the body; and plunge men into diverſe fooliſh and hurtful luſts, which finally drown the ſoul in perdition and deſtruction: and a ſore evil indeed is this!

[5.] Riches ill got, or ill uſed, ſoon periſh by evil travel; trading beyond their capital, many have been ruined; by miſmanagement, the greateſt eſtate melts as ſnow before the ſun; and God, in his providence, often blows upon the abundance of the wicked, and like a ſhadow it flees away. So that his ſon, who was to have inherited after him, finds himſelf a beggar, and worſe off, than if he had been born with no expectations, and taught to earn his own bread.

[6.] Riches cannot deſcend with men into the grave. Naked as they came from the womb, muſt they be carried to the tomb, and leave all their poſſeſſions behind them. In all points as he came, ſo ſhall he go, and if this be the caſe, what profit hath he that hath laboured for the wind? for as vain will riches then appear, and as unſatisfying. A ſore evil this, to thoſe who had taken up their reſt below, and ſaid to their ſoul, take thine eaſe. Note, (1.) Though our bodies muſt return to the duſt from whence they came, it were grievous if the ſoul returned as it came, unrenewed and unholy; better far never to have been born, than thus to die. (2.) They who labour for their bodies merely, will find their fearful diſappointment at laſt; whilſt they who labour for their ſouls, will carry all their riches with them.

[7.] Riches often makes a man's days uncomfortable, as well as his death miſerable. All his days he eateth in darkneſs, his carking cares prevent his enjoying his very meals; or he grudges the expence; or his ſoul is utterly deſtitute of the divine light and love. And he hath much ſorrow, and wrath in his ſickneſs; it is bad with him in health, and worſe with him in ſickneſs: he receives it not as the rod of fatherly chaſtiſement, but feels the wrath that is in the viſitation; quarrels with God's providence, grieves bitterly at the thought of leaving all behind him, and is ſhocked at the terrible apprehenſions of death. Or as the words may be rendered, he is much angry, a thouſand cauſes of vexation daily ariſe to him, from thoſe around him; and he hath ſickneſs brought on him by his fretfulneſs and anxiety, and wrath at thoſe about him; diſcontented and peeviſh with them, however aſſiduous to wait upon him; or with God himſelf, for having thus afflicted him, and this but aggravates his miſery.

18. Behold, that which I have ſeen: [q] it is good and comely for one to eat and to drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labour that he taketh under the ſun, † all the days of his life, which God giveth him: for [r] it is his portion. 19. [s] Every man alſo to whom God hath given riches and wealth, and hath given him power to eat thereof, and to take his portion, and to rejoice in his labour; this is the gift of God. 20. ‡ For he ſhall not much remember the days of his life: becauſe God anſwereth him in the joy of his heart.

q Chap. ii. 24. & iii. 12, 22. 1 Tim. vi. 17.
† Heb. There is a good, which is comely.
‡ Heb. The number of the days.
r Chap. ii. 10. & iii. 22.
s Chap. ii. 24. & iii. 13.
‖ Or though he give not much, yet he remembereth, &c.

v. 18—20. Solomon, in the view of the vanity of riches, makes the ſame concluſion he had done before, chap. iii. 22. that the beſt uſe of them is the moderate enjoyment of them, without ſtarving ourſelves with covetouſneſs, or killing ourſelves with labour and care. All our days it is good to rejoice in the fruit of our toils; it is our portion in this life, and cannot be enjoyed hereafter. The poſſeſſions themſelves are God's gift, and therefore in gratitude to the giver, to be uſed chearfully; and the heart to do ſo, he muſt give alſo, or elſe he cannot have any comfort in them; and this will tend to make the days of our pilgrimage leſs tedious: whilſt, in anſwer to our prayers, God is pleaſed to fill us with food and gladneſs, make us forget our travel and diſappointments; and with thankfulneſs to him, and chearfulneſs of heart, to hold on our way, advancing to our journey's end in peace and comfort, till he at laſt admits us into his eternal reſt.

CHAP. VI.

We have in this chapter, 1. The vanity of wealth in a miſer's hand, inſtanced in a variety of particulars, ver. 1—10. 2. He concludes with this plain inference from the whole, that it is folly to think of making up a happineſs for ourſelves in the things of this world, ver. 11, 12. Our ſatisfaction muſt be in another life, not in this.

1. THERE is an evil which I have ſeen under the ſun, and it is common among men: 2. A man to whom God hath given riches, wealth, and honour, ſo that [a] he wanteth nothing for his ſoul of all that he deſireth, yet God giveth him not power to eat thereof, but a ſtranger eateth it: this is vanity, and it is an evil diſeaſe. 3. ¶ If a man beget an hundred children, and live many years, ſo that the days of his years be many, and his ſoul be not filled with good, and alſo [b] that he have no burial, I ſay, that [c] an untimely birth is better than he. 4. For he cometh in with vanity, and departeth in darkneſs, and [d] his name ſhall be covered with darkneſs. 5. Moreover, he hath not ſeen the ſun, nor known any thing: this hath more reſt than the other. 6. ¶ Yea, though he live a thouſand years twice told, yet hath he ſeen no good: do not all go to one place?

a Job xxi. 20, &c. Pſ. xvii. 14. & lxxiii. 7.
b Iſa. xiv. 19, 20. Jer. xxii. 19.
c Job iii. 16. Pſ. lviii. 8.
d Prov. x. 7.

v. 1—6. The evil here remarked, is not peculiar to one place, or age; it is ſtill common under the ſun, and a grief to every attentive obſerver. Bleſſed be God, above the ſun there is no evil, and therefore no cauſe for lamentation.

1. The perſon deſcribed is a rich, covetous man. God hath given him riches, wealth; all which come from him, and are often the portion of the moſt unworthy, nay, frequently given in wrath; yet theſe bring honour and reſpect, for to Mammon men generally bow. Add to this, v. 3. a numerous family, to perpetuate his name, and long life, in which he might enjoy his abundance, even to a thouſand and a thouſand years, v. 6. In ſhort, heart could not wiſh for more outward advantages than God hath beſtowed upon him: but notwithſtanding, it appears evident that man's life, the comfort of it, conſiſteth not in the abundance of the things he poſſeſſes. For,

2. God giveth him not a heart to taſte his mercies, and then they are all empty and vain. He hath not power to eat thereof, his covetous temper will not allow himſelf or family neceſſaries, and withholding from the poor their portion, God puniſhes him, by ſuffering him to pine in the midſt of plenty. He cannot truſt his neareſt relations, or his own children; but a ſtranger, who hath wormed himſelf into favour, eateth it, preying upon him, and after his deceaſe poſſeſſing his fortune. A vanity this, and amazing folly, an evil diſeaſe, a madneſs ſeldom cured, and fatal both to body and ſoul. His ſoul is not filled with good; his purſe is filled with gold, his warehouſes with ſtores, but his ſoul is ſtill empty, uneaſy; there is an aching void within, which none of theſe things can fill. Nay, he hath ſeen no good, v. 6. through all his days inſenſible to the mercies around him, and unable to reliſh any of the comforts he poſſeſſes. And as his life is without joy, his death is without honour; he hath no burial, v. 3. or none ſuitable to his rank: the ſordidneſs of his temper makes him a niggard, even to his corpſe, and to forbid it in his will a becoming interment; or his heirs have ſo little eſteem for him, that if they huddle him into a grave, they care not how meanly it is done.

3. Better is it to have been carried from the womb to the grave, than thus to have lived and died. For he cometh in with vanity, the abortive birth, and departeth in, or into darkneſs, unnoticed, is laid in the duſt, and his name ſhall be covered with darkneſs, forgotten and unknown: moreover, he hath not ſeen the ſun, nor the miſeries that are under it, nor known any thing of the troubles of this diſordered world, or of the comforts of it: this hath more reſt than the other, having never groaned under the toils of labour, the evil of covetouſneſs, or the miſery of departing. They go to one place, the common bed of duſt, where no diſtinction marks the putrid clay.

7. [e] All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the † appetite is not filled. 8. For what hath the wiſe more than the fool? what hath the poor that knoweth to walk before the living? 9. ¶ Better is the ſight of the eyes, than ‡ the wandring of the deſire: this is alſo vanity and vexation of ſpirit. 10. That which hath been is named already, and it is known that it is man: [f] neither may he contend with him that is mightier than he.

e Prov. xvi. 26.
† Heb. Soul.
‡ Heb. The walking of the ſoul.
f Job ix. 32. Iſa. xlv. 9. Jer. xlix. 19.

v. 7—10. How vain are the toils of anxiety!

1. There is no ſatisfaction in them. All the labour of man is for his mouth, what he ſhall eat, and what he ſhall drink, and yet the appetite is not filled; avarice is inſatiable, hunger continually returning, and pampered appetite ever craving; or the ſoul is not ſatisfied; it can reliſh nothing of theſe ſenſual indulgences.

2. In the enjoyments of this world, there is not that difference which appears between the wiſe and the fool, the rich and the poor. For what hath the wiſe more than the fool? what more comfort in his poſſeſſions, or fruit of his labour? reſpecting the gratification of ſenſual appetite they are on a level: and what hath the poor that knoweth how to walk before the living? if he be induſtrious, and dextrous in his buſineſs, he provides a livelihood for himſelf and family; and in his ſphere enjoys his little, and taſtes as much ſatisfaction therein, as the rich, in all their abundance.

3. Contentment with what we have, is a far greater comfort, than to be always coveting more. Better is the ſight of the eyes, the preſent portion before us, when enjoyed, than the wandering of the deſire, ſtill craving and inſatiate; for this is alſo vanity: if the objects we covet, were given us, they would be ſtill unſatisfactory, and the diſappointments we muſt meet with in purſuit of them, will be a vexation of our ſpirit.

4. After all our labours, we muſt remain for ever merely human, with all the infirmities of man, and cannot alter the divine purpoſes; ſtrive as we will, God's eternal decrees will take place: and though we could attain all the riches of the eaſt, or the empire of the world, it is, and muſt be known and acknowledged, that it is man, a poor dying worm, ſtill lighter on the balances than vanity itſelf.

5. There is no contending againſt God; he is mightier than we: it were preſumption to queſtion his wiſdom or goodneſs, and madneſs to oppoſe Omnipotence. His will is law, to which, willing or unwilling, even the great, the wealthy, the mighty, muſt ſubmit; and ſickneſs and death, at fartheſt, will convince them they are but men.

11. ¶ Seeing there be many things that increaſe vanity, what is man the better? 12. For who knoweth what is good for man in this life, † all the days of his vain life which he ſpendeth [g] as a ſhadow? for [h] who can tell a man what ſhall be after him under the ſun?

† Heb. The number of the days of the life of his vanity. g Pſ. cii. 11. & cix. 23. & & cxliv. 4. Jam. iv. 14. h Chap. viii. 7.

v. 11, 12. Hear then the concluſion of the matter.

1. Man's purſuits after creature-good but the more perplex and trouble him. Seeing there be many things that increaſe vanity, knowledge, wealth, power, pleaſure, what is man the better? nay, is he not rather the worſe? theſe things which promiſed him happineſs, inordinately ſought, prove a plague and ſnare to him.

2. Man is a poor blind creature, and knoweth not what is for his own good; for who can tell what is good for man in this life? none but God alone, who will do what is beſt, and our happineſs is contentment in his diſpenſations.

3. Man's life is ſhort, tranſitory, and vain. Years, nay months are too much to compute it by; it is reckoned by days, days of vanity, empty of all good, as a ſhadow, wherein there is nothing ſubſtantial, and ſwiftly hurrying to their end.

4. He hath no foreſight of what will happen when he is gone, what will be the caſe of his poſterity, and how his ſubſtance will be diſpoſed of; ſo that his proſpects in futurity afford him no more happineſs than his preſent poſſeſſions.

CHAP. VII.

Solomon had given many proofs and inſtances of the vanity of this world and the things of it, now in this chapter, (1.) He recommends to us ſome good means proper to be uſed for the redreſs of theſe grievances, and the arming of ourſelves againſt the miſchiefs we are in danger of from them, that we may make the beſt of bad. As, 1. Care of our reputation, ver. 1. 2. Seriouſneſs, ver. 2—6. 3. Calmneſs of ſpirit, ver. 7—10. 4. Prudence in the management of all our affairs, ver. 11, 12. 5. Submiſſion to the will of God in all events, accommodating ourſelves to every condition, ver. 13—15. 6. A conſcientious avoiding of all dangerous extremes, ver. 16—18. 7. Mildneſs and tenderneſs towards thoſe that have been injurious to us, ver. 19—22. In ſhort, the beſt way to ſave ourſelves from the vexation which the vanity of the world creates us, is to keep our temper, and to maintain a ſtrict government of our paſſions. (2.) He laments his own iniquity, as that which was more vexatious than any of theſe vanities, that myſtery of iniquity the having of many wives, by which he was drawn away from God and his duty, ver. 23—29.

1.[a] A Good name is better than precious ointment; and [b] the day of death than the day of one's birth. 2. ¶ It is better to go to the houſe of mourning, than to go to the houſe of feaſting: for that is the end of all men, and the living will lay it to his heart. 3. [c] † Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the ſadneſs of the countenance the heart is made better. 4. The heart of the wiſe is in the houſe of mourning; but the heart of fools is in the houſe of mirth. 5. [d] It is better to hear the rebuke of the wiſe, than for a man to hear the ſong of fools. 6. For [e] as the ‡ crackling of thorns under a pot, ſo is the laughter of the fool: this alſo is vanity.

a Prov. xv. 30. & xxii. 1. b Rev. xiv. 13. c 2 Cor. vii. 10. † Or anger. d Pſ. cxli. 5. Prov. xiii. 18. & xv. 31, 32. e Pſ. cxviii. 12. Chap. ii. 2. ‡ Heb. Sound.

v. 1—6. Theſe are ſtrange paradoxes to the unwiſe, but great truths to him that underſtandeth.

1. A good name is better than precious ointment; a name written in the book of life of the Lamb, and eminent for the exerciſe of every gracious and chriſtian temper, is infinitely preferable to all the poſſeſſions of earth, and more fragrant than the richeſt perfume. And,

2. The day of death than the day of one's birth; that is, to thoſe who die in the Lord, and are diſmiſſed from the burdens of mortality to reſt in him; a conſummation devoutly to be wiſhed for, that for ever puts a period to all our ſins and ſorrows, and opens the golden gates of life and immortality.

3. It is better to go to the houſe of mourning, than the houſe of feaſting; to feaſt is not evil, but indulgence is always dangerous: to mourn, is painful, but great good often ariſes from it; and eſpecially apt are thoſe melancholy ſeaſons, when the dead are carried forth, and the corpſe and the coffin are before us, to make impreſſions on our hearts more bleſſed in their iſſue and influence, than any we ſhould receive in the houſe of feaſting. They bid us learn to die, remember, and prepare for it; they give us a ſtriking exhibition of the end of all men, and make us feel that duſt we are, and unto duſt returning; and the living will lay it to heart, at leaſt thoſe who are wiſe will do ſo, and not forget to make application of the ſubject to their own hearts.

4. Sorrow is better than laughter, better for our ſouls at leaſt; for by the ſadneſs of the countenance the heart is made better; when beholding departing friends, whilſt we mourn over them, we are quickened to give greater diligence to follow them, and make our calling and election ſure; or affected with godly ſorrow for ſin, that worketh repentance unto ſalvation, never to be repented of. Whilſt laughter often hath ill effects, deſtroys the ſpirit of ſeriouſneſs, makes the heart light and vain, and eſtranges it from God. Therefore the heart of the wiſe is in the houſe of mourning, in meditation, engaged with thoughts of mortality, though the objects are not before him; but the heart of fools is in the houſe of mirth, they cannot bear a ſerious reflection; if a ſolemn impreſſion of any ſcene of death hath been made upon them, they haſten to ſome gay company to efface it, and are in their element where mirth and jollity reign.

5. It is better to hear the rebuke of the wiſe; however ſharp or grating it may at firſt ſound, the effects of it will be ſalutary; and it will be our wiſdom, and in the iſſue our comfort, to have heard and profited thereby: and therefore rather to be choſen than the ſong of fools; either their flatteries that tickle the ear, or their ſongs and carouſals, which are vain, unprofitable, pernicious; for as the crackling of thorns under a pot, ſo is the laughter of the fool, loud and noiſy, but ſuddenly expiring; and ſucceeded with groans, and wailing without end. This alſo is vanity.

7. ¶ Surely oppreſſion maketh a wiſe man mad, and [f] a gift deſtroyeth the heart. 8. [g] Better is the end of a thing, than the beginning thereof: and [h] the patient in ſpirit is better than the proud in ſpirit. 9. [i] Be not haſty in thy ſpirit to be angry: for anger reſteth in the boſom of fools. 10. Say not thou, What is the cauſe that the former days were better than theſe? for thou doſt not inquire † wiſely concerning this.

f Exod. xxiii. 8. Deut. xvi. 19. g Luke xvi. 25. h Prov. xiv. 29. i Prov. xiv. 17. & xvi. 32. † Heb. Out of wiſdom.

v. 7—10. Solomon had obſerved the oppreſſions under the ſun; here he notes one ſad effect of them.

1. Surely oppreſſion maketh a wiſe man mad; either under the length and ſeverity of his own trials, he is ready to grow impatient; or obſerving the ſufferings of the innocent, under the power of the wicked, he is tempted to queſtion the equity of the divine providence; and a gift deſtroyeth the heart, occaſions juſtice to be perverted to oppreſſion, or deſtroyeth a heart of gifts, ſuch is the generous heart of the wiſe.

2. He exhorts to patient waiting for the iſſue; for however dark and lowring the ſcene may appear, when oppreſſors rule, yet mark the end; for better is the end of a thing, than the begining thereof; God will break the rod of the wicked, as he did Pharaoh, and relieve the injured innocent, as his Iſrael of old, from their hands. Thus the patient in ſpirit, who meekly ſubmit to God's providential afflictions, and wait quietly upon him, is better, a better man, and will by and by be proved infinitely happier, than the proud in ſpirit, whoſe lofty looks God will abaſe, and who, unable to endure the chaſtiſements brought upon them, as wild bulls in a net, fret and torment themſelves but the more.

3. He warns us againſt raſh anger. Be not haſty in thy ſpirit to be angry, impatient of contradiction or delay, and firing on every ſpark of provocation, but repreſs the riſings of reſentment; be ſlow to wrath; and if it ſwells, ſee that it quickly ſubſides, for anger reſteth in the boſom of fools, they entertain it, and though they cover it with deceit, they wait only for an opportunity to take their revenge.

4. We muſt not be ever complaining of the evil of our times, as men are too apt to be, and fancying the former days better than theſe; when in truth it is merely our ignorance of former days, that makes us conceit this, and a reflection upon God's providence, as if his diſpenſations were not equal. The great concern of every man in bad days, is to mend one, and then the times will be better.

11. ¶ Wiſdom is † good with an inheritance: and by it there is profit to them that ſee the ſun. 12. For wiſdom is a ‡ defence, and money is a defence: but the excellency

† Or as good as an inheritance. ‡ Heb. ſhadow.

cellency of knowledge is, that wiſdom giveth life to them that have it. 13. Conſider the work of God:
for [k] who can make that ſtraight which he hath made crooked? 14. In the day of proſperity be joyful, but in the day of adverſity conſider: God alſo hath ſet the one over-againſt the other, to the end that man ſhould find nothing after him. 15. All things have I ſeen in the days of my vanity: [l] there is a juſt man that periſheth in his righteouſneſs, and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickedneſs. 16. [m] Be not righteous overmuch, [n] neither make thyſelf over-wiſe:
why ſhouldſt thou ‖ deſtroy thyſelf? 17. Be not overmuch wicked, neither be thou fooliſh: [o] why ſhouldſt thou die § before thy time? 18. It is good that [p] thou ſhouldſt take hold of this, yea, alſo from this withdraw not thine hand: for he that feareth God, ſhall come forth of them all. 19. [q] Wiſdom ſtrengthneth the wiſe, more than ten mighty men which are in the city. 20.
For [r] there is not a juſt man upon earth that doth good, and ſinneth not. 21. Alſo † take no heed unto all words that are ſpoken, leſt thou hear thy ſervant curſe thee. 22. For oftentimes alſo thine own heart knoweth, that thou thyſelf likewiſe haſt curſed others.

k Job xii. 14. Chap. i. 15.
l 1 Kings xxi. 13. Chap. viii. 14.
m Prov. xxv. 16.
n Ecclus. iii. 21, 22. Rom. xii. 3.
‖ Heb. Be deſolate.
o Job xv. 32. Pſ. lv. 23. Prov. x. 27.
§ Heb. Not in thy time.
p Heb. iv. 2.
q Prov. xxi. 22. & xxiv. 5. Chap. ix. 16, 18.
r 1 Kings viii. 46. 2 Chron. vi. 36. Prov. xx. 9. 1 John i. 8.
† Heb. Give not thine heart.

v. 11—22. We have here,

1. Some of the great commendations of wiſdom.

(1.) It is good with an inheritance; it is in its own nature good, but with an inheritance it renders a perſon more diſtinguiſhed, and enables him to be more extenſively uſeful; and by it there is profit to them that ſee the ſun, men in general enjoy the bleſſing of a wiſe man's affluence.

(2.) Wiſdom is a defence, and money is a defence, or a ſhadow, under which we ſit in ſafety: ſeverally, they are a protection; united, they mutually conſpire to increaſe each other's efficacy.

(3.) It giveth life to them that have it, and this is wiſdom's peculiar excellency; riches often endanger the life of their poſſeſſor; but with divine knowledge, ſpiritual and eternal life are inſeparably connected.

(4.) It is better than ſtrength; for wiſdom ſtrengthens the wiſe, inſpires them with courage, directs them how to act, and enables them to foil the attacks of their enemies, more than ten mighty men which are in the city; which is ſafer under the care of ſuch prudent counſellors, than if guarded by numerous warriors.

2. Our duty is ſubmiſſion and conformity to the divine will. Conſider the work of God, the perfection, excellence, and immutability thereof, to ſilence all murmuring againſt the diſpenſations of his providence, which would be alſo vain as it is vile: for who can make that ſtraight which he hath made crooked? whatever afflictions he ſends, or judgments he executes, none can ſtay his hand, or ſay unto him, what doſt thou? therefore in every condition, our duty is to make the beſt improvement of it. In the day of proſperity, when God ſhowers down his ſpiritual or temporal bleſſings, be joyful, acknowledge his hand, praiſe him for the mercy, and improve it it to his glory: but in the day of adverſity, which will come in its turn, conſider the end for which the affliction was ſent, and ſeek to correſpond with God's deſigns therein. Note, This is a changing world; we may neither be too elated on proſperity, nor depreſſed with adverſity; but rejoice with trembling, and look forward in hope: for God hath ſet the one over-againſt the other, each in its ſeaſon, to work together for his people's good, to the end that man ſhould find nothing after him; either nothing that he can amend in the work of God, or nothing certain here below, and therefore he muſt live upon the divine providence, and be prepared for whatever God hath prepared for him.

3. The diſpenſations of providence that ſeem moſt dark, ought not to ſtagger us. All things have I ſeen in the days of my vanity, the days of his life, or thoſe more afflictive ones of his departure from God; and perhaps the obſervations he here makes, might have contributed to his fall, and tempted him to infidelity. There is a juſt man that periſheth in his righteouſneſs, not eternally, for his ſtate, Godward, is ſecure, but the greateſt piety doth not exempt men from the heavieſt afflictions; nay, perhaps it exaſperates the enmity of the wicked, and gives occaſion to their perſecutors; and there is a wicked man that prolongeth his life in his wickedneſs, proſpers, and is ſucceſsful, even to old age; and perhaps protected by the very fruits of his injuſtice: but this is not the place of recompence; the day is at hand, when the calamities of the righteous ſhall be found their greateſt mercies, and the proſperity of the wicked their ruin.

4. He gives an admonition to the ſelf-righteous, and a warning to ſinners. Be not righteous over much, which doth not refer to true righteouſneſs, of which we cannot have too much; but to the affectation of appearing righteous before men: when perſons are rigid cenſurers of others, place religion in auſterities which God never enjoined, or by intemperate zeal hurt that cauſe they pretend to defend: neither make thyſelf over-wiſe, either above what is written, or, opinionated of thy abilities, ſeverely critical, and arrogantly dictating; why ſhouldſt thou deſtroy thyſelf? by needleſs auſterities, or meddling in other men's matters, to provoke their wrath; or, why ſhouldſt thou be ſtupid? regarded as ſuch, through thy fooliſh conduct; or deſolate, every one ſhunning thy acquaintance, and hating thy company. Be not over much wicked, run not into riot and exceſs; or do not fright thyſelf, ſo as to be caſt down into deſpair, under a ſenſe of thy guilt, and thus it ſtands contraſted with the proud preſumption before rebuked: neither be thou fooliſh, ſo as to be terrified with needleſs fear, or to grow abandonedly profligate; why ſhouldſt thou die before thy time? haſtened to the grave by intemperance, or the ſword of juſtice, or in deſpair lay violent hands upon thyſelf.

5. The fear of God will be our beſt preſervative. It is good that thou ſhouldſt take hold of this admonition and advice; yea, alſo from this withdraw not thine hand, continue a diligent obſerver of theſe things; for he that feareth God ſhall come forth of them all, ſaved from the dangerous extremes, preſerved amidſt all difficulties; and under the divine guidance enabled to walk in the ſtrait path of wiſdom and truth, without deviating to the right hand or the left.

6. We muſt not expect ſinleſs perfection this ſide eternity. Though to do good, and eſchew evil, is the labour, deſire, and prayer of every gracious ſoul that is born of God, yet imperfection cleaves to the beſt, and in their beſt duties too. So that there is not a juſt man upon earth that doeth good to the full extent of the commandment, and ſinneth not, either in omiſſion or commiſſion; and therefore we muſt not proudly conceit ourſelves perfect, nor expect to meet with any among the ſons of men, who are not compaſſed with infirmity.

7. It is wiſe to turn a deaf ear to whatever might provoke, or exaſperate us. Take no heed to all words that are ſpoken, be not curious to enquire what others think, or ſay of you; and ſeem not to hear what had better be dropped in ſilence, than brought to an explanation. Give not thine heart to it, in the original; be not uneaſy or ſollicitous about it, leaſt thou hear thy ſervant curſe thee, whoſe inſolence and ingratitude would render the provocation the greater; and they who hearken to their ſervant's words, will often hear diſagreeable things: but we muſt bear with others, if it were only through the conſciouſneſs of our having been in the ſame condemnation. For oftentimes alſo thine own heart knoweth, that thou thyſelf likewiſe haſt curſed others, wiſhed them ill, ſpoken of them diſreſpectfully, or laid on them hard cenſures: the ſenſe of our own failings ſhould preſerve us from anger; and the provocation remind us of, and humble us for, the ſins of the like nature we ourſelves have committed.

23. ¶ All this have I proved by wiſdom: I ſaid, I will be wiſe, but it was far from me. 24. [s] That which is far off, and exceeding deep, who can find it out? 25. [t] I applied mine heart to know, and to ſearch, and to ſeek out wiſdom, and the reaſon of things, and to know the wickedneſs of folly, even of fooliſhneſs and madneſs: 26. And [u] I find more bitter than death, the woman whoſe heart is ſnares and nets, and her hands as bands: [x] † whoſo pleaſeth God ſhall eſcape from her, but the ſinner ſhall be taken by her. 27. Behold, this have I found (ſaith [y] the preacher) ‡ counting one by one, to find out the account: 28. Which yet my ſoul ſeeketh, but I find not: [z] one man among a thouſand have I found, but a woman among all thoſe have I not found.
29. Lo, this only have I found, that [a] God hath made man upright: but [b] they have ſought out many inventions.

s Job xxviii. 12, 20.
t Chap. i. 17. & ii. 12.
u Prov. v. 3, 4. & xxii. 14.
x Gen. xxxix. 8.
† Or he that is good before God.
y Chap. i. 1.
‡ Or weighing one thing after another, to find out the reaſon.
z Job xxxiii. 23.
a Gen. i. 27.
b Ibid. iii. 6, 7.

v. 23—29. Solomon had proved the vanity of all things by dear-bought experience, and here he acknowledges it.

1. He owns the defects of his wiſdom, after all his purſuits. All this have I proved by wiſdom, all that he hath ſpoken in the foregoing chapters: I ſaid, I will be wiſe; ſo far as the greateſt induſtry would carry the moſt enlarged underſtanding, he was reſolved to go; and with the moſt indefatigable diligence he purſued the reſearch, v. 25. but ſtill it fled his graſp, he could not fathom the depths, either of nature, providence, or grace; many things were hid, and whilſt the effects were evident, the cauſes of them were myſterious. Thus it was far from me; the wiſdom he ſought, he was unable to attain; that which is far off, or far off that which has been; the works of creation and providence are far above the human comprehenſion, the knowledge of former things loſt in oblivion, or that wiſdom, which was originally in man, now departed from him; and exceeding deep, who can find it out? God's perfections, providences, and decrees, are by us unſearchable, the attempt to fathom them will but convince us of our own weakneſs.

2. He deſired to be acquainted with folly as well as wiſdom, and applied his heart to know the wickedneſs of folly, even of fooliſhneſs

Before Christ 977.

neſs and madneſs; ſin is exceedingly deceitful, it requires pains to ſtrip off the maſk, and diſcover its deep malignity: but when its ſinfulneſs is ſeen, then ſhall we upbraid our folly for having yielded to it, and count thoſe pleaſures madneſs, which promiſed the higheſt ſatisfaction, eſpecially thoſe fleſhly luſts, to which Solomon here ſeems particularly to allude. Note, True penitents cannot find a name bad enough with which to brand their abominations, and upbraid their own folly and ſin.

3. The reſult of the enquiry, was a diſcovery of the great evil he had committed in yielding to the love of women; on which, with deepeſt anguiſh, he now reflects. I find more bitter than death, the woman whoſe heart is ſnares and nets, and her hands as bands; the ſweets of ſin were momentary, the pangs of it mortal and abiding. Now his convictions began to faſten upon his ſoul, he feels the very agonies of death in his conſcience: the ſmiles and blandiſhments that promiſed ſo much enjoyment, hath left a ſting behind, the poiſon of which drinketh up the ſpirit: and once entangled in theſe fatal cords of women's toils, hard, very hard is it to recover, and every freſh indulgence adds ſtrength to the ſnare, and renders the hope of recovery the more deſperate. Whoſo pleaſeth God, ſhall eſcape from her; he will preſerve them in the hour of temptation; and if he doth not, we have no power of ourſelves to withſtand for a moment. If we are therefore kept from the temptation, or under it, we muſt regard it as a great mark of God's favour, and acknowledge it with deep thankfulneſs: but the ſinner ſhall be taken by her; God will, in judgment, give him up to his own heart's luſts, and ſuffer him to periſh in the iniquities he hath choſen.

4. He obſerves the ſad and ſinful ſtate of man in general, and concludes with pointing out the ſource, whence all the evil proceeds. Behold, this have I found (ſaith the preacher) the bitterneſs of a harlot's ſnares, or the fewneſs of the faithful, v. 28. counting one by one, to find out the account, both men and women, within the compaſs of his knowledge; earneſtly ſollicitous to find out, if but one excellent among them, which yet my ſoul ſeeketh, and hitherto had ſought almoſt in vain, one man among a thouſand have I found faithful; ſo few, ſo very few walk in the narrow way: or, of a thouſand who have fallen into the ſnares of the adultereſs, not more than one have eſcaped; but a woman among all thoſe have I not found; of all the lewd women he had known, not one in a thouſand were ever reclaimed: or perhaps among all his wives and concubines, he found not one who anſwered that character of virtue and excellence he ſought. Some interpret this of the Meſſiah, the only one of the ſons of men perfect in holineſs, whilſt all the daughters of Eve are altogether born in ſin. Lo! this only have I found from the ſcriptures of truth, that God made man upright, perfect in knowledge and righteouſneſs, but ſad experience now evinces how fearfully apoſtate he is become, and far removed from his once happy ſtate. They ſought out many inventions; not content with the ſtation in which God had placed them, they affected to be as wiſe as the Elohim, and, daring to pluck the forbidden fruit, loſt their innocence, were plunged into ſin, miſery, and ſhame; which their ſorry excuſes and inventions to hide it but rendered the more notorious, and their corrupted offspring copy their deſtructive ways.

CHAP. VIII.

Solomon in this chapter comes to recommend wiſdom to us, as the moſt powerful antidote againſt both the temptations and vexations that ariſe from the vanity of the world. Here is, 1. The benefit and praiſe of wiſdom, ver. 1. 2. Some particular inſtances of wiſdom preſcribed to us. (1.) We muſt keep in due ſubjection to the government God hath ſet over us, ver. [illegible]—5. (2.) We muſt get ready for ſudden evils, and eſpecially for ſudden death, ver. 6—8. (3.) We muſt arm ourſelves againſt the temptation of an oppreſſive government, and not think it ſtrange, ver. 9, 10. The impunity of oppreſſors makes them more daring, ver. 11. but in the iſſue it will be well with the righteous and ill with the wicked, ver. 12, 13. and therefore the preſent proſperity of the wicked and afflictions of the righteous ought not to be a ſtumbling-block to us, ver. 14. (4.) We muſt chearfully uſe the gifts of God's providence, ver. 15. (5.) We muſt with an intire ſatisfaction acquieſce in the will of God, and not pretending to find the bottom, we muſt humbly and ſilently adore the depth of his unſearchable counſels, being aſſured they are all wiſe and juſt and good, ver. 16, 17.

1. WHO is as the wiſe man? and who knoweth the interpretation of a thing? [a] a man's wiſdom maketh his face to ſhine, and the boldneſs of his face ſhall be changed. 2. I counſel thee to keep the king's commandment, [b] and that in regard of the oath of God. 3. [c] Be not haſty to go out of his ſight: ſtand not in an evil thing, for [d] he doth whatſoever pleaſeth him. 4. Where the word of a king is, there is power: and [e] who may ſay unto him, What doſt thou? 5. [f] Whoſo keepeth the commandment ſhall † feel no evil thing: and a wiſe man's heart diſcerneth both time and judgment.

[a] Prov. iv. 8, 9. & xvii. 24. Acts vi. 15.
[b] 1 Chron. xxix. 24. Rom xiii. 5.
[c] Chap. x. 4.
[d] Dan. v. 19.
[e] Job xxxiv. 18.
[f] Rom. xiii. 4.
† Heb. Know.

v. 1—5. Wiſdom is indeed the principal thing. We have here,

1. Its great commendation. Who is as the wiſe man? comparable to him for excellence; or who knoweth the interpretation of a thing, or a word? none but thoſe who are taught of God, can underſtand his heavenly wiſdom, or interpret his word to the edification of men, or improve the conjunctures of his providence aright. Such a one will be highly honoured and reſpected; for a man's wiſdom maketh his face to ſhine, as Moſes's did, when he came down from the mount; and they who ſee it, admire the luſtre and excellence which appears in all his converſation; or enlightens his face, enables him to ſee diſtinctly the way in which he ſhould walk; and the boldneſs of his face ſhall be changed; it teaches the rough and auſtere to ſmooth their rugged brows, and makes the fierce gentle as the lamb; for when the heart by grace is changed, the very countenance bears the divine impreſſion.

2. The proof of wiſdom inſtanced in dutiful allegiance to the king. I counſel thee to keep the king's commandment, obedient in all things to the government under which we live; and that, not merely for fear of puniſhment, but for conſcience ſake, in regard of the oath of God, the oath of allegiance; or, but with a regard of the oath of God; when human injunctions are oppoſite to the Divine commands, then muſt we obey God rather than man. Be not haſty to go out of his ſight, ſo as to quit his ſervice, and retire in diſguſt: ſtand not in an evil thing; if we have done wrong, we muſt acknowledge it and beg pardon, not perſiſt in our perverſeneſs: for he doth whatſoever pleaſeth him, and therefore to offend him is dangerous, who hath power to puniſh at his will; for where the word of a king is, there is power: there are multitudes ready to fly at his orders, and execute his vengeance on thoſe who dare contradict him: and who may ſay to him, What doſt thou? whoſe power is abſolute, and government deſpotic: and as dangerous as it is to rebel, ſo advantageous is it to obey. For whoſo keepeth the commandment ſhall feel no evil thing, but enjoy peace and quietneſs, protected by the powers he obeys; and a wiſe man's heart diſcerneth both time and judgment, waits the proper ſeaſon to prefer the grievances he may feel, and with wiſdom ſeeks to procure redreſs.

The whole of this paſſage may alſo be referred to our duty towards the King of kings, whoſe commandments are all moſt excellent, and who hath ſworn, v. 2. to viſit even the tranſgreſſions of his own people with ſtripes of diſpleaſure, Pſal. lxxxix. 30—35. From his preſence there is no hiding ourſelves; to attempt concealment of an evil thing from his allſeeing eye, were folly; to continue impenitent, deſtruction; for his power is univerſal, and abſolute, v. 3. and if he will puniſh, none can reſiſt, or queſtion his authority. Obedience to him will enſure bleſſedneſs; they need fear no evil, who have him for their king, and approve themſelves loyal ſubjects: and herein is wiſdom to diſcern the moment of opportunity, and in time to provide for eternity, knowing the judgment approaching, when every man muſt receive according to his works.

6. ¶ Becauſe [g] to every purpoſe there is time, and judgment; therefore the miſery of man is great upon him. 7. For [h] he knoweth not that which ſhall be: for who can tell him † when it ſhall be? 8. [i] There is no man that hath power [k] over the ſpirit to retain the ſpirit; neither hath he power in the day of death; and there is no ‡ diſcharge in that war, neither ſhall wickedneſs deliver thoſe that are given to it.

[g] Chap. iii. 1.
[h] Prov. xxiv. 22. Chap. vi. 12. & ix. 12. & x. 14.
† Or how it ſhall be.
[i] Pſ. xlix. 7.
[k] Job xiv. 5.
‡ Heb. Caſting off weapons.

v. 6—8. It is the deſcription of the wiſe that he diſcerneth the time, and the want of this diſcernment is the cauſe of much human miſery. For,

1. Becauſe to every purpoſe there is time and judgment, the proper ſeaſon and manner when it ſhould be put in execution, the ignorance, improvidence, and neglect of men in this behalf, occaſion moſt of their diſtreſſes. They trifle with the opportunity, and it ſlips irrecoverably by; therefore the miſery of man is great upon him, and he hath uſually only his own negligence to blame for the ſufferings he undergoes; which prudent foreſight, and careful diligence, might probably have prevented. For he knoweth not that which ſhall be, or whether ever again he ſhall have the opportunity he hath loſt, and none know what tomorrow will bring forth: for who can tell when it ſhall be, or how it ſhall be? future events are ſecrets concealed from human foreſight, the preſent moment only is our own, and time to be redeemed by us as it flies.

2. Death is haſtening towards us, and when he comes, there is no man that hath power over the ſpirit to retain the ſpirit from God's arreſts; his ſummons is abſolute, and muſt be obeyed; no intreaties can prevail, no bribe ſuſpend, no methods prevent the execution of the ſentence gone forth. When our hour is arrived, go we muſt; neither hath he power in the day of death; then the ſtrong men bow themſelves, and friends and phyſicians help in vain: and this muſt be, ſooner or later, the lot of all, for there is no diſcharge in that war; we muſt conflict with this terrible foe; nor gold, nor tears, nor ſtruggling avail, death will not quit his hold. And as the moſt holy are not exempt from the common lot of mortality, and though the property of death is changed, yet muſt paſs in common with others through the gate of the grave; neither ſhall wickedneſs deliver thoſe that are given to it, all their craft, their cunning, their authority, their wealth, the fruits of their wickedneſs, profit not in this day of wrath, but will rather haſten their ruin.

9. All this I have ſeen, and applied my heart unto every work that is done under the ſun: there is a time wherein one man ruleth over another to his own hurt. 10. And ſo I ſaw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from the place of the holy, and [l] they were forgotten in the city where they had ſo done: this is alſo vanity. 11. [m] Becauſe ſentence againſt an evil work is not ſpeedily executed; therefore the heart of the ſons of men is fully ſet in them to do evil. 12. ¶ [n] Though a ſinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet ſurely I know that [o] it ſhall be well with them that fear God, which fear before him: 13. But it ſhall not be well with the wicked, neither ſhall he prolong his days, which are as a ſhadow; becauſe he feareth not before God.

l Prov. x. 7.

m Pſ. x. 6. & l. 21. Iſa. xxvi. 10.

n Iſa. lxv. 20.

o Pſ. xxxvii. 11, 18, 19. Prov. i. 32, 33. Iſa. iii. 10, 11.

v. 9—13. To ſupport the ſufferers under tyrannical rulers, Solomon here,

1. Remarks, amongſt the obſervations he had made under the ſun, their way and end. There is a time when one man ruleth over another to his own hurt, or to his hurt; either the hurt of the perſon oppreſſed by tyrants, whoſe liberty and property are invaded, and their peace diſturbed; or to the hurt of the oppreſſors themſelves, who, abuſing their power, at laſt exaſperate their ſubjects to riſe up againſt them; or filling up the meaſure of their iniquities, bring down upon their heads the divine judgments. For the day of the wicked is coming: ſo I ſaw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from the place of the holy, had lived in office, and kept their poſts of honour to the laſt, and were interred with great pomp and ſplendor, attended in the moſt ſolemn manner by the Prieſts and Levites; as the words may be rendered, they came and walked from the holy place; but how poor is all this! when death ſtamps vanity upon them, they lie down in the duſt as the beggar, where no pomp can follow them, and their deteſted names are forgotten, and buried in oblivion, notwithſtanding all the pains they had taken to perpetuate them.

2. He obſerves the impenitence of men preſuming on the patience of God; but reprieves are no pardons, as the ſinner will find to his coſt. Becauſe ſentence againſt an evil work is not ſpeedily executed, but God, though determined to puniſh ſin, in mercy delays, if peradventure men may repent of their iniquities, ſo far is his goodneſs from leading them, as it ought, to repentance, that they are often (ſuch is man's deſperate wickedneſs!) but the more hardned: therefore the heart of the ſons of men is fully ſet in them to do evil, preſuming on impunity they perſiſt in their iniquity. But though a ſinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, living many a year in proſperous iniquity, yet ought not the people of God to be uneaſy, nor the wicked ſecure, for mark but the end, and then it will be ſeen beyond contradiction, (1.) That it ſhall be well with them that fear God; it ſhall be ſurely ſo, notwithſtanding any appearances to the contrary: I know it, and ſpeak from the fulleſt conviction and obſervation; it ſhall be well with them that fear God above man, and make it their one concern to pleaſe him; well with them in time, they ſhall enjoy his favour and regard, and a happy iſſue out of all their afflictions; well with them in eternity, when the reward of glory ſhall be beſtowed upon them. But it ſhall not be well with the wicked, his days ſhall be paſt in vanity, his death be terrible, and after death a miſerable eternity receive him: neither ſhall he prolong his days, which are as a ſhadow, ſo ſwiftly paſſing, ſhort of what he expected, at leaſt ſhort of the life of glory, becauſe he feareth not before God, the great cauſe of all his wickedneſs, and the root of his impenitence.

14. There is a vanity which is done upon the earth, that there be juſt men unto whom [p] it happeneth according to the work of the wicked: again, there be wicked men to whom it happeneth according to the work of the righteous: I ſaid, that this alſo is vanity. 15. Then I commended mirth, becauſe [q] a man hath no better thing under the ſun than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry: for that ſhall abide with him of his labour, the days of his life which God giveth him under the ſun. 16. ¶ When I applied mine heart to know wiſdom, and to ſee the buſineſs that is done upon the earth: (for alſo there is that neither day nor night ſeeth ſleep with his eyes.) 17. Then I beheld all the work of God, that [r] a man cannot find out the work that is done under the ſun: becauſe though a man labour to ſeek it out, yet he ſhall not find it; yea, further, though a wiſe man think to know it, [s] yet ſhall he not be able to find it.

p Pſ. lxxiii. 14. Chap. vii. 15. & ix. 1, 2.

q Chap. ii. 24. & iii. 12, 22. & v. 18. & ix. 7.

r Job v. 9. Chap. iii. 11. Rom. xi. 33.

s Pſ. lxxiii. 16.

v. 14—17. It hath been of old a matter of ſtumbling and difficulty, to behold the righteous afflicted, the wicked in affluence. But,

1. We muſt not be ſurpriſed at the ſight. It is a part of this world's vanity to ſee the juſt ſuffering, as if they had been wicked; and the ungodly proſpering, as if they had been righteous. But God hath wiſe ends to anſwer in theſe, as they ſeem to us, myſterious diſpenſations of his providence. This is not our reſt, God will have his children know it; we muſt look forward to eternity, there the myſtery will be explained, and God's wiſdom, juſtice, grace, and love therein acknowledged.

2. Since all below is ſo poor and empty, it is wiſe to make the beſt of it we can. Then I commended mirth, holy chearfulneſs and ſerenity; joy in what we poſſeſs, and contentment under what we want; to uſe with ſobriety and thankfulneſs, the creatures of God is all the comfort we can expect under the ſun.. And as this is all we can get by our labour under the ſun, herein ought we to abide all our days: they are few and evil, and ſhortly muſt end. Let us therefore correſpond with the Divine Providence, and accommodate ourſelves to God's will.

3. We ſhould be ſatisfied to be ignorant, where God hath ſet bounds to our reſearches. Solomon had applied his heart to know wiſdom, to inveſtigate the nature and cauſes of things, and to ſee the buſineſs that is done under the ſun, all the labours of men, or the works of divine providence; and day and night, with reſtleſs toil, he purſued his enquiries, v. 16. but after all, he confeſſes how little he knew, v. 17. His way is in the ſea, unfathomably deep, and his footſteps in the great waters, unſearchable; and if he, who was the wiſeſt of all the ſons of men, make ſuch an acknowledgment, they who come after him may well deſpair: be he never ſo curious, inquiſitive, indefatigable, day and night in the enquiry, yet he ſhall not find it: yea, though he be wiſe, and may think to know it, by taking ſome new and untried method of inveſtigating the ſecrets of nature and providence, yet ſhall he not be able to find it, an impenetrable vail is ſtretched over many things; he that ſet bounds to the ſea, hath ſet bounds to the human underſtanding, and ſaid, hitherto ſhalt thou come, and no farther: to attempt to exceed theſe bounds, would only prove the arrogance of folly, and end in diſappointment.

CHAP. IX.

Solomon in this chapter for a further proof of the vanity of this world, gives us four obſervations which he had made upon a ſurvey of the ſtate of the children of men in it. 1. He obſerved, that commonly as to outward things, good and bad men fare much alike, ver. 1—3. 2. That death puts a final period to all our enjoyments in this world, ver. 4—6. from whence he infers, that it is our wiſdom to enjoy the comforts of life, and mind the buſineſs of life while it doth laſt, ver. 7—10. 3. That God's providence often croſſeth the faireſt and moſt hopeful probabilities, and great calamities often ſurpriſe men ere they are aware, ver. 11, 12. 4. That wiſdom often makes men very uſeful and yet gains them little reſpect, but perſons of great merit are ſlighted, ver. 13—18. And what is there then in this world that ſhould make us fond of it?

1. FOR all this † I conſidered in my heart, even to declare all this, [a] that the righteous, and the wiſe, and their works are in the hand of God: no man knoweth either love, or hatred, by all that is before them. 2. [b] All things come alike to all, there is one event to the righteous and to the wicked; to the good and to the clean, and to the unclean; to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not: as is the good, ſo is the ſinner; and he that ſweareth, as he that feareth an oath. 3. This is an evil among all things that are done under the ſun, that there is one event unto all: yea, alſo the heart of the ſons of men is full of evil, and madneſs is in their heart while they live, and after that, they go to the dead.

† Heb. I give, or ſet to my heart.

a Chap. viii. 14.

b Pſ. lxxiii. 3, 12, 13. Mal. iii. 15.

v. 1—3. Solomon had, with great diligence, been applying his mind to the ſtudy of wiſdom; he had deliberately weighed and conſidered the particulars of the foregoing chapters, and the end he propoſed was, to declare all this, for the edification of others. One difficulty in the ways of providence he had obſerved, reſpecting the diſtribution of afflictions and proſperity to the righteous and the wicked; they who deſerve leaſt, poſſeſſing often the greateſt affluence; and they who are the excellent of the earth, pining under ſickneſs, diſtreſs, and indigence.

Now,

Before Chriſt 977.

Now, though he cannot fully reſolve this work of God, the method of divine procedure, yet the following obſervations may ſerve to give much ſatisfaction to the faithful.

1. That the righteous, and the wiſe, and their works, are in the hand of God; he hath a peculiar regard to them, and all their affairs; he knoweth their works, and approves them; and however they may be ſore thruſt at by their enemies, none can pluck them out of his hands: he that made them righteous and wiſe, and works all their works in them, will preſerve and keep them from evil, and bring them ſafe to his eternal kingdom.

2. That no man knoweth either love or hatred, by all that is before them; the different outward circumſtances of men, which the divine providence makes, are no proof either of God's love or hatred; or neither love nor hatred man knows, ſo deceitful are appearances; the profeſſions of love are often inſincere, and there is hatred ſometimes entertained where we expected the warmeſt regard: but all things are before them, known to the eternal Three, from whom nothing is hid, nothing is ſecret.

3. That all things come alike to all; there is one event to the righteous, and the wicked; yet are their characters widely different: theſe are good, renewed by divine grace; clean, as waſhed in the blood of ſprinkling, devout in their ſervices and ſacrifices, and fearing an oath, cautious how they ſwear, and ſeriouſly and religiouſly obſervant of it: the other are unclean, their nature impure, and their iniquities not waſhed away by the atoning blood; profane, living in the habitual neglect of the ordinances of God. Sinners, openly violating the laws of God and man: ſwearers, raſh, blaſpheming, perjured. Now that ſo little difference ſhould be put between perſons of ſo oppoſite characters, may ſeem an evil among all things done under the ſun, and that there is one event unto all, is ready to harden the wicked in atheiſm, and ſhake the confidence of the juſt. But though the diſpenſations of God's providence are the ſame, the deſign of them is vaſtly different; the ſame event is made a ſavour of life unto life to the one, and a ſavour of death unto death to the other; ſo that God will at laſt appear juſt, and all will be made to own the righteouſneſs of his government.

4. The wicked, notwithſtanding any proſperity they may en-enjoy, are miſerable both in life and death. The heart of the ſons of men is full of evil; obſerving this ſimilarity of events to all, they infer that God hath forſaken the earth, and give an unreſtrained indulgence to every appetite: and madneſs is in their hearts while they live; their delights are but a madman's dreams, they are inſenſible of their real wretched ſtate, and know not the eternal ruin to which they are haſtening; and after that, they go to the dead, death cloſes the ſcene, their pomp cannot deſcend with them into the grave; they go down into the pit, are numbered with the tranſgreſſors, and periſh without hope, eternally.

4. ¶ For to him that is joined to all the living, there is hope: for a living dog is better than a dead lion. 5. For the living know that they ſhall die: but [c] the dead know not any thing, neither have they any more a reward, for [d] the memory of them is forgotten. 6. Alſo their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now periſhed; neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is done under the ſun. 7. ¶ Go thy way, [e] eat thy bread with joy, and drink thy wine with a merry heart; for God now accepteth thy works. 8. Let thy garments be always white; and let thy head lack no ointment. 9. † Live joyfully with the wife whom thou loveſt, all the days of the life of thy vanity, which he hath given thee under the ſun, all the days of thy vanity: for [f] that is thy portion in this life, and in thy labour which thou takeſt under the ſun. 10. Whatſoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wiſdom in the grave whither thou goeſt.

[c] Job xiv. 21. Iſa. lxiii. 16.
[d] Job vii. 8, 9, 10. Iſa. xxvi. 14.
[e] Chap. viii. 15.
† Heb. See, or enjoy life.
[f] Chap. ii. 10, 24. & iii. 13. & v. 18.

v. 4—10. The advantages of life are here ſet forth; happy they who improve them.

1. Whilſt there is life, there is hope. Whatever be a man's condition, either temporal or ſpiritual, however deplorable and unhappy, it may amend. The chief of ſinners may, through grace, quickly become the chief of ſaints, and a living dog is better than a dead lion; the meaneſt beggar alive may be made uſeful, and enjoys comforts, of which the mightieſt monarch dead is incapable.

2. The certainty of approaching death is a warning to prepare for it: now is the moment of opportunity; and the living, who know that they ſhall die, are called upon continually to be ready. It will be too late ſhortly, for as the tree falleth, it muſt lie.

3. After death, this world is no more to us. The dead know not any thing, nothing that paſſes here below, or how it fares with thoſe whom they have left behind; neither have they any more a reward, cannot enjoy any longer the fruit of their labours upon earth; for the memory of them is forgotten among the living; in a few years, their very memorial ſinks into utter oblivion, and it is not known they have ever been. Alſo their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now periſhed, death cauſes every endeared relation to ceaſe, and terminates all quarrels; when we are removed from the world, neither the perſons, nor tranſactions in it any more affect us: neither have they any more a portion for ever in any thing that is under the ſun, the worldling's portion ends with his expiring breath; he can carry nothing away with him, and the gracious ſoul, however rich his portion above the ſun, then quits whatever was near or dear to him beneath it.

4. The inference he would draw from hence, is this; to make uſe of the moment which is allotted us, to enjoy the bleſſings God beſtows with thankfulneſs; and in our place and ſtation give all diligence to glorify God, and make our calling and election ſure. The temperate uſe and enjoyment of the good creatures of God, are ſo far from being criminal, that they are enjoined us, as our portion under the ſun, v. 9. And ſince all of our days here are but vanity, the greater need have we to make the beſt of them. To eat and drink with gladneſs of heart, to be ſordid neither in diet or apparel, but to live according to our ſtation and circumſtances, and enjoy the relations of life with which the Lord hath bleſſed us. And God, far from forbidding us theſe comforts, accepteth thy works; a thankful heart in the uſe of the bleſſings he beſtows, is a daily ſacrifice. Only amidſt our enjoyments, we muſt not forget the employments which call for our diligence and labour. Whatſoever thy hand findeth to do, the duties of our ſtation, and eſpecially the great concern of religion, do it with thy might, with zeal and vigour, in oppoſition to every difficulty and diſcouragement, for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wiſdom in the grave whither thou goeſt, it will be too late there to diſcover the error of our ways, and impoſſible to amend them. To day, therefore, whilſt it is called to day, up and be doing, the night cometh, when no man can work.

11. ¶ I returned, and [g] ſaw under the ſun, that the race is not to the ſwift, nor the battle to the ſtrong, neither yet bread to the wiſe, nor yet riches to men of underſtanding, nor yet favour to men of ſkill; but time and chance happeneth to them all. 12. For [h] man alſo knoweth not his time, as the fiſhes that are taken in an evil net, and as the birds that are caught in the ſnare; ſo are the ſons of men [i] ſnared in an evil time, when it falleth ſuddenly upon them.

[g] Jer. ix. 23. Amos ii. 14, 15.
[h] Chap. viii. 7.
[i] Prov. xxix. 6. Luke xii. 20, 39.

v. 11, 12. Though diligence is our duty, yet the iſſue of all events is in the hands of God, and things often turn out ſtrangely contrary to appearances. This the preacher had obſerved, and warns us of, that we might not be too ſanguine and confident.

1. The ſtrongeſt preſumptions often diſappoint us. The race is not to the ſwift, they ſtumble in their courſe; or too ſecure of ſucceſs, loiter, and are diſtanced; nor the battle to the ſtrong, the moſt formidable armies have been often defeated by a handful of men; and the mightieſt champions, as Goliath, have fallen before the arm of a ſtripling: neither yet bread to the wiſe, who frequently want, whilſt fools wallow in affluence; nor yet riches to men of underſtanding, who, though ingenious in their profeſſions, and moſt likely to ſucceed in the world, are ſtrangely neglected, and others of no abilities preferred before them; nor yet favour to men of ſkill, whoſe parts and genius, inſtead of engaging the eſteem of others, ſometimes provoke their envy; and inſtead of exalting them, many ſeek to depreſs and diſgrace them: but time and chance happeneth to them all, far different is the event from human probability. The time is fixed in the divine decree, and the chance or occurrence happens according to the determinate counſel of God; ſo that whilſt we uſe all ſuitable means, we muſt depend ſtill upon God for the ſucceſs: and when he diſappoints our beſt concerted enterprizes, muſt acquieſce in the diſpenſations of his providence.

2. We are unable to guard againſt our deſtiny. Man knoweth not his time, what calamities are before him, when his day of evil ſhall come, or how to avoid it; but like the fiſhes taken in an evil net, and as birds caught in the ſnare, ſo unexpectedly do we often find a ſnare in what promiſed the greateſt ſatisfaction, and ſee ourſelves ſuddenly involved in trouble, where we ſuſpected no danger. We need be ready for every event, prepare for changes, expect diſappointments, die daily, and then the day of evil ſhall never ſurprize us unawares.

13. ¶ This wiſdom have I ſeen alſo under the ſun, and it ſeemed great unto me: 14. [k] There was a little city, and few men within it; and there came a great king againſt it, and beſieged it, and built great bulwarks againſt it: 15. Now there was found in it a poor wiſe man, and he by his wiſdom delivered the city; yet no man remembred that ſame poor man. 16. Then ſaid I, [l] Wiſdom is better than ſtrength: nevertheleſs, the poor man's wiſdom is deſpiſed, and his words are not heard. 17. The words of wiſe men are heard in quiet, more than the cry of him that ruleth among fools. 18. Wiſdom is better than weapons of war: but one ſinner deſtroyeth much good.

[k] 2 Sam. xx. 15—22.
[l] Prov. xxi. 22. & xxiv. 5. Chap. vii. 19.

v. 13—18. Though the wiſe are not always ſucceſsful, yet uſually they are ſo; and wiſdom is moſt neceſſary to the management of our affairs, notwithſtanding the diſappointments from which the moſt prudent are not exempted.

1. Solomon gives an inſtance of the advantages of wiſdom, and the ſtory might have been a real matter of fact which fell under his obſervation; or it is a parable, intended to ſet the ſubject he treated of, in a more ſtriking light. There was a little city, and a few men within it, conſequently leſs able to ſuſtain the attacks of a beſieger; and there came a great king againſt it, and beſieged it, and built great bulwarks againſt it, ſo that the ruin of it ſeemed inevitable, and reſiſtance vain: now there was found in it a poor wiſe man, who, though ſo deſerving of honour and advancement, had been neglected; yet, like a true patriot, in time of danger ſtepped forth a volunteer, in the ſervice of his ungrateful countrymen, and he by his wiſdom delivered the city; yet, highly as he had merited, he found no recompenſe, no man remembered that ſame poor man, ſo ill are kindneſſes done to men often requited: God will not be ſo unmindful of the works of faith, and labours of love. Some explain this myſtically of Chriſt, and no doubt the application is beautifully appoſite: The little city is the church of God, ſeparated by walls of ſalvation from the world around it; the members of it are few in number, and utterly unable to defend themſelves againſt their ſpiritual enemies. The great king who beſieges it, is Satan, the prince of the power of the air, under whom the armies of earth and hell are leagued againſt God's people; by open attacks of temptation and perſecution, and by ſecret ſap of errors and deluſions, he ſeeks to open a way into the fortreſs. The poor man, who in this deſperate caſe ſteps forth, is Chriſt, filled with all the treaſures of divine wiſdom; and by his counſel the devices of Satan are diſappointed, the ſouls of men reſcued from ruin, and the church ſaved with an everlaſting ſalvation: yet thoſe who ſaw him in the fleſh, never thought him capable of ſuch a tranſaction, and rejected him; and even after what he hath done, the moſt of thoſe who are in the pale of his church by profeſſion, give him not the glory of his work, and aſcribe no praiſe to this great deliverer, but live and die in an ungrateful neglect of him.

2. The inferences the wiſe man draws from hence, are, that wiſdom is better than ſtrength, and able to extricate us from difficulties, baffling ſuperior force, and foiling the weapons of war. Nevertheleſs, we may ſtill obſerve in general, that the poor man's wiſdom is deſpiſed, and his words are not heard; ſuch are the prejudices of the world againſt the poor, that many a bright genius lives and dies in obſcurity. Some few indeed may overcome the common prepoſſeſſion, and learn to value merit, however depreſſed in ſtation: by them the words of the wiſe are heard in quiet, they attend ſilently their ſage inſtructions, or the humble, modeſt, and diffident manner, in which they deliver their opinion, weighs more with them, than the cry of him that ruleth among fools, whoſe pride on his ſtation makes him noiſy and bluſtering; but the thoughtful hearer prefers the force of the poor man's reaſoning to all the pomp of his ſounding words.

3. As much good as one poor wiſe man doth, ſo much evil proceeds from one ſinner: he deſtroyeth much good; all the gifts which by nature he poſſeſſes, and the abundance beſtowed on him by providence, are vilely perverted and abuſed; he is the plague of his family, his city, his country; his ill example is contagious, and his ſtudy is to counteract the influence of good laws, or good advice: and through the corruption of the human heart, ever prone to evil, his endeavours are but too frequently ſucceſsful.

CHAP. X.

This chapter informs us that it is our wiſdom, 1. To preſerve our reputation in managing our affairs dextrouſly, ver. 1—3. 2. To be ſubmiſſive to our ſuperiors, if at any time we have offended them, ver. 4. 3. To live quiet and peaceable lives, becauſe of the folly and danger of diſloyal and turbulent practices, ver. 8, 9, 10, 11. 4. To govern our tongues well, ver. 12—15. 5. To be diligent in our buſineſs, and provide well for our families, ver. 18, 19. 6. Not to ſpeak ill of our rulers, no not in ſecret, ver. 20. 7. That rulers ſhould be careful whom they prefer to places of truſt and power, ver. 5, 6, 7. 8. Let them manage themſelves diſcreetly, be generous, and not childiſh; temperate, and not luxurious, ver. 16, 17. And happy the nation when princes and people make conſcience of their duty according to theſe rules.

1. †DEAD flies cauſe the ointment of the apothecary to ſend forth a ſtinking ſavour: ſo doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wiſdom and honour. 2. A wiſe man's heart is at his right hand; but a fool's heart is at his left. 3. Yea, alſo when he that is a fool walketh by the way, ‡ his wiſdom faileth him, and he ſaith to every one that he is a fool.

† Heb. Flies of death.

‡ Heb. His heart.

v. 1—3. The pureſt white the ſooneſt receives a ſoil; therefore,

1. They who have the reputation of wiſdom, and make the higheſt profeſſions of religion, ſhould bethe moſt exact and careful in their conduct, ſeeing the eyes of men are upon them, ready to diſcern, and willing to expoſe, their ſmalleſt infirmities. As dead flies give the ſweeteſt ointment into which they fall an ill ſavour, ſo doth a little folly, an inadvertent ſtep, an unguarded word, or a ſinful compliance, expoſe him to reproach, that is in reputation for wiſdom and honour; the world will make no allowances for human infirmity, or the force of temptation, but looking with envy on ſuperior excellence, are happy to ſeize every ſhadow of abuſe, to degrade them to their own level, and triumph that they are no better than themſelves. May it make us, therefore, more circumſpect in our words and works, when ſo many wait for our halting!

2. The wiſe are dexterous in the management of their affairs, their heart is at their right hand; in difficulties, they have preſence of mind to extricate themſelves, and in all their tranſactions, execute with vigour what they plan with prudence: but a fool's heart is at his left, he is aukward in his buſineſs, abſurd in his contrivances, and if put a ſtep out of his way, confuſed and at a loſs: nay, he hath not ſenſe enough to conceal his folly; it appears in his very gait, in his converſation, in all his tranſactions; and whoever makes the moſt curſory remarks upon his conduct, muſt be convinced that he is a fool.

4. If the ſpirit of the ruler riſe up againſt thee, [a] leave not thy place: for [b] yielding pacifieth great offences. 5. There is an evil which I have ſeen under the ſun, [c] as an error which proceedeth from the ruler. 6. Folly is ſet in † great dignity, and the rich ſit in low place. 7. I have ſeen [d] ſervants upon horſes, and princes walking as ſervants upon the earth. 8. [e] He that diggeth a pit, ſhall fall into it; and [f] whoſo breaketh an hedge, a ſerpent ſhall bite him. 9. Whoſo removeth ſtones, ſhall be hurt therewith: and he that cleaveth wood, ſhall be endangered thereby. 10. If the iron be blunt, and he do not whet the edge, then muſt he put to more ſtrength: but wiſdom is profitable to direct.

[a] Chap. viii. 3.
[b] Prov. xxv. 15.
[c] Eſth. iii. 1.
† Heb. Great heights.
[d] Prov. xix. 10. & xxx. 22.
[e] Pſ. vii. 15. Prov. xxvi. 27.
[f] Judg. ix. 53.

v. 4—10. They who would learn to rule, or to obey, muſt hear theſe leſſons of inſtruction.

1. Let ſubjects paſſively ſubmit. If the ſpirit of a ruler riſe up againſt thee, whether through any real provocation given, or miſrepreſentation made by others, leave not thy place; quit not his ſervice in paſſion, nor throw up thy employments as ill uſed, much leſs renounce allegiance and loyalty, but wait a while, and the ſtorm will blow over; or an opportunity be afforded to vindicate injured innocence, for yielding pacifieth great offences; and gives time for wrath to ſubſide, which anger and oppoſition would but exaſperate, and render more implacable.

2. Let rulers take heed whom they prefer to places of truſt and honour; for it is a great evil, yet a common error, thro' favour, recommendation, or partiality, without conſidering the qualifications of the perſons, to put thoſe in office who are moſt unfit to govern. Folly is ſet in high dignity; men who are weak, and unable to diſcharge the duties of their ſtation; or wicked, and diſpoſed to abuſe their power and influence: and the rich, men of character and fortune, who were removed by their circumſtances from the temptation of doing a mean thing, or men of grace and piety, ſit in low places neglected and ſlighted. I have ſeen ſervants upon horſes, thoſe of a mercenary ſpirit and low extraction, exalted, as the tools of an iniquitous adminiſtration; and princes walking as ſervants upon the earth, degraded and inſulted by theſe upſtart minions of power.

3. Let both prince and people beware of innovations, and keep within their due bounds; leaſt turning prerogative into tyranny, or liberty into licentiouſneſs, the fatal conſequences ſhould (too late) be felt and lamented. For as he that diggeth a pit, is in danger of falling into it; he that breaks a hedge, of being ſtung by the viper which is concealed in it, v. 8. he that removeth ſtones from a wall, of being cruſhed by its fall; and he that cleaveth wood, of being hurt by the chips that fly from the ſtroke, v. 9. ſo where princes turn oppreſſive and tyrannical, break in upon the liberties of the people, ſeek to demoliſh the conſtitution, render the government arbitrary, and employ force to put their deſigns in execution; they provoke the people to riſe up againſt them, and get themſelves dethroned and murdered. As on the other hand, when factious diſcontented ſpirits contrive to bring about a change in the government, would ſow diſcord among the people under pretence of zeal for liberty, would retrench the juſt rights of the crown, and alter the conſtitution, they often, by their treaſonable practices, make a halter for themſelves, and lawleſs liberty terminates in abject ſlavery : wiſdom is therefore profitable to direct, how both ſhould behave in their ſtations; and hereby we ſave ourſelves much trouble and damage; as when a tool is ſharpened, it works eaſily, but when blunt, requires more violence, and the chips fly more dangerouſly around.

11. Surely the ſerpent will bite [g] without enchantment, and ‡ a babbler is no better. 12. [h] The words of a wiſe man's mouth are † gracious : but [i] the lips of a fool will ſwallow up himſelf. 13. The beginning of the words of his mouth is fooliſhneſs : and the end of ‖ his talk is miſchievous madneſs. 14. [k] A fool alſo § is full of words : [l] a man cannot tell what ſhall be ; and [m] what ſhall be after him, who can tell him ? 15. The labour of the fooliſh wearieth every one of them, becauſe he knoweth not how to go to the city.

[g] Pſ. lviii. 4, 5. Jer. viii. 17.
‡ Heb. Maſter of the tongue.
[h] Prov. x. 32. & xii. 13.
† Heb. Grace.
[i] Prov. x. 14. & xviii. 7.
§ Heb. His mouth.
[k] Prov. xv. 2.
‖ Heb. Multiplieth.
[l] Jam. iv. 13, 14.
[m] Chap. iii. 22. & vi. 12. & viii. 7.

v. 11—15. We have here,

1. The evil of a babbling tongue, v. 11. It is venomous as the poiſon of a ſerpent, it ſtings mortally, without enchantment, or without a whiſper, or hiſs, and gives no warning.

2. The oppoſition between the words of the fooliſh and the wiſe. The words of a wiſe man's mouth are gracious, he gives the moſt favourable character of others; ſpeaks well of thoſe who are in authority over him; ſeeks ſome topic of converſation that may be uſeful, and miniſter grace to the hearers; none go from his company, without an opportunity of being the wiſer and better for it: but the lips of a fool will ſwallow up himſelf; giving a looſe to his tongue, he ſpeaks evil of dignities, involves himſelf in quarrels, and brings ruin upon himſelf. The beginning of the words of his mouth is fooliſhneſs; he no ſooner opens his lips, than his folly is manifeſt to all that hear him, and the end of his talk is miſchievous madneſs; he talks himſelf into a paſſion, grows abuſive and violent, and ſticks at no miſchief. A fool alſo is full of words, never knows when to have done, and wearies the company with his nonſenſe; affects to underſtand every thing, and though utterly ignorant, engroſſes the diſcourſe to himſelf; and with endleſs tautologies repeats his trite obſervations, v. 14. or vaingloriouſly boaſts of what he will do, and what he expects hereafter, when even the wiſeſt of men know not what a day may bring forth.

3. The works of the fool are as fruitleſs as his words. The labour of the fooliſh wearieth every one of them; they take the wrong way, and therefore cannot but labour in vain, becauſe he knoweth not how to go to the city; he miſtakes the path, though never ſo obvious, and is bewildered: and this is ſpiritually true of the infatuated ſinner, and the ſelf-righteous, who ſay they are on the road to the heavenly city, but know not Chriſt the way; and therefore, every ſtep they take, even their prayers, their alms, and moſt boaſted duties, but remove them farther from the gate of heaven.

16. ¶ [n] Wo to thee, O land, when thy king is a child, and thy princes eat in the morning. 17. Bleſſed art thou, O land, when thy king is the ſon of nobles, and [o] thy princes eat in due ſeaſon, for ſtrength and not for drunkenneſs.

[n] Iſa. iii. 4, 5, 12. & v. 11.
[o] Prov. xxxi. 4.

v. 16, 17. The happineſs or miſery of a kingdom greatly depends on the character of its governors. A prince of a weak and childiſh ſpirit, unable to guide the reins, or debauched and luxurious, who devotes his time to the ſervice of his luſts and pleaſures, neglects public affairs, and devolves them to the management of thoſe, weak or wicked as himſelf, is a curſe to the land over which he preſides. But bleſſed art thou, O land, when thy king is the ſon of nobles, ennobled by the virtues of his royal progenitors, which he imitates, as well as the blood derived from them; and thy princes eat in due ſeaſon for ſtrength, and not for drunkenneſs, where the ſubordinate magiſtrates are wiſely choſen of the moſt virtuous, temperate, and ſober; whoſe care it is continually how to diſcharge their office, and whom exceſs never diſqualifies for buſineſs.

18. ¶ By much ſlothfulneſs the building decayeth, and through idleneſs of the hands the houſe droppeth through. 19. A feaſt is made for laughter, and [p] wine † maketh merry : but money anſwereth all things. 20.
¶ [q] Curſe not the king, no not in thy ‡ thought, and curſe not the rich in ‖ thy bedchamber : for a bird of the air ſhall carry the voice, and that which hath wings ſhall tell the matter.

[p] Pſ. civ. 15.
† Heb. Maketh glad the life.
[q] Exod. xxii. 28. Acts xxiii. 5.
‡ Heb. Conſcience.
‖ Heb. The chambers of thy bed.

v. 18—20. Three things are here obſerved.

1. The great evil of ſloth. By much ſlothfulneſs the building decayeth, no care being taken timely to repair the breaches; and through idleneſs of the hands the houſe droppeth through, mouldering faſt to ruin, and falling to the ground. Thus the ſtate ſuffers under ſlothful magiſtrates, and the ſoul of the ſinner receives hereby irreparable damage.

2. A feaſt is made for laughter, where ſocial mirth crowns the board, and wine maketh merry; but money anſwereth all things pertaining to this life, which it can procure. Particularly, it is the ſinews of war, and the great reſource in the exigences of the ſtate, and therefore not to be ſquandered by princes in extravagance.

3. The ſecret deſigns of treaſon will be detected. Curſe not a king, however ill his conduct may be, no not in thy thought; and curſe not the rich, the inferior magiſtrates, even though oppreſſive, in thy bedchamber; never ſo ſecretly in thy family, or in the moſt private club, or aſſociation: for a bird of the air ſhall carry the voice, their ſpies are ever within hearing, and that which hath wings ſhall tell the matter, ſwift the intelligence of theſe ſecret plots ſhall be conveyed, and the conſequence be the deſtruction of the contrivers.

CHAP. XI.

In this chapter we have, 1. A preſſing exhortation to works of charity, as the beſt cure of the vanity which our worldly riches are ſubject to, and the only way of making them turn to a ſubſtantial good account, ver. 1—6. 2. A ſerious admonition to prepare for death and judgment, and to begin betimes, even in the days of our youth to do ſo, ver. 7—10.

1. [a] CAST thy bread † upon the waters : for [b] thou ſhalt find it after many days. 2. [c] Give a portion to ſeven, and alſo to eight ; for [d] thou knoweſt not what evil ſhall be upon the earth. 3. If the clouds be full of rain, they empty themſelves upon the earth : and if the tree fall toward the ſouth, or towards the north ;
in the place where the tree falleth, there it ſhall be. 4.
He that obſerveth the wind, ſhall not ſow : and he that regardeth the clouds, ſhall not reap. 5. As [e] thou knoweſt not what is the way of the ſpirit, [f] nor how the bones do grow in the womb of her that is with child :
even ſo thou knoweſt not the works of God who maketh all. 6. In the morning ſow thy ſeed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand : for thou knoweſt not whether ſhall ‡ proſper, either this or that, or whether they both ſhall be alike good.

[a] Iſa. xxxii. 20.
† Heb. Upon the face of, &c.
[b] Deut. xv. 10. Prov. xix. 17. Mat. x. 42.
[c] Pſ. cxii. 9. Luke vi. 30.
[d] Eph. v. 16.
[e] John iii. 8.
[f] Pſal. cxxxix. 14, 15.
‡ Heb. Be right.

v. 1—6. The great bleſſing of abundance, and proper employment of it, is to uſe it in relieving the neceſſities of the indigent.

1. Solomon exhorts to liberality. Caſt thy bread upon the waters, upon the multitude of poor objects, on many of whom it may ſeem loſt, as what is caſt into the ſea; but, like ſhips of merchandize, the return made ſhall amply repay the venture: for thou ſhalt find it after many days; the bleſſing of God ſhall often reſtore it with increaſe in this world, at leaſt in a better we ſhall reap the fruits of our benevolence. Give a portion to ſeven, not complaining of the number who ſeek relief, but alſo to eight; even to as many as through their indigence call for a ſupply, and our ability enables us to aſſiſt them; for thou knoweſt not what evil ſhall be upon the earth, and therefore, inſtead of making that a reaſon for withholding the needful aſſiſtance, we ſhould be careful to make a good uſe of what we have, whilſt we have it, and what our hand findeth to do, do it with our might.

2. He urges the duty by ſeveral conſiderations taken from the objects around us, and anſwers the objections which the niggard heart might make.

(1.) If the clouds be full of rain, they do not reſerve their contents, but empty themſelves upon the earth; ſo ſhould the rich water with their bounty all around them.

(2.) If a tree fall towards the ſouth, or towards the north, either the ſeed that grows into a tree, or the ſtock, when it is felled, in the place where the tree falleth, there ſhall he be, freely producing fruit for thoſe who come to gather it; or when by death we are cut down as a tree, we can do good no longer; and therefore ſhould now, whilſt we have opportunity, improve the moment: nor ſhould the unworthineſs of the object diſcourage us; if we give in real charity, we ſhall not loſe our reward.

(3.) We muſt not be deterred by the fears of want which may happen to ourſelves, and by ſeeming future difficulties be diſcouraged from preſent duty. If every blaſt of wind, or flying cloud, diſcouraged the huſbandman, he would neither ſow his ground, nor reap his harveſt.

(4.) Though we may not ſee how God will repay us for what is expended in his ſervice, yet ſhall it infallibly be done. We know not whence the wind cometh, or whither it goeth, how the ſoul is united to the body, or the bones grow in the womb of her that is with child, and a thouſand things in the ways of providence are equally myſterious to us. But though we know not the manner of his operation, we feel and ſee the effects: and ſo ſhall we receive a return from him of what is in charity lent to him.

Before Chriſt 977.

(5.) We ſhall finally reap, if we faint not. With indefatigable diligence our duty is to labour, and truſt God for the ſucceſs; we know not which of our works of faith and labours of love ſhall moſt proſper, either thoſe of the morning of youth, or the evening of age, and may hope that both ſhall be alike good; watered with the dew of the divine benediction, and producing a plentiful harveſt, either in time or in eternity.

7. ¶ Truly the light is ſweet, and a pleaſant thing it is for the eyes to behold the ſun. 8. But if a man live many years, and rejoice in them all; yet let him remember the days of darkneſs, for [g] they ſhall be many. All that cometh is vanity. 9. ¶ Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and [h] walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the ſight of thine eyes: but know thou, that [i] for all theſe things God will bring thee into judgment. 10. Therefore remove ſorrow from thy heart, and [k] put away evil from thy fleſh: [l] for childhood and youth are vanity.

[g] Job xiv. 12.
[h] Num. xv. 39.
[i] Chap. xii. 14.
[k] 2 Cor. vii. 1. 2 Tim. ii. 22.
[l] Pſ. xxxix. 5.

v. 7—10. After the many directions given how to live, he proceeds in the concluſion to teach us how to die.

1. He addreſſes the aged. Thoſe who have lived many years, and years of almoſt uninterrupted proſperity too, rejoicing in them all; to ſuch the light of life is ſweet, and it is a pleaſant thing to behold the ſun, to be numbered among the living, and enjoy the bleſſings God beſtows. But the more comforts we have found here, and the longer we have poſſeſſed them, the more need we fear, leaſt inordinate love of life ſhould draw us away from our better hope above; and therefore let ſuch remember the days of darkneſs, for they are many, days of ſickneſs, pain, and infirmity; or days of death, when the body is incloſed in the ſilent grave, and no more to be found among the living. This ſhould be ever placed in our view, that we may never be ſecure, or careleſs, but dying daily, and ready to meet the ſummons that calls us to our bed of duſt, to ſleep till the heavens are no more.

2. He addreſſes the youth. Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; which may be conſidered as before, as his ſerious advice, to take the moſt comfortable enjoyment of the bleſſings of life, in ſuch a way, as to be ever ready to anſwer at the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt: or the words may be regarded as a pointed irony, expreſſive of the vanity and miſery of indulging youthful luſts, for which ſo ſolemn a reckoning muſt be quickly made. Rejoice, if ſuch wretched gratifications can afford a drop of ſatiſfaction, and let thine heart chear thee in the days of thy youth, paſs all the jocund hours in mirth and gaiety, and walk in the ways of thine heart, keeping it back from no joy, but giving a boundleſs ſcope, to the indulgence of every appetite; and in the ſight of thine eyes, let them wander unreſtrained on every pleaſing object: but know thou, however lightly it is thought of, however ſadly forgotten, know thou, what God will ſhortly make thee know, whether thou wilt or no, that for all theſe things, God will bring thee into judgment; terrible expectation to thoſe who ſpend their lives in vanity, and in a moment go down to the grave. Be admoniſhed therefore, before that fatal hour arrives; remove ſorrow from thy heart, all thoſe cauſes of it which will be bitterly felt in the days of more advanced age, if the pangs of repentance ſeize thee; or when in death, if found impenitent, the more terrible pains of hell come about thee; and put away evil from thy fleſh, the ſins of intemperance and uncleanneſs, to which the fleſh is addicted: for childhood and youth are vanity; the pleaſures of both poor and tranſient; the days ſwiftly hurrying by, old age advancing, and death at the door. The ſooner we begin ſeriouſly to weigh theſe things, and the more awfully to be impreſſed thereby, the more diligently ſhall we ſet ourſelves to prepare for our great change, and be happily ready for our appearance before the judge of quick and dead, whenever he ſhall ſummons us away.

CHAP. XII.

The wiſe and penitent preacher is here cloſing his ſermon, and he cloſes it, not only like a good orator, but like a good preacher, with that which was likely to make the beſt impreſſions, and which he wiſhed might be powerful and laſting upon his hearers. Here is, 1. An exhortation to young people to begin betimes to be religious, and not to put it off to old age, ver. 1. enforced with arguments taken from the calamities of old age, ver. 1—5. and the great change that death will make upon us, ver. 6, 7. 2. A repetition of the great truth he had undertaken to prove in this diſcourſe, the vanity of the world, ver. 8. 3. A confirmation and recommendation of what he had written in this and his other books, as worthy to be duly weighed and conſidered, ver. 9—12. 4. The whole matter ſummed up and concluded, with a charge to all to be truly religious, in conſideration of the judgment to come, ver. 13, 14.

Before Chriſt 977.

1. [a] REmember now thy † Creator [b] in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, [c] when thou ſhalt ſay, I have no pleaſure in them; 2. While the ſun, or the light, or the moon, or the ſtars be not darkned, nor the clouds return after the rain: 3. In the day when the keepers of the houſe ſhall tremble, and the ſtrong men ſhall bow themſelves, and the grinders ‡ ceaſe, becauſe they are few, and thoſe that look out of the windows be darkned, 4. And the doors ſhall be ſhut in the ſtreets, when the ſound of the grinding is low, and he ſhall riſe up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of muſic ſhall be brought low; 5. Alſo when they ſhall be afraid of that which is high, and fears ſhall be in the way, and the almond-tree ſhall flouriſh, and the graſhopper ſhall be a burden, and deſire ſhall fail: becauſe man goeth to his long home, and [d] the mourners go about the ſtreets: 6. Or ever the ſilver cord be looſed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the ciſtern. 7. Then [e] ſhall the duſt return to the earth as it was: and [f] the ſpirit ſhall return unto God [g] who gave it. 8. ¶ [h] Vanity of vanities, ſaith the preacher; all is vanity.

[a] Prov. xxii. 6.
† Heb. Creators.
[b] Lam. iii. 27.
[c] 2 Sam. xix. 35.
‡ Or fail, becauſe they grind little.
[d] Jer. xix. 7.
[e] Gen. iii. 19. Pſ. xc. 3.
[f] Chap. iii. 21. Phil. i. 23.
[g] Num. xvi. 22. & xxvii. 16. Iſa. lvii. 16. Zech. xii. 1.

v. 1—8. This is a continuation of the ſubject which cloſed the foregoing chapter. We have,

1. The application of the preacher's diſcourſe to young men, by way of admonition and counſel. Remember now, without delay, thy Creator, or creators, the triune God, whoſe right to us is unqueſtionable; not only our Maker as men, but our Redeemer alſo as ſinners, and thus twice our creator; and therefore juſtly expecting that we ſhould glorify him in our body, and in our ſpirits, which are his.

2. He urges his exhortation by the ſuitableneſs of the ſeaſon, and the proſpect of the evil days which are approaching, when the infirmities of age and ſickneſs as much diſorder the mind as the body, and unfit us for the great buſineſs of caring for the ſoul; when we ſhould have got, and not be then to ſeek the ſupports of religion, which theſe days of evil and anguiſh need; and when, if at laſt we ſhould bethink us of our paſt days, it muſt give us the moſt painful reflections, to look back on the flower of our years ſpent in the ſervice of the world, the fleſh, and the devil, and only the dregs of age remaining for God.

3. The calamities of old age are elegantly and feelingly deſcribed; probably the ſacred penman now ſpoke from experience. The ſun, the light, the moon, the ſtars are darkned, the eyes of the body grow dim, and can no longer enjoy the ſurrounding objects of light, and the faculties of the mind are impaired; the judgment weakened, the memory loſt, the imagination frozen: and the clouds return after rain, ſucceſſive troubles and ails follow each other, and under painful defluxions the body melts away. The keepers of the houſe tremble, the paralytic head, the ſhaking hand, and totttering knees beſpeak the feeble frame, and the ſtrong men bow themſelves; the legs can ſcarce ſupport their weight, and on ſome prop they ſuſtain their body bending to the tomb: the grinders ceaſe, becauſe they are few, the toothleſs gums no longer perform their office to maſticate the food: and thoſe that look out of the windows are darkned, the eyes ſunk in their ſockets, and no more ſenſible to the light of day. And the doors ſhall be ſhut in the ſtreets; they eat little, cloſe their lips to keep their food in their mouths, having loſt their teeth, and are unable to appear as formerly in the ſtreets; and he ſhall riſe up at the voice of the bird, his broken reſt is eaſily diſturbed with the crowing of the cock, or the leaſt noiſe, and all the daughters of muſic ſhall be brought low; the voice becomes inharmonious and harſh, the ears dull of hearing. Alſo they ſhall be afraid of that which is high, unable to aſcend the hill, or climb the tower; their breath fails, their head turns round, and fears ſhall be in the way; they are afraid of falling, through weakneſs, and ready to ſtumble at every thing in their path: and the almond-tree ſhall flouriſh; with ſilver hairs their heads are covered, and the graſhopper ſhall be a burden, either their chirping is irkſome, or if uſed for food, however light of digeſtion, too heavy for their ſtomach; and deſire fails, the appetite loſt, and the paſſions of youthful days utterly quenched. And in this debilitated and exhauſted ſtate, death cannot be far diſtant; becauſe man goeth to his long home, the grave, where his abode muſt be, till a reſurrection-day: or to the houſe of this world, that eternal world, which ſhould alone be regarded by us as our proper home: we ſhould conſider ourſelves as pilgrims upon earth, and ſtrangers whilſt here below, and look for, and haſten to, the everlaſting habitations which await us above; and the mourners go about the ſtreets, either thoſe who were hired to weep for the dead, or thoſe dear relatives, who with no fictitious tears bedew the bier of their departed friend, and fill the air with their lamentations. The ſilver cord, the bond of union between body and ſoul, will then be looſed; the golden bowl, that cencontained the animal ſpirits, be broken; then ſhall the pitcher be broken at the fountain, and the wheel broken at the ciſtern, the heart ceaſe to beat, the blood to flow, and univerſal ſtagnation and death enſue. Then ſhall the duſt return to the earth as it was, ſuch is the dire effect of one man's ſin, and the ſpirit ſhall return unto God that gave it, to receive its doom; either admitted to the bliſsful preſence of God, or reſerved in chains of darkneſs unto the judgment of the great day. Well might the preacher conclude from this humbling view of mortal man, the truth of the poſition he had advanced, as the text of his diſcourſe, Vanity of vanities, all is vanity.

Before Chriſt 977.

9. And † moreover, becauſe the preacher was wiſe, he ſtill taught the people knowledge; yea, he gave good heed, and ſought out, and [i] ſet in order many proverbs. 10. The preacher ſought to find out ‡ acceptable words, and that which was written was upright, even words of truth. 11. The words of the wiſe are [k] as goads, and as nails faſtned by the maſters of aſſemblies, which are given from [l] one ſhepherd. 12. And further, by theſe, my ſon, be admoniſhed: of making many books there is no end, and [m] much ‖ ſtudy is a wearineſs of the fleſh.

† Or the more wiſe the preacher was, &c.
[i] 1 Kings iv. 32.
‡ Heb. Words of delight.
[k] Acts ii. 37.
[l] John x. 16.
[m] Chap. i. 18.
‖ Or reading.

v. 9—12. The preacher is drawing to a concluſion, and warmly recommends what he hath written, as the dictates of wiſdom and experience. He tells us,

1. The pains he took for our inſtruction. Moreover, becauſe the preacher was wiſe, he ſtill taught the people knowledge; what God had given him, he freely communicated; and being recovered from his falls, returned to his former happy employment of making others wiſe unto ſalvation: yea, he gave good heed, extracting all the inſtruction he could find in books or men, and well digeſting and pondering it in his own mind, and ſought out with elaborate and accurate inveſtigation the more difficult parts of ſcience, and ſet in order many proverbs, 1 Kings iv. 32. The preacher ſought to find out acceptable words, ſuch as might moſt effectually, powerfully, and pleaſingly convey the ſacred truths he laboured to inculcate; and that which was written was upright, being the dictates of God's ſpirit, even words of truth, proceeding from the God of truth.

2. The uſe and intention of his diſcourſe. The words of the wiſe are as goads, ſharp and quickning, convincing the conſcience of ſin, and ſtimulating our ſtupid hearts to diligence and activity, in working out our ſalvation: and as nails, to fix the wavering ſoul on God, faſtened by the maſters of aſſemblies, the miniſters of the goſpel, whoſe office and buſineſs it is, with ceaſeleſs labour, to inculcate theſe words of truth, which are given from the one ſhepherd, who alone can make their miniſtry effectual, to the converſion of men's ſouls; and he hath promiſed to be with us always, even unto the end of the world. In dependance upon him, therefore, muſt we go forth, and confidently expect to be aſſiſted by him, and made ſucceſsful in the preaching of his goſpel.

3. The Bible is the book of books; compared with this, all others are inſignificant, and whatever correſponds not herewith, is carefully to be avoided. And further, my ſon, by theſe be admoniſhed, read, mark, learn, and inwardly digeſt theſe ſacred truths; or of what is more than theſe, beware, and affect not to be wiſe above what is written, and reject every writing that pretends to add unto, or diminiſh from, what is revealed in the word of God: of making many books there is no end; it is vain to expect conviction from any other book, if the book of God doth not produce it; and though our ſtudy was crammed with writings of philoſophy and morality, one page of God's word ſpeaks with more power, authority, and evidence, to the conſcience, than theſe numberleſs volumes; and much ſtudy is a wearineſs to the fleſh; the compoſing, or reading human works with fixed attention, wearies both the mind and body; but the ſtudy of the book of God, is as pleaſing as it is profitable.

Before Chriſt 977.

13. ¶ † Let us hear the concluſion of the whole matter, [n] Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. 14. For [o] God ſhall bring every work into judgment, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil.

† Or the end of the matter, even all that hath been heard is, &c.
[n] Deut. vi. 2. & x. 12.
[o] Chap. xi. 16. & xiv. 10. 1 Cor. iv. 5. 2 Cor. v. 10.

v. 13, 14. Behold here reduced to a ſingle point the ſum of true religion, the certain means of happineſs, and the great end of man. Let us hear the concluſion of the matter, fear God, and keep his commandments; the one the principle, the other the practice, which neceſſarily flows from it. The fear of God comprehends all ſerious godlineſs, a reverence of his majeſty, a deference to his authority, and a dread of his diſpleaſure, and this will engage us to keep his commandments diligently, conſtantly, univerſally; making conſcience of all our ways, and ſeeking to have them more exactly conformed to that perfect rule he hath preſcribed. Two things are urged to enforce this,

1. The conſideration how much it is our bounden duty thus to fear and ſerve him. This is the whole duty of man, it is the great end of his creation, and ſhould be his firſt concern; or this is the whole man, he is then truly bleſſed and happy; which, without true godlineſs, all the world, or the things in it, can never make him.

2. The conſideration of the judgment approaching. For God ſhall bring every work into judgment; and of what infinite moment then muſt it be to us, how we ſhall appear at his bar, where, according to our deeds, our eternity muſt be determined for endleſs joys, or everlaſting burnings! God ſees and marks all our ways, with every ſecret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil; before the aſſembled world of men or angels they will be produced, and judgment, according to the truth, be executed. Happy they who keep this great day ever in their view, feel the impreſſion of it deep upon their hearts, reſtraining them from evil, quickning them in their courſe, ſupporting them under trials, and engaging them to perſevere faithful unto death; they ſhall have great boldneſs in the day of judgment, be counted worthy to ſtand before the Son of Man, and be admitted into the everlaſting joy of their Lord.

The End of the Book of ECCLESIASTES.

THE

EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;

OR, A

PRACTICAL COMMENT

UPON THE

SONG of SOLOMON.

ALL ſcripture we are ſure is given by inſpiration of God, and is profitable for the ſupport and advancement of the intereſts of his kingdom among men; and it is never the leſs ſo for there being found in it ſome things dark and hard to be underſtood, which they that are unlearned and unſtable wreſt to their own deſtruction. In our belief both of the divine extraction and of the ſpiritual expoſition of this book, we are confirmed by the antient, conſtant, and concurring teſtimony both of the church of the Jews, to whom were committed the oracles of God, and who never made any doubt of the authority of this book, and of the Chriſtian church, which happily ſucceeds them in that truſt and honour. 1. It muſt be confeſſed on the one hand, that if he that barely reads this book be aſked as the eunuch was, Underſtandeſt thou what thou readeſt? he will have more reaſon than he had to ſay, How can I, except ſome man ſhall guide me? The books of ſcripture-hiſtory and prophecy are very like one another, but this Song of Solomon's is very unlike the ſongs of his father David; here is not the name of God in it, it is never quoted in the New Teſtament, we find not in it any expreſſions of natural religion, or pious devotion, no, nor is it introduced by viſion, or any of the marks of immediate revelation: it ſeems as hard as any part of ſcripture to be made a ſavour of life unto life, nay, and to thoſe who come to the reading of it with carnal minds and corrupt affections it is in danger of being made a ſavour of death unto death: it is a flower out of which they extract poiſon; and therefore the Jewiſh doctors adviſed their young people not to read it till they were thirty years old, leſt by the abuſe of that which is moſt pure and ſacred (horrendum dictu!) the flames of luſt ſhould be kindled with fire from heaven, which is intended for the altar only. But, 2. It muſt be confeſſed on the other hand, that with the help of the many faithful guides we have for the underſtanding of this book, it appears to be a very bright and powerful ray of heavenly light, admirably fitted to excite pious and devout affections in holy ſouls, to draw out their deſires towards God, to increaſe their delight in him, and improve their acquaintance and communion with him. It is an allegory, the letter of which kills thoſe who reſt in that and look no further, but the ſpirit of which giveth life, 2 Cor. iii. 6. John vi. 63. It is a parable, which makes divine things more difficult to thoſe who do not love them, but more plain and pleaſant to thoſe that do, Matth. xiii. 14, 16. experienced chriſtians here find a counterpart of their experiences, and to them it is intelligible; while they neither underſtand it, nor reliſh it, who have no part or lot in the matter. It is a ſong, an Epithalamium or nuptial ſong, wherein by the expreſſions of love between a bridegroom and his bride, is ſet forth and illuſtrated, the mutual affections that paſs between God and a diſtinguiſhed remnant of mankind. Now, (1.) This ſong might eaſily be taken in a ſpiritual ſenſe by the Jewiſh church, for whoſe uſe it was firſt compoſed, and was ſo taken, as appears by the Chaldee Paraphraſe, and the moſt ancient Jewiſh expoſitors. God betrothed the people of Iſrael to himſelf, he entered into covenant with them, and it was a marriage covenant. He had given abundant proofs of his love to them, and required of them that they ſhould love him with all their heart and ſoul. Idolatry was often ſpoken of as a ſpiritual adultery and doating upon idols; to prevent which, this ſong was penned, repreſenting the complacency God took in Iſrael, and which Iſrael ought to take in God, and encouraging them to continue faithful to him, though he might ſeem ſometimes to withdraw and hide himſelf from them, and to wait for the further manifeſtation of himſelf in the promiſed Meſſiah. (2.) It may more eaſily be taken in a ſpiritual ſenſe by the Chriſtian church, becauſe the condeſcenſions and communications of divine love appear more rich and free under the goſpel than they did under the law, and the communion between heaven and earth more familiar.

God ſometimes ſpoke of himſelf as the huſband of the Jewiſh church, Iſa. lxiv. 5. Hoſ. ii. 16, 19. and rejoiced in it as his bride, Iſa. lxii. 4, 5. But more frequently is Chriſt repreſented as the bridegroom of his church, Matth. xxv. 1. Rom. vii. 4, 2 Cor. xi. 2. Eph. v. 32. and the church as the bride, the Lamb's wife, Rev. xix. 7. xxi. 2, 9. Purſuant to this metaphor, Chriſt and the church in general, Chriſt and particular believers, are here diſcourſing with abundance of mutual eſteem and endearment. The beſt key to this book is the 45th pſalm, which we find applied to Chriſt in the New Teſtament, and therefore this ought to be ſo too. It requires ſome pains to find out what may probably be the meaning of the Holy Spirit in the ſeveral parts of this book; as David's ſongs are many of them level to the capacity of the meaneſt, and there are ſhallows in them in which a lamb may wade; ſo this of Solomon's will exerciſe the capacities of the moſt learned, and there are depths in it, in which an elephant may ſwim. But when the meaning is found out, it will be of admirable uſe to excite pious and devout affections in us; and the ſame truths which are plainly laid down in other ſcriptures, when they are extracted out of this, come to the ſoul with a more pleaſing power. When we apply ourſelves to the ſtudy of this book, we muſt not only, with Moſes and Joſhua, put off our ſhoe from off our foot, and even forget that we have bodies, becauſe the place where we ſtand is holy ground; but we muſt, with John, come up hither, muſt ſpread our wings, take a noble flight and ſoar upwards, till by faith and holy love we enter into the holieſt, for this is no other than the houſe of God, and this is the gate of heaven.

Before Chriſt 1014.

CHAP. I.

In this chapter, after the title of the book, ver. 1. we have Chriſt and his church, Chriſt and a believer, expreſſing their eſteem for each other. 1. The bride, the church, ſpeaks to the bridegroom, ver. 2, 3, 4. to the daughters of Jeruſalem, ver. 5, 6. and then to the Bridegroom, ver. 7. 2. Chriſt the Bridegroom ſpeaks in anſwer to the complaints and requeſt of his ſpouſe, ver. 8—11. 3. The church expreſſeth the great value ſhe has for Chriſt, and the delight ſhe takes in communion with him, ver. 12—14. 4. Chriſt commends the church's beauty, ver. 15. And, 5. The church returns the recommendation, ver. 16, 17. Where there is a fire of true love to Chriſt in the heart, this will be of uſe to blow it up into a flame.

[a] 1 Kings iv. 32.

1. [a] THE ſong of ſongs, which is Solomon's.

v. 1. We have here,

1. The title of the book, The ſong of ſongs; the moſt excellent of all that ever were compoſed, both reſpecting the matter of which it treats, the love of Chriſt and his church, and the manner of its execution, which is moſt elegant and beautiful.

2. The penman, which is Solomon, inſpired by the Holy Ghoſt, or concerning Solomon, the Divine Redeemer, of whom he was a type, the Prince of peace, the God of love, who makes his people happy in communion with himſelf; and in the ſenſe of his favour, gives them a joy and happineſs, which the world knoweth not of.

[b] Luke xv. 20.
[c] Chap. iv. 10.
† Heb. Loves.
[d] 2 Cor. ii. 14.
[e] 1 Pet. ii. 7.
[f] Hoſ. xi. 4. John vi. 44. & xii. 32.
[g] Phil. iii. 12—14.
[h] Pſ. xlv. 14, 15. Eph. ii. 6.
‡ Or they love thee uprightly.
[i] 1 Theſ. ii. 3.
[k] Mat. x. 21, 36.

2. [b] Let him kiſs me with the kiſſes of his mouth: for [c] thy † love is better than wine. 3. Becauſe of [d] the ſavour of thy good ointments, [e] thy name is as ointment poured forth, therefore do the virgins love thee. 4.
[f] Draw me, [g] we will run after thee: the king [h] hath brought me into his chambers: we will be glad and rejoice in thee, we will remember thy love more than wine:
‡ the upright love thee. 5. I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon. 6. Look not upon me, becauſe [i] I am black, becauſe the ſun hath looked upon me: [k] my mothers children were angry with me, they made me the keeper of the vineyards, but mine own vineyard have I not kept.

v. 2—6. Filled with a tranſport of delight and love in contemplating the glorious object of her affections, the church,

1. With abrupt addreſs, as enraptured with the ſight of her beloved, breaks forth, Let him kiſs me with the kiſſes of his mouth, as a token of reconciliation, which the ſinner above all things deſires; who, trembling under the ſenſe of guilt, cries for pardon, and begs that God would ſeal it to his ſoul, and make him rejoice in the comfort of it, by giving ſome ſweet manifeſtation of himſelf, and ſhedding abroad his love in the heart: for thy love is better than wine, more pleaſing to the ſoul than the moſt delicious wine to the palate, and more reviving and exhilerating than the richeſt cordial, as they who have taſted it find by delightful experience. Becauſe of the ſavour of thy good ointments, the unction from the Holy One, the fulneſs of divine grace reſident in Jeſus, and from him communicated to his people, thy name is as ointment poured forth, diffuſing the moſt delightful fragrance, and making glad the heart of the miſerable, who beholds in Jeſus a Saviour of ſinners, and in Immanuel, God with us, an all-ſufficient Saviour; therefore do the virgins love thee, engaged by his excellence, and longing for nearer and more intimate communion of ſpirit with him; and virgins, in the purity of their affections, the fidelity of their attachment, and their beauty and comelineſs as arrayed in his righteouſneſs, and adorned with the graces of his ſpirit.

Before Chriſt 1014.

2. She prays to experience freſh conſtrainings of divine love. Draw me with the cords of love, for we are weak and impotent, unable to follow Jeſus one ſtep farther, than his everlaſting arms are under us, and his effectual grace ſtrengthens us; and then we will run after thee, with warm affection and eager deſire; and from experience of the ſweetneſs of the way, ſhall be inviting others to come with us, and taſte how good the Lord is.

3. She acknowledges the favourable anſwer given her requeſts. They are no ſooner offered than granted. The King, the anointed Redeemer, the eternal Prince and Saviour, the glorious bridegroom, hath brought me into his chambers, graciouſly condeſcending to take the ſinful ſoul into neareſt union with himſelf, and putting it in poſſeſſion of all the riches of divine grace ſtored up for the uſe of his redeemed: well therefore may ſuch a one ſay, we will be glad and rejoice in thee; in ourſelves we have nothing to rejoice in, much to be aſhamed of, much to lament, but in Jeſus we have the moſt abundant cauſe for joy unſpeakable and full of glory, both in his perſon, offices, and relation to us; and on account of what he hath done, is doing, and will do for us. We will remember thy love more than wine; his love was more grateful than the moſt exquiſite wines, which at feaſts ſo eagerly are ſought; and the remembrance of it, not like the impreſſions made on our ſenſes that quickly die away, but deep engraven on the ſoul, and the delightful ſenſe of it continually abiding: O that this were more our own bleſſed experience! The upright love thee; this is the character of the bridegroom's friends; their ſouls are renewed by grace, God's word is their rule, love is their principle, holineſs their path, and glory their end; when they who now love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in ſincerity, ſhall then love him in perfection, ſhall dwell in love, ſhall dwell in God, and God in them.

4. She addreſſes herſelf to the daughters of Jeruſalem, owns her native and acquired defilement, yet points them to that comelineſs with which notwithſtanding ſhe is arrayed. I am black as the ſooty tents of Kedar, black with original guilt, indwelling ſin, actual tranſgreſſions, and manifold infirmities; black with perſecutions, reproaches, afflictions, ſufferings; becauſe the ſun hath looked upon me, as thoſe who are expoſed to its ſcorching beams have their ſkins diſcoloured: my mother's children were angry with me; for uſually from falſe brethren, and carnal profeſſors, the ſevereſt trials of the faithful come; they made me keeper of the vineyards, conſtrained to compliance with their falſe ways and worſhip, or ſeduced by temptation, and compelled to toil under the ſervice of corruption: but mine own vineyard have I not kept; with ſhame, like a true penitent, whom we muſt imitate, ſhe acknowledges her neglects and departures from God. Yet notwithſtanding, ſhe can ſay, Look not upon me, becauſe I am black, with an eye of contempt or diſdain; for amidſt all my infirmities and ſuffering, I am comely as the curtains of Solomon, comely in the eyes of God, ſprinkled with the blood, cloathed with the righteouſneſs, adorned with the graces of the Divine Redeemer, ſhining in patience amidſt the darkneſs of affliction; and coming from the furnace of perſecution bright as ſilver purified ſeven times in the fire.

7. Tell me, O thou whom my ſoul loveth, [l] where thou feedeſt, where thou makeſt thy flock to reſt at noon:
for why ſhould I be as one that † turneth aſide by the flocks of thy companions? 8. ¶ If thou know not, [m] O thou faireſt among women, [n] go thy way forth by the footſteps of the flock, and feed thy kids beſide the [l] Pſ. xxiii. 1, &c.

† Or is veiled.
[m] Chap. v. 9. & vi. 1.
[n] Prov. ii. 20. 1 Cor. xi. 1.

ſhepherds tents. 9. I have compared thee, O my [o] love, to a company of horſes in Pharoah's chariots. 10. [p] Thy cheeks are comely with rows of jewels, thy neck with chains of gold. 11. [q] We will make thee borders of gold with ſtuds of ſilver.

[o] Chap. ii. 2, 10, 13. & iv. 1, 7. & v. 2. & vi. 4. John xv. 14, 15.
[p] Ezek. xvi. 11—13.
[q] Gen. i. 26.

v. 7—11. We find here the Lord for a while departed, and his church, through her unfaithfulneſs, left to lament his abſence, and anew to ſeek his face.

1. She earneſtly enquires after him, and pleads hard for his returning favour. Tell me, O thou whom my ſoul loveth with unfeigned affection; for though by temptation the exerciſe of grace may be interrupted, there is a habit of love ſtill abiding in all true believers hearts; and when they return to ſeek his face, notwithſtanding their falls, they can ſay with Peter, Lord, thou knoweſt that I love thee; therefore tell me where thou feedeſt the flock of thy paſture, where thou makeſt it to reſt at noon, that my ſoul may be with thee, enjoy thy preſence, join in thine ordinances, ſit under thy ſhadow, and again be refreſhed with the ſenſe of thy love; for till this be the caſe, a child of God, who hath turned aſide, can find no reſt unto his ſoul: for why ſhould I be as one that turneth aſide by the flocks of thy companions? who pretend to be ſuch, but are really hypocritical and heretical, teaching doctrines of lies and deluſion; and to be ſuffered to be ſeduced by them, nay, but to be ſuſpected of leaning towards ſuch falſe teachers, could not be thought of by the faithful ſoul without grief and anguiſh; and ſurely it ſhall not be; for,

2. The dear Redeemer quickly anſwers her enquiry, and points her to the paths of peace: none err fatally who look to him for direction. If thou know not, or ſeeing thou knoweſt not, the way, bewildered through ignorance, or ſeduced from it by temptation, O thou faireſt among women; ſuch an endearing title does he give her, as ſuch he regards her; and though the church, and every member in their own apprehenſions, bluſh at their deformity, and are confounded at their backſlidings, yet Jeſus is invariable in his regards, and delights in the beauty of righteouſneſs imputed and impreſſed, the comelineſs with which he hath arrayed his redeemed; and theſe he will guide and lead aright; go thy way forth by the footſteps of the flock, be found in the ordinances of Divine worſhip, and mark the good old way in which holy men have walked, and the faithful continue to follow them, and feed thy kids beſides the ſhepherds tents; attend the miniſtry of thoſe who labour in the word and doctrine, and lay themſelves out in the ſervice of immortal ſouls: nor ſhould they who have the charge of others come alone, their children, relations, ſervants ſhould be encouraged to draw near the ſhepherds tents, the courts of the ſanctuary.

3. Chriſt expreſſes his high regard to his church: I have compared thee, my love, (ſo tender an appellation doth he give to thoſe who in themſelves are ſo unworthy of his regard) to a company of horſes in Pharoah's chariots; the moſt beautiful of their kind, adorned with trappings, and drawing with mutual and united efforts. Thy cheeks are comely with rows of jewels, thy neck with chains of gold; beautified with the graces, gifts, and conſolations of the ſpirit, more precious than the richeſt jewels, and ſhining brighter than burniſhed gold: and greater glories ſtill are in ſtore for her; he who hath decked her in theſe bright ornaments will add thereunto. We will make thee borders of gold with ſtuds of ſilver, that ſhe may be compleat and perfect, lacking nothing, eſpecially in the great day of conſummation, when ſhe ſhall be preſented in the beauty of holineſs before the throne of God: and this is the work of the ſacred Three.

12. ¶ [r] While the king ſitteth at his table, my ſpikenard ſendeth forth the ſmell thereof. 13. A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me; he ſhall lie all night [s] betwixt my breaſts. 14. My beloved is unto me as a cluſter of † camphire in the vineyards of En-gedi. 15. [t] Behold, thou art fair, my ‡ love; behold, thou art fair, thou haſt doves eyes. 16. Behold, thou art fair, my beloved, yea, pleaſant: alſo our bed is green. 17. The beams of our houſe are cedar, and our § rafters of fir.

[r] John xii. 2, 3.
[s] Eph. iii. 17.
† Or, cypreſs. Chap. iv. 13.
[t] Chap. iv. 1. & v. 12.
‡ Or, companion.
§ Or, galleries.

v. 12—17. We have here the communion maintained between Chriſt and his church.

1. She expreſſes her loyalty and affection towards him, her huſband and Lord. When the king ſitteth at his table: he is a king, reigning from eternity, and in a peculiar manner hath eſtabliſhed his throne in the hearts of his people who ſubmit to his government, and are ſafe and happy under his protection: he is infinitely condeſcending, ſitting at his table, inviting the poor and miſerable ſinner to come and partake of all his rich proviſion of goſpel grace, and giving them the kindeſt reception, who in faith and love draw near at his bidding; and when he manifeſts his preſence in the midſt of his people, then my ſpikenard ſendeth forth the ſmell thereof; the graces of his ſaints are in lively exerciſe, their faith ſtrong, their love ardent, their zeal flaming; and this is to him a ſavour of a ſweet ſmell, more pleaſing than the moſt fragrant ſpices. A bundle of myrrh is my well-beloved unto me; beloved, well-beloved, beſt beloved; compared with Chriſt, a gracious ſoul may be ſaid to hate every thing beſides: he ſhall lie all night betwixt my breaſts, conſtantly embraced with the warmeſt affections of her heart, and yielding a joy preferable to the ſweeteſt perfume placed in the boſom, till the night of time ſhall give place to the riſing morning of eternal day. My beloved is unto me as a cluſter of camphire in the vineyards of En-gedi. The word tranſlated camphire is of dubious ſignification; ſome ſuppoſe it to ſignify dates, which grew in plenty there; others the cyprus vine; it is elſewhere rendered a propitiation: the ſenſe is evident, that Chriſt is ineſtimably precious; all fullneſs of excellence reſides in him; his atonement, righteouſneſs, and grace, are more delightful to the heart than the ſweeteſt camphire to the ſmell, or the moſt delicious cluſter of grapes to the taſte.

2. Chriſt teſtifies his complacence in her, well-pleaſed with the profeſſion of her warm attachment to him. Behold, and moſt worthy it is of a note of admiration, that we who are by nature ſo defiled, ſhould be regarded thus by the God of purity; behold, thou art fair, my love: the words ſpeak Chriſt's gracious regard and tender affection towards his people; and they are fair, becauſe he hath put his own comelineſs upon them in robes of righteouſneſs, and garments of ſalvation; behold, thou art fair; ſtrange and ſcarce credible as it may ſeem, conſidering our native pollution, and the evil of our ways, he repeats it to aſſure us ſo it is, and what the king is pleaſed to call a man, that is his name: thou haſt doves eyes; the piercing eyes of faith, the modeſt eye of ſimplicity, and dove-like innocence. Note, (1.) However contemptible in the eyes of others, or loathed in their own, a believer may be, he is precious in the eyes of his Lord. (2.) We muſt remember, however our dear Lord is pleaſed to account of us, or whatever good we poſſeſs, it is all of grace, we have nothing we have not received.

3. The church echoes back the words of her ſpouſe, with mutual profeſſions of like endearment. Behold, thou art fair, my beloved: the faithful ſcarce know how to admit this character to themſelves, but to their dear Lord with greateſt propriety it belongs; he is fair indeed, in uncreated beauty; he is the ſun without a ſpot; ſhe but the moon, who borrows all her light and beauty from him; yea, pleaſant, ever ſhining on his choſen with cheriſhing rays; no frowns cloud his brow, but the endearing ſmiles of tenderneſs make glad their hearts continually; and all his promiſes are Yea and Amen, ſpeaking peace and joy to their ſouls: alſo our bed is green; between huſband and wife there is a community of goods; when we are Chriſt's, all his things are ours: the bed is the church of the redeemed, where the faithful aſſemble to meet their Lord in the ordinances of his ſervice; and green, to denote the pleaſantneſs of the courts of the Lord's houſe, or the numerous converts that are collected therein, or the flouriſhing ſtate of their ſouls. The beams of our houſe are cedar, and our rafters of fir, or galleries; which may refer to the miniſters of the goſpel, who under Chriſt ſupport the glorious fabric; or to the ſaints in general, whoſe ſtability, and gratefulneſs to him, are hereby ſhadowed forth.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter, 1. Chriſt ſpeaks both concerning himſelf, and concerning his church, ver. 1, 2. 2. The church ſpeaks, (1.) Remembering the pleaſure and ſatisfaction ſhe had in communion with Chriſt, ver. 3, 4. (2.) Entertaining herſelf with the preſent tokens of his favour, and taking care that nothing happen to intercept them, ver. 5—7. (3.) Triumphing in his approaches towards her, ver. 8, 9. (4.) Repeating the gracious calls he had given her to go along with him, invited by the pleaſures of the returning ſpring, ver. 10—13. out of her obſcurity, ver. 14. and the charge he had given to the ſervants to deſtroy that which would be hurtful to his vineyard, ver. 15. (5.) Rejoicing in her intereſt in him, ver. 16. (6.) Longing for his arrival, ver. 17. They whoſe hearts are filled with love to Chriſt and hope of heaven, know beſt what theſe things mean.

1. I Am the roſe of Sharon, and the lily of the vallies. 2. [a] As the lily among thorns, ſo is my love among the daughters. 3. As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, ſo is my beloved among the ſons. † I ſat down [b] under his ſhadow with great delight, and [c] his fruit was ſweet to my taſte. 4. He brought me to ‡ the banqueting houſe, and [d] his banner over me was love. 5. Stay me with flagons, § comfort me with apples; for I am [e] ſick of love. 6. [f] His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me. 7. [g] I ‖ charge you, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, by the roes and by the hinds of the field, that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my love till he pleaſe.

[a] Mat. x. 16.
† Heb. I delighted and ſat down, &c.
[b] Iſa. xxxii. 2.
[c] 1 Pet. ii. 3. Rev. xxii. 2.
‡ Heb. The houſe of wine.
[d] Rom. v. 5.
§ Heb. Straw me with apples.
[e] Pſ. cxix. 81.
[f] Chap. viii. 3. Eph. v. 29.
[g] Chap. iii. 5. & viii. 4.
‖ Heb. Adjure.

Before Chriſt 1014.

v. 1—7. We have here,

1. The heavenly bridegroom deſcribing his own excellence, and the beauty of his bride: I am the roſe of Sharon, and the lily of the vallies; all perfections center in him; his perſon adorned with that fulneſs of the ſpirit, which God without meaſure gave unto him; his humanity white as the lily, without ſpot of ſin; bluſhing as the roſe, when on the bloody tree he made the atonement; in the purity of his life, and in the ſacrifice of his death, diffuſing a fragrance moſt acceptable, and well-pleaſing to God; and from which we derive all the ſweetneſs of the great and precious promiſes which grow in the garden of the everlaſting covenant of grace. As the lily among the thorns, ſo is my love among the daughters; ſhe reſembles him, therefore is beloved by him; he ſees in her his own image, and delights in it. Among the thorns of evil men, and a world lying in wickedneſs, does this lily grow, and as infinitely preferable to them as that ſweet flower in look and ſmell exceeds the briars of the field.

2. The ſpouſe returns the commendations on her beloved, and profeſſes her joy in him, her dependance upon him, her ſollicitude to pleaſe him.

(1.) She prefers him before all others. As the apple-tree among the trees of the wood, ſo is my beloved among the ſons; none of the ſons of men on earth, none of the ſons of the mighty in heaven, are to be compared with the Lord; when he ſtands forth in his tranſcendent beauty, they hide their diminiſhed heads.

(2.) She declares the delight ſhe had in his preſence and company. I ſat down under his ſhadow with great delight; Chriſt is the ſhadow of a great rock in a weary land; the ſinful ſoul, ſcorched with the fire of wrath, flies thither, and finds a happy reſting place: under his ſhadow are pardon, peace, and joy, protection from danger, and poſſeſſion of every deſire of the ſoul. Bleſſed and happy are they who there take up their abode. And his fruit was ſweet to my taſte: they who by faith feed on Chriſt, will find the promiſes of his word, the gifts of his grace, and the manifeſtations of his love moſt delightful, ſweeter than honey and the honeycomb. He brought me to the banqueting-houſe; led me thither by the hand of his effectual grace, where the richeſt proviſion of every bleſſing a miſerable ſinner can need, was provided; and his banner over me was love; love boundleſs and infinite contrived and executed the plan of man's ſalvation: love reared the banner of the everlaſting goſpel, inviting loſt ſouls to Jeſus, the captain of their ſalvation; love ſweetly, powerfully, engages them to liſt under his colours; love conſtrains, emboldens, enables them to fight under his ſtandard, and be more than conquerors. Lord, over me diſplay this banner of thy love!

(3.) She profeſſes the fervency of her love. Stay me with flagons, comfort me with apples; for I am ſick of love; overcome with the ſenſe of the amazing grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt; and, like the ſpirit of Jacob, fainting with joy at the glad tidings; or ſick with the vehement deſires, which nothing but a ſenſe of Chriſt's preſence and love could ſatisfy; and therefore deſiring a manifeſtation of his favour, to revive the drooping ſoul, as flagons of wine reſtore the fainting ſpirits.

(4.) She acknowledges the ready anſwer vouchſafed to her requeſt. His left hand is under my head, and his right hand doth embrace me; though for a while dejected, and deſtitute of ſpiritual delight, the believer ſhall ſtill experience Divine ſupports: Chriſt will keep his people ſafe in his everlaſting arms; and they who look to him to be kept, none ſhall ever be able to pluck them out of his hands.

(5.) She expreſſes her ſollicitude to preſerve her communion with the Lord. I charge you, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, all the members of the church of Chriſt, by the roes and by the hinds of the field, by every thing that is dear and deſirable, that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my love till he pleaſe, by any quarrels and unchriſtian diſputes among yourſelves, or by your ſins provoking him to depart. He may if he pleaſes, without any cauſe, withdraw from us a ſenſe of his love, whilſt he is in regard ſtill the ſame towards us; but we ſhould be watchful over every thing that would in anger cauſe him to ariſe and leave us. The way to keep our peace and comfort abiding, is to be careful and jealous over the evil of our own hearts.

[h] John x. 3. 8. ¶ [h] The voice of my beloved! behold, he cometh, leaping upon the mountains, ſkipping upon the hills.
[i] Ver. 17. 9. [i] My beloved is like a roe, or a young hart: behold, he ſtandeth behind our wall, he looketh forth at the † Heb. Flouriſhing. windows, † ſhewing himſelf through the latteſs. 10.
[k] Ver. 13. My beloved ſpake and ſaid unto me, [k] Riſe up, my love, my fair one, and come away. 11. For lo, the winter is paſt, the rain is over and gone. 12. The flowers appear on the earth, the time of the ſinging of birds is [l] Jer. viii. 7. come, and [l] the voice of the turtle is heard in our land.
13. The fig-tree putteth forth her green figs, and the [m] Ver. 10. Iſa. lx. 1. vines with the tender grape give a good ſmell. [m] Ariſe, my love, my fair one, and come away.

Before Chriſt 1014.

v. 8—13. It ſhould ſeem as if, notwithſtanding the charge given, the Lord had been diſturbed, and had withdrawn; but now returning in mercy, the church with rapture hears his voice, and welcomes his approach.

1. She triumphs in her beloved. The voice of my beloved! how pleaſing, how delightful, the well-known voice; the ſound of which makes the heart leap for joy: behold, with wonder, his amazing grace, he cometh, leaping upon the mountains, ſkipping upon the hills: thus the Old Teſtament church beheld him deſcending from the everlaſting hills to be incarnate; thus the church of Chriſt, and every believer, now behold him haſting to their relief, when mountains of guilt, corruption, and unbelief, ſeem to ſeparate them from him; and thus all his redeemed people are looking for him, when the ſecond time he ſhall bow the heavens and come down, his voice awake the dead, and his ſaints be finally triumphant in glory. My beloved is like a roe, or a young hart; ſo amiable in himſelf, ſo ſwift to fly to the relief of his redeemed: behold, he ſtandeth behind our wall, he looketh forth at the windows, ſhewing himſelf through the latteſs; ſo they beheld him before his incarnation, behind the wall of ceremonies, at the windows of his promiſes, and through the latteſs of ſacrifices, types and figures: and we ſtill ſee him through the glaſs of faith, but darkly compared with what we hope for: the vail of fleſh is between us; we get now and then a glympſe of him at the windows of his grace and promiſes, and through the latteſs of his ordinances maintain ſome near communion with him; but we expect to ſee him ſhortly face to face, and to know no more thoſe ſeparations that the body of fleſh, and more eſpecially the body of the ſins of the fleſh, now occaſion. Haſten, Lord, that happy day.

2. She relates the gracious invitation her beloved had given her. My beloved ſpake and ſaid unto me, with infinite condeſcenſion and tenderneſs, Riſe up, my love, my fair one, and come away; appellations expreſſive of the endeared affection of Jeſus, whoſe love indeed paſſeth knowledge, and the call, Riſe up, intimates the ſlumbering frame into which ſhe had fallen, and the need ſhe had to be awaked. The argument he uſes to prevail with her, is the beauty of the returning ſpring, when, winter's lowring clouds blown over, the vernal ſun decks in its gayeſt livery the earth with flowers, and every grove reſounds with feathered ſongſters; the turtle coes, the fig-tree buds, the grape ſhoots forth her tendrils, and all around breathes fragance; and this deſcription may be applied,

(1.) To the ſtate of the ſinner's ſoul, when Chriſt in the word of his goſpel comes to awaken him from the ſleep of ſpiritual death: frozen, dark, barren, and unprofitable, is the natural heart, incapable of producing bloſſoms or fruit of holineſs, till Chriſt the ſun of righteouſneſs ariſes with healing in his wings; by his mighty agency a glorious and univerſal change enſues; the ſoul is ſoftened to ſenſibility; impregnated by his bright beams of love, it teems with life, the flowers of heavenly diſpoſitions appear, the heart ſings for joy in the good ways of God, and the fruits of grace bud forth, ripening into glory.

(2.) To the ſtate of believers under their declenſions, or temptations, when ſtorms of unbelief, corruption, or deſpondence, beat againſt their ſouls, and dark nights of deſertion leave them melancholy and dejected, no comfort, no fruit of grace appears: but though it is winter, there is ſtill life in their root, and when the Lord returns, the hardneſs of their hearts diſſolves; they bud again and bloſſom as the roſe, the tears are wiped from their eyes, the voice of joy is heard, they ſing as the birds, and bring forth fruit abundantly unto eternal life. Hear then this hour, thou toſſed with tempeſt, and not comforted, hear this ſweet voice of Jeſus reiterating the call, Ariſe, my love, my fair one, and come away.

14. ¶ O my dove that art in the clefts of the rock, in the ſecret places of the ſtairs, let me ſee thy countenance, [n] let me hear thy voice; for ſweet is thy voice, [n] Chap. viii. 13.
and thy countenance is comely. 15. Take us [o] the foxes, [o] Pſ. lxxx. 13. Ezek. xiii. 14. Luke xiii. 32.
the little foxes, that ſpoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes. 16. ¶ [p] My beloved is mine, and I am [p] Chap. vi. 3. & vii. 10. Gal. ii. 20.
his: he feedeth among the lilies. 17. [q] Until the day [q] Chap. iv. 6. 2 Pet. i. 19.
break, and the ſhadows flee away: turn my beloved, and [r] be thou like a roe, or a young hart upon the [r] Ver. 9. Chap. viii. 14.
mountains [s] of † Bether. [s] 2 Sam. ii. 29. † Or, diviſion.

v. 14—17. We have here,

1. The ſame gracious invitation continued. O my dove; to which creature the believer's ſoul may be compared; timorous, through fears of guilt and conſcious weakneſs; beautiful in the feathers of ſilver, the righteouſneſs of Jeſus, and the graces of his ſpirit; meek and inoffenſive in ſpirit; chaſte and faithful to Jeſus as the turtle to her mate. In the clefts of the rocks; fled to the ſhelter of a Saviour's ſide, opened by the ſpear, a ſmall but ſure retreat. In the ſecret places of the ſtairs; hid in Chriſt, and maintaining an intercourſe with him the world knoweth not of: or theſe expreſſions may intimate her guilty fears that led her to hide her head, and ſeek, like Adam in the garden, a covert from her conſcious ſhame; from which retirement therefore Chriſt would draw her forth: Let me ſee thy countenance, be not afraid or aſhamed to come with open face into the aſſembly of the ſaints, where Jeſus manifeſts his preſence; let me hear thy voice in prayer and praiſe; for ſweet is thy voice; inharmonious as to us it may appear, and unworthy as we think ourſelves to open our polluted lips before him, he graciouſly condeſcends well-pleaſed to accept our liſpings; and thy countenance is comely; loathſome as we ſeem in our own eyes, and covering our faces with confuſion in the duſt, he wipes away the defilement, and transforming us into his own image, delights in the beauties he beſtows.

2. A charge is given to ſeize and remove what was hurtful to the vineyard. Take us the foxes; which may be the words of the church, directed to her miniſters, or rather of Chriſt to his ſervants. By foxes are meant falſe teachers, who with much fair ſpeeches deceive the hearts of the unwary, and introduce errors, hereſies, and ſchiſms into the church; even the little foxes, that muſt be cruſhed in their neſt, that ſpoil the vines; corrupting the faith, debauching the morals, and debaſing the diſcipline of the church: for our vines have tender grapes; young converts, whoſe tender years, or weak attainments, need an eſpecial guard againſt the wiles of deceivers. Note, Every corruption in the heart is a little fox, that would rob us of our comfort, and threatens to root up the vine of grace; we muſt watch over them therefore, and check the motions of evil in the birth.

3. The church exults in her intereſt in her Lord. My beloved is mine; mine as the gift of God; the faithful bridegroom united in bonds of an everlaſting covenant; mine in poſſeſſion and enjoyment, all his things are mine; his righteouſneſs, grace, glory are mine, and I am his, the creature of his hand, the purchaſe of his blood; renewed by his ſpirit, by choice devoted to him, ſubſervient to his will, zealous for his intereſt, and living in love and duty for him alone: he feedeth among the lilies, manifeſting himſelf in the midſt of his people, beautiful as the lilies; or, crowned with wreaths of this ſweet flower, as a ſhepherd he watches over the flock of his paſture, and feeds them with his divine conſolations.

4. She expreſſes her expectation of his ſpeedy coming. Until the day break, and the ſhadows flee away; ſo long God's covenant with his choſen continues, whilſt day and night endureth; or ſo long he feedeth the flock of his paſture, till the day of eternity breaks, and the night of time is fled: or, connected with the following clauſe, the words are a prayer for Chriſt's appearing, either incarnate to his Old Teſtament ſaints, or in the manifeſtation of his love to the faithful, labouring under darkneſs and deſertion, or in his glory at the great day of final conſummation, when all the ſhadows of remaining ignorance, infirmity, affliction, will be for ever fled away, and one eternal day of light, joy, and bleſſedneſs unutterable ſucceed: turn, my beloved, unto me, be thou like a roe, or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether, or of ſeparation; ſwift as the bounding roe, fly to relieve me from the pains of abſence, and let no mountains ſeparate my ſoul from thee; come with the comforts of thy love below, or take me to the enjoyment of thy bleſſed ſelf above! Amen!

CHAP. III.

In this chapter, 1. The church earneſtly ſeeks, and happily finds her beloved, who had withdrawn, ver. 1—5. 2. The daughters of Jeruſalem admire the excellencies of the church, ver. 6. 3. The church admires Jeſus Chriſt under the perſon of Solomon, his bed, and the life-guards about it, ver. 7, 8. His chariot, ver. 9, 10. And calls upon the daughters of Sion, who were admiring her, to admire him rather, eſpecially as he appeared on his coronation-day, and the day of his nuptials, ver. 11.

a Iſa. xxvi. 9. 1. [a] BY night on my bed I ſought him whom my ſoul loveth: I ſought him, but I found him not.
2. I will riſe now, and go about the city in the ſtreets, and in the broad ways I will ſeek him whom my ſoul b Chap. v. 7. Iſa. lvi. 10. loveth: I ſought him, but I found him not. 3. [b] The watchmen that go about the city, found me: to whom I ſaid, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth? 4. It was but a little that I paſſed from them, but I found him c Gen. xxxii. 26. Matt. xxviii. 9. whom my ſoul loveth: [c] I held him, and would not let him go, until I had brought him into [d] my mother's d Gal. iv. 26. houſe, and into the chamber of her that conceived me.
e Chap. ii. 7. & viii. 4. 5. [e] I charge you, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that ye ſtir not up, f Ibid. viii. 5. nor awake my love, till he pleaſe. 6. ¶ [f] Who is this that cometh out of the wilderneſs like pillars of ſmoke, perfumed with myrrh, and frankincenſe, with all powders of the merchant?

v. 1—6. Though none ever ſought God's face in vain, yet ſometimes he is a God that hideth himſelf, to ſtir up our diligence, and exerciſe our faith and patience in ſeeking him. We have,

1. The church ſeeking her Lord. By night upon my bed; either this refers to the Moſaical diſpenſation, when, comparatively, darkneſs covered the earth; or to the condition of the faithful in every age, who know ſome dark ſeaſons when they lament after an abſent Chriſt; or this ſignifies the dull and ſluggiſh frame into which ſhe had fallen through ſloth and worldly eaſe, which had provoked the Saviour to withdraw; yet whatever declenſions had grown upon her, ſhe could ſtill ſay, I ſought him whom my ſoul loveth; her love was true, though grown cold, and though with too much lukewarmneſs ſhe continued to ſeek him: I ſought him, but I found him not, as the puniſhment of her unfaithfulneſs, or becauſe ſhe uſed ſo little importunity in the purſuit, her prayers negligent, her attention in the ordinances diſtracted, and her ears dull of hearing.

2. Perceiving her deadneſs and diſtance from him, in the power of Divine grace, ſhe reſolves more earneſtly to ſeek his face. I will riſe now from the bed of ſloth, and without delay go about the city in the ſtreets, and in the broad ways I will ſeek him whom my ſoul loveth; diſcouraged by no difficulties, and perſevering notwithſtanding repeated diſappointments, diligent in the uſe of every appointed means, and in ſome of his holy ordinances hoping at laſt to meet him: I ſought him, but I found him not; that melancholy ſtrain is repeated, and paints the anguiſh of her diſappointment: we muſt not however give over, if we do not meet in the way of duty with all the comfort we expected, but patiently wait, and be found ſtill in God's way. Therefore,

3. She applies to the watchmen of the city, whom ſhe met, for information; the miniſters of the word, whoſe office and buſineſs it is to direct poor wandering ſouls to Jeſus; they found me bewildered in my ſearch, and as they appeared ſolicitous and able to direct my ſteps, I ſaid, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth? no other deſcription was neceſſary, the object of her longing regards was known to them. Note, (1.) They who are under ſoul diſtreſs, are bound to apply to the miniſters of Chriſt, whoſe advice he will bleſs to their relief. (2.) A ſoul that knows the value of the Lord Jeſus, will never reſt ſeeking till it finds him.

4. This was the bleſſed caſe of the diſtreſſed church. It was but a little that I paſſed from them; obſerving probably the directions they had given, though their anſwer is not mentioned; or when means and miniſters all failed, Chriſt came to anſwer all her importunate deſires; I found him whom my ſoul loveth: none ever were at laſt diſappointed, who in patient perſeverance ſought his face; and the longer our comfort hath been delayed, the more diſappointments we have encountered, the ſweeter will it be at laſt, when all the deſires of our hearts ſhall be granted, and our ſouls filled with his love.

5. Having found him, ſhe reſolved now to keep him, and never more to part from him. I held him in the arms of faith and love, and would not let him go; he ſeemed reluctant to ſtay, yet meant only to excite her importunity, and exerciſe her graces; until I had brought him into my mother's houſe, and into the chambers of her who conceived me; which may ſignify either that the ſoul who finds the Lord Jeſus, will make open profeſſion of him in the viſible church, which may be regarded as our common mother; or that the faithful will abidingly hold faſt on Chriſt, during all the trials of their militant ſtate on earth, till he ſhall bring them to that Jeruſalem which is above, which is the mother of us all.

6. She gives a ſolemn charge not to diſturb her Lord. Thoſe who have felt the pains of abſence will be more peculiarly jealous, leaſt they ſhould again provoke the Saviour to depart from them. I charge you, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my love, till he pleaſe, neither ſpeak nor move ſo as to offend him, but, watchfully obſervant of whatever would diſturb or diſpleaſe him, keep your hearts with all diligence. Note, They who would keep Chriſt when they have found him, muſt be careful how they walk, and ſolicitous to pleaſe him well in all things.

7. The daughters of Jeruſalem, on beholding this happy meeting of Chriſt and his church, break forth into an enquiry full of admiration. Who is this that cometh out of the wilderneſs; either the wilderneſs of corruption, in which the ſouls of all the redeemed lay, unable to extricate themſelves from the mazes of error and ſin, till Chriſt aroſe to lead them in paths of everlaſting peace; or the wilderneſs of deſertion and affliction, ſuch as was the caſe of the church juſt before, when Jeſus was abſent from her, and ſhe lamented after him; but now having found him, what a change appears! no more weeping, mourning, afflicted, ſhe lifts up her head with joy, and marches boldly on, like pillars of ſmoke, perfumed with myrrh and frankincenſe; as the ſmoke from the altar aſcended in curling volumes, ſo do her burning affections riſe up to God, and the lively exerciſe of her graces, through the nearneſs of Jeſus, gives a ſavour of a ſweet ſmell, acceptable and well pleaſing to God through Jeſus Chriſt; with all the powders of the merchant; the Redeemer is the merchant, who from afar hath brought the ſweet perfume; the graces we exerciſe, the ſervices we offer, come not from ourſelves but him; to him therefore for ever be the praiſe.

Before Chriſt 1014.

7. Behold, his bed which is Solomon's, [g] threeſcore valiant men are about it, of the valiant of Iſrael. 8. They all hold ſwords, being expert in war: every man hath his ſword upon his thigh, becauſe of fear in the night. 9. King Solomon made himſelf a † chariot of the wood of Lebanon. 10. He made the pillars thereof of ſilver, the bottom thereof of gold, the covering of it of purple; the midſt thereof being paved with love, for the daughters of Jeruſalem. 11. Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, and behold king Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his eſpouſals, and in the day of the gladneſs of his heart.

[g] Heb. i. 14.

† Or, throne, Rev. iii. 21. Or, bed.

v. 7—11. The church deſires to turn the eyes of the daughters of Jeruſalem from admiring her, to an object far more worthy of their regard; even to Solomon, the type of the divine Meſſiah, the chief of ten thouſand. Three things ſhe points out to them as worthy their higheſt admiration.

1. His bed. Behold, his bed, his church, or the hearts of his people, in which he takes up his reſt for ever, which is Solomon's, the prince of peace, threeſcore valiant men are about it, of the valiant of Iſrael; the miniſters of the ſanctuary, men ſtrong in faith, and mighty in word and deed, who watch that nothing may diſturb the peace of the church, or hurt her members. They all hold ſwords, being expert in war; the ſword of the ſpirit, which is the word of God, and know how to wield it in ſuch a manner as to vanquiſh the powers of darkneſs: every man hath his ſword upon his thigh, ready armed for every exigence, having the ſcriptures ſtored up in their memory, and able to apply them on every emergence, according to the circumſtances of the caſe, becauſe of fear in the night; when in ſeaſons of darkneſs, temptation, and perſecution, God's people are diſtreſſed and alarmed, they are prepared to ſtand by them, encourage and comfort them.

2. His chariot, v. 9. King Solomon made himſelf a chariot of the wood of Lebanon; which may ſignify the human nature of Chriſt; or the everlaſting covenant of redemption; or the miniſtration of the goſpel, in which he appears in the riches of his grace, admired of all that believe, riding proſperouſly in triumphant majeſty, attended by the acclamations of his faithful ſubjects, and his enemies, death, hell, and ſin, bound as vanquiſhed at his chariot wheels. The wood of Lebanon denotes the perpetuity of the goſpel word, and its fragrance the great and precious promiſes therein contained; the pillars of ſilver, the floor of gold, the covering of purple, repreſent its purity, excellence, and ſtability; the midſt thereof being paved with love, for the daughters of Jeruſalem; God therein appears to be all love and mercy to poor and periſhing ſinners, and he is pleaſed to take them up to ſit with him, to behold and partake of his glory.

3. The royal diadem on his head. Go forth, O ye daughters of Zion, redeemed ſouls, who are called out of themſelves to Chriſt, and behold King Solomon with the crown wherewith his mother crowned him in the day of his eſpouſals; either the day when aſcending to the ſkies Jeſus was crowned king of glory, and all power in heaven and earth given unto him; or the day when the ſoul of the ſinner, called by the Divine word and ſpirit into the fellowſhip of the goſpel, beholds Jeſus the heavenly bridegroom with open arms ready to receive him, owns how worthy he is, who hath borne the croſs, to wear the crown, and with delight embraces the everlaſting covenant, in which the Saviour betroths us to himſelf in mercy and loving-kindneſs; and this time is a time of love, and gladneſs of his heart; then Jeſus beholds in us the travel of his ſoul, and we can ſay, My ſpirit rejoiceth in God my Saviour.

CHAP. IV.

In this chapter, 1. Jeſus Chriſt having eſpouſed his church to himſelf, (chap. iii. 11.) highly commends her beauty in the ſeveral inſtances of it, concluding her fair, all fair, ver. 1—5. and again, ver. 7. 2. He retires himſelf, and invites her with him, from the mountains of terror to thoſe of delight, ver. 6, 8. 3. He profeſſeth his love to her, and his delight in her affection to him, ver. 9—14. 4. She aſcribes all ſhe had that was valuable in her to him, and depends upon the continued influence of his grace, to make her more and more acceptable to him, ver. 15, 16.

1. [a] BEHOLD, thou art fair, my love, behold, thou art fair, thou haſt doves eyes within thy locks: [b] thy hair is as a flock of goats, that appear from mount Gilead. 2. Thy teeth are like a flock of ſheep that are [c] even ſhorn, which came up from the waſhing: whereof every one bear twins, and none † is barren among them. 3. Thy lips are like a thread of ſcarlet, and [d] thy ſpeech is comely: thy temples are like a piece of a pomegranate within thy locks. 4. [e] Thy neck is like the tower of David builded [f] for an armoury, whereon there hang a thouſand bucklers, all ſhields of mighty men. 5. [g] Thy two breaſts are like two young roes that are twins, which feed among the lilies. 6. [h] Until the day ‡ break, and the ſhadows flee away, I will get me to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincenſe. 7. [i] Thou art all fair, my love, there is no ſpot in thee.

[a] Chap. i. 15. & v. 12.

[b] Chap. vi. 5, &c.

[c] 1 Cor. i. 10.

Before Chriſt 1014.

† Or, caſt their young.

[d] Col. iv. 6.

[e] Chap. vii. 4.

[f] Neh. iii. 19.

[g] Chap. vii. 3. Prov. v. 19. Iſa. lxvi. 11.

[h] Chap. ii. 17.

‡ Heb. Breath.

[i] Eph. v. 27.

v. 1—7, We have here,

1. The deſcription of the church's beauty, and of every gracious ſoul who bears the Divine image: however deſpicable they appear in the eyes of men, nay, however deformed in their own, Chriſt regards them with delight and love; in his eyes they are fair, without ſpot or blemiſh; his love, loving him and beloved by him, and all the marks of beauty center in them; ſince they are found in him, all his excellencies are theirs, and his grace makes them what he deſcribes them.

The images here uſed are taken from the human form, and the beauties of the body transferred to the hidden man of the heart.

The eyes of doves within the locks, repreſent the modeſty and humility, the ſweetneſs and inoffenſiveneſs of the faithful.

The hair compared to that of a flock of goats, that appear from mount Gilead, may ſignify the multitude of converts in the church; or the beauty of their outward walk or converſation, viſible to all as the hair flowing in ringlets on the ſhoulders, or a flock of goats feeding on a diſtant precipice.

The teeth even as a flock of ſheep new ſhorn, white as their fleeces when come up from waſhing, may denote miniſters in particular, who prepare the food for the infant converts, in the purity of their lives adorn the doctrine they profeſs, and, bleſt with ſucceſs in their miniſtry, ſee numerous ſouls begotten in the goſpel by their word, and none are barren among them; whatever ſuperior gifts ſome may poſſeſs, or more abundant fruit may crown their labours, all who preach the truth are ſure to ſee ſome fruit thereof. This may be applied alſo to believers in general, who feed upon the word of truth, are waſhed in the laver of regeneration, aſcend upwards in their affections, and are fruitful in all good works.

The lips like a thread of ſcarlet, may be conſidered as a mark of that florid health, and flouriſhing ſtate of grace in which the ſoul abides; or as the following words may explain them: Thy ſpeech is comely, before men, in all gracious converſation, whilſt the hearers delighted hang upon the ſpeaker's lips; or before God, in prayer and praiſe, offered through the blood of Jeſus, and therefore moſt pleaſing and acceptable.

The temples like a piece of pomegrante within the locks, the colour of the fruit of which being red, may be applied to the conſcious bluſh, with which a ſenſe of his own unworthineſs, in the preſence of his lord, covers the ſinner, and heighthens his beauty.

The neck compared to a tower, built for an armoury, filled with the ſhields of the mighty, may repreſent the miniſters of the ſanctuary, who are next to Chriſt the head, and furniſh the faithful with the ſpiritual weapons of their warfare; or this may be referred to the ſaints in general, who are each a ſtrong tower, filled with ſuch Divine artillery that all the gates of hell never can prevail againſt them.

The breaſts like two young roes that are twins, may be applied to the miniſters, who give the ſincere milk of the word; or to the Old and New Teſtaments, the fountains of conſolation; or to the two ſacraments, the great ordinances of ſtrength and comfort to the believer's ſoul.

2. The heavenly bridegroom retires for a while to wait till his beauteous bride hath made herſelf ready. Till the day of eternity breaks, and the ſhadows of mortality flee away, I will go to the mountain of myrrh, and to the hill of frankincenſe; to the heavenly hill, whither the ſmoak of prayer and praiſe continually aſcends, and whither the glorified Saviour is gone till the time of conſummation.

3. Wherever he is, he hath the ſame regard for his ſpouſe the church. Thou art all fair, my love, there is no ſpot in thee; he ſees none, his blood hath waſhed out every ſtain, his righteouſneſs makes her compleat, lacking nothing; his ſpirit faſhions her throughout anew, ſo that ſhe appears in perfect beauty, without ſpot or wrinkle, or any ſuch thing, Eph. v. 25.

8. ¶ Come with me from Lebanon, my ſpouſe, with me from Lebanon: look from the top of Amana, from the top of Shenir and [k] Hermon, from the lions dens, from the mountains of the leopards. 9. Thou haſt † raviſhed my heart, my ſiſter, my ſpouſe: thou haſt raviſhed my heart with one of thine eyes, with one chain of thy neck. 10. How fair is thy ‡ love, my ſiſter, [k] Deut. iii. 9.

† Heb. Unhearted me.

‡ Heb. Loves.

Before Chriſt 1014.

my ſpouſe! [l] how much better is thy love than wine!
and the ſmell of thine ointments than all ſpices! 11.
Thy lips, O my ſpouſe, drop as the honey-comb: [m] honey and milk are under thy tongue, and the ſmell of thy garments [n] is like the ſmell of Lebanon. 12. A garden § incloſed is my ſiſter, my ſpouſe: a ſpring ſhut up, a fountain ſealed. 13. Thy plants are an orchard of pomegranates, [o] with pleaſant fruits, ‖ camphire, with ſpikenard. 14. Spikenard and ſaffron, calamus and cinnamon, with all trees of frankincenſe, myrrh and aloes, with all the chief ſpices.

[l] Chap. i. 2.
[m] Prov. xxiv. 13, 14. Chap. v. 1.
[n] Hoſ. xiv. 6, 7.
§ Heb. Barred.
[o] John xv. 8. Phil. i. 11.
‖ Or, cypreſs, Chap. i. 14.

v 8—14. Chriſt delights in his church, and wiſhes for her company at all times; therefore,

1. He invites her to come with him, and adds the moſt endearing name to engage her to follow him, My ſpouſe, that neareſt, deareſt relation; the union indiſſoluble, and which ſhould, both from love and duty, conſtrain her to cleave to him; come with me from Lebanon, or thou ſhalt come with me; it is a gracious call to do ſo, or a gracious promiſe of being enabled for that which Jeſus doth enjoin: Lebanon may ſignify Jeruſalem, adorned with the wood of Lebanon, but become a den of thieves and murderers, out of which he calls his people to depart; or, as Lebanon was a goodly mountain, it may be a command to quit the joys of ſenſe, and earth's vain pleaſures and purſuits, to taſte the purer delights that flow from a ſenſe of his love: look from the top of Amana, from the top of Shenir and Hermon, from the lions dens, from the mountains of the leopards, which frequented thoſe places: and ſuch is this world, full of wicked men, fierce and cruel in their tempers as lions, ſpotted with ſin as the leopard's ſkin, crafty, and lying in wait to deſtroy as theſe devouring animals: from ſuch therefore to depart is but to conſult our own ſafety; and to leave the ways of a world lying in wickedneſs, for communion with the Lord of life and glory, muſt be an exchange unſpeakably to our own comfort.

2. Chriſt expreſſes his delight in his ſpouſe, whom he honours alſo with another title, My ſiſter, for he is by his incarnation fleſh of our fleſh, and by adoption we are brought into that family, where he is the firſt-born of many brethren, thou haſt raviſhed my heart; or, thou haſt wounded my heart, or coupled it with thine; intimating the ſtrength of his affection to her; it drew him down from his throne in glory, made him humble himſelf to death, and even ſhed his blood on a croſs for her ſake; behold how he loved her! Thou haſt raviſhed my heart with one of thine eyes, or one glance; for no ſooner doth the eye of faith look to him, but his arms of love are reached forth to embrace the ſoul; with one chain of thy neck; the pearls of Divine grace, that adorn the temper and converſation of the ſaints, make them amiable in the eyes of their divine Lord; and this he with tranſport profeſſes. How fair is thy love, my ſiſter, my ſpouſe! love to Jeſus is the moſt grateful and pleaſing oblation: he aſks our hearts, and nothing but this inward genuine affection, is in his ſight of any price: how much better is thy love than wine! more chearing than wine to the weary, or more acceptable than all the drink-offerings which were poured forth at his altar; and the ſmell of thine ointments than all ſpices! the graces of the ſpirit in her, breathed a ſweeter perfume than the ſpices which aſcended in ſmoak from the golden altar of incenſe. Thy lips, O my ſpouſe, drop as the honey-comb; the ſweeteſt words of humble prayer and praiſe, of warm profeſſions of love and duty; or communicating to all around, that good converſation which miniſters grace to the hearers: honey and milk are in thy tongue; the doctrines of the goſpel, ſo pleaſant and ſo refreſhing to the ſoul, of which the faithful delight to ſpeak for their own and others edification and comfort; and the ſmell of thy garments is as the ſmell of Lebanon; either the robes of his righteouſneſs, with which his people are arrayed, or the garments of that holy profeſſion which they make, and adorn with every good word and work, which renders them amiable in the eyes of God, and reſpected before men.

3. He compares her to a garden incloſed; ſeparated from the world without, and ſet apart for himſelf; ſmall, compared with the vaſt country around it; fenced from all intruders by Almighty love and power; planted with every choice ſeed of grace, and bringing forth fruit unto eternal life: a ſpring ſhut up, a fountain ſealed: ſuch are the ſouls of believers, ſealed of Chriſt for his own, ſhut up to be no more polluted by ſin, and never failing, ſince he is the ſpring-head, and will preſerve them unto the day of redemption. Thy plants are an orchard of pomegranates, &c. the garden of the church is full of trees of righteouſneſs, the planting of the Lord; bearing all the richeſt fruits of grace, perfuming the place of their abode by their good converſation, moſt excellent and valuable in themſelves, eſteemed of Chriſt, and mutual comforts to each other.

15. A fountain of gardens, [p] a well of living waters, and ſtreams from Lebanon. 16. ¶ Awake, O north-wind, and come thou ſouth, [q] blow upon my garden, that the ſpices thereof may flow out: let my beloved come into his garden, and eat [r] his pleaſant fruits.

[p] Jer. ii. 13. John iv. 10.
[q] John iii. 8.
[r] Phil. ii. 13.

v. 15, 16. Some have ſuppoſed theſe a continuation of Chriſt's ſpeech; but they are rather the reply of the church, on hearing herſelf thus commended, and aſcribing to her Lord the praiſe of all.

1. He is to her a fountain of gardens, a well of living waters, and ſtreams from Lebanon; or, O fountain of gardens, &c. as the words may be rendered, and immediately addreſſed to him. Chriſt is the glorious fountain-head, from whence all our waters of grace and conſolation flow; the author of all our fruitfulneſs, and the ſource of every bleſſing in time and in eternity; whatever we have we receive from him, and every gracious ſoul will aſcribe the whole to him.

2. She prays for the influences of his bleſſed ſpirit, that her garden may flouriſh, and breathing fragrance, invite Chriſt's pleaſing viſits thither, and afford him ſatisfaction. Awake thou north wind, and come thou ſouth, blow upon my garden; by theſe winds may be ſignified the operations of the Spirit, in his word, providences, ordinances, ſuited to the caſe and neceſſities of the ſoul, as may moſt effectually conduce to its ſtrength, comfort, and fruitfulneſs: ſometimes the north wind of adverſity is needful; ſometimes the ſouth wind of Divine manifeſtations warming the heart, quickning it from its coldneſs, and drawing forth the graces into lively exerciſe, that the ſpices thereof may flow out in warm affections towards God and man, in zeal for his glory, in exemplary diligence to adorn our profeſſion, and, in ſhort, in every good word and work: let my beloved come into his garden, then, when thus breathing fragrance, let him viſit our ſouls with a delightful ſenſe of his preſence and love; for we are his garden, purchaſed by his blood, called by his grace, and by choice devoted to him; let him come and eat his pleaſant fruits; whatever fruits of holineſs we bear, it is by virtue of union with him, who is the living root: he is the great author of all good in us, and takes delight in the works of his own hand; and this eſpecially is what the believer longs for, that he may find gracious acceptance and favour with his divine Lord.

CHAP. V.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's gracious acceptance of the invitation which his church had given him, and the kind viſit which he made to her, ver. 1. 2. The account which the ſpouſe gives of her own folly in putting a ſlight upon her beloved, and the diſtreſs ſhe was in by reaſon of his withdrawings, ver. 2—8. 3. The enquiry of the daughters of Jeruſalem concerning the amiable perfections of her beloved, ver. 9. and her particular anſwer to that enquiry, ver. 10—16. Unto you that believe, he is thus precious.

1. [a] I Am come into my garden, my ſiſter, my ſpouſe;
I have gathered my myrrh with my ſpice, [b] I have eaten my honey-comb with my honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk: eat, O friends, [c] drink, † yea, drink abundantly, O beloved.

[a] Chap. iv. 16.
[b] Ibid. iv. 11.
[c] Pſ. xxxvi. 8. Or, John iii. 29.
† Or, and be drunken with loves.

v. 1. Swift are the returns of prayer; it is no ſooner aſked than granted; lo, Chriſt is here. I am come into my garden, my ſiſter, my ſpouſe; he admits the garden to be his own, and willingly viſits the ſoul that by faith waits for his coming; I have gathered my myrrh with my ſpice; all the produce is his own, and he delights in the gifts and graces he hath beſtowed; I have eaten my honey-comb with my honey; the doctrines of his goſpel, in the faithful diſpenſation of which he delights; I have drunk my wine with my milk; ſitting at the table of his grace, and partaking of the banquet his ſpouſe, like Eſther, hath provided; yet ſhe can give him only of his own: nor doth he partake alone of the proviſion, but welcomes and invites all his friends, the faithful members of his church, to come and ſup with him: eat, O friends, drink, yea, drink abundantly, O beloved; in the goſpel there is grace abounding, and whoſoever will may come and feed upon the wine and milk, the great and precious promiſes contained in the everlaſting covenant, without money and without price.

2. ¶ I ſleep, but my heart waketh: it is the voice of my beloved [d] that knocketh, ſaying, Open to me, my ſiſter, my love, my dove, my undefiled: for my head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night. 3. I have put off my coat, [e] how ſhall I put it on? I have waſhed my feet, how ſhall I defile them?
4. My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door, and my bowels were moved † for him. 5. I roſe up to open to my beloved, and my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers with ‡ ſweet-ſmelling myrrh, upon the handles of the lock. 6. I opened to my beloved,

[d] Rev. iii. 20.
[e] Luke xi. 7.
† Some read in me.
‡ Heb. Paſſing; or, running about.

Before Chriſt 1014.

loved, but my beloved had withdrawn himſelf, and was gone: my ſoul failed when he ſpake: [f] I ſought him, but I could not find him; I called him, but he gave me no anſwer. 7. [g] The watchmen that went about the city, found me, they ſmote me, they wounded me;
the keepers of the walls took away my vail from me.
8. I charge you, O daughters of Jeruſalem, if ye find my beloved, § that ye tell him, that I am ſick of love.

[f] Chap. iii. 1. Lam. iii. 8.
[g] Chap. iii. 3.
§ Heb. What.

v. 2—8. After the ſweet communion which had paſſed between Chriſt and his church, we have here a ſad account of the interruption which aroſe from her ſecurity and ſlothful ſpirit: negligent of her mercies, ſhe is puniſhed by having them withdrawn.

1. Sleep ſtole upon her. I ſleep; not the dead ſleep of ſin, but through the decay of grace, and the prevalence of corruption, her heart grew cold and careleſs, as is too common a caſe, even with thoſe who are truly faithful; yet, though the exerciſe of grace lay dormant, the habit remained; my heart waketh; tho' the fleſh be weak, the ſpirit was willing; and tho' temptation prevailed, there was ſtill a ſtruggle, and ſpiritual life in the ſoul.

2. Chriſt will not leave his people under their backſlidings without warning. It is the voice of my beloved that knocketh: he is ſtill beloved, and his voice, though indiſtinctly heard, is known: he knocks at the door of the heart, by the calls of his word, the convictions of his ſpirit, and the alarms of his providences, and will not ſuffer his poor deluded people to enjoy any ſound reſt during their unfaithfulneſs; and he pleads hard for admittance, with every endearing appellation: Open to me, my ſiſter, my love, my dove, my undefiled; nothing can engage our hearts, if his love doth not: this he pleads as the moſt conſtraining argument; and adds what he hath ſuffered on her account: My head is filled with dew, and my locks with the drops of the night, particularly of that fatal night when he agonized in the garden, and when his head was crowned with thorns, and covered with clotted gore. By ſuch amazing grace, how ſtupid muſt be the heart that remains unaffected! how grievous to requite ſuch dying love with coldneſs and neglect!

3. With frivolous excuſes ſhe wants to cover her ſinful ſlothfulneſs; as a perſon undreſſed and in bed, whoſe feet are waſhed, fears to dirt them, and hates to be diſturbed, ſo ſhe cared not to expoſe herſelf to any inconveniences for his ſake, and rather choſe to ſleep on ſtill and take her reſt. Note, (1.) They who want to turn away from Chriſt, have always ſome pretext for their conduct. (2.) When we have once given way to corruption, and grown negligent in the path of duty, we ſhall find the difficulties of returning to it exceeding great.

4. Chriſt by his power and grace overcomes our corruption, and if he did not, by a kind of holy violence, turn us again to his bleſſed ſelf, every backſliding would iſſue in apoſtacy. My beloved put in his hand by the hole of the door, to unbar it, and open himſelf a paſſage to her heart; and this effectually wrought upon her: for,

5. My bowels were moved for him; gracious relentings, and a ſenſe of baſe ingratitude, began to work; love kindled afreſh in her heart, and ſhe could no longer contain. I roſe up to my beloved, ſhook off dull ſloth, and ran to meet him, and my hands dropped with myrrh, and my fingers with ſweet-ſmelling myrrh, on the handles of the lock, with tears of bitter and penitential ſorrow for her unfaithfulneſs, which were to Chriſt a ſavour of a ſweet ſmell; or when ſhe put her hands on the lock, ſhe found the ſweet ſavour of his grace; for thoſe who draw near to Chriſt, will by bleſſed experience ever taſte how good the Lord is.

6. To her bitter diſappointment, when ſhe expected to meet her beloved, he was withdrawn in diſpleaſure at her ſlothfulneſs. I opened to my beloved to give him a welcome reception, but my beloved had withdrawn himſelf, and was gone, and left her to mourn her folly and negligence; or departed to prove her ſincerity and earneſtneſs in ſearching after him, and with grief and eagerneſs ſhe cries, He is gone, he is gone: my ſoul failed when he ſpake; either at parting in anger, or at the kind language he uſed, which ſerved to upbraid her baſe ingratitude. Note, (1.) When we have been faithleſs, no marvel, even after our return, if the Lord puniſhes us by leaving us comfortleſs. (2.) A ſoul that hath ever taſted the ſweetneſs of communion with Jeſus, cannot but bitterly grieve at his abſence. (3.) It is a gracious ſymptom of remaining grace, when the heart poſſeſſes tender ſenſibility, and feels the evil and ingratitude of its departures from God.

7. She ſets herſelf to ſeek him, but meets with ſad diſcouragement. I ſought him, in the ordinances of his ſervice, and the courts of his houſe, but I found him not: I called him aloud, in fervent prayer, but he gave me no anſwer, no ſenſible tokens of his regard. Such dark ſeaſons of deſertion do God's deareſt children ſometimes endure; nay, ſhe was not only forſaken, but abuſed, whilſt through the city ſhe enquired as before after her beloved; the watchmen that went about the city found me, they ſmote me, they wounded me; which may refer to the true miniſters of God, who ſometimes are too ſevere in their upbraidings, and harſh in their cenſures, and with the terrors of the law wound thoſe who need the healing of the goſpel. Or rather falſe teachers are intended, who perſecute and afflict the true members of Chriſt, and with pernicious errors and hereſies rend the peace of the church. The keepers of the walls took away my veil from me; they who by office and profeſſion ſhould have been her comforters, expoſe her to ſhame, and do her the greateſt injury; enemies often both to the doctrines and practice of true godlineſs, and moſt effectually undermining the intereſts of the church, which they pretend to ſerve. The treacherous watchmen of Zion have ever done her greater injuries, than her moſt avowed enemies.

8. She earneſtly beſeeches the daughters of Jeruſalem to befriend her. I charge you, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem, or adjure you; charges them on oath, which intimates her own eagerneſs and fervent affection; if ye find my beloved, that ye tell him I am ſick of love. The abſence of Jeſus is to a loving ſoul inſupportable; and as the fainting hart thirſteth for the water-brooks, ſo eager are their longings after him their Saviour.

9. ¶ What is thy beloved more than another beloved,
O [h] thou faireſt among women? What is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou doſt ſo charge us?
10. My beloved is [i] white and [k] ruddy, † the chiefeſt among ten thouſand. 11. His head is as the moſt fine gold, his locks are ‡ buſhy, and black as a raven. 12.
[l] His eyes are as the eyes of doves by the rivers of waters, waſhed with milk, and ‖ fitly ſet. 13. His cheeks are as a bed of ſpices, as ſweet flowers: his lips like lilies, [m] dropping ſweet-ſmelling myrrh. 14. His hands are as gold rings ſet with beryl: his § belly is as bright ivory overlaid with ſapphires. 15. [n] His legs are as pillars of marble, ſet upon ſockets of fine gold: his countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars. 16. His mouth is † moſt ſweet: yea, he is altogether ‡ lovely.
This is my beloved, and this is my friend, O daughters of Jeruſalem.

[h] Chap. i. 8.
[i] Dan. vii. 9.
[k] Iſa. lxiii. 2.
† A ſtandard bearer.
‡ Or curled.
[l] Chap. i. 15. & iv. 1.
‖ Heb. Set in fulneſs.
[m] Luke iv. 22.
§ Or bowels.
[n] Rev. i. 15.
† Heb. Sweetneſſes.
‡ Heb. Deſires.

v. 9—16. In anſwer to the charge given,

1. The daughters of Jeruſalem enquire after the deſcription of the perſon, whom the church ſo earneſtly ſought. What is thy beloved more than another beloved, O thou faireſt among women? Such is the title they give her, and moſt deſerving of it ſhe appears; for no beauty is like the beauty of holineſs, wherein the ſaints are arrayed; and the image of Jeſus ſtamped on all his living members, make them glorious in the eyes of God and all good men. What is thy beloved more than another beloved, that thou doſt ſo charge us? which ſome take as a ſlighting queſtion, as if he, whom ſhe ſeemed ſo diſtreſſed about, was ſcarce worthy ſuch concern; and then theſe daughters of Jeruſalem muſt be the formal profeſſors, who are ſtrangers to the warmth of a zealous heart; and having never known the excellencies of the Lord Jeſus themſelves, wonder at, or deride the eagerneſs and ſollicitude which others ſhew in ſeeking him. But it may alſo be the ſerious enquiry of young converts, deſiring themſelves to be more acquainted with Chriſt, his perſon and offices, that they might know him better, and love him with more enlarged affection.

2. She launches out into a deſcription of his excellencies, in images borrowed from the human form. My beloved is white and ruddy, the lily and roſe unite in him; not ſo much indeed reſpecting his form, for therein appeared no peculiar comelineſs to make him deſirable; but, as God incarnate, to ſave ſinners, he was full of grace and truth, fairer than the children of men, in the unſullied purity of the human nature, and infinitely exalted above them in the glory of the divine: the chiefeſt of ten thouſand, nor earth beneath, nor heaven above, affords his fellow, neither angels nor men are to be compared with him; or a ſtandard bearer over ten thouſand, under his banners his redeemed people are collected; ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands, and he exalted above them all, as an enſign on an hill. His head is as the moſt fine gold, which may refer to his divine nature, which gave value to all the ſufferings of the humanity; or may ſignify his ſovereign dominion and authority over his church, and the powerful influences each member derives from him their glorious head: his locks are buſhy, and black as a raven; the faithful, who ſpring from him, are thus numerous and beautiful; or it expreſſes his eternal youth, the ſame yeſterday, to day, and for ever. His eyes are as the eyes of doves, ſharp-ſighted, yea, all-ſeeing, withal full of gentleneſs and love, looking with tendereſt ſympathy on his poor afflicted people; by rivers of waters, waſhed with milk, and fitly ſet, appearing in their greateſt beauty: his cheeks are as a bed of ſpices, as ſweet flowers, when, manifeſting his preſence in the midſt of his people, and ſhedding abroad his love in their hearts, they enjoy delightful communion with him, and rejoice in the light of his countenance: his lips are like lilies, dropping ſweet-ſmelling myrrh, pure are all his words, precious all his promiſes, ineſtimably fragrant the doctrines of his grace, that ſpeak pardon, righteouſneſs, and ſalvation to the ſouls of his people. His hands are as gold rings ſet with beryl, all the works of his hands in providence and grace are exquiſite, and to be admired: or his people are thoſe rings, which none can pluck from him; or his hands are full of the gifts of his munificence, the graces and conſolations of his ſpirit, which he liberally diſpenſes to thoſe, whom, as a king, he is pleaſed to honour: his belly is, or his bowels are, as bright as ivory overlaid with ſapphires, which ſome underſtand of the human nature of Chriſt, as exalted by its union with the divine; others of that tenderneſs and pity, that lead him to yearn over the diſtreſſes of his ſaints. His legs are as pillars of marble, ſet upon ſockets of fine gold; he is Almighty, to ſuſtain the weight of all the ſins of his people laid upon him; of the government of his church and kingdom; and alſo to trample under foot all his enemies and theirs. His countenance is as Lebanon, excellent as the cedars; majeſtic, exalted higher than the kings of the earth. His mouth is moſt ſweet, or ſweetneſſes; the very eſſence of delight, when ſpeaking in his goſpel the great and precious promiſes, the moſt reviving news that ever greeted ſinners ears; or when ſealing with the kiſſes of his love our pardon and peace. Yea, he is altogether lovely; deſcription cannot paint his excellence; when fancy hath laviſhed all her ſtores, and imagination collected every beauty that creature ever yet poſſeſſed, the half of his glory is not told us.

3. She concludes with triumphant exultation in her beloved. This is my beloved; I love him; no marvel, his beauty is ſo tranſcendent; and he is mine in an everlaſting covenant, and that makes Chriſt eſpecially precious: and this is my friend, on whom I have placed all my dependance, whoſe kindneſs ten thouſand times I have proved, whoſe fidelity ſhall endure to eternity; for he will never leave nor forſake me, and then I ſhall never leave and forſake him: know him therefore, love him, ſeek him, O ye daughters of Jeruſalem.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter, 1. The daughters of Jeruſalem, moved with the deſcription which the church had given of Chriſt, enquire after him, ver. 1. 2. The church directs them where they may meet with him, ver. 2, 3. 3. Chriſt is now found of thoſe that ſought him, and very highly applauds the beauty of his ſpouſe, as one extremely ſmitten with it, ver. 4—7. preferring her before all others, ver. 8, 9. and recommending her to the love and eſteem of all her neighbours, ver. 10. And laſtly, acknowledging the impreſſions which her beauty had made upon him, and the great delight he took in it, ver. 11—13.

1. WHither is thy beloved gone, [a] O thou faireſt among women? whither is thy beloved turned aſide? that we may ſeek him with thee. 2. My beloved is gone down into his garden, to the beds of ſpices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies. 3. [b] I am my beloved's, and my boloved is mine: he feedeth among the lilies.

[a] Chap. i. 8.

[b] Chap. ii. 16. & vii. 10.

v. 1—3. Struck with the deſcription of the excellence of Jeſus, which the ſpouſe his church had given, they no longer wonder ſhe ſhould ſo highly value him; their own hearts caught the ſacred flame; and ſince here no rivalſhip awakens jealouſy, the daughters of Jeruſalem are reſolved with her to ſeek him. Her diſcourſe ſhewed the intimacy of her acquaintance with him, therefore they in their turn are ſollicitous to learn of her where he may be found. We have,

1. The queſtion, Whither is thy beloved gone, O thou faireſt among women? whither is thy beloved turned aſide, that we may ſeek him with thee? Holy love and zeal is a ſpreading flame; they who delight to proclaim the glories of Chriſt, will find others charmed with his beauty, and ready to join in ſeeking him, in prayer, his word and ordinances, and he will be found of all that call upon him, even by ſuch as call upon him faithfully.

2. The anſwer is given, v. 2. My beloved is gone down to his garden. The ſpouſe had toiled in vain to ſeek him in the ſtreets; in the noiſe and hurry of the world he is not to be found; ſhe now remembers he had gone down to his garden, his church, to the beds of ſpices, the ſeveral congregations of his ſaints, or the ſouls of his faithful filled with divine graces, where he takes up well-pleaſed his abode. To feed in the gardens, either his flocks in the green paſtures of his ordinances, or himſelf with the pleaſant fruits of holineſs, which he with delight beholds growing up before him; and to gather lilies; to place his ſaints now in the boſom of his love, or at death to gather them into his everlaſting arms.

3. She profeſſes her confidence of an aſſured intereſt in him. I am my beloved's, and my beloved is mine; the knot of union indiſſoluble is tied, notwithſtanding her manifold infirmities; and though for the preſent ſhe ſuffered the pains of abſence, yet ſhe entertains not a doubt of his regard, and is conſcious of the ſimplicity of her own heart before him. He feedeth among the lilies; there in the midſt of his people ſhe expected with delight to find him, nor was diſappointed of her hope. Note, (1.) That ſoul is truly happy that in faith and love can ſay, My beloved is mine, and I am his. (2.) Rebukes and temporary deſertion prove not a change in the heart of Jeſus: whether he frowns or ſmiles, his everlaſting covenant ſtands faſt. (3.) When we can reſt aſſured of our own unfeigned attachment of heart to him, we may ſafely conclude our ſure intereſt in his regard.

4. ¶ Thou art beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah, comely as Jeruſalem, [c] terrible as an army with banners. 5. Turn away thine eyes from me, for they have overcome me: [d] thy hair is as a flock of goats that appear from Gilead. 6. Thy teeth are as a flock of ſheep which go up from the waſhing, whereof every one beareth twins, and [e] there is not one barren among them. 7. As a piece of a pomegranate are thy temples within thy locks. 8. There are threeſcore queens, and fourſcore concubines, and virgins without number. 9. My dove, my undefiled is [f] but one: ſhe is the only one of her mother, ſhe is the choice one of her that bare her: the daughters ſaw her and bleſſed her; yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praiſed her. 10. ¶ Who is ſhe that looketh forth as the morning, fair as the moon, clear as the ſun, and [g] terrible as an army with banners?

[c] Ver. 10.

[d] Chap. iv. 1, &c.

[e] Chap. iv. 2.

[f] Eph. iv. 4.

[g] Ver. 4.

v. 4—10. The gracious Lord no longer hides his face, nor delays to ſatisfy the deſires of his people. He comes; grace is in his lips, and tenderneſs in his heart.

1. He admires her beauty: Thou art beautiful, O my love, as Tirzah, a city of Iſrael, moſt pleaſantly ſituated on a riſing hill; comely as Jeruſalem, terrible as an army with banners, to all her enemies, who muſt finally bow before her feet.

2. He expreſſes the delight he took in her: Turn away thine eyes from me; he can no longer bear the earneſtneſs, anguiſh, love, and tenderneſs, which ſpeak in her looks. Or, Turn thine eyes over againſt me; the eyes of faith and affection; hang not with ſhame thine head, but raiſe theſe down-caſt looks: all the paſt is forgiven and forgotten, return then unto thy reſt again; for they have overcome me, brought me back again: or, they have ſtrengthened me; it refreſhed his heart to behold her penitent return: or, lifted me up with joy, ſo delighted was he with her love.

3. He gives the ſame deſcription of her beauty which he had done before, chap. iv. 1—3. Though by her unfaithfulneſs it might ſeem to be ſullied, and ſhe might be fearful Chriſt's love towards her would abate, he aſſures her of the ſame warm affection, and that ſhe is ſtill the ſame in his eye. Bleſſed be our dear Lord, he hateth putting away; and whatever corruptions for a moment prevail to our defilement, the fountain of his blood is ſtill open; and when we come to waſh there, our ſouls ſhall then appear as the moon, fair as ever, when the cloud is paſſed away.

4. Her excellence is above all compare, v. 8. By the queens, concubines, and virgins, ſome underſtand the world in general, from the higheſt in rank and ſtation to the loweſt; others, the falſe churches and deluded people; but rather it may mean believers in general, the moſt advanced in ſpiritual attainments, or the converts of leſſer experience, who are afterwards ſaid to praiſe her, ver. 9. Whatever amiable qualities may be in any individuals, the church in the aggregate poſſeſſes them all. My dove, my undefiled, is but one; dear to him above all others; one body, of which he is the living head. She is the only one of her mother, ſhe is the choice one of her that bare her; more tenderly beloved than an only darling child. The daughters ſaw her and bleſſed her; yea, the queens and the concubines, and they praiſed her. Either this ſignifies the high honour the church will receive in the latter day, See Iſa. lx. 3—11. or the delight in her expreſſed by all the faithful, and their prayers for her proſperity.

5. They who praiſed her, burſt forth into admiration at her beauty. Who is ſhe that looketh forth as the morning? The image is taken from the light, and may be applied to the church, whoſe day began to dawn in the patriarchal age: fair as the moon, as increaſing diſcoveries of the divine Meſſiah were reflected from the prophetic word: clear as the ſun, when in the diſpenſation of the goſpel the full blaze of ſpiritual light and knowledge were diffuſed: terrible as an army with banners, going on conquering and to conquer, till all the powers of darkneſs ſhall be at laſt finally and eternally ſubdued. And this may be applied in particular to every redeemed ſoul, to whom the light of truth at firſt, like the grey morning, is indiſtinct: as they advance in grace they ſhine with borrowed ſplendor derived from Chriſt, ſhewing ſtill their ſpots and infirmities; till at laſt they appear bright as the ſun in the firmament of glory, and all their enemies that in their militant ſtate oppoſed them, ſhall for ever become their foot-ſtool.

Before Chriſt 1014.

11. I went down into the garden of nuts, to ſee the fruits of the valley, and to [h] ſee whether the vine flouriſhed, and the pomegranates budded. 12. Or ever I was aware, my ſoul † made me like the chariots of Ammi-nadib. 13. Return, return, O Shulamite, return, return, that we may look upon thee: what will ye ſee in the Shulamite? as it were the company ‡ of two armies.

[h] Chap. vii. 12. Pſ. xcii. 12, 13.
† Or, put me in the chariots of my willing people.
‡ Or, of Mahanaim, Gen. xxxii. 2.

v. 11—13. The reconciliation now being compleat, Chriſt gives his church an account whither he went, and how he was affected during his abſence from her.

1. I went down into the garden of nuts: though his ſenſible and comforting preſence was withheld, he was among the trees, to ſee the fruits of the valley, what graces were exerciſed by his church, and the faithful in it; and to ſee whether the vine flouriſhed, and the pomegranates budded; either the firſt movings of his ſpirit quickening the hearts of new converts, or the riſings of gracious repentance for the unfaithfulneſs which had cauſed him to hide his face, which he with delight obſerved.

2. He declares how ſtrongly he felt his heart drawn forth towards her: Or ever I was aware, my ſoul made me like the chariots of Ammi-nadib. He could refrain no longer; ſwift he flew to dry the tears of her penitence, and with the ſenſe of his preſence and love, to comfort her diſconſolate heart. Or, My ſoul made me as chariots to my willing people: ſince they began to ſeek him in faith and prayer, his heart is open for their reception, and he takes them up into his chariot of love. Some make theſe the words of the ſpouſe, pleaſingly ſurprized to find her Lord come down to viſit her, and flying to meet him with rapid eagerneſs.

3. He invites her with affectionate importunity to return to him, and be happy. Return, return, O Shulamite: Chriſt, the greater than Solomon, communicates his name to his ſpouſe the church; ſhe is the Shulamite. Ubi tu Caius, ibi ego Caia. And leſt, diſcouraged by her paſt conduct, ſhe ſhould be aſhamed or afraid to meet him, he aſſures her of the kindeſt reception. Guilt makes the ſoul fearful, and bitter are the diſquietudes the poor backſlider experiences; but let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy on him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. Return, return, that we may look upon thee; Chriſt now taking pleaſure in her, and all the ſaints and angels admiring her beauty, when preſented without blame before him in love.

4. A ſhort account is given of the Shulamite. What will you ſee in the Shulamite? which, conſidered as her own words, beſpeaks her modeſty and humility. Chriſt deſired to look upon her, and ſhe is not conſcious of ought in herſelf worthy the leaſt regard from him: as it were the company of two armies; a ſcene of warfare between her and her enemies without, or between grace and corruption within. Or this is the deſcription Chriſt gives of her: She is beautiful as two companies that go forth with muſick and dancing to convey the bride to her huſband's houſe; or, as divided into two bands, the church militant on earth, and triumphant in heaven, and both glorious in holineſs.

CHAP. VII.

In this chapter, 1. Chriſt the royal bridegroom goes on to deſcribe the beauties of his ſpouſe, the church, in many inſtances, and to expreſs his love to her, and the delight he has in her converſation, ver. 1—9. 2. The ſpouſe, the church, expreſſeth her great delight in him, and the deſire that ſhe had of communion and fellowſhip with him, ver. 10—13. Such mutual eſteem and endearment is there between Chriſt and believers! And what is heaven but an everlaſting interchanging of loves between the holy God and holy ſouls!

1. HOW beautiful are [a] thy feet with ſhoes, O [b] prince's daughter! the joints of thy thighs are like jewels, the work of the hands of a cunning workman. 2. Thy navel is like a round goblet, which wanteth not † liquor: thy belly is like an heap of wheat, ſet about with lilies. 3. [c] Thy two breaſts are like two young roes that are twins. 4. [d] Thy neck is as a tower of ivory, thine eyes like the fiſh-pools in Heſhbon, by the gate of Bath-rabbim: thy noſe is as the tower of Lebanon, which looketh toward Damaſcus. 5. Thine head upon thee is like ‡ Carmel, and the hair of thine head like purple; the king is § held in the galleries. 6. How fair and how pleaſant art thou, O love, for delights! 7. This [e] thy ſtature is like to a palm-tree, and thy breaſts to cluſters of grapes. 8. I ſaid, I will go up to the palm-tree, I will take hold of the boughs thereof: now alſo thy breaſts ſhall be as cluſters of the vine, and the ſmell of thy noſe like apples: 9. And the roof of thy mouth like the beſt wine, for my beloved, that goeth down ‖ ſweetly, cauſing the lips † of thoſe that are aſleep to ſpeak.

[a] Eph. vi. 15.
[b] Pſ. xlv. 13.
† Heb. Mixture.
[c] Chap. iv. 5. Iſa. lxvi. 11.
[d] Chap. iv. 4.
‡ Or, crimſon.
§ Heb. Bound.
[e] Eph. iv. 13.
‖ Heb. Straightly.
† Or, of the ancient.

v. 1—9. We have here,

1. A freſh commendation of the church's beauty, addreſſed as a prince's daughter, begotten of the King eternal, and eſpouſed to the Prince of the kings of the earth. She had in a great variety of expreſſions deſcribed the ſurpaſſing excellence of her Lord, and he now, rejoicing over her on her return to him, launches forth into her deſerved praiſe. From the beauty of the human form ſome faint traces are collected of the infinitely ſurpaſſing beauty of the ſoul, by divine grace renewed, and made all glorious within. The ſimilitudes here uſed repreſent to us,

(1.) The miniſters of the church ſhod with the preparation of the goſpel of peace, and with their feet beautiful on the mountains, haſting to proclaim the glad tidings of great joy, v. 1.

(2.) The firm connection between the members of the body myſtical, who are knit together in love, ſtrong by their mutual union, and readily moving in the paths of the divine commands, v. 1.

(3.) The preachers of the word, full of divine truth, as a goblet crowned with wine, and ſtrong to labour in the cauſe of God, v. 2.

(4.) The fruitfulneſs of the church, teeming with precious ſeed, and beautiful to view as the hedge of lilies, v. 2.

(5.) The rich conſolations which are beſtowed from the breaſts of the word, where all the children of the church milk out, and are ſatisfied with the abundance of her glory, Iſa. lx. v. 3.

(6.) The ſtrength of faith, and purity of manners, that diſtinguiſh the faithful, v. 4.

(7.) The depth and clearneſs of their underſtandings, enlightened by divine grace; and the calmneſs of their tempers, unruffled as the ſurface of a ſtanding pool, v. 4.

(8.) Their ſharp ſagacity, and impregnable conſtancy.

(9.) Their glorious head, Chriſt Jeſus; or their heavenly-mindedneſs, and elevation above the ſtorms and tempeſts of this lower world, v. 5.

(10.) The number and royal dignity of the faithful, who ſpring from their glorious Head, depend upon him, and are nouriſhed by him, v. 6.

2. Since ſhe is ſo beautiful, Chriſt expreſſes his delight in her. The king is held in the galleries, well-pleaſed to take up his reſt in the hearts of his people, and held by the ſtrong cords of love to maintain abiding communion with them. How fair and how pleaſant art thou, O love, for delights! all her words and ways pleaſed him, and ſhe was in his eyes altogether lovely; tall as the palm-tree, and her breaſts like cluſters of grapes; ſtrait in her walk and converſation, and fruitful in all good works, that make glad the heart of God and man. I ſaid, I will go up to the palm-tree, to ſolace himſelf in the ſhade, or to behold its flouriſhing ſtate; I will take hold of the boughs thereof, to gather the fruit, or to prune the luxuriant branches by afflictions and rebukes. Now alſo thy breaſts ſhall be as cluſters of the vine, yielding the moſt grateful ſavour; and the ſmell of thy noſe like apples; for Chriſt's preſence draws forth the graces into lively exerciſe, and makes them give their ſweet ſmell: and the roof of thy mouth like the beſt wine for my beloved; her gracious diſcourſe being refreſhing and pleaſing to the ear, as wine to the taſte, that goeth down ſweetly: or to righteouſneſſes, leading the ſouls of men to Chriſt's righteouſneſs, and directing them in the ways of holineſs; and by its reviving influence, cauſing the lips of thoſe that are aſleep to ſpeak; as thoſe who were faint and their eyes cloſed, are recovered by a cordial draught; ſo the ſouls of thoſe who ſlept in the death of ſin are recovered by the word and ſpirit of Chriſt; and the ſaints who had been overcome by temptation, or under decays, are revived and reſtored thereby.

10. ¶ [f] I am my beloved's, and [g] his deſire is towards me. 11. Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field: let us lodge in the villages. 12. Let us get up early to the vineyards, let us [h] ſee if the vine flouriſh, whether the tender grape † appear, and the pomegranates bud forth: there [i] will I give thee my loves. 13. The [k] mandrakes give a ſmell, and at our gates are [l] all manner of pleaſant fruits, new and old, which I have laid up for thee, O my beloved.

[f] Chap. ii. 16. & vi. 3.
[g] Pſ. xlv. 11.
[h] Chap. vi. 11.
† Heb. Open.
[i] Ezek. xx. 40, 41.
[k] Gen. xxx. 14.
[l] Mat. xiii. 52.

v. 10—13. The ſpouſe here,

1. Expreſſes her confidence in her Lord, and makes profeſſion of her fidelity to him. I am my beloved's, wholly his, and not my own. Whatever excellencies I poſſeſs, they are derived from him; I have nothing that I have not received: I am his ; I know, I am aſſured of it ; for faith in lively exerciſe caſteth out fear and doubt, and gives the ſoul the moſt aſſured certainty : and his deſire is towards me ; from everlaſting his affections were placed on his church ; for her ſake he came down from heaven, and loved not his life unto death : eager to accompliſh her ſalvation, he underwent the bloody baptiſm, Luke xii. 50. for her redemption ; her company and converſe he is now pleaſed with ; nor will he reſt till the utmoſt deſires of his ſoul are ſatisfied, and all his people ſhall be brought to the enjoyment of his glory.

2. She invites him to come and give her the enjoyment of his preſence : Come, my beloved, let us go forth into the field. Wherever we are, we ſhould deſire Chriſt for our company : if taking recreation, his preſence will make the air doubly ſweet : if engaged in the labours of the field, a ſenſe of his nearneſs will beguile our toils, and make them eaſy. Let us lodge in the villages, retired from the noiſy town, for ſolitude is the friend of contemplation ; and they who would enjoy ſweet communion with God, muſt be often alone, ſpeaking with him that ſeeth in ſecret. Or it intimates, that his preſence can make the cottage a palace, and the place of meaneſt accommodations a dwelling of delight with him. Let us get up early to the vineyards ; for thoſe who have Chriſt with them, muſt improve their opportunities, early ſeek him in their youth, early ſeek him every morning ; for a ſlothful ſoul that dozes away the light of day, can never be in a flouriſhing ſtate. Let us ſee if the vine flouriſh, whether the tender grape appear, and the pomegranates bud forth ; in what ſtate the church and the ſeveral members of it are ; whether our ſouls are putting forth the freſh bloſſoms of grace, and promiſing a plenteous vintage of every good word and work.

3. She promiſes to give him there her warmeſt affections : There will I give thee my loves ; the deſires of her ſoul being enlarged by his preſence, and all her graces going forth in moſt lively exerciſe towards him. The mandrakes give a ſmell ; which ſome tranſlate lovely flowers ; others ſuppoſe ſome agreeable fruit, (See Gen. xxx. 14.) and ſignifies the fragrance of the graces of the ſaints, and their acceptableneſs to Chriſt : and at our gates are all manner of pleaſant fruits, new and old ; the abounding works of faith and love ; or the doctrines of the Old and New Teſtament, from which the miniſters of the ſanctuary, as from a ſtorehouſe, draw forth the richeſt proviſion for the ſoul ; which I have laid up for thee, O my beloved ; for though the proviſion be made for our uſe, who are members of his church, yet doth it ultimately tend to his glory. Note, All we have is Chriſt's ; it is a poor all indeed, and unworthy of his acceptance ; but a gracious ſoul delights to lay it, ſuch as it is, at his feet, and feels the deepeſt gratitude that he condeſcends to accept the ſervice.

CHAP. VIII.

The affections between Chriſt and his ſpouſe are as ſtrong and lively here, in this cloſing chapter of the ſong, as ever, and rather more ſo. 1. The ſpouſe continues her importunity for a more intimate communion and fellowſhip with him, ver. 1—3. 2. She charges the daughters of Jeruſalem not to interrupt her communion with her beloved, ver. 4. and they thereupon admire her dependence on him, ver. 5. 3. She begs of her beloved, whom ſhe raiſeth up by her prayers, ver. 5. that he would by his grace confirm that bleſſed union with him to which ſhe was admitted, ver. 6, 7. 4. She makes interceſſion for others alſo, that care might be taken of them, ver. 8, 9. and pleaſeth herſelf with the thoughts of her own intereſt in Chriſt, and his affection to her, ver. 10. 5. She owns herſelf his tenant for a vineyard ſhe held of him at Baal-hamon, ver. 11, 12. 6. The ſong concludes with an interchanging of parting requeſts : Chriſt chargeth his ſpouſe that ſhe ſhould often let him hear from her, ver. 13. And ſhe begs of him that he would haſten his return to her, ver. 14.

1. O That thou wert as my brother, that ſucked the breaſts of my mother ! when I ſhould find thee without, I would [a] kiſs thee, yea, † I ſhould not be deſpiſed. 2. I would lead thee, and bring thee into [b] my mother's houſe, who would inſtruct me : I would cauſe thee to drink of [c] ſpiced wine of the juice of my pomegranate. 3. [d] His left hand ſhould be under my head, and his right hand ſhould embrace me. 4. [e] I charge you, O daughters of Jeruſalem, ‡ that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my love until he pleaſe.

a Pſ. ii. 12.
† Heb. They ſhould not deſpiſe me.
b Gal. iv. 26.
c Prov. ix. 2. d Chap. ii. 6.
e Chap. ii. 7. & iii. 5.
‡ Heb. Why ſhould ye ſtir up, or, Why, &c.

v. 1—4. We have here,

1. The deſire of the ſpouſe after the moſt endeared intimacy and communion with her Lord. O that thou wert as my brother, with whom ſhe might indulge a holy familiarity, and from whom ſhe might find the warmeſt regard and ſuccour under all her afflictions and infirmities ; that ſucked the breaſts of my mother ; which may refer to the incarnation of Chriſt, who became a babe at the breaſt, and partaker of the ſame fleſh and blood with us ; and therefore from him we may hope for the tendereſt ſympathy and affection.

2. She profeſſes what ſhe would do in this caſe. When I ſhould find thee without, or in the ſtreets, in the public ordinances, I would kiſs thee ; make open profeſſions of her love and attachment to him : yea, I ſhould not be deſpiſed, for ſuch marks of affection which to a brother were becoming, and which Jeſus would not diſdain, but receive with pleaſure. I would lead thee with delight to my mother's houſe, the place of the aſſembly of God's children, who would inſtruct me how to behave aright towards thee ; or, there thou wouldeſt inſtruct me, and teach me how to walk and to pleaſe God. Note, True wiſdom cometh from Jeſus alone ; without his divine teaching we can know nothing as we ought to know. I would cauſe thee to drink of ſpiced wine of the juice of my pomegranate ; the lively exerciſe of grace, and her diligence in his ſervice, more pleaſing to him than the moſt delicious juice of the grape or pomegranate. His left hand ſhould be under my head, and his right hand ſhould embrace me ; comforting me with the moſt endearing expreſſions of his love, and ſupporting me with his almighty power.

3. She gives a charge to the daughters of Jeruſalem, as before, not to interrupt her communion with her beloved. I charge you, that ye ſtir not up, nor awake my love till he pleaſe. Note, They who know the bleſſing of Chriſt's preſence, will be careful themſelves, and mindful to caution others, not to grieve the Saviour, and by any unfaithful and diſpleaſing conduct to provoke him to depart.

5. ([f] Who is this that cometh up from the wilderneſs, leaning upon her beloved ?) I raiſed thee up under the apple-tree : there thy mother brought thee forth, there ſhe brought thee forth that bare thee. 6. ¶ [g] Set me as a ſeal upon thine heart, as a ſeal upon thine arm :
for love is ſtrong as death, jealouſy is † cruel as the grave : the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a moſt vehement flame. 7. [h] Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it : [i] if a man would give all the ſubſtance of his houſe for love, it would utterly be contemned.

f Chap. iii. 6.
g Iſa. xlix. 16. Jer. xxii. 24. Hag. ii. 23.
† Heb. Hard.
h Rom. viii. 35, 39.
i Prov. vi. 35.

v. 5—7. The daughters of Jeruſalem are here repreſented,

1. As breaking forth into admiration on beholding the ſpouſe. Who is this that cometh from the wilderneſs, leaning upon her beloved ? dependent on him, and ſweetly ſupported by him. And it may repreſent the church in general, driven into the wilderneſs during the times of perſecution, but through the power of Jeſus at laſt triumphant : or the caſe of every particular believer, who is by nature found in the wilderneſs of ſin, far from God, the ways of truth, and the road to glory ; but by the grace of Jeſus called, and by his arm ſupported : faith reſting upon him, we are enabled to go up, traveling in the greatneſs of his ſtrength, till we come to the eternal reſt, which remaineth for the people of God.

2. The ſpouſe relates her own experience. I raiſed thee up under the apple-tree. The words are addreſſed to Jeſus, who, when he ſeemed aſleep, and to diſregard his people's diſtreſſes, hath by prayer been raiſed up to ſtretch out his arm and come and help them. There thy mother brought thee forth, there ſhe brought thee forth that bare thee : in the miniſtry of the word ſouls are brought forth, and Chriſt formed in the heart. This is compared to a woman travailing in birth, the pangs of repentance being moſt acute and painful, and followed with joy and peace in believing.

3. She begs for an abiding intereſt in his regard, and a happy aſſurance of it. Set me as a ſeal upon thine heart, as a ſeal upon thine arm. The alluſion is to the high-prieſt's breaſt-plate, or to bracelets worn with the name, the hair, or the picture of any beloved object ; and intimates the deſire of the faithful, to have a ſure place in the heart of Jeſus, a conſtant ſenſe of his nearneſs, a lively experience of his love, and the abiding ſupports of his grace. To urge her ſuit, ſhe pleads her vehement affection ; for love is ſtrong as death. As it brought Jeſus to the death of the croſs for us, ſo, if need be, will it engage us to lay down our lives for him. It will make us dead to the world, and every object, compared with his bleſſed ſelf : it will engage us to live for him, and make us happy to die and go to him. Jealouſy is cruel as the grave, and will not admit a rival to Jeſus in the heart. Or, it beſpeaks the jealous fears which the faithful are apt to entertain, reſpecting the love of Chriſt towards them. The coals thereof are coals of fire, which have a moſt vehement flame, or, a flame of Jehovah, burning with reſiſtleſs fury, conſuming the droſs of baſe affections, and aſcending in circling volumes to the ſkies. Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it. It burns the fiercer with oppoſition, and riſes fairer and ſtronger from the waters of perſecution. No ſcoffs or reproaches, no ſufferings or loſs can extinguiſh it : where it hath once been kindled in the heart, there it will burn to eternity. If a man would give all the ſubſtance of his houſe for love, it would utterly be contemned. Offer a child of God ten thouſand worlds, in exchange for the love of Jeſus, he would count them all dung and loſs. Or it intimates the freedom, as well as riches, of the grace of Chriſt, which, though ineſtimable, he beſtows on his people without money and without price.

8. ¶ [k] We have a little ſiſter, and ſhe hath no breaſts: what ſhall we do for our ſiſter, in the day when ſhe ſhall be ſpoken for? 9 If ſhe be a wall, [l] we will build upon her a palace of ſilver: and if ſhe be a door, we will incloſe her with boards of cedar. 10. I am a wall, and my breaſts like towers: then was I in his eyes as one that found † favour. 11. Solomon had [m] a vineyard at Baal-hamon, [n] he let out the vineyard unto keepers: every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thouſand pieces of ſilver. 12. My vineyard which is mine [o] is before me: thou, O Solomon, muſt have a thouſand, and thoſe that keep the fruit thereof, two hundred.

[k] John x. 16.
[l] Eph. ii. 22.
† Heb. Peace.
[m] Iſa. v. 1. Mat. xxi. 33.
[n] Luke xx. 9.
[o] Iſa. xxvii. 3.

v. 8—12. This loving pair, now in bonds inſeparable united, are here repreſented as conſulting together about their affairs. Huſband and wife muſt conſult together; this is a part of the mutual comfort of that endeared relation, for two are better than one.

1. The ſpouſe propoſes a caſe for her beloved's advice: We have a little ſiſter, and ſhe hath no breaſts; which may be interpreted of the Gentile church, a ſiſter to the Jewiſh church, but little, younger in years, and having no breaſts; not grown up to a woman's eſtate, deſtitute of miniſters, ordinances, and the word; and, as a little child, ignorant and fooliſh; what ſhall we do for our ſiſter, in the day when ſhe ſhall be ſpoken for? when the Gentiles ſhould be called into the fellowſhip of the goſpel, or ſpoken againſt by the unbelieving Jews or heathens, loaded with reproaches, and urged to deſert the faith of Chriſt. Or this may be referred to the elect of God, who are not yet brought into the fellowſhip of the faithful, and made partakers of ſpiritual life, yet ſhall in due ſeaſon be ſpoken for, and converted to God. And they who have themſelves been joined to the Lord, cannot but be ſollicitous to ſee the bleſſed work of grace extended to others alſo.

2. He anſwers, If ſhe be a wall, raiſed on the foundation of apoſtles and prophets, Jeſus Chriſt being the chief corner-ſtone, we will build upon her a palace of ſilver. We, for though the power is Chriſt's alone, he is pleaſed to employ miniſters as workers together with him; and the work of grace is well compared to a ſilver palace, to denote the excellency of the ſoul, made the habitation of God through the Spirit. And if ſhe be a door, we will incloſe her with boards of cedar. As ſoon as ever the door is open for the preaching of the goſpel among the Gentiles, they ſhall grow up into a glorious temple.

3. It is no ſooner ſpoken but done. I am a wall, and my breaſts like towers, which are the words of the Gentile church. What Jeſus hath promiſed, is ſpoken of as already done: ſhe is built upon him the foundation, and ſtrengthened by his grace, a fortreſs impregnable to all the aſſaults of Satan and ſin. Then was I in his eyes as one that found favour; affectionately regarded of Chriſt, and favoured with all the privileges and bleſſings of his redeemed people.

4. The Gentile church deſcribes the progreſs of the goſpel, and Chriſt's glory therein manifeſted. Solomon, the Prince of peace, the Lord Jeſus, had a vineyard, a church, at Baal-haman, in the Gentile world, conſiſting of many nations: he let out his vineyard to keepers, the miniſters of the ſanctuary, whoſe buſineſs and office it is to dreſs and keep it, See Mat. xxi. 33. Every one for the fruit thereof was to bring a thouſand pieces of ſilver. He expects to receive fruit from their labours, and to ſee multitudes of immortal ſouls gained by their miniſtry, which will be as much to their account as to his glory.

5. The church expreſſes her concern for all her members. My vineyard which is mine is before me; every plant requiring conſtant care, and every redeemed ſoul watching with jealouſy over himſelf, leſt any noxious weeds growing up ſhould choak the fruits of righteouſneſs. Thou, O Solomon, muſt have a thouſand; for ſince all our increaſe cometh from him, moſt juſtly ought we to render to him the praiſe of what his grace hath wrought; and thoſe who keep the fruit thereof, two hundred. They who labour in the goſpel, ſhall be abundantly gainers thereby: the ſouls that are preſented to Chriſt, as the fruit of their miniſtry, ſhall be their own joy and crown of rejoicing in the day of his appearing, when they who turn many to righteouſneſs, ſhall ſhine as the ſtars in the firmament for ever and ever.

13. Thou that dwelleſt in the gardens, the companions hearken to thy voice: [p] cauſe me to hear it. 14. ¶ [q] † Make haſte, my beloved, and [r] be thou like to a roe, or to a young hart upon [s] the mountains of ſpices.

[p] Chap. ii. 14.
[q] Rev. xxii. 17, 20.
† Heb. Flee away.
[r] Chap. ii. 17.
[s] Luke xix. 12. Acts iii. 21.

v. 13, 14. Though for a moment they are parting, Chriſt and his church expreſs their mutual regard, and look for their future happy meeting.

1. Chriſt at parting expects often to hear of her and from her. Thou that dwelleſt in the gardens, here below, enjoying the ordinances and means of grace; the companions hearken to thy voice; ſweet intercourſe and communion being maintained between the faithful, and all of them paying the moſt attentive regard to the miniſtry of the word. Cauſe me to hear it, aſcending in prayer and praiſe, in bold and open profeſſions of her faith before the world, and in zealous endeavours to ſpread the knowledge of his grace among men. Note, When Chriſt courts us to come to him, and declares himſelf ſo willing to hear, ſhall we be backward to go? No, Lord, early in the morning will I direct my prayer to thee, and look up.

2. The church deſires his ſpeedy return. He is gone away for a while to heaven, on her account, to be her friend and advocate before the throne of God, to prepare eternal manſions of glory for her reception; and ſhe begs him to haſten back, and take her to himſelf, that where he is, ſhe may be alſo. Make haſte, my beloved, and be thou like to a roe, or to a young hart upon the mountains of ſpices. Chriſt is now ſet down on the mountain of ſpices, the throne of glory: there the eye of faith beholds him, and there love ſtill embraces him; love, which no diſtance of time or place can change. With eagerneſs his waiting ſervants expect him, and whilſt they enjoy any bright gleams of his reconciled countenance here below, in ſweet communion with him, their ſouls the more importunately pray for his appearing, that they may ſee him face to face. Nor ſhall the time be long delayed; ſwift are the rapid hours hurrying by; time draws to its period; eternity approaches; the Lord is at hand: bleſſed and happy are they, who in that day can welcome his arrival, and, when he bows once more the heavens, and comes down, in the aſſured confidence of his love can meet him, and cry, Come quickly, Lord Jeſus! Reader, may this be thy happy caſe, Amen!

The END of the FIRST VOLUME.

New Books in Divinity lately Publiſhed,

By Edward and Charles Dilly, in the Poultry, near the Manſion-Houſe, London.

I. Evangelical Principles and Practice: Being Fourteen Sermons preached in the Pariſh Church of St. Mary Magdalen in Oxford, on the following Subjects: The State of Innocence. The Corruption of Nature. The Deceitfulneſs and Corruption of the Heart. The Spirituality of the Law. The Penalty of Diſobedience. Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt. Salvation by Grace. The Nature of true Holineſs. The Fruits of the Spirit. The Neceſſity of Perſonal Holineſs. The Means of Holineſs. The Bleſſedneſs of the Righteous. By the Rev. Thomas Haweis, Rector of Aldwinckle, Northamptonſhire, and Chaplain to the Right Hon. the Earl of Peterborow. Elegantly printed on a new Type, in one Volume Octavo. The ſecond Edition Corrected. Price ſew'd 4s. or neatly bound in Calf 5s.

II. The Communicant's Spiritual Companion; or, An Evangelical Preparation for the LORD's SUPPER: In which, 1. The Nature of the Ordinance is ſhewn. 2. The Way of approaching thereto deſcribed. 3. The dangerous Tendency of Weeks Preparations ſet forth.—The careleſs Sinner is here admoniſhed. The Formaliſt detected and reproved. The Feeble-mind comforted. The Doubting relieved. The Sincere aſſiſted, and the Faithful confirmed. With Meditations and Helps ſuitable to the Subject. By the Rev. Thomas Haweis, Rector of Aldwinckle, Northamptonſhire, and Chaplain to the Right Hon. the Earl of Peterborow. The Fourth Edition. Price bound 1s. 6d. With a good Allowance to thoſe who buy a Number to give away.

III. The WORKS of the Rev. Thomas Jones, M. A. late Chaplain of St. Saviour, Southwark. To which is prefixed, A ſhort Account of his Life, in a Recommendatory Preface, by the Rev. William Romaine, M. A. Lecturer of St. Dunſtan's in the Weſt.

The preaching of the Croſs is to them that periſh Fooliſhneſs, but unto us which are ſaved it is the Power of God. 1 Cor. i. 18.

Beautifully printed in one large Volume Octavo. To which is prefixed a fine print of the Author, engraved by Kitchen. The Third Edition Corrected. Price 4s. ſewed, or bound in Calf 5s.

IV. The DUTY of a Real Christian, both in Faith and Practice, upon Gospel Principles; for promoting a devout and holy Life. In a new and eaſy Method, adapted to all Capacities. Containing all Things eſſential to Salvation. With Prayers for Morning and Evening, and ſeveral Occaſions.

This is the Victory that overcometh the World, even our Faith, 1 John v. 4. Faith without works is dead, James ii. 20.

Neatly printed in One Volume Twelves, Embelliſhed with a Frontiſpiece, repreſenting the Chriſtian Warrior in complete Armour. Price Bound Three Shillings.

Neceſſary for all Families.

N. B. A good Allowance will be made to thoſe who are inclined to give them away.

V. The Oeconomy of the Covenants between God and Man: Comprehending a Complete BODY of DIVINITY. By Hermam Witsius, D.D. Profeſſor of Divinity in the Univerſities of Leyden, &c. Faithfully tranſlated from the Latin, and carefully reviſed by William Crookshank, D. D. In Three Volumes Octavo, Price bound 15s. (Recommended by the Rev. Dr. John Gill, Dr. Walker, Dr. King, Mr. Hall, Mr. Brine, Dr. Gibbons, and by the late Rev. Mr. James Hervey, in his Theron and Aſpaſio, Vol. II. p. 366.)

Extract of a Letter from a Clergyman in the Country to the Publiſhers.

——"The Sale of Witſius's Oeconomy of the Covenants
" increaſes among my Friends. The Tranſlation is very
" juſt; and the Excellency of the Work merits a Place " in every Chriſtian's Library. I ſhall do my utmoſt to " recommend it at all Times and upon all proper Occa-
" ſions. No pious Perſon on Earth can read this Book
" without Wonder, Rapture, and Devotion; it exceeds " all Commendation. Hervey might well ſay, I would " not ſcruple to riſk all my Reputation upon the Merits of this " Performance. For my own Part, I am not aſhamed
" nor afraid of any Scorn and Ridicule that may be poured
" on me from any Quarter, whilſt I conſtantly aver,
" that the work has not its equal in the World."

VI. ESSAYS on IMPORTANT SUBJECTS; intended to eſtabliſh the Doctrine of Salvation by Grace, and to point out its Influence on Holineſs of Life. By JOHN WITHERSPOON, D. D. To which are added by the Publiſhers, Eccleſiaſtical Characteriſtics; or, The Arcana of Church Policy; with a ſerious Apology; which have been generally aſcribed to the ſame Author. Neatly printed in three Volumes. Price bound 9s.

Note, The Third Volume, containing a practical Treatiſe on Regeneration, may be had alone, Price bound Three Shillings.

MVSEVM BRITANNICVM

VII. Theological Diſſertations. By JOHN ERSKINE, M. A. one of the Miniſters of Edinburgh, neatly printed in one Volume. Price bound 3s.

VIII. Important Cases of Conscience anſwered at the Caſuiſtical Lecture in Little St. Helen's. By S. Pike and S. Hayward. A new Edition. To which is now added, Four Caſes never before printed, by the late Rev. Mr. S. Hayward. Neatly printed in two Volumes, Price bound 6s.

IX. A Collection of Psalm and Hymn Tunes, for the Uſe of the Lock Hoſpital. In Two Parts, Price 2s. each.

X. The ſame Book, Part III. and IV. Price 2s. each.

XI. A New Edition (being the Fourth) of the Rev. Mr. Ebenezer and Ralph Erskine's SERMONS, from various important Subjects, and on divers Occaſions, In Three Volumes Octavo. Price bound 15s.

Univerſal Satisfaction has been given to experienced Chriſtians of all Denominations, by the peruſal of theſe Authors; particularly the late Rev. Mr. Hervey, ſee his Theron and Aſpaſio, Vol. iii. p. 358.

XII. A Full and Complete Answer to the Capital ERRORS contained in the Writings of the late Rev. William Law, M. A. In a Letter to a Friend. To which are prefixed, Some Cautions to the Readers of Mr. Law's Works. With a Preface by the Rev. Mr. Madan. Price 1s.